The inspired evangelist also declares, "He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil."—1 John 3: 8. When this is fully accomplished, we apprehend there will be no dark spot left in the universe for endless wailing, and sinning, and blasphemy; but the earth, where both the righteous and the wicked receive their reward, will then "be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11: 9. Then will these declarations be fulfilled,—"And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away"; "Behold, I make all things new."—Rev. 21. In the present state, afflictions and persecutions have attended the Lord's people, who are called to endure chastening; but we are told to "fear none of these things which thou shalt suffer; behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days; be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2: 10. And we have also this assurance and promise, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna."

Again let us repeat, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the earth."—Rev. 3: 10. "Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator."—1 Pet. 4: 19. Here is provision ample, inexhaustible; here is deliverance effectual, unfailing; here is your rescue, by the hands of him who is from everlasting to everlasting, of whose dominion there shall be no end; who will soon vanquish sin, death, and hell, and put all his enemies under his feet. That day is just at hand, when his own true and faithful followers, his chosen, his redeemed out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, will be forever delivered from the assaults of sin and Satan, no more to be tempted to turn them, if possible, from the paths of truth and holiness.

Dear reader, are you yet still satisfied to be led captive by the insidious whisperings of your spiritual enemies, or by false apostles, teachers, or any emissaries of Satan, under whatever garb; or to follow in the worldly current of these last days of perilous times; or by the carnal delights of sin, of thought, word, or deed; or of strong delusions leading you to believe a lie that you might be damned, even all who had pleasure in unrighteousness; or in any error of whatever sort, to blind the eyes of your understanding, and by your unbelief they would the more effectually make sure of you for their prey; and all this by your own consent and unbelief, because you choose darkness rather than light, because your deeds were evil? O poor sinner, backslider, wanderer from your heavenly Father's house, listen to the still, small voice of that blessed Spirit, given to aid and woo you back to your heavenly Father's house, where there is bread enough and to spare; where there are springs of living water, which, if you drink thereof, you shall never die; whose healing streams forever flow to make glad the city of God. And then you might adopt the language of inspiration, But thanks be to him who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ; who has redeemed us by his own precious blood; who has taken our feet from the horrible pit and miry clay, and placed us on the rock, and established our goings, even where none but the redeemed shall walk, even in the highway of holiness,—a highway cast up by the prophets and apostles, that leads to an eternal day. No honest inquirer after truth can fail to find it, or need go astray after he has entered upon it. It is guarded on both sides by God's presence and power, and all who walk in it shall finally enter the New Jerusalem, "with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."—Isa. 35: 10.

☞ The great day of destinies is just at hand! The decisive moment will soon be past. Reader, shall you be found clothed in white, and ready to enter in to the marriage supper of the Lamb? or yet cleave to the defilements of sin and Satan, to be "suddenly destroyed, and that without remedy"?

For the World's Crisis.

"IT IS AN EVIL TIME."—Amos 5: 13.

Many the churches, few the saints, "the whole world lieth in wickedness," "and judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey. The world, gray-haired in transgression, dreameth of golden times with vengeance for a portion, while they that "buy the truth and sell it not" are counted of no repute. The fallen angels manacle with their own chains of darkness the lost ones, in and out of the churches, before the coming of the Judge. He that usurped "the earth," which "is the Lord's," maketh it his battle ground, knowing that his time is short. These are indeed the closing days of Satan, that the rightful heir may be revealed.

It has been remarked that as there had been a pagan and papal persecution, infidelity would probably close the dispensation. This is even upon us, the simoon blast withering to death eternal; the powers of darkness are doing much in a little time; for "signs there's no mistaking" with the time periods, show the restitution near. The great arch, with its two thousand three hundred divisions spanning "the times of the Gentiles" appears to have its hither abutment upon the present. Hope of the saints, their expectation and desires met, their "eyes shall see the King in his beauty, they shall behold the land that (was) very far off," the pleasant land, where "the inhabitants shall not say, I am sick." Where the Lord shall be for a crown of glory and for a diadem of beauty, "for how great is his beauty!" Worthy indeed of our affections and services, wherein we should be diligent in dispensing saving truth, by tongue and pen, by tracts, books and example, in faith looking to the Lord to sanctify our efforts.

Brief the time for action. Let us, my dear brethren, "cleave unto the Lord with purpose of heart," so shall he be unto us "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Let us, with eye and heart single, deep in the narrow path of self-denial, making our "calling and election sure;" by sure faith in the finished atonement; looking for the actual spirit and life "of him who did salvation bring."

WHERE ARE THE RESURRECTED SAINTS TO DWELL?

BY WM. SHELDON.

Having learned that the "dead in Christ shall rise" when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God," we wish to find out where these resurrected saints are to live. When called from their graves as literal beings, really alive, never more to die, they must have some home in which to live. In what region will they dwell? Christ in carrying us down to the time when the resurrection will take place, says: "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, ... then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." "Matt. 25: 31–34.) God's original plan was correct, and will yet be carried out. When he created the world, "he formed it to be inhabited" by man, in a state of holiness; and he created man to dwell in it as his home, even forever, provided he would be obedient; and man was put on probation for endless life, "the tree of life" being placed before him, that at the end of his term of trial he might "eat and live forever" in the very world that God had made on purpose for him to dwell in. And while on probation, man was commanded to "be fruitful, and multiply." (Gen. 1: 28.) Thus it is evident that it was God's original plan to have the earth populated with a race of holy and deathless human beings to all eternity. But before man had reached the close of his term of probation, sin was introduced: so God shut man away from the tree of life, "lest he should put forth his hand, and eat and live forever" in a sinful state.

Thus man was cut off from endless life, while in his fallen condition. Now God gives man another probation; and this time he places him on trial for holiness, as well as for eternal life. Before, man already possessed the Divine favor, and was merely on trial for endless life; but now, having lost the favor of God, as well as the offer of endless life, he is placed on probation with the conditional offer of the Divine favor, and the conditional offer of eternal life—the Divine favor to be secured through repentance and pardon; and eternal life to be secured by continued obedience to God, and to be obtained "in the world to come."

After man had sinned, his home, in which he might have lived forever, free from sorrow, falls under the curse: "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." (Gen. 3: 18.) The curse still rests on the earth; but the time is coming when this sin-cursed and dilapidated earth shall be restored. God once washed it with a flood of water, blotting out a rebellious race, and commencing the world anew: but wickedness soon overspread the earth again; and now God purposes to deluge the earth with "fire," which will both sweep off the wicked, and purge the polluted globe. "The heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men, ... in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, ... wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." (2 Pet. 3: 7, 10, 12, 13.)

This same great "change" of the present heavens and earth into new heavens and a new earth, after having perished in the coming deluge of fire, is mentioned by the Psalmist: "Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish [in the coming deluge of fire,] but thou shalt endure; yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed." (Ps. 102: 25, 26.) Thus earth and the surrounding atmospheric heavens are not only to "perish," but they are also to be "changed," instead of being annihilated; and in their changed condition, after the great conflagration, they are styled the "new heavens and new earth." And there the righteous will dwell; for the seer of Patmos speaks concerning the same new earth home of the redeemed, as follows: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new." (Rev. 21: 1–5.) "New" heavens, "new" earth, "new" city, and "new" people, with a "new" King, constituting a "new" kingdom and a "new" Paradise. This new earth home is to be a sinless, tearless, graveless, sorrowless, painless, and deathless realm.

But when is this new earth Paradise to be enjoyed by the saints. Peter introduces it after the deluge of fire; and John also gives it the same chronological location, for just before mentioning the introduction of the new earth, he had carried us down to the resurrection, the judgment, and the punishment of the wicked in the following language; "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heavens fled away; and there was no place found for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hades delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 11–15.) The very next statement, after this description of the resurrection, the judgment, and the casting out of the wicked into the "lake of fire," is this: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth." The subject has been unwisely obscured by beginning a new chapter in the middle of the subject. So we now discover that John brings to view the resurrection, the judgment, the final disposal of the wicked, or "perdition of ungodly men" in the future deluge of fire; and next in order he introduces the new earth home of the saved.

But where are the resurrected saints to be while the wicked are being destroyed, and the earth is passing through its fiery baptism? Paul tells us that the saints are to be "caught up" when the resurrection takes place: "The dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." (1 Thess. 4: 16, 17.) The prophet Isaiah also affirms: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs: and the earth shall cast out the dead. [What next?] Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." Is. 26: 19–21.)

Thus the resurrected saints and the changed living saints are to be caught up to meet the Lord, and dwell in their celestial chambers till the "indignation" ends; for while the saints are thus housed away, the Lord is to "punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity;" and this "perdition of ungodly men" is to be in the "fire" unto which the earth is "reserved," or in the "lake of fire" which will be formed by the outgushing of the sea of fire now in the bowels of the earth, so frequently showing indisputable proof of its present smothered existence through those volcanoes that vomit out floods of fire and lava. But let it be remembered that the saints are to remain above only "till the indignation be overpast;" then the saints and the city shall "come down from God out of heaven;" and then "the tabernacle of God shall be with men," and then "there shall be no more death," in consideration of the fact that "the former things are passed away."

Then will God's plan in creating this globe be carried out, and the very "kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world" be given to the saints, in its renovated condition, well adapted to their immortal state. Then will Paradise bloom on earth under the "second Adam," who has already stood his trial successfully, more gloriously than it bloomed while the first Adam was on trial. Then the saints will dwell where once sin predominated, and evil-doers flourished "like the green bay tree;" but this will be after "the redemption of the purchased possession"—after its redemption from the power of Satan and his emissaries, and also from the curse.

Jesus testifies (Matt. 8: 11, 12) concerning the future home of the saints as follows: "I say unto you that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven; but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Here we learn that the previous possessors of the very kingdom which the saints are finally to sit down in are to be disinherited. In another discourse Christ remarks: "As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Matt. 13: 40–43.)

Here we learn that the former occupants of the kingdom which the saints are hereafter to "shine forth" in are to be dispossessed preparatory to giving it to the saints; and also learn that evil-doers once possessed it. But there is to be a mighty overturn in human affairs when Jesus comes. Sin will end and righteousness fill the earth.—"Adventism."

THE JUBILEE.

BRO. GRANT:—The following upon the year of Jubilee is from the Sacred and Profane History of the World, by Samuel Shuckford, D. D., vol. 3, p. 11–12.

"The learned have been much divided about the year of jubilee, whether it was to be kept in the forty-ninth year, which taken inclusive may be called the fiftieth; or whether forty-nine years were to run out, and then the next, or fiftieth year, was to be the year of jubilee. And we have so few, and such imperfect accounts of the practice of the Jews, in their observance of this, or their sabbatical years, that it may be difficult to offer any thing certain upon this subject. The most learned Dean Prideaux thought the text (Lev. 25: 8–12) to be in favor of the jubilee year's being the next to the forty-ninth, or seventh sabbatical year.—Preface to Vol. 1 of his Connect.

The words of the text are, 'Thou shalt number seven Sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven Sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years. Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement; and ye shall hallow the fiftieth year. A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you; ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it.'—Lev. 25: 8–11. We may perhaps come at the true meaning of the text, if we take it (1) to direct the Israelites to observe, at their due intervals, seven sabbatical years. (2) To remark that a course of seven such years, with the six years of tillage belonging to each of them, duly observed, were to make up the full amount of forty-nine years. Or to render the Hebrew text verbatim, the days of the seven Sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years. The meaning of which remark will appear, if we allow the text (3) to suggest to them that they were to begin the jubilee year on the tenth day of the seventh month of the forty-ninth, or seventh sabbatical year: 'thou shalt cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound, on the tenth day of the seventh month.' The observance of each sabbatical year was, I imagine, to begin as soon as the sixth year's crop could be got off the ground in the beginning of the seventh year; for the harvest in Canaan fell in the first month. See and compare Joshua 3: 15 with 1 Chron. 12: 15. And when the Israelites had counted the seven Sabbath year, then on the tenth day of the seventh month, they were to begin a year of jubilee; only remember that they were not to reckon the Sabbath year they were then keeping to end upon commencing the jubilee, for the seven sabbaths of years were to contain the days of forty-nine years, which they would not have amounted to, if the seventh Sabbath year was to have been thought finished on the tenth day of the seventh month, upon beginning the jubilee.

As according to this account, the year of jubilee did not begin and end with the sabbatical year, but commenced some months later, and extended a like space of time longer; so it was evidently not any one of the years contained in the seven sabbaths of years, though it was in part concurrent with the last of them. Accordingly, it is properly styled in the text a fiftieth year, as not being any one of the forty-nine before mentioned. If what has been offered may be admitted, then, though the jubilee year began and ended some months later than a sabbatical year; yet, as the season for seed time did not come on in Canaan before the fifteenth day of the seventh month was over (see Lev. 23: 39), the jubilee year ended as it began, on the tenth day of this seventh month, and did not command a year's neglect of harvest and tillage, other than what the Sabbath year in part concurrent with it enjoined. Only, perhaps, the year of jubilee obliged them to defer preparing their lands some months longer than a sabbatical year, not attended with a jubilee, required; causing them hereby to end every forty-ninth or seventh sabbatical year with, as I might say, a greater solemnity. Lev. 25: 8–12, Deut. 16, 1 Sam. 1: 3.

We find a sore famine in Samaria in Elijah's time, from unseasonable weather, for three years together. 1 Kings 17, 18. The meaning of the expression for three years is explained by what follows. Lev. 25: 22. And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of the old fruit until the ninth year; until the fruit come in, ye shall eat of the old store. The promise did not mean that the sixth year's produce should last the term of three complete years; but that it should suffice for the seventh year, for the eighth year, and for a part of the ninth year, namely, until the harvest, in the beginning of the ninth year, should bring in the eighth year's tillage.—Prideaux Pref. to Connect., part 1.

THE SITUATION OF EUROPE.

There has been for the last ten months a comparative quiet in European political affairs. Garibaldi's repulse in Italy served to delay the hostile complications which then threatened. But the lull of battle has not been unimproved in preparations for new and more terrific outbreaks.

From an article in the April number of Lippincott's Magazine, written by Louis Blanc, one of the most observant, thoughtful and impressive writers in Europe, we have a statement of the present status of public affairs on the Eastern side of the Atlantic, which shows an oppressive condition of the political atmosphere there, presaging an unprecedented and sweeping hurricane from one quarter or another.

France is saddled with an army bill confessedly intended to make the French army an irresistible engine of destruction. The term of service has been increased from seven to nine years—five years to be spent under the colors, and four in the reserve. 800,000 men will be called upon to enable France to "hold her head up in Europe." In addition to this, a movable National Guard is created, with a view to garrison all the country in war-time, and strengthen, by 400,000 men, the fighting resources of the empire. Thus the army bill places 1,200,000 drilled soldiers at the disposal, not of the people, mark you, but of one man. And this is not meant only to provide for remote contingencies: no; it is well understood that the provisions of the bill are to come into operation at once. The young men hitherto exempted from military service, and now doomed to form part of the movable National Guard, which Marshal Neil significantly declared to be "destined to have a great future," are all available. They can be drilled within a few months—can be summoned to their respective battalions immediately. Fortresses have been repaired. The artillery is in a perfect state. Twenty thousand cavalry horses, purchased in Hungary, have been forwarded to Trieste, and thence to Marseilles. Gunmakers are busy manufacturing those Chassepot rifles which did, at Mentana, such fearful execution, and are expected to meet with advantage the Prussian needle guns.

But a few days ago a placard was posted on the walls of the Ministry of Finance, in Paris, announcing that, in a few weeks' time, the Government will be prepared to receive tenders for the supply of 2,355,500 powder-boxes.

Nor are warlike preparations confined to the land forces. The greatest activity prevails in the French maritime arsenals. Thirty-nine ships of different sizes are at present in course of construction. When they are built, the fleet ready for sea—which already comprises three hundred and forty-eight men-of-war steamers and one hundred and sixteen sailing ships—will amount to five hundred and three vessels. It is asserted by the Kronstadt Wiestnik—the official organ of the Russian admiralty—that every arrangement has been made at Toulon to embark forty thousand men. So much for the naval forces. As to the land forces, France before long will be armed to the teeth, and Napoleon III will have at his command a more formidable army than that which, under his great uncle, invaded Russia.

Now, what are they doing on the other side of the Rhine? Baron von Beust is said to have sent to foreign governments a circular informing them that "Prussia was effecting considerable and threatening increase in her armament." It is also given out that she is sending needle-guns and officers of instruction to St. Petersburg. At all events, one may safely infer, from the eagerness with which Count Bismarck strives to tighten the bonds of German unity—as shown by his sharp remonstrance to the Government of Hesse Darmstadt on its separate acceptance of a European conference—that the German Premier clearly foresees a stout contest, and that he intends to make ready for it.

Russia could not remain behind her neighbors in preparing for battle. She also found it necessary to improve her guns, and the Invalide Russe took care to acquaint the world with the fact that the Russian Government had decided on adopting the Karl breech-loader—a weapon the accuracy of which, we are told, is not impaired by thirty thousand shots. . . .

The truth is, that the love of aggrandizement—a passion certainly not unknown to our forefathers, but at no period so deep-seated, so widely-spread as it appears now—has become the common malady of all the nations of Europe. And for this the establishment of the second empire must be held responsible. The attempt of Napoleon to lord it over the continent, the better to keep under the French people, awakened that feeling of indignant anxiety and wounded pride which made all Germany sing once more, "No wave shall turn a Frenchman's mill, no drop of our own river," and supplied Bismark with the lever he wanted. The prodigious aggrandizement of Prussia, besides disquieting the French people and provoking their anger, could not fail to spur on the ambition of Russia: a new impulse given to the Pan-Slavonic agitation. But then it would have been the height of imprudence for any minor state to act upon the principle of a quiet, hopeful, unsuspecting policy. Every government had to prepare for the worst—to strain its resources. And so, through a concatenation of causes traceable to the establishment of a Second Empire in France, Europe happens to have been transformed into a vast barrack, and bristles with bayonets.

Surely it is bad enough that the inevitable consequences of such a state of things should be waste of human energy, depression of trade, contraction of credit, scarcity of employment, smouldering hatred, looming bankruptcy, and general impoverishment; but that is not all. Cæsarism, no longer content with feeding on the flesh of France, is now hovering, like a bird of prey, over the whole continent of Europe. Germans need to beware. Nothing is better calculated to favor the soaring of Cæsarism than the newfangled doctrine of the fusion of races, when put forth to cloak a spirit of encroachment.

Struggles for independence and struggles for empire are, of course, two very different things. It is quite right that oppressed nationalities should shake off the yoke, as Greece did and Poland attempted to do. But the theory of the fusion of races, if understood in the sense of the formation of the gigantic States, rendered as formidable as possible by the concentration of their forces in the hands of a military despot, is a snare which crafty statesmen lay for the people they are determined to enslave. And this system politicians and thinkers will do well to study in connection with the present distracted situation of Europe, not forgetting that it is the system of modern Cæsarism, inaugurated by the Napoleons, and with which there may still be a different destiny for Napoleon III, than that which some predict for him in the present overclouded condition of his prestige.—Prophetic Times.

KIND WORDS.—Though kind words do not cost much, they accomplish much. They help one's good nature and good will. Soft words soften our own soul. There is such a rush of all other kinds of words in our day, that it seems desirable to give kind words a chance amongst them. Kind words produce their own image on men's souls. And a beautiful image it is. They soothe, and quiet, and comfort the heart. Angry words are fuel to the flames of wrath, and make it blaze the more fiercely.

HUMILITY.—The bitterness of humility is a tonic to the spirit. To humiliate yourself is as necessary, in this wicked world, as it is for travelers through African jungles to take, every now and then, a draught of quinine.—

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, May 27, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

TOUR WEST.

We purpose to make a tour West, leaving Boston, Tuesday, May 26th, and attend the campmeeting appointed by Bro. Sheldon, at Fairfield, Wis., to commence May 30th, and hold over two Sabbaths; also a campmeeting in Iowa (see notice,) commencing June 8th, and then hold a discussion with Mr. Sweeney (Disciple minister) in Dubuque, Iowa, commencing June 14th, to continue through the the week, and longer if thought best. The subjects involved are the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, and the coming kingdom. Mr. S. is said to be the most able debater in the West. We hope to see a large gathering at the campmeetings. Let much prayer be offered that the Spirit of the Lord may be upon them and that great good may be accomplished.

BRO. FLOYD.

We take pleasure in commending to our Brn. and Srs. Bro. J. L. Floyd, who has formerly been an eminent lawyer, but now feels it a duty to do what he can to help spread the glad tidings of the coming kingdom and other great truths that we love so well. He needs your aid and sympathy. Let him be well supplied. He thinks of going west to labor as the door may open.

GREENFIELD DISCUSSION.

Our discussion with Moses Hull, in Greenfield, Mass., increased in interest during the five evenings of its continuance. Our friends are much pleased with the results. Many have had their eyes opened to see that Spiritualism is the most deadly foe to christianity, God and the Bible, that ever found foothold in a civilized community. Mr. Hull is a very bold blasphemer, who makes earnest efforts to impeach the God of the Bible and his word; and yet claims that Spiritualism is the only true religion, and that it is to reform the world. We do not see how it is possible for Satan to invent a system more fully antichristian in all its features, than is Spiritualism. Its doctrines are the same as those taught by the heathen, which they received from the demons, who claimed to be human spirits. Then, as now, the spirits were opposed to Christ and the religion and doctrine he taught.

Spiritualism offers a shelter to every body that will help oppose the Bible and its author, and is endeavoring to put down all who attempt to defend them. The warfare is becoming an earnest one, and we have no expectation that it will abate till Jesus comes to set up his heavenly kingdom.

It was claimed by Mr. Hull that Christ has come to as many persons as there are of those who have embraced Spiritualism, and that there will be no other coming of Christ. He still claims that man is immortal, omniscient, and omnipresent, possessing all the attributes ascribed to God; in short, that man is God, and God is man. According to his teaching, man and God are only different names of the same being. And yet, after taking such shockingly infidel positions, it is claimed that Spiritualism is the only true religion. If we did not know it to be a fact, we could hardly be made to believe that intelligent men and women, educated in New England, where the full blaze of gospel light has been shining upon their pathway, could be led to follow the teachings of such lying, "seducing spirits," as are the authors of Spiritualism. Truly we have come to "PERILOUS TIMES." The worst has not yet come.

> Strong in the strength which God supplies
> Through his eternal Son."

We spent the Sabbath, May 17th, in Greenfield, and received much comfort from the good results of the discussion, and the meetings held Saturday evening and Sabbath day. One intelligent and devoted Congregationalist minister in the place took an active part in our meeting Sabbath evening, manifesting a true christian spirit, and expressing a warm sympathy with the effort we were making. We found he possessed a kindred spirit, and was ready to co-operate with all christians. It was like cool water to a thirsty soul to hear him talk. Others saw the truth clearer than ever before, and expressed the joy felt, by warm words and tears. One who had been quite opposed to our views of the Bible, now sees them clearly, and could not find language to express his joy at the sight of the truth. He wonders now that he did not see it before. He has been a member of the Congregational church for years; but the Bible seems to him now like a new book, because he sees the beautiful harmony of its parts.

We found another intelligent young man who was under conviction, earnestly desiring to be a christian. The Lord has raised us up some warm friends in Greenfield, who are anxious to hear more on the reasons of our hope. We trust they will have the privilege. The people are much stirred up in relation to the subject presented during the discussion. A prayer-meeting is established, and the prospect is encouraging.

A GRAVE QUESTION.

One who says he is "sorely tried on the subject of future punishment," writes to the Advance as follows:—"There was a time when we were not. Can existence compensate for endless torment? Please exercise that charity which thinketh no evil, and reply in The Advance."

We think it will be a hard question to answer from the stand-point of popular theology, which teaches the doctrine of "endless torment;" but from a Bible stand-point, the case is very different. Who would say he had rather have had no existence, than to live this life? Some in extreme suffering, or in great disappointment, might curse the day of their birth; but such is not the common feeling among the wicked. Then if the present life is worth more to them than no life, they have been gainers if they lose eternal life. They have no claim for the future life, hence they will not be wronged if put back to dust from whence they came.

Those who say this life is a burden, should not complain when it is removed, and they are "destroyed for ever." Eternal life is a gift to the righteous, the only ones who could enjoy the coming kingdom.

FRENCH WAR CLOUDS.

There are strong indications that Napoleon is about to make some important military movements, that will astonish the world, and produce some radical changes in the governments of Europe, and, perhaps, other countries also. There is a deep anxiety resting upon the minds of great men and warriors in relation to the future movements of the "man of wonder."

The following is a late telegram from Paris:

"Gen. Failley, commanding the French encampment of Chalons, in an address to the troops, says: 'War being possible, the labors of the camp must be serious and unremitting.'"

MORE PROGRESS.

The world is certainly progressing with great speed. Many new systems are rising up in various parts of the world, which are entirely opposed to the plan of salvation as revealed in the Bible. Jesus is set aside, and the people conclude to follow nature, and reject the Bible. The tide of infidelity is rising rapidly in all directions. The following may be but the beginning of much more of the same character:—

"A new sect has sprung up in France. It is composed of people who altogether reject religion, and who take upon themselves the engagement not only to abstain from going to church and from permitting any religious observances in their households, but not to let any priest officiate at their marriages, or at the naming, marrying, or burying of their children, or to enter their houses or hold communication with members of their families on any pretext; and, finally, they engage not to accept religious counsel in case of sickness, and, by a written document, to prohibit any priest from officiating at their interment. The sect in Paris is already not inconsiderable in number, and is increasing every day. In the provinces, too, it has many ramifications, not, however, thus far, of any great importance."

LEISURE TIME.

Some people are often heard to complain for want of leisure time, when they may feel that they have nothing to do, but to lounge about. If they could be thus situated, they would not be happy. No idler can enjoy the first class comfort. To be truly happy, we must be actively engaged, doing all to the glory of the Lord.

The following are sensible remarks on the subject:—

The most fallacious ideas prevail respecting leisure. People are always saying to themselves, "I would do this, and I would do that, if I had leisure." Now there is no condition in which the chance of doing any good is less than in the condition of leisure. The man fully employed may be able to gratify his good dispositions by improving himself or his neighbors, or serving the public in some useful way; but the man who has all his time to dispose of as he pleases, has but a poor chance indeed of doing so. To do, increases the capacity of doing; and it is far less difficult for a man who is in a habitual course of exertion, to exert himself a little more for an extra purpose, than for a man who does little or nothing, to put himself into motion for the same end. There is reluctance in all things to be set a-going; but when that is got over, then everything goes sweetly enough.

Just so with the idle man. In losing the habit, he loses the power of doing. But a man who is busy about some regular employment for a proper length of time every day, can very easily do something else during the remaining hours; indeed, the recreation of the weary man is apt to be busier than the perpetual leisure of the idle. As he walks through the world, his hands hang unmuffled by his side, and he can sometimes do more by a single touch in passing, than a vacant man is likely to do in a twelvemonth. Let no man ask for leisure in order to do anything. Let him rather pray that he may never have leisure. If he really wishes to do any good thing, he will always find time for it, by properly arranging his other employments.—New York Ledger.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Cruelty to animals is becoming notorious in this country; and the fact shows a progress towards barbarism instead of christianity. A society has been formed in Massachusetts for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and its members have petitioned the Legislature for laws more stringent on the subject. We are glad to see this movement. It is one in the right direction. The following is a sample of the testimony given as a reason why the State should make more stringent laws against such barbarism as is now practiced:—

"Overloaded horses abused for their inability to haul their loads up Beacon Hill; calves, with their feet bound and piled like stones in a wagon on their way to and from Brighton; sheep sheared in early spring and sent to market in an exposed condition; fowls plucked alive to save labor; the working of animals past the age of reasonable use; the transportation of sheep without food or water to facilitate close packing; bleeding calves in the neck or head before slaughtering, to render the flesh white; cattle kept in pens for long periods without water until offered for sale, when they are allowed to drink large quantities to increase their weight; overworking horses on the Cambridge Horse Railroad to the extent of killing five and disabling sixty in one day; allowing cows to go forty-eight hours without milking, to increase the size of their udders when exposed for sale. The society propose to give rewards for the procuration of evidence that leads to the conviction of offenders; to employ persons to investigate cases brought to the notice of the directors; and award medals to teamsters, drivers, butchers, and others who are distinguished from the mass for their humane use of animals."

It is the covetousness of the age that leads people to resort to such cruel means to get more money. Covetousness eclipses love, mercy and justice. Truly "the love of money is the root of all evil." Let all "beware of covetousness," which is idolatry. It does not pay to be covetous; for "no covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." Eph. 5: 5.

MASONRY.—Bro. John T. Walsh is publishing an able monthly, entitled "The American Anti-Masonic and Biblical Review." It is said to be "the only periodical of the kind in the world." He takes strong ground against Masonic and all other secret societies, showing that they are calculated to make backsliders rather than christians.

Those who would like to subscribe for it can address John T. Walsh, New Berne, N. C.

ADVENTISM.—We are much pleased with "Adventism" from the pen of Bro. Wm Sheldon, and published by the Western A. C. A. It is an excellent work to put in the hands of those who are not familiar with the reasons of our hope. We have made some extracts from it in the last few numbers of the Crisis, and by mistake they were not credited to the work.

GOOD BLACK INK.—For years we have been trying various kinds of ink, but have never found any that pleased us so well as that made by Dr. Thomas, of Waterbury, Vt. We take pleasure in recommending this ink made by Bro. Thomas. It is for sale by W. H. Hill, at 32 Cornhill, Boston.

A VALUABLE BOOK.

Some week's since we referred to a valuable book, from Dr. Miller of New York, entitled "ABUSES OF THE SEXUAL ORGANS." We wish to call the attention of our readers again to this work. We hear but one voice from medical men, clergymen, teachers, and all interested in the physical, moral and religious welfare of mankind; and that is, "Every body should read it." It is emphatically a book for the times.

They have also issued another smaller work, on the same subject, expressly for the children, which every child should have, who is old enough to read. It is entitled "Important Truths. A book for every child."

These works are published by E. P. Woodward & Co., 32 Faneuil-Hall Square, Boston.

For sale at the Crisis office. Price, (post paid), extra cloth, Bevelled Boards, $1.00; Paper Cover, .75; Gilt Edge, $1.30; Morocco, full guilt, $1.75, one-fifth off per dozen.

Note. The title of the work is now, "A Treatise on the Cause of Exhausted Vitality."

The following are a few, among many, testimonials in favor of the work:—

LEXINGTON, Mass., Feb. 1, 1868.

MY DEAR DOCTOR.—I have read your treatise on the Cause of Exhausted Vitality and the abuses of the Sexual Function. I am more than pleased with it. The delicacy, and earnest and sincere spirit which permeates its every paragraph, is a source of unmixed pleasure to physicians. You have made a vital contribution to this most important but neglected subject. While you have not shrunk from exposing the evil in all its hideous deformity, it is done in a spirit which can give no offence even to the most fastidious. As a medical man, and as one whose life is given to the dissemination of the laws of physical health, I thank you. I am, gratefully, yours,

DIO LEWIS.

DEAR SIR,—I saw a notice of your book in the World's Crisis, ordered a copy, read it, and approve it. I thank God, and thank and love you for writing it. It will do more good than dozens of theological books, hundreds of prayer-meetings, and thousands of sermons. I was so well pleased with it that last week I read the whole through in my lecture-room, to all who were present, and I am intending to translate and print it in German in a little paper I am publishing.—Rev. W. F. Schwilk, Schenectady, N. Y.

Dr. Miller brings forward a great amount of facts in support of his views concerning the laws of animal life, and applies them to the practical interest of education in a lucid and forcible manner. His book is written in the grave and serious tone becoming the importance of the subject, and is well adapted to awaken the attention of parents and teachers to a sense of their duty to the young, and to impress the public mind with a knowledge of physiological principles that ought not to be restricted to the medical profession.—N. Y. Tribune.

* * * We know of no one book that ought to go absolutely into the hands of every person on this footstool sooner than this, except the Bible. It is plain spoken, without being disgusting; is practical without being infidel, and is not likely to hurt the evil it essays to heal. We shall speak of it often. Send for it at once.—Church Union.

The subject, though from its nature delicate, is one of very great importance, both from a moral and scientific point of view, and Dr. Miller appears to have discussed it conscientiously and impressively. The facts which he presents are certainly appalling, and it is not easy to resist his conclusions.—New York Independent.

A work which discusses the subject scientifically, while it fails not of just and Christian views of it. It is suitable for popular use, though it does not evade any important point. We believe its circulation would do great good.—Methodist.

This is a small book on a great subject, and one that concerns all adults, whether married or single. Let it be read, studied, and pondered by all, as it may serve to prevent functional derangements, which is better even than cure.—Boston Cultivator.

TOBACCO A POISON.

But few are aware of the evil effects of tobacco upon the human system. Because some who use it live to a good old age, they think it is not injurious. So some drink brandy, cider, whiskey, and other intoxicating liquors, and yet outlive some who abstain from such things; while others die of delirium tremens and fill a drunkard's grave, and lose their inheritance in the kingdom of God. The reason is, some constitutions can bear enough to kill two or three others, before they yield themselves; but if such lived temperately, and avoided the use of tobacco and rum they would have lived longer, taken more comfort, set better examples, had more money to give away, raised better and more healthy children, and had less temptation, and felt much more devotional and pure-minded, than they would to indulge in them. We are glad to learn that some who have been able ministers of the gospel, and have used tobacco, have now resolved in the strength of the Lord, to use it no more. We hope all will come to the same conclusion. By so doing, they would add much to their moral strength and influence. Tobacco blunts one's moral, physical, intellectual, and social capacities. He will be more of a man when he has conquered this bad habit, and will be of more value in society, in the family, and in the church. He will think more of himself, and others will hold him in higher estimation. He will have more power to war against sin and the Devil. No physiological fact is better settled than that tobacco tends to dwarf a man, and weaken his power to resist the temptations of his great adversary. For this reason Satan would have every one use tobacco; consequently he spares no effort to persuade all the boys to form the habit, and then makes them believe in after life, that they cannot do without it. Christian brother, will you sanction such a filthy habit by your own example? Say no, by the help of the Lord, I will never use it again. Read the following:—

"A man living near Albany, N. Y., last week, wiped the oil from the bowl of a tobacco pipe and applied it to a burn on the lip of his little daughter. The child died in convulsions in twenty-four hours after."

"NOTES, QUERIES & OBJECTIONS."

BY REV. A. A. PHELPS.

BRO. GRANT:—During last winter you were upon the stand several weeks to answer "queries and objections, by Bro. A. A. Phelps," on the point of the "Non-immortality of the soul, the unconscious state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked." Will Bro. Phelps now take the stand and answer a few "queries and objections" to the immortality of the soul, the conscious state of the dead, and the eternal torments of the wicked? With Bro. Phelps I have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance, and if he will consent to take the stand, I pledge myself that he shall be treated in a courteous and christian manner.

Yours for the truth, J. WENDELL.

TO MY PATIENTS.

I have returned from Indiana, and my address will be as before,—Bristolville, Ohio. I have abandoned the practice of medicine, and have commenced proclaiming the "glad tidings of salvation" to a sinful world; yet I will continue to treat persons who may address me as I directed in my card of last spring. I have thus treated a large number of persons in almost every State in the Union, and am so much encouraged by kind words from patients, whom I have benefited, that I deem it not only a duty, but a privilege to do all I can to relieve suffering humanity. And although I have lost very much during the past year, pecuniarily, still I live in the blessed hope that I shall one day be paid; that one day it may be said to me, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." I desire to hear from all my patients, or those who have been such. Let me know how you are.

A GREAT TRIAL.

On account of extreme poverty, I am unable to provide for my children, and unless some relief or help comes, I do not know but we shall be obliged to seek a home for our little daughter Mary. If any one should read this, who can find a good place for her, where she will be kindly provided for, and rightly influenced, please write to me. She was six years old last December. Further information will be given by letter to those who request it. Brethren, will you pray for me and my family in our affliction. Your Bro.,

NOTICE.

I would say to the brethren in Maine, that my horse is entirely used up for driving, at present, and I think for the season. He was taken lame last Dec., and has been getting worse until now. He will have to be turned out to pasture for the season. I hope by so doing he may get better, so that he will sell for something; but don't know. As I have no means to buy another, I shall not be able to visit the brethren and preach the word of life, as I have promised to do the coming season, unless the Lord provides a way for me to get a horse. My horse was a good one, and I have taken good care of him; so I shall try and patiently wait the leadings of Him who knows what is best for me, better than I do myself. Pray for me, brethren, that I may trust in the Lord, and wait and work for Jesus until he comes, which I believe will be very soon. JER. CARR.

THE SPRINGFIELD CAMP-GROUND.

Some are inquiring about the camp-ground whether the lots for tents were taken? We would here say, the whole committee voted at the Boston conference to have all the lots free, and give each an equal chance; also leaving the arrangements with the building committee, which met on the ground May 15th, and decided that the first row of tents be cloth, and nearly uniform in size. The lots are twenty feet front, and thirty feet deep, and no tent can be larger than that when pitched. It will not be safe to get all as large as that, if that is the whole size of the lot; and as many of these lots have trees on them that must stand for shades, it would be safer to calculate fifteen wide and twenty-five feet deep.

On the second circle, the tents are forty by fifty feet, which will accommodate a very large tent, or two common sized ones, and two family tents, on each lot. No lots are selected yet, and none will be until timely notice is given in the Crisis, so that all will have an equal chance. Don't be in a hurry. There is good tent ground enough, besides the two circles, for two hundred tents, without any restrictions about size or material, although the building committee would suggest some better ones than were erected at Wilbraham, as lumber is so handy to the ground. There are three lumber yards near by the ground. Bro. Currier will erect a wooden tent any size, for those that wish, by addressing him. His shop is in one of the lumber yards. More on this subject at another time. It will be time enough to select your lots by letter, or right after the notice occurs in the Crisis,—probably in July.

Some have applied for work on the ground. We shall get through by the 25th of May, all we shall do until August, two weeks before the meeting begins, when from four to six hands will be employed in fitting up for the meeting. We hope some churches will unite in building a good lumber tent on the second circle, or on one of the streets, for a meeting-house that will be safe in a rain. If any wish to purchase cloth or canvass tents, they would do well to send to Bro. George T. Adams, Boston, as tents of all kinds are built in Boston, near him, and can be sent to the ground. Any other information wanted will be given by addressing a line to either of the building committee. H. MUNGER, for the Com.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. Bendixon.

Dear brethren in the Lord:—With love and gratitude to my heavenly Father for all his goodness, I send you all, through these lines, my sincere thanks for all your goodness and kindness and hospitality which you all so freely bestowed upon me while I sojourned among you. Often has my heart been filled with gratitude and love to my dear Savior, even to overflowing, when observing your affection to me; and sad have I felt when I parted with you; but my trust and hope is that we shall meet soon where parting will be no more. My dear brethren, receive then in kindness a thousand thanks from the bottom of my soul, with my brotherly hand stretched forth through these lines. Try to get in the Spirit, standing and shaking hands with me for the last time in this life, while our eyes may drop a silent tear of longing and sighing after our long-expected home. O! my soul is full. Come, Jesus, and come quickly! And what I, secondly, can give you is, my prayers; they shall never fail as long as I shall remain in this unfriendly world. I trust that our mutual prayers shall often meet at the throne of grace and bring back blessings to our souls.

Dear brethren, while you read these lines I am on the great deep, hastening towards my native land, where my Lord has called me to go and give the last cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" I feel the great responsibility that rests upon me. I feel that I am weak, but my strength is in the Lord. My tears flow while writing these lines, but I will hide myself in the bosom of Jesus, and I know that he will protect me. I depend upon my Lord for food and raiment, and he has promised that I shall not lack any bread and water. I can not say, as some do, that they are not dependent upon any man; no, no. I am dependent upon men, through my Father in heaven, and I see it is good to keep low in the valley, and not climb up. The Lord help us, dear brethren, to watch over ourselves, that we may keep at the feet of Jesus, and learn of him. He was dependent upon men for a drop of water; and so, my dear brethren, I shall be dependent upon you, through our dear heavenly Father, trusting that he will let every thing work for good for us all.

And now, I will bid you all farewell. Farewell until Jesus comes. O my brethren, my trust is that Jesus will soon come. And may the choicest blessings that heaven contains be poured out upon you all. May he ever be the helper and comforter of you all; and may he be the Savior and Redeemer of you all; and may we all be humble and faithful followers of the dear Lamb of God, who was slain for our sins, and at last meet together with him in his kingdom, is the earnest and sincere prayer of your humble servant and brother in Christ, O. BENDIXON.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—As some of you are anxiously, as well as impatiently, waiting to hear from me, in reference to our mission work in the highways and cellars and garrets of this city, I would say, in the first place, it seems as though Satan had broken loose; and I think I have felt like Job—"I would not live alway"; let me alone. In my last letter, I told you the landlord had raised the rent. In the next place, I was very sick, and could hardly get about. The doctor said I must leave the city three months, and go under medical treatment. I was too sick to fill my appointments, and had to get others to fill them for me; and of course, if I stay at home all the while, and do not labor among the churches, I can not keep the mission up. So you may know we have had a week of severe trial. Finally the landlord came for his rent. I told him I had not got it, and tried to talk him out of the $300.00; but he could not be moved, so I let him go; but my mind was made up that I would not pay it. He was taking advantage of our work. He saw we had a great revival going on, and we could not help ourselves, and thought we should have to pay it. So I sat down to think it over.

Now for the question. If I give it up, where shall we go? what will become of the young converts? who will look after them? who will nurse them? Next, what shall I do with the seats and lamps in the mission room? the circulating library? the herbs and medicines in the dispensary? Shall all this hard work, after saving up everything, and turning it to an account, and getting things just so we could work and do good, seven or eight months' sacrifice and suffering, and carrying of bundles to the poor, to build up the mission,—all this be thrown away and wasted, just because the Devil is mad, and jealous, and wants to get me out of the field, because I was helping to rob him of some of his soldiers? I thought, Is God willing that I should stop, after he has blessed this work so, both temporally and spiritually? The answer was, No; God will hold me accountable, if I slack my hands and give it up. And I thought, No; if God will be my helper, I will continue in this garret-and-cellar-work, if I have to travel from Maine to California to sustain it, and send every cent for its support myself; for there is no church or mission in the city doing the amount of good that the Star-of-Hope mission is doing. To the Lord be all the glory.

Well, I am sick and nervous, and unfit for labor; but I can pray, and God will hear. While these things were passing through my mind one day, I got up, put on my things, went out, and called on a sister who had been converted in the mission, and said to her, Do you feel like praying about this matter? Why, said she, I have been praying all night; and I have got the witness that the landlord dare not take that $300. Said she, God has got hold of that man, and the Devil has too; he has got a struggle; he can't sleep, I know; and if you pay him, he will have to give it back again. The Lord will not let him keep it. The next thing was to pray for a special outpouring of the Spirit, for the enemy has been trying to turn things upside down. So we came together on Friday night, to pray about the whole thing; and if it was the Lord's will that we should go on, to give us a good meeting, and one soul to make merry over; and our prayer was answered. The Lord converted a young man, and all in the house were blessed. It seems as though we never had such meetings as we have had since that time.

The landlord came on the 11th. Why he staid away so long, I could not tell; but when he came, I told him the Lord would not let me pay any more than I had been paying; the money was the Lord's, and I was the Lord's, and I did not feel it would be right for me to do so. Well, he said, I will take the same as before, but don't let any of the rest of the tenants know it. So the Lord is on our side, if we did have trouble about it.

I would say to the many friends who wrote me about the matter (as I requested), especially away off in N. H., Vt., and Mass., I thank you for your kind sympathies and earnest prayers. The good Lord has heard your prayers and answered them. May the Lord bless you all. Now I want you all to pray for my health. I have many cares, too numerous to mention, and trials not a few, and jealousies and hatred and evil surmisings, and find them among the "all things." O may God help me to stand still and see his salvation. I would say to the sister of much faith, who wrote,—my faith has never failed in regard to God's finding the means to carry on this great and last work. But the trouble was to decide whether to yield to Cæsar's price, or to stand up in the name of the Lord and positively say No, and run the risk of what the landlord might do; but as soon as I got the consent of my mind, and felt the Lord wanted me to take that stand, I had perfect peace, and all the fret and worry was taken away. Praise his holy name. So now we shall make some alteration in the mission house. We shall take the first floor for a meeting room, so we can open the hall doors, which will hold fifty more, and the back yard will hold a hundred and fifty, and by these means three or four hundred poor souls can hear the gospel, who can hear it in no other place. The Lord is with us in power. We have commenced using the medicines freely—herbs, roots, and barks, thankfully received.

A word or two to the boys and girls. It will soon be time to gather some kinds of bitter herbs; and you little folks, don't forget the Star-of-Hope Mission Dispensary. Remember all this is working for God; just as much in gathering the herbs, as it is for us to carry them to the sick and afflicted ones. The Lord bless the boys and girls, as well as the Indians, who are getting us mosses and barks for diseases of the lungs.

I would just say I have a little white boy, eight years of age. I would like to get him a good home in the country, with good, kind, christian people. He is very handy about the house; likes to help the women-folks; but don't like to go to school. He is very quick. His imitation is large. Any one wishing such a little fellow will write me, and I will give the particulars. Now pray for us, that the Lord may bless us, and keep us faithful till Jesus comes.

RECEIPTS. B. Tuttle of Skowhegan, Me., $5.00. C. W. Smith, $3.00. A friend, East Boston, $1.00. ANNA E. SMITH.

New York, May 16th.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I am now in one of the most pleasant villages in the State. It is a level tract of land, situated on the Ashuelot river, surrounded by hills on every side. The splendid mansions and dwellings, with their public houses and commercial appearance, all indicate wealth and thrift. But it is made doubly beautiful at present by the green grass and putting forth of the trees and blossoms seen in every direction. It is delightful indeed to rise with the sun, and take a morning walk, hearing the voice of music from the birds, in delightful strains, while you are being invigorated by the free, wholesome air from the mountains.

Their religion seems to be stereotyped, and theologically fixed; hence it is a hard place in which to reach the mass of the people. But even here we find a few of like precious faith, unassuming, faithful brethren, who are looking for the speedy consummation of the christian's hope. They have a meeting established in a hall at the head of Main St. They have enjoyed a good degree of prosperity since the opening of the hall. Some have been converted into the love of Jesus, and to look and wait for him from heaven, and they now have a happy company, in harmony and good fellowship, at work with corresponding zeal, doing all in their power to enlighten, instruct, and enforce Bible doctrine, with its adaptedness to save, upon their fellow men. I find it pleasant to be with them, and while I stay I hope to be of some benefit to the cause of truth here. Our meetings are good, and while there is no special revival, still there are indications for good. Some feel the need of religion, and are almost persuaded to step into "the pool," for the waters are troubled. Others are singing the new song. I do hope to see a movement from the Lord that will add faithful members to the church, such as shall be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

Thine, L. BOUTELLE.

Keene, N. H., May 20th, 1868.

From Bro. N. McCullock.

BRO. GRANT:—Feeling somewhat impressed to write a few lines for the Crisis, I would say, never did I realize in my life a greater necessity of laying all upon the altar, than at this time. I do feel as though we ought to be very careful what we do and say, for our actions speak louder than words, many times. I find it very important for me to set a double watch over my words and actions, that I offend neither in word or deed. Oh, my God! forbid that I should say or do any thing that should grieve the heart of any one, for each heart knows its own sorrow; therefore let us bear others' burdens, with all humility, and so fulfill the law of Christ. Oh, for that dove-like spirit that Jesus had, that works no ill to the neighbor. Lord, ever give us that spirit, and then we shall be enabled to labor more successfully in the vineyard of the Lord, and in bringing some poor sinner to Christ. If we can be but the means, in the hand of God, of saving one poor soul from death, we shall be amply repaid when the Life-giver comes.

The cause is still onward in this city, under the faithful labors of Bro. Pratt and others. Truly, he is the right man for this place. We esteem him very highly for his works' sake, in giving meat in due season to the household of faith. New ones are becoming interested, and are inquiring what they shall do to be saved. Here is a great field for labor, and the cry comes from all parts of the land, to "come over and help us." We have two meetings in the hall during the week, and neighborhood prayer-meetings in the different parts of the city every other night, except Saturday night. They are very interesting and profitable meetings, and well attended. It seems to me, we are filling up the picture in this world's history, and that soon Jesus will come and wipe sorrow's tear from every eye. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, is the prayer of my heart.

N. McCULLOCK.

Rochester, N. Y., April, 25th, 1868.

From Sr. S. E. Teeple.

BRO. GRANT:—I have often thought it a great privilege that I have been permitted from time to time to help fill out the columns of the Crisis, as well as other papers. Sometimes it has been the only way that I could exhort others. Often has my soul been strengthened; for in watering others, we are ourselves watered. Much of the preaching that I have is what I get through the press; and it is so comforting, so consoling in my lonely hours, that I can't express my gratitude. Many are the trials and perils of the child of God in this day in which we live, and we need much grace and wisdom and help, to keep us in the narrow path. I can say today, my motto is "onward and upward," and I have no disposition to give up. I feel the prize is but just ahead. The crown will soon be given, the warfare ended, and in glory we will reign.

Truly it is a warfare, but when I enlisted I enlisted for life, and I am glad I'm in this army. O glory to God forever. Never have I been sorry.

> "The fare is cheap and all can go,
> The rich and poor are there;
> No second class on board this train,
> No difference in the fare."

But many are unwilling to go, especially on this train. It is so unpopular, it requires much humility. It takes our time, our talents, our all, and a cutting loose from the world. Every tie must be severed, and all put on the altar. I tremble. I fear sometimes that I am not what I should be, although I am trying to do the best that I can. I love Jesus. I love the cause of God. I love his children, and I expect to meet them all,

> "Where no tears shall ever fall,
> Nor heart be sad;
> Where the glory is for all,
> And all are glad."

Here, many times, I have to do my weeping alone, with no kind, no sympathizing friend

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, May 27, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

TOUR WEST.

We purpose to make a tour West, leaving Boston, Tuesday, May 26th, and attend the campmeeting appointed by Bro. Sheldon, at Fairfield, Wis., to commence May 30th, and hold over two Sabbaths; also a campmeeting in Iowa (see notice,) commencing June 8th, and then hold a discussion with Mr. Sweeney (Disciple minister) in Dubuque, Iowa, commencing June 14th, to continue through the the week, and longer if thought best. The subjects involved are the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, and the coming kingdom. Mr. S. is said to be the most able debater in the West. We hope to see a large gathering at the campmeetings. Let much prayer be offered that the Spirit of the Lord may be upon them and that great good may be accomplished.

BRO. FLOYD.

We take pleasure in commending to our Brn. and Srs. Bro. J. L. Floyd, who has formerly been an eminent lawyer, but now feels it a duty to do what he can to help spread the glad tidings of the coming kingdom and other great truths that we love so well. He needs your aid and sympathy. Let him be well supplied. He thinks of going west to labor as the door may open.

GREENFIELD DISCUSSION.

Our discussion with Moses Hull, in Greenfield, Mass., increased in interest during the five evenings of its continuance. Our friends are much pleased with the results. Many have had their eyes opened to see that Spiritualism is the most deadly foe to christianity, God and the Bible, that ever found foothold in a civilized community. Mr. Hull is a very bold blasphemer, who makes earnest efforts to impeach the God of the Bible and his word; and yet claims that Spiritualism is the only true religion, and that it is to reform the world. We do not see how it is possible for Satan to invent a system more fully antichristian in all its features, than is Spiritualism. Its doctrines are the same as those taught by the heathen, which they received from the demons, who claimed to be human spirits. Then, as now, the spirits were opposed to Christ and the religion and doctrine he taught.

Spiritualism offers a shelter to every body that will help oppose the Bible and its author, and is endeavoring to put down all who attempt to defend them. The warfare is becoming an earnest one, and we have no expectation that it will abate till Jesus comes to set up his heavenly kingdom.

It was claimed by Mr. Hull that Christ has come to as many persons as there are of those who have embraced Spiritualism, and that there will be no other coming of Christ. He still claims that man is immortal, omniscient, and omnipresent, possessing all the attributes ascribed to God; in short, that man is God, and God is man. According to his teaching, man and God are only different names of the same being. And yet, after taking such shockingly infidel positions, it is claimed that Spiritualism is the only true religion. If we did not know it to be a fact, we could hardly be made to believe that intelligent men and women, educated in New England, where the full blaze of gospel light has been shining upon their pathway, could be led to follow the teachings of such lying, "seducing spirits," as are the authors of Spiritualism. Truly we have come to "PERILOUS TIMES." The worst has not yet come.

"Soldiers of Christ, arise,
And put your armor on;
Strong in the strength which God supplies
Through his eternal Son."

We spent the Sabbath, May 17th, in Greenfield, and received much comfort from the good results of the discussion, and the meetings held Saturday evening and Sabbath day. One intelligent and devoted Congregationalist minister in the place took an active part in our meeting Sabbath evening, manifesting a true christian spirit, and expressing a warm sympathy with the effort we were making. We found he possessed a kindred spirit, and was ready to co-operate with all christians. It was like cool water to a thirsty soul to hear him talk. Others saw the truth clearer than ever before, and expressed the joy felt, by warm words and tears. One who had been quite opposed to our views of the Bible, now sees them clearly, and could not find language to express his joy at the sight of the truth. He wonders now that he did not see it before. He has been a member of the Congregational church for years; but the Bible seems to him now like a new book, because he sees the beautiful harmony of its parts.

We found another intelligent young man who was under conviction, earnestly desiring to be a christian. The Lord has raised us up some warm friends in Greenfield, who are anxious to hear more on the reasons of our hope. We trust they will have the privilege. The people are much stirred up in relation to the subject presented during the discussion. A prayer-meeting is established, and the prospect is encouraging.

A GRAVE QUESTION.

One who says he is "sorely tried on the subject of future punishment," writes to the Advance as follows:—"There was a time when we were not. Can existence compensate for endless torment? Please exercise that charity which thinketh no evil, and reply in The Advance."

We think it will be a hard question to answer from the stand-point of popular theology, which teaches the doctrine of "endless torment;" but from a Bible stand-point, the case is very different. Who would say he had rather have had no existence, than to live this life? Some in extreme suffering, or in great disappointment, might curse the day of their birth; but such is not the common feeling among the wicked. Then if the present life is worth more to them than no life, they have been gainers if they lose eternal life. They have no claim for the future life, hence they will not be wronged if put back to dust from whence they came.

Those who say this life is a burden, should not complain when it is removed, and they are "destroyed for ever." Eternal life is a gift to the righteous, the only ones who could enjoy the coming kingdom.

FRENCH WAR CLOUDS.

There are strong indications that Napoleon is about to make some important military movements, that will astonish the world, and produce some radical changes in the governments of Europe, and, perhaps, other countries also. There is a deep anxiety resting upon the minds of great men and warriors in relation to the future movements of the "man of wonder."

The following is a late telegram from Paris:

"Gen. Failley, commanding the French encampment of Chalons, in an address to the troops, says: 'War being possible, the labors of the camp must be serious and unremitting.'"

MORE PROGRESS.

The world is certainly progressing with great speed. Many new systems are rising up in various parts of the world, which are entirely opposed to the plan of salvation as revealed in the Bible. Jesus is set aside, and the people conclude to follow nature, and reject the Bible. The tide of infidelity is rising rapidly in all directions. The following may be but the beginning of much more of the same character:—

"A new sect has sprung up in France. It is composed of people who altogether reject religion, and who take upon themselves the engagement not only to abstain from going to church and from permitting any religious observances in their households, but not to let any priest officiate at their marriages, or at the naming, marrying, or burying of their children, or to enter their houses or hold communication with members of their families on any pretext; and, finally, they engage not to accept religious counsel in case of sickness, and, by a written document, to prohibit any priest from officiating at their interment. The sect in Paris is already not inconsiderable in number, and is increasing every day. In the provinces, too, it has many ramifications, not, however, thus far, of any great importance."

LEISURE TIME.

Some people are often heard to complain for want of leisure time, when they may feel that they have nothing to do, but to lounge about. If they could be thus situated, they would not be happy. No idler can enjoy the first class comfort. To be truly happy, we must be actively engaged, doing all to the glory of the Lord.

The following are sensible remarks on the subject:—

The most fallacious ideas prevail respecting leisure. People are always saying to themselves, "I would do this, and I would do that, if I had leisure." Now there is no condition in which the chance of doing any good is less than in the condition of leisure. The man fully employed may be able to gratify his good dispositions by improving himself or his neighbors, or serving the public in some useful way; but the man who has all his time to dispose of as he pleases, has but a poor chance indeed of doing so. To do, increases the capacity of doing; and it is far less difficult for a man who is in a habitual course of exertion, to exert himself a little more for an extra purpose, than for a man who does little or nothing, to put himself into motion for the same end. There is reluctance in all things to be set a-going; but when that is got over, then everything goes sweetly enough.

Just so with the idle man. In losing the habit, he loses the power of doing. But a man who is busy about some regular employment for a proper length of time every day, can very easily do something else during the remaining hours; indeed, the recreation of the weary man is apt to be busier than the perpetual leisure of the idle. As he walks through the world, his hands hang unmuffled by his side, and he can sometimes do more by a single touch in passing, than a vacant man is likely to do in a twelvemonth. Let no man ask for leisure in order to do anything. Let him rather pray that he may never have leisure. If he really wishes to do any good thing, he will always find time for it, by properly arranging his other employments.—New York Ledger.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Cruelty to animals is becoming notorious in this country; and the fact shows a progress towards barbarism instead of christianity. A society has been formed in Massachusetts for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and its members have petitioned the Legislature for laws more stringent on the subject. We are glad to see this movement. It is one in the right direction. The following is a sample of the testimony given as a reason why the State should make more stringent laws against such barbarism as is now practised:—

"Overloaded horses abused for their inability to haul their loads up Beacon Hill; calves, with their feet bound and piled like stones in a wagon on their way to and from Brighton; sheep sheared in early spring and sent to market in an exposed condition; fowls plucked alive to save labor; the working of animals past the age of reasonable use; the transportation of sheep without food or water to facilitate close packing; bleeding calves in the neck or head before slaughtering, to render the flesh white; cattle kept in pens for long periods without water until offered for sale, when they are allowed to drink large quantities to increase their weight; overworking horses on the Cambridge Horse Railroad to the extent of killing five and disabling sixty in one day; allowing cows to go forty-eight hours without milking, to increase the size of their udders when exposed for sale. The society propose to give rewards for the procuration of evidence that leads to the conviction of offenders; to employ persons to investigate cases brought to the notice of the directors; and award medals to teamsters, drivers, butchers, and others who are distinguished from the mass for their humane use of animals."

It is the covetousness of the age that leads people to resort to such cruel means to get more money. Covetousness eclipses love, mercy and justice. Truly "the love of money is the root of all evil." Let all "beware of covetousness," which is idolatry. It does not pay to be covetous; for "no covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." Eph. 5: 5.

MASONRY.—Bro. John T. Walsh is publishing an able monthly, entitled "The American Anti-Masonic and Biblical Review." It is said to be "the only periodical of the kind in the world." He takes strong ground against Masonic and all other secret societies, showing that they are calculated to make backsliders rather than christians.

Those who would like to subscribe for it can address John T. Walsh, New Berne, N. C.

ADVENTISM.—We are much pleased with "Adventism" from the pen of Bro. Wm Sheldon, and published by the Western A. C. A. It is an excellent work to put in the hands of those who are not familiar with the reasons of our hope. We have made some extracts from it in the last few numbers of the Crisis, and by mistake they were not credited to the work.

GOOD BLACK INK.—For years we have been trying various kinds of ink, but have never found any that pleased us so well as that made by Dr. Thomas, of Waterbury, Vt. We take pleasure in recommending this ink made by Bro. Thomas. It is for sale by W. H. Hill, at 32 Cornhill, Boston.

A VALUABLE BOOK.

Some week's since we referred to a valuable book, from Dr. Miller of New York, entitled "ABUSES OF THE SEXUAL ORGANS." We wish to call the attention of our readers again to this work. We hear but one voice from medical men, clergymen, teachers, and all interested in the physical, moral and religious welfare of mankind; and that is, "Every body should read it." It is emphatically a book for the times.

They have also issued another smaller work, on the same subject, expresly for the children, which every child should have, who is old enough to read. It is entitled "Important Truths. A book for every child."

These works are published by E. P. Woodward & Co., 32 Faneuil-Hall Square, Boston.

For sale at the Crisis office. Price, (post paid), extra cloth, Bevelled Boards, $1.00; Paper Cover, .75; Gilt Edge, $1.30; Morocco, full guilt, $1.75, one-fifth off per dozen.

Note. The title of the work is now, "A Treatise on the Cause of Exhausted Vitality."

LEXINGTON, Mass., Feb. 1, 1868.

MY DEAR DOCTOR.—I have read your treatise on the Cause of Exhausted Vitality and the abuses of the Sexual Function. I am more than pleased with it. The delicacy, and earnest and sincere spirit which permeates its every paragraph, is a source of unmixed pleasure to physicians. You have made a vital contribution to this most important but neglected subject. While you have not shrunk from exposing the evil in all its hideous deformity, it is done in a spirit which can give no offence even to the most fastidious. As a medical man, and as one whose life is given to the dissemination of the laws of physical health, I thank you. I am, gratefully, yours,

DIO LEWIS.

DEAR SIR,—I saw a notice of your book in the World's Crisis, ordered a copy, read it, and approve it. I thank God, and thank and love you for writing it. It will do more good than dozens of theological books, hundreds of prayer-meetings, and thousands of sermons. I was so well pleased with it that last week I read the whole through in my lecture-room, to all who were present, and I am intending to translate and print it in German in a little paper I am publishing.—Rev. W. F. Schwilk, Schenectady, N. Y.

Dr. Miller brings forward a great amount of facts in support of his views concerning the laws of animal life, and applies them to the practical interest of education in a lucid and forcible manner. His book is written in the grave and serious tone becoming the importance of the subject, and is well adapted to awaken the attention of parents and teachers to a sense of their duty to the young, and to impress the public mind with a knowledge of physiological principles that ought not to be restricted to the medical profession.—N. Y. Tribune.

* * * We know of no one book that ought to go absolutely into the hands of every person on this footstool sooner than this, except the Bible. It is plain spoken, without being disgusting; is practical without being infidel, and is not likely to hurt the evil it essays to heal. We shall speak of it often. Send for it at once.—Church Union.

The subject, though from its nature delicate, is one of very great importance, both from a moral and scientific point of view, and Dr. Miller appears to have discussed it conscientiously and impressively. The facts which he presents are certainly appalling, and it is not easy to resist his conclusions.—New York Independent.

A work which discusses the subject scientifically, while it fails not of just and Christian views of it. It is suitable for popular use, though it does not evade any important point. We believe its circulation would do great good. Methodist.

This is a small book on a great subject, and one that concerns all adults, whether married or single. Let it be read, studied, and pondered by all, as it may serve to prevent functional derangements, which is better even than cure.—Boston Cultivator.

TOBACCO A POISON.

But few are aware of the evil effects of tobacco upon the human system. Because some who use it live to a good old age, they think it is not injurious. So some drink brandy, cider, whiskey, and other intoxicating liquors, and yet outlive some who abstain from such things; while others die of delirium tremens and fill a drunkard's grave, and lose their inheritance in the kingdom of God. The reason is, some constitutions can bear enough to kill two or three others, before they yield themselves; but if such lived temperately, and avoided the use of tobacco and rum they would have lived longer, taken more comfort, set better examples, had more money to give away, raised better and more healthy children, and had less temptation, and felt much more devotional and pure-minded, than they would to indulge in them. We are glad to learn that some who have been able ministers of the gospel, and have used tobacco, have now resolved in the strength of the Lord, to use it no more. We hope all will come to the same conclusion. By so doing, they would add much to their moral strength and influence. Tobacco blunts one's moral, physical, intellectual, and social capacities. He will be more of a man when he has conquered this bad habit, and will be of more value in society, in the family, and in the church. He will think more of himself, and others will hold him in higher estimation. He will have more power to war against sin and the Devil. No physiological fact is better settled than that tobacco tends to dwarf a man, and weaken his power to resist the temptations of his great adversary. For this reason Satan would have every one use tobacco; consequently he spares no effort to persuade all the boys to form the habit, and then makes them believe in after life, that they cannot do without it. Christian brother, will you sanction such a filthy habit by your own example? Say no, by the help of the Lord, I will never use it again. Read the following:—

"A man living near Albany, N. Y., last week, wiped the oil from the bowl of a tobacco pipe and applied it to a burn on the lip of his little daughter. The child died in convulsions in twenty-four hours after."

BY REV. A. A. PHELPS.

BRO. GRANT:—During last winter you were upon the stand several weeks to answer "queries and objections, by Bro. A. A. Phelps," on the point of the "Non-immortality of the soul, the unconscious state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked." Will Bro. Phelps now take the stand and answer a few "queries and objections" to the immortality of the soul, the conscious state of the dead, and the eternal torments of the wicked? With Bro. Phelps I have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance, and if he will consent to take the stand, I pledge myself that he shall be treated in a courteous and christian manner.

Yours for the truth, J. WENDELL.

TO MY PATIENTS.

I have returned from Indiana, and my address will be as before,—Bristolville, Ohio. I have abandoned the practice of medicine, and have commenced proclaiming the "glad tidings of salvation" to a sinful world; yet I will continue to treat persons who may address me as I directed in my card of last spring. I have thus treated a large number of persons in almost every State in the Union, and am so much encouraged by kind words from patients, whom I have benefited, that I deem it not only a duty, but a privilege to do all I can to relieve suffering humanity. And although I have lost very much during the past year, pecuniarily, still I live in the blessed hope that I shall one day be paid; that one day it may be said to me, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." I desire to hear from all my patients, or those who have been such. Let me know how you are.

I. A. THAYER, M. D.

A GREAT TRIAL.

On account of extreme poverty, I am unable to provide for my children, and unless some relief or help comes, I do not know but we shall be obliged to seek a home for our little daughter Mary. If any one should read this, who can find a good place for her, where she will be kindly provided for, and rightly influenced, please write to me. She was six years old last December. Further information will be given by letter to those who request it. Brethren, will you pray for me and my family in our affliction. Your Bro.,

NOTICE.

I would say to the brethren in Maine, that my horse is entirely used up for driving, at present, and I think for the season. He was taken lame last Dec., and has been getting worse until now. He will have to be turned out to pasture for the season. I hope by so doing he may get better, so that he will sell for something; but don't know. As I have no means to buy another, I shall not be able to visit the brethren and preach the word of life, as I have promised to do the coming season, unless the Lord provides a way for me to get a horse. My horse was a good one, and I have taken good care of him; so I shall try and patiently wait the leadings of Him who knows what is best for me, better than I do myself. Pray for me, brethren, that I may trust in the Lord, and wait and work for Jesus until he comes, which I believe will be very soon. JER. CARR.

THE SPRINGFIELD CAMP-GROUND.

Some are inquiring about the camp-ground whether the lots for tents were taken? We would here say, the whole committee voted at the Boston conference to have all the lots free, and give each an equal chance; also leaving the arrangements with the building committee, which met on the ground May 15th, and decided that the first row of tents be cloth, and nearly uniform in size. The lots are twenty feet front, and thirty feet deep, and no tent can be larger than that when pitched. It will not be safe to get all as large as that, if that is the whole size of the lot; and as many of these lots have trees on them that must stand for shades, it would be safer to calculate fifteen wide and twenty-five feet deep.

On the second circle, the tents are forty by fifty feet, which will accommodate a very large tent, or two common sized ones, and two family tents, on each lot. No lots are selected yet, and none will be until timely notice is given in the Crisis, so that all will have an equal chance. Don't be in a hurry. There is good tent ground enough, besides the two circles, for two hundred tents, without any restrictions about size or material, although the building committee would suggest some better ones than were erected at Wilbraham, as lumber is so handy to the ground. There are three lumber yards near by the ground. Bro. Currier will erect a wooden tent any size, for those that wish, by addressing him. His shop is in one of the lumber yards. More on this subject at another time. It will be time enough to select your lots by letter, or right after the notice occurs in the Crisis,—probably in July.

Some have applied for work on the ground. We shall get through by the 25th of May, all we shall do until August, two weeks before the meeting begins, when from four to six hands will be employed in fitting up for the meeting. We hope some churches will unite in building a good lumber tent on the second circle, or on one of the streets, for a meeting-house that will be safe in a rain. If any wish to purchase cloth or canvass tents, they would do well to send to Bro. George T. Adams, Boston, as tents of all kinds are built in Boston, near him, and can be sent to the ground. Any other information wanted will be given by addressing a line to either of the building committee. H. MUNGER, for the Com.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. Bendixon.

Dear brethren in the Lord:—With love and gratitude to my heavenly Father for all his goodness, I send you all, through these lines, my sincere thanks for all your goodness and kindness and hospitality which you all so freely bestowed upon me while I sojourned among you. Often has my heart been filled with gratitude and love to my dear Savior, even to overflowing, when observing your affection to me; and sad have I felt when I parted with you; but my trust and hope is that we shall meet soon where parting will be no more. My dear brethren, receive then in kindness a thousand thanks from the bottom of my soul, with my brotherly hand stretched forth through these lines. Try to get in the Spirit, standing and shaking hands with me for the last time in this life, while our eyes may drop a silent tear of longing and sighing after our long-expected home. O! my soul is full. Come, Jesus, and come quickly! And what I, secondly, can give you is, my prayers; they shall never fail as long as I shall remain in this unfriendly world. I trust that our mutual prayers shall often meet at the throne of grace and bring back blessings to our souls.

Dear brethren, while you read these lines I am on the great deep, hastening towards my native land, where my Lord has called me to go and give the last cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" I feel the great responsibility that rests upon me. I feel that I am weak, but my strength is in the Lord. My tears flow while writing these lines, but I will hide myself in the bosom of Jesus, and I know that he will protect me. I depend upon my Lord for food and raiment, and he has promised that I shall not lack any bread and water. I can not say, as some do, that they are not dependent upon any man; no, no. I am dependent upon men, through my Father in heaven, and I see it is good to keep low in the valley, and not climb up. The Lord help us, dear brethren, to watch over ourselves, that we may keep at the feet of Jesus, and learn of him. He was dependent upon men for a drop of water; and so, my dear brethren, I shall be dependent upon you, through our dear heavenly Father, trusting that he will let every thing work for good for us all.

And now, I will bid you all farewell. Farewell until Jesus comes. O my brethren, my trust is that Jesus will soon come. And may the choicest blessings that heaven contains be poured out upon you all. May he ever be the helper and comforter of you all; and may he be the Savior and Redeemer of you all; and may we all be humble and faithful followers of the dear Lamb of God, who was slain for our sins, and at last meet together with him in his kingdom, is the earnest and sincere prayer of your humble servant and brother in Christ, O. BENDIXON.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—As some of you are anxiously, as well as impatiently, waiting to hear from me, in reference to our mission work in the highways and cellars and garrets of this city, I would say, in the first place, it seems as though Satan had broken loose; and I think I have felt like Job—"I would not live alway"; let me alone. In my last letter, I told you the landlord had raised the rent. In the next place, I was very sick, and could hardly get about. The doctor said I must leave the city three months, and go under medical treatment. I was too sick to fill my appointments, and had to get others to fill them for me; and of course, if I stay at home all the while, and do not labor among the churches, I can not keep the mission up. So you may know we have had a week of severe trial. Finally the landlord came for his rent. I told him I had not got it, and tried to talk him out of the $300.00; but he could not be moved, so I let him go; but my mind was made up that I would not pay it. He was taking advantage of our work. He saw we had a great revival going on, and we could not help ourselves, and thought we should have to pay it. So I sat down to think it over.

Now for the question. If I give it up, where shall we go? what will become of the young converts? who will look after them? who will nurse them? Next, what shall I do with the seats and lamps in the mission room? the circulating library? the herbs and medicines in the dispensary? Shall all this hard work, after saving up everything, and turning it to an account, and getting things just so we could work and do good, seven or eight months' sacrifice and suffering, and carrying of bundles to the poor, to build up the mission,—all this be thrown away and wasted, just because the Devil is mad, and jealous, and wants to get me out of the field, because I was helping to rob him of some of his soldiers? I thought, Is God willing that I should stop, after he has blessed this work so, both temporally and spiritually? The answer was, No; God will hold me accountable, if I slack my hands and give it up. And I thought, No; if God will be my helper, I will continue in this garret-and-cellar-work, if I have to travel from Maine to California to sustain it, and send every cent for its support myself; for there is no church or mission in the city doing the amount of good that the Star-of-Hope mission is doing. To the Lord be all the glory.

Well, I am sick and nervous, and unfit for labor; but I can pray, and God will hear. While these things were passing through my mind one day, I got up, put on my things, went out, and called on a sister who had been converted in the mission, and said to her, Do you feel like praying about this matter? Why, said she, I have been praying all night; and I have got the witness that the landlord dare not take that $300. Said she, God has got hold of that man, and the Devil has too; he has got a struggle; he can't sleep, I know; and if you pay him, he will have to give it back again. The Lord will not let him keep it. The next thing was to pray for a special outpouring of the Spirit, for the enemy has been trying to turn things upside down. So we came together on Friday night, to pray about the whole thing; and if it was the Lord's will that we should go on, to give us a good meeting, and one soul to make merry over; and our prayer was answered. The Lord converted a young man, and all in the house were blessed. It seems as though we never had such meetings as we have had since that time.

The landlord came on the 11th. Why he staid away so long, I could not tell; but when he came, I told him the Lord would not let me pay any more than I had been paying; the money was the Lord's, and I was the Lord's, and I did not feel it would be right for me to do so. Well, he said, I will take the same as before, but don't let any of the rest of the tenants know it. So the Lord is on our side, if we did have trouble about it.

I would say to the many friends who wrote me about the matter (as I requested), especially away off in N. H., Vt., and Mass., I thank you for your kind sympathies and earnest prayers. The good Lord has heard your prayers and answered them. May the Lord bless you all. Now I want you all to pray for my health. I have many cares, too numerous to mention, and trials not a few, and jealousies and hatred and evil surmisings, and find them among the "all things." O may God help me to stand still and see his salvation. I would say to the sister of much faith, who wrote,—my faith has never failed in regard to God's finding the means to carry on this great and last work. But the trouble was to decide whether to yield to Cæsar's price, or to stand up in the name of the Lord and positively say No, and run the risk of what the landlord might do; but as soon as I got the consent of my mind, and felt the Lord wanted me to take that stand, I had perfect peace, and all the fret and worry was taken away. Praise his holy name. So now we shall make some alteration in the mission house. We shall take the first floor for a meeting room, so we can open the hall doors, which will hold fifty more, and the back yard will hold a hundred and fifty, and by these means three or four hundred poor souls can hear the gospel, who can hear it in no other place. The Lord is with us in power. We have commenced using the medicines freely—herbs, roots, and barks, thankfully received.

A word or two to the boys and girls. It will soon be time to gather some kinds of bitter herbs; and you little folks, don't forget the Star-of-Hope Mission Dispensary. Remember all this is working for God; just as much in gathering the herbs, as it is for us to carry them to the sick and afflicted ones. The Lord bless the boys and girls, as well as the Indians, who are getting us mosses and barks for diseases of the lungs.

I would just say I have a little white boy, eight years of age. I would like to get him a good home in the country, with good, kind, christian people. He is very handy about the house; likes to help the women-folks; but don't like to go to school. He is very quick. His imitation is large. Any one wishing such a little fellow will write me, and I will give the particulars. Now pray for us, that the Lord may bless us, and keep us faithful till Jesus comes.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I am now in one of the most pleasant villages in the State. It is a level tract of land, situated on the Ashuelot river, surrounded by hills on every side. The splendid mansions and dwellings, with their public houses and commercial appearance, all indicate wealth and thrift. But it is made doubly beautiful at present by the green grass and putting forth of the trees and blossoms seen in every direction. It is delightful indeed to rise with the sun, and take a morning walk, hearing the voice of music from the birds, in delightful strains, while you are being invigorated by the free, wholesome air from the mountains.

Their religion seems to be stereotyped, and theologically fixed; hence it is a hard place in which to reach the mass of the people. But even here we find a few of like precious faith, unassuming, faithful brethren, who are looking for the speedy consummation of the christian's hope. They have a meeting established in a hall at the head of Main St. They have enjoyed a good degree of prosperity since the opening of the hall. Some have been converted into the love of Jesus, and to look and wait for him from heaven, and they now have a happy company, in harmony and good fellowship, at work with corresponding zeal, doing all in their power to enlighten, instruct, and enforce Bible doctrine, with its adaptedness to save, upon their fellow men. I find it pleasant to be with them, and while I stay I hope to be of some benefit to the cause of truth here. Our meetings are good, and while there is no special revival, still there are indications for good. Some feel the need of religion, and are almost persuaded to step into "the pool," for the waters are troubled. Others are singing the new song. I do hope to see a movement from the Lord that will add faithful members to the church, such as shall be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

Thine, L. BOUTELLE.

BRO. GRANT:—Feeling somewhat impressed to write a few lines for the Crisis, I would say, never did I realize in my life a greater necessity of laying all upon the altar, than at this time. I do feel as though we ought to be very careful what we do and say, for our actions speak louder than words, many times. I find it very important for me to set a double watch over my words and actions, that I offend neither in word or deed. Oh, my God! forbid that I should say or do any thing that should grieve the heart of any one, for each heart knows its own sorrow; therefore let us bear others' burdens, with all humility, and so fulfill the law of Christ. Oh, for that dove-like spirit that Jesus had, that works no ill to the neighbor. Lord, ever give us that spirit, and then we shall be enabled to labor more successfully in the vineyard of the Lord, and in bringing some poor sinner to Christ. If we can be but the means, in the hand of God, of saving one poor soul from death, we shall be amply repaid when the Life-giver comes.

The cause is still onward in this city, under the faithful labors of Bro. Pratt and others. Truly, he is the right man for this place. We esteem him very highly for his works' sake, in giving meat in due season to the household of faith. New ones are becoming interested, and are inquiring what they shall do to be saved. Here is a great field for labor, and the cry comes from all parts of the land, to "come over and help us." We have two meetings in the hall during the week, and neighborhood prayer-meetings in the different parts of the city every other night, except Saturday night. They are very interesting and profitable meetings, and well attended. It seems to me, we are filling up the picture in this world's history, and that soon Jesus will come and wipe sorrow's tear from every eye. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, is the prayer of my heart.

N. MCCULLOCK.

Rochester, N. Y., April, 25th, 1868.

From Sr. S. E. Teeple.

BRO. GRANT:—I have often thought it a great privilege that I have been permitted from time to time to help fill out the columns of the Crisis, as well as other papers. Sometimes it has been the only way that I could exhort others. Often has my soul been strengthened; for in watering others, we are ourselves watered. Much of the preaching that I have is what I get through the press; and it is so comforting, so consoling in my lonely hours, that I can't express my gratitude. Many are the trials and perils of the child of God in this day in which we live, and we need much grace and wisdom and help, to keep us in the narrow path. I can say today, my motto is "onward and upward," and I have no disposition to give up. I feel the prize is but just ahead. The crown will soon be given, the warfare ended, and in glory we will reign.

Truly it is a warfare, but when I enlisted I enlisted for life, and I am glad I'm in this army. O glory to God forever. Never have I been sorry.

"The fare is cheap and all can go,
The rich and poor are there;
No second class on board this train,
No difference in the fare."

But many are unwilling to go, especially on this train. It is so unpopular, it requires much humility. It takes our time, our talents, our all, and a cutting loose from the world. Every tie must be severed, and all put on the altar. I tremble. I fear sometimes that I am not what I should be, although I am trying to do the best that I can. I love Jesus. I love the cause of God. I love his children, and I expect to meet them all,

"Where no tears shall ever fall,
Nor heart be sad;
Where the glory is for all,
And all are glad."

Here, many times, I have to do my weeping alone, with no kind, no sympathising friend to comfort me when sorrow fills the heart. But I am glad weeping is only for the night, but joy cometh in the morning, and then the Savior's

"Own soft hand shall wipe the tears
From every weeping eye;
And pains and groans, and griefs and fears,
And death itself shall die."

Then be encouraged, dear saint of God, we have got almost through. Signs there is no mistaking proclaim the kingdom near. Then let us toil on, suffer on, if need be; there will soon be rest for the weary. For one, I sigh for rest; I groan for redemption. I will try to be faithful, and watch unto prayer. I am willing to suffer with the Master here, if I may reign with him in his kingdom. The promises are sweet, yea blessed. Amen, glory to God.

Your sister in trial, in tribulation, in affliction; and in the hope of the gospel, and in love with the truth, amen and amen.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. M. BROWN, Lima, March 24th, 1868, writes:—"An opportunity has presented itself to me to return my sincere thanks for the paper, which I have received weekly since the eighth of January. It is a sacred paper to me. I have been passing it around among my friends. They are all very much pleased with it. Mr. S. thinks of subscribing for it, and some others. We did not know that there were so many of our faith in Lima until we had circulated the Crisis. Dr. H. is a great advocate for it.

The M. E. church have held a protracted meeting here for two months, and it is still continued. The Spirit of God is working powerfully among the people in this place. Our minister is laboring hard, night and day, for the conversion of sinners. They are flocking to Christ as doves to their windows. The Presbyterians have united, and communed together at the Lord's table with us. We believe that Jesus is near.

I have been a member of the M. E. church for forty years. My husband was a Methodist minister. He died in Philadelphia in 1855, with cholera. In 1843 I had a serious dream. I saw the Lord coming in the clouds, and all the heavenly host with him. I turned to my husband, and asked, Is there one spark of hope for me? He said, No, not one spark. I then fell on my knees, and commenced praying until I awoke. The next day I was much cast down. I could not find any rest until I was immersed."

SR. M. MORRILL, Camden, Me., March 26th, 1868, writes:—"We do not have any Advent meetings here, and all the preaching we get is what we get out of the Crisis and Bridegroom. Dear children, it seems to me as though there was never a time when the people of this world were determined to gratify their own natural feelings, as at the present time; even the professed church are drinking into the spirit of the world. They have had as many as six levees in this place within the last six months, besides their Negro concert, that was held by a member of church. It is no wonder why they do not love the Lord's coming. How little holy living there seems to be at the present time.

I can say with our Brother, F. F., Let us obey Christ's injunction. Let us watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation. When we call to mind the sufferings of Christ, and the price which he paid for our redemption, no trial, no hardship seems too great to endure in his cause. No path too rough to tread, if Christ has only trodden it before. Let us trust in him, who in meekness bore sorrow and pain for our sakes. Let us think of his sorrow and weariness, when no man comforted or cared for him. Let us keep in mind his agony and bloody sweat, while in the garden of Gethsemane he prayed alone for us. I thank the Lord, dear children, that we have got almost home. Let us be faithful, for soon the trump will sound, and the dead arise, and the living be changed. Peace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen."

BROTHER MOSES CHANDLER, Maqueta, Jackson County, Iowa, May 4th, writes:—"I have been preaching in this county the past winter, in connection with Bro. P. S. Buck. We have had a glorious time. God has blessed his truth, and some one hundred and fifty have been converted, and most of them have united in church capacity. There is still a great interest manifested."

BRO. J. C. SHOREY, East Rochester, N. H., writes:—"The truth is taking good root here. Some are starting to serve the Lord, others are leaving off their tobacco. One started anew last night, and two that have been on the back ground. It works well, and the people all around wish to know when you are coming again."

For the World's Crisis.

"PAULINE THEOLOGY."

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

This is a pamphlet of 84 pages, on "THE CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT, as taught in the epistles of Paul." This is a work which cannot be answered by bombast and ridicule, nor can it be successfully met by any of its opponents. The sharpest critics find they have the Scriptures to confront them at every step when they attempt to reply to this work. It is the best thing to circulate with little expense we have ever seen on this subject. We have just purchased 500 copies to sell by the 100, 50, 25, or 10 copies, cheap, so that our brethren in Maine, who wish to scatter them among the ministry and churches, can buy them low for that purpose. It is a work which no one can feel ashamed to circulate. Retail price, 15 cts. Sold at the Crisis office. I. C. WELLCOME.

"DEATH NOT LIFE."

BY JACOB BLAIN.

This is a pamphlet of 168 pages. It enters into the real merits of the subject of life and death, but of DEATH especially, as its title indicates. It handles all the direct, and most of the indirect, passages which endless-misery teachers rely upon and claim as teaching their views. It gives criticisms and important admissions of many eminent writers on endless misery. It also treats on the nature of man, and the state of the dead. Many thousands have been scattered, and yet they are needed. It is a valuable work. Retail price, 25 cents. Sold at the Crisis office. I. C. WELLCOME.

THE DIFFERENCE.—The young lady who rises early, rolls up her sleeves, and walks into the kitchen to get breakfast, or assists in doing so, and afterwards, with cheerfulness and sunny smiles, puts the house in order without the assistance of mother, is worth a thousand parlor beauties, who, from the want of exercise, almost die of laziness. The former will make a good wife, and render home a paradise; the latter is a useless piece of furniture, and will, to the annoyance of the household, go whining to her grave.

Obituaries.

THORP. Died in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., May 16th, 1868, Sr. Emily Thorp, wife of Bro. James Thorp, aged fifty-nine years and six months.

Sister T. has been a believer in Christ for over forty years. In 1843 she embraced the glorious doctrine of the second personal coming of Christ, since which time, she has maintained a consistent christian life. After a long and painful illness, she went down sweetly to sleep, in hope of soon seeing Jesus in person. She leaves a sorrow-stricken husband and children and dear friends to mourn their loss. A discourse was delivered by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 19. C. W. LOW.

DOW. Died in Manchester, N. H., May 5th, 1868, Hellen E. Dow, daughter of Bro. H. and Sr. L. E. Dow, aged thirteen years, eleven months and one day.

Sister Hellen was converted under the labors of Bro. John Hook, and was baptized last autumn. She now sleeps in Jesus. Blessed sleep! Though hearts are broken, and tears fall on the grave of a lovely one, we "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him. . . . Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4: 18. C. RICHARDSON.

BUDLONG. Died in Pontiac, R. I., April 15th, 1868, Sylvester Budlong, aged forty years.

In early life he took upon himself the cross of Christ. He afterwards lost some of his first love; but in his last days, gave up fully to the Lord. He leaves a wife and two children. May the God of mercy be their refuge, and guide them to the country where,—

"The loved and lost shall meet again,
O joyful sight to see;
No parting tear will e'er be shed
Through all eternity."

TITUS. Died in Perry, Mich, May 1st, 1868, our little daughter Emma, aged six years four months and thirteen days.

"Our home is drear at break of day,
And drear at set of sun;
For lo the grave enwraps the clay
Of our departed one.
And vainly do our spirits sigh
With yearnings deep and wild,
To clasp once more within our arms
Our dear, our darling child."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

Vienna, May 9. Telegrams were received yesterday which state that the persecution of the Jews in Jassy, Baken and other places in Moldavia had been stopped by the authorities. Those who were compelled to flee from their homes have been allowed to return. Assassins and desecrators of the graves of the Jews, who have perpetrated their outrages almost with impunity for a long time, will hereafter be rigorously punished.

LONDON, May 22.—A dispatch from Rome states that the Pope has invited the Roman Catholic Bishops of the United States to raise one thousand volunteers for the Papal army, and authorizing them to make such terms with recruits as they may deem necessary and proper.

LONDON, May 24. The efforts to prove an alibi in the case of Barrett, the Clerkenwell conspirator, have failed and his execution will take place at the end of the week for which he was respited.

May 29. Telegrams from Sydney say that Prince Alfred has left for England in command of his ship, the steam frigate Galatea. He was quite well. Farrell, the attempted assassin of the Prince, was executed on the 22d of April.

DOMESTIC.

Chicago, May 23. A terribly fatal disease is now raging among the cattle in some portions of this State. Over one hundred head have fallen victims to it within the past few days. It usually kills in a few hours. No premonitory warnings are given, and although the skill in possession of ordinary practitioners has been brought to bear upon it, it yields to no remedy or treatment, and is fatal in every instance. Its name and nature has not yet been determined.

New York, May 23. The Secretary of the Governor of Monterey, Mexico, acknowledges having arrested six American citizens, but says that they were disorderly, and that he had a right to arrest them.

San Francisco, May 23. Sandwich Island dates to May 9. The Honolulu Gazette says: "Accounts up to April 29th have been received of the volcanic action in Hawaii. Earthquakes were less violent and frequent, although the whole land was still agitated with light vibrations. Two strong shocks were felt as far as Honolulu. There were reports that the lava had again broken out, but they were not credited. Full details of the eruption at Mauna Loa confirm the accounts previously received. At Kakuka, on the 7th of April, lava again burst forth through a fissure nearly three miles long and ran in a few hours twelve miles to the sea, forming a solid projection one-half mile in length."

A NEW IDEA.—The Emperor Napoleon has recently been much interested in a proposition submitted by M. Krantz to make Paris a commercial port, by rendering the river Seine navigable from the ocean to Paris for steamboats of very respectable size. The plan is said to be a very ingenious one, and, with the estimates, has already been submitted to a commission of scientific and practical gentlemen. It is proposed to raise the banks of the river where required. As the Suez Canal has been accomplished under French Engineers, it is not impossible that they may succeed in making Paris accessible by water.

A BRAVE DEED.—The Troy Whig says Stephen Hefferman, a fireman on the Central Railroad, last week performed a heroic act. A little girl was sitting on the track, paralized with fear as she saw the huge engine approaching. Hefferman saw the child, and at the risk of his own life climbed over the engine to the cow-catcher, and as the locomotive came down upon the helpless little thing, he reached down, snatched her from the track, and lifted her uninjured upon the engine.

FRENCH BABIES.—It appears from recent statistics that babies have rather a hard time of it in France. Owing to the enormous rents, particularly in Paris, which render it desirable that families at home should be as small as possible, and to the general employment of women in shops among the lower classes and their excessive devotion to fashion in the higher, there is an almost universal custom of handing infants over to nurses. This is generally done through agencies, or as they might be called, baby brokers, who keep the poor little creatures at their own houses on food which either kills them or produces chronic gastric disorders, until they can make a good bargain with some neighboring nurses. Of the 53,400 children yearly born in Paris, 18,000 are put out to nurse in the provinces, more than two-thirds through the instrumentality of the "agency offices." The mortality among these nurselings is 90 per cent. in one district, 87 per cent. in another, 69 in a third, and so on. No wonder the population of France takes 198 years to double. In our country, nearly one third of the deaths are those of children under five years of age; so that it would seem, at the best, that the life-tenure of the little ones is precarious enough. But in France their destruction is truly terrible.

☞ The bail bond of Jefferson Davis will be renewed in the United States Circuit Court at Richmond, to-day. He will not appear in person. The trial, it is confidently stated, will this time be fixed for the last of May or the middle of June, when it will certainly take place.

☞ It has recently been stated that Bishop Hopkins left at his death a manuscript, withdrawing an opinion he once expressed that the Pope is Anti-Christ, and giving the reason which led him to believe that he is not.

☞ The cable to be laid from the southern point of Florida to Cuba has been completed by the English manufacturer, and will be laid this summer. It is proposed to place the Dry Tortugas and Fort Taylor in telegraphic communication with the mainland, which scheme will no doubt be carried out. It is further proposed to lay a cable from the Isthmus of Panama to Cuba.

☞ The armies of Europe are said to be larger at present than at any time since the wars of the first Napoleon. France has 1,300,000 men, of whom 550,000 are in the reserve; England has 200,000 men; Prussia 600,000; Italy about 215,000; Austria 700,000; Russia 800,000, with 400,000 more in reserve; and Spain about 80,000.

☞ The health of Count Bismarck is so bad that a trip to Madeira or Egypt has been ordered by his physician.

☞ A new pamphlet has appeared in Paris under the title of "The Papacy and Italy; the Necessity of a Congress." The authorship is attributed to no less a person than General Montebello, who commanded the French troops at Rome for five years, and as the General is aide-de-camp to the Emperor, it is probable that it has been written and published with His Majesty's assent and approval.

☞ When the Pacific Railroad is finished, the tour of the world can be made in two months and a half. From New York to San Francisco will take seven days; from San Francisco will take seven days; from San Francisco to Hong Kong, by way of Yokohama, twenty days; from Hong Kong by steamer to Suez, thirty-two days; from Suez to Paris, six days; from Paris to New York, ten days; in all, seventy-five days.

☞ The London Times is trying a new printing machine, which promises to be superior to any of its predecessors. It is to print 46,000 sheets, or 23,000 perfect copies per hour. The paper is delivered from a roller, and the machine also cuts it into sheets, folds the printed papers and records the number printed.

HORSES OVER-REACHING.—A correspondent says that the remedies we now possess to prevent over-reaching in horses are very unsatisfactory; but the best he has found is to shoe the front feet with heavy shoes heel calks high, toe calks low. Shoe the hind feet with light shoes, low heel calks high toe calks. In several cases he has wielded a thin lip on the toe of the hind shoe, extending half way up the hoof. This protects the hind hoof from being broken, but is detrimental to the forward shoe in winter by doubling the calks. For interfering, turn the outside heel calks transversely, so as to rotate the angle out, and put the toe calk a little to the inside. This plan never failed the writer but twice.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, June 3d, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. LEAVITT.

A Grove Meeting in Charlton.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove or tent-meeting in the south-easterly part of Charlton, Mass., two miles east of Dresser Hill, one half mile from Rams-Horn factory, about five miles from Webster, Oxford, Dudley, and Southbridge; on land owned by Mr. Green, commencing June 16th, at 7½ o'clock, P. M., holding over Sunday. Preaching three times each day. Brethren and sisters in regions round about, let there be a general rally to this meeting. It is the first of the kind in this section. The field being nearly new, come provided for yourselves as far as you can. If any have tents to stop in, it will be well to bring them. Bro. L. Boutell and other preaching brethren are expected there to help preach the word of salvation. We are nearing home. Soon our work will be done. Shall we have it well done? Sinners around us need salvation through Jesus. Shall we make efforts to have them hear? Now is our time to work. Up, then. Let us put shoulder to the wheel. Tell them of a dying, risen Jesus; his willingness to save all that will come unto him, and of his coming again. Let us be urgent in the matter. Dear brethren and sisters, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that the name of God may be glorified. Come one, come all.

GEO. A. STREETER.

Quar. Conf. at Addison, Vt.,

On 29th, 30th, and 31st of May, beginning with prayer meeting on Thursday evening, (28th) at 7 o'clock. Services at the chapel on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at 10.30 A. M., 1.30 P. M., and 7.30. The friends of Hinesburgh, Bristol, Brookville, Vergennes, and other places, are cordially invited to come and aid in making this one of the old-fashioned times of refreshing.

G. W. STETSON, Sup.

If brethren and sisters coming by rail to this conference will write to Gordon Sprigg or to Daniel Smith, what day and what hour of the day they will be at Vergennes depot, they will arrange to meet them, and convey them from and back to the depot. GARDNER B. WHITFORD.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Savoy, Mass., to commence Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see many of the lovers of Jesus and his coming at this meeting. Come, leave your work, brethren, and come to this meeting all ready to work in harmony with Christ. E. OWEN, Secretary.

Tent Meeting.

We purpose, the Lord willing, to pitch the Maine Mission Tent, for our first meeting, in Greene, Me., on Tuesday, June 9th, to continue as the interest of the meeting may demand. Our friends there are John and Stimson Parker, who will help arrange for the meeting. I shall expect Bro. W. H. Mitchell to be with me to help in preaching the word. J. A. LIBBY.

P. S. Friends desiring tent-meetings will write to me. Address West Poland, Me. J. A. L.

Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Sutton, N. H., commencing on Thursday, at five o'clock P. M., May 28th, and hold over the following Lord's day.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

New-Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly session of the Advent Christian Conference of this State, will be held in Whitefield, N. H., commencing June 12th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large gathering of the friends of the coming One at this meeting. Bro. Couch and others of the Lord's servants will be present to preach the word. A. W. SIBLEY Secretary.

Maine Western Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held with the church in Biddeford, commencing in their chapel, Wednesday evening, June 17th, and continuing over Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend, and unite in the worship of the Lord and the work of saving souls. Call on Bro. J. C. Libby, who will direct you to places of entertainment. I. C. WELLCOME.

Conference.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held in the "Free House" at Lincolnville Centre, Maine, commencing Thursday, June 18th, 1868, at 7 P. M. Call upon E. Calderwood, Moses Young, D. Fletcher, and E. Blood.

Per order of Conf. Clerk, F. A. BAKER.

Notices.

Quarterly meeting at Star of Hope Mission, New York city, June 6th. Love-feast at 7 o'clock in the morning. Communion in evening. All are invited.

Also quarterly meeting at Hackensack, Sunday, June 14th. Love-feast in the morning at 8 o'clock; preaching at 10½ o'clock. Baptism at 3. Communion in the evening. From twenty to twenty-five to be baptized. ANNA E. SMITH.

Missouri Campmeeting.

All persons coming from abroad to the Missouri campmeeting, which commences Tuesday, June 9th, holding over the Sabbath following, will come directly to Advent Christian Hall, 1138, south east corner of Fifth and Biddle Streets, St. Louis, Mo. The horse cars, which pass the hall every five minutes, will carry us for five cents to within three-fourths of a mile of the camp-ground, which is in a beautiful cotton wood grove, situated on the bank of the Mississippi river, north from the city, instead of the west part, as first proposed.

Our churches are dwelling together in unity and love, and it is our only hope of success, as it secures to us the favor of God. We therefore cordially invite all who labor in word and doctrine, whose aim is the glory of God, and are not seeking to divide the little flock of God with questions to no profit, to come and help us.

In behalf of the Committee,

H. K. FLAGG,
COMMODORE DECATUR.

Tent Meeting in Sardinia, N. Y.

At a point very near the abutment or conjunction of the three counties of Erie, Cattaraugus and Wyoming, we propose to have a tent meeting commencing June 4th. By referring to the map, brethren will see that in this vicinity are the towns and villages of Sardinia, Yorkshire and Arcade, not to mention Holland, Freedom, Java, Franklinville, Springville, etc. One thing is certain, this is a new field, and I believe a promising one. I have no recollection or knowledge of any special meeting of Adventists in a region traversed by a diameter of sixty miles, and enclosed within a circumference of nearly two hundred.

There will be conveyance from Buffalo by stage, leaving at 9 A. M., or by railroad at 3.45 P. M. to Aurora, and thence by stage or omnibus to the meeting. We will furnish free accommodations as far as we can, but not extensively. Charges, however, for board and lodging will be quite reasonable. We certainly hope Bro. Grant will be with us on his return from the west. Adventists of New York! it is a great day in God's counsels concerning the earth, and the return and kingdom and glory of Christ. Come and help us, labor with us, rejoice with us. Help in this new field.

C. COLEGROVE.

Tent and Campmeeting.

There is to be a tent and campmeeting, to commence June 8th, 1868, and continue one week, to be held in the timber between the branches of the Maquoketa, nine miles from Maquoketa City, eight miles from Canton, twenty miles south-east of Cascade, twenty-four miles from Bellevue (on the Mississippi river), in Jackson Co., Iowa. Eld. Miles Grant is to be there to preach the word. We cordially invite all who are interested in saving souls from death, preachers and lay members, to come and help us. This is a new field. We need help. All bring tents and provision that can. Leave your hobbies behind. Come in the Spirit of Christ. Provision will be made for horse-keeping and board for those that cannot board themselves. We expect Bro. D. S. Clark, from Illinois, to be there with the large tent for our meeting-house.

In behalf of the Committee,

MOSES CHANDLER.

Minnesota Annual Conference.

The sixth annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Minnesota will commence on Thursday evening, June 25th, 1868, in Burr Oak, six miles east of Elliota. The members of the conference are all especially requested to be present, or report themselves by letter. The churches within the bounds of the conference are respectfully requested to send delegates.

N. B. All persons wishing to connect themselves with the conferernce, will please remember that according to the constitution adopted last year, such candidates must be previously recommended by the quarterly conference, or church to which they may belong. THOMAS R. ALLEN.

Conference.

A conference of brethren believing in the personal coming of Jesus Christ nigh at hand, in Mecosta, Isabella and adjoining counties, will convene at Millbrook, Mich., on Thursday evening before the first Sunday in June, to hold over Sunday. The object of this conference will be to unite the means of the scattered brethren, and employ an evangelist to proclaim the coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in this northern field. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers and people. We expect some preachers from other parts of the State. Millbrook is situated on the county line, between Mecosta and Isabella counties, and forty-five miles north of Ionia station, on the Detroit and Milwaukie Railroad. Provisions for the entertainment of all will be made.

JOHN BOWER,
PETER S. DECKER,
LEVI W. KING,
RICHARD S. DECKER, } Committee.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will begin at Fairfield, Sauk Co., Wis., May 30th. Elder Miles Grant will help us. At the same place a campmeeting will begin June 1st.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us. WM. SHELDON.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, we will attend a meeting on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, June 7th, 1868.

C. GOODRICH.
D. CHURCHILL.
J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of days in Carthage, Maine, to commence June 10th, at 7 P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Bro. Rufus Wendell, of Salem, Mass., is expected with us to preach the word. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord.

For the brethren, J. C. WHEELER.

Conference.

There will be a conference at South Livermore, Saturday, June 13th. Brethren are invited. Also over the Sabbath, June 14th, at the same place.

JESSE GAY.

Conference.

The New York State Conference is expected to be held in Rochester about the middle of June. Particulars hereafter. H. PRATT.

To the Preaching Brethren.

The brethren in West Haven, Ct., have hired a Hall for the purpose of holding meetings, and would be glad to have the preaching brethren visit them. But, to save confusion, before sending their appointments, they are requested to consult M. J. Brooks, Cor. Sec.

Wanted.

Some good sister in the Lord, of "precious faith," who is a good housekeeper, to live with us this summer, at moderate wages. Address at once,

H. F. CARPENTER, Danielsonville, Ct.

The Maine Tract Fund.

WM. H. MITCHELL,
R. R. YORK,
S. K. PARTRIDGE, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,

No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

ANNA E. SMITH, Superintendent and Manager.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 3 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. BOUTELL.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

For the World's Crisis.

"WHO'LL STAND UP FOR JESUS?"

O who'll stand up for Jesus,
The lowly Nazarene,
And raise the blood-stained banner,
Amid the host of sin.
CHORUS.—I'll stand up for Christ I'll cherish,
[illegible]
[illegible]

O who will follow Jesus,
[illegible]
[illegible]
Who's glory in his name?

Though fierce may rage the battle,
[illegible]
[illegible]
With Jesus evermore?

[illegible]
[illegible]

My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time, and voice;
Myself, my reputation,—
The lone way is my choice.
O Jesus, Jesus, Jesus,
My all sufficient friend;
Come, [illegible] to thy bosom;
E'en to my journey's end.

DIFFERENT GIFTS.

"Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all."—1 Cor. 12: 4, 6.

The twilight shade is gathering around us. The toilers in life's harvest field will soon be summoned to their reward. Happy they who return bringing their sheaves with them.

These laborers have not all the same office. There are diversities of gifts and of operations, and each can fill a place and perform a work, peculiar perhaps to himself; and their distinctive and combined efforts, like the several members of the body, all tend to the edification of the church, and the promotion of truth.

Some can give the deep, theological sermon, replete with interest, and redundant with thought, to which the reflective, studious mind gives rapt attention. Others are better adapted to the discourse of practical truths, which pertain to holy living, and stimulate to good works. The sermons of others are overflowing with emotion, bedewed with tears, and reach the heart through the sensibilities rather than through the intellect. They come with melted pathos from a soul full of sympathy for suffering, sinful, lost humanity.

Others, again, are sons of thunder; they pour forth upon their hearers the terrors of Sinai; the electric flash and peal are seen and heard, and guilty sinners are made to tremble in view of the wrath of an offended God. The pit of woe is uncovered, and as the flames of the everlasting fire hiss and glow before their vision, reflecting their brightness upon the dense "outer darkness," and revealing to their view the shadowy form of fiends leaping and writhing in torment, there comes piercing home to their guilty conscience the words of the Judge as he sits enthroned in awful majesty surrounded by his holy angels, the dreadful sentence—"Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels"! They see themselves standing on a slippery place, with hell seething at their feet, and in agony of alarm they cry out, "What shall I do to be saved?" And then the scene changes. Before them the minister of Christ holds forth the cross, with the bleeding Lamb portrayed, who taketh away the sin of the world. From wounded hands and feet and side there pours forth the cleansing and life-giving current which "can make the foulest clean." From Calvary there comes a voice sweeter far to the sinner's ear than seraphic notes or angel harpings; love-inspired, hope-awaking words from the lips of the God-man Jesus, "Look unto me and be ye saved"; and from the court of heaven there comes a response, "He is able to save unto the uttermost all who come unto God by him." Faith grasps the promise thus confirmed, and the condemned sinner is justified, the darkened mind is illuminated, the troubled soul has found rest and peace, the captive is made free, joy is given for mourning, and angel choristers ring out a glad refrain as another name is written in heaven.

We see the wisdom of God in appointing a diversity of gifts for the church. As in the ministry, so it is also in the membership. All have not the same office, nor the same talents. But every one has its use for the edification of the body. So with writers. There are authors who send forth their huge volumes, teeming with sound, logical deductions, until the student obtains thereby a thorough knowledge of the science or system under consideration.

Some of these volumes are the results of almost a life-time of hard study and research. Such works as these are of great value. But they are beyond the reach of the masses; they are not adapted to the common reader, nor indeed to the general student. Hence we have abridgements, so as to bring them within the reach of thousands who cannot procure the costly, massive volume. Again, we have the multum in parvo subjects taking a wide range condensed into a small space; and last the little tract, containing its gems of thought to be scattered broadcast o'er earth,—by the wayside, in the low cottage, the fisherman's rude hut, the palatial mansion, the felon's cell, the drunkard's home, the rail-car and steamboat; here, there, everywhere, in season and out of season,—always at work for Christ in the great harvest field, gathering sheaves for the garner.

Now here is ample room for those who can use that mighty weapon, the pen, and through these little messengers they can send forth the fruit-seed of truth that shall be sown by the side of all waters, and produce some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. And those who can give utterance to the mighty thought, who can write their sound, thorough, logical dissertations, for the people, must not look down from their lofty hill-top with contempt upon what may, to them, seem like pigmies working in the vale below; but welcome every endeavor, however small and humble it may appear, to help advance the interests of Christ's cause on earth. The pin in the building just as truly fills its needful place of usefulness as the massive pillar. The little taper sheds its feeble light where the brilliant rays of Sol can have no admittance.

So these diversities of gifts and operations need in no way conflict with nor supersede one another. All are needful; each have their mission, and can do good in their respective place. Let us not bury our one talent because we are not entrusted with five. He that is unfaithful in the least, would be unfaithful also with much. Because we are not an eye, an ear, a hand, or a foot, let us not suppose, therefore, we can be of no service in the body; but remember the Scripture which saith that "those members which seem more feeble are necessary."

The little stone from the brook, put into the sling of faith, and flung with a hand guided by the divine Spirit, may bring down some giant of error to the ground. To every member of Christ's church there is given some gift for edification, for which they are held responsible, and must give an account at the final day of reckoning. How stands the case with each one of us to-day?

"Occupy till I come," is the command of the Master. That coming is near; how near who can tell? While we may be looking forward to future opportunities for active service, the Nobleman may return and take account of his servants. If thou hast a talent buried, go at once and disinter it from the rubbish of earth, tear off its napkin-folds, and put it out at usury.

The day is far spent, the night is at hand wherein no man can work for Christ and souls. Fold no longer thy arms in lazy lock, but enter even at the eleventh hour the harvest field, and then toil with diligence, so that thou mayest receive thy penny. M. D. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

"WHERE IS THE PROMISE OF HIS COMING?"—2 Pet. 3: 4.

Peter says, there shall come in the last days scoffers, and he tells to what class they belong; those who are walking after their own lusts, and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Not that there was then a class scoffing at the idea of Jesus' coming, but there should be, "in the last days," in the time of the end; plainly indicating that somebody was going to say, "Jesus is coming," and somebody would dispute it, or scoff at it. And now it is being verified right before our eyes.

Says one, "I guess he won't come very soon"; another, "When are you going up?" another, "Where is the promise of his coming?" "how do you know?" "for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, when the flood came and destroyed them all. Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." "Surely, the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets," according to his word. Like as Noah and Lot were warned of their danger, and saved from it, because they served and trusted in the Lord; even so will all his children be saved, when he comes to take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not his gospel according to his word.

Peter says, they are willingly ignorant of these things, that "the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." Ignorant, and willingly so, concerning the signs preceding his coming; signs in the sun, moon and stars, etc.; and yet he tells us plainly, "When ye shall see all these things, know (not guess) that it is near even at the doors." "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." But the question arises, Will any real child of God, who is not of the world, but chosen out of the world, be indignant, when told they will soon see Jesus, their best friend? What should we think of a wife, whose husband had been a long time absent, if on being told from good authority that her husband was soon coming home, she should be really offended with the person who told her, saying, "Poh! I don't believe it; I know better"? We should say at once, there is something wrong; she is not ready to receive him; else she has but little affection for him, or is conscious her conduct during his absence will not meet his approval. So it is, we think, when the professed bride, the church, is offended when told the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. There is something wrong. C. CASE.

For the World's Crisis.

IS THE WOUND FATAL?

The conflicts of life afford ample opportunity for the exercise of that greatest of gifts,—charity, or love. The field warrior, after a day's engagement with the enemy, on retiring to his tent, misses his messmate; and, on inquiring, finds he has been wounded and taken to the hospital. The first question is, what is the nature of the wound? Is it fatal? It does not matter so much whether he was in line of battle, when wounded; or whether he had been decoyed away from his post, and then wounded. But the wounded soldier is still loved and cared for, and all done that can be, if possible to restore him. This we all say is kind. Still, he was to blame for heeding aught but the leader's orders; and had he remained at his post, possibly he would have escaped. Well does the apostle Paul illustrate the christian's conflict, in comparing him to a soldier. Truly his is a warfare with an artful foe and a dire enemy, and nothing short of the armor, provided by heaven's commissary, will render him safe.

Let us examine it, that we may judge of its worth. The most essential piece, we observe, is "the breast-plate of righteousness"; second to this is the "shield of faith," which brings us into possession of the hope of salvation, as a helmet; and with our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and our loins girt about with truth, we can take the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, and be able to quench all the fiery darts of the enemy. Should any part of this armor be left off, our life would be jeopardized. It is now only necessary that the armor be kept on to be safe, but we must obey orders, or we are in peril. The line of march must be taken up, and the strongholds of the enemy must be taken, and foes put to flight. But notwithstanding the ample provision, some will fall. God pity the unfortunate ones, in whose flesh the barbed arrows from Satan's quiver stick so fast.

Alas, that our ranks should mourn the loss of any through the beguiling power of our direst foe. Truly our anguish is great, when we behold one stricken by death; but still greater, when we behold one rent, torn, and but a bleeding carcass, mangled by Satan's fiery darts; dignity all crushed, confidence completely expelled from his bosom, character ruined; that which is better than rubies hidden beneath the slimy folds of sin and shame. O wretched condition! Is there ought of virtue left? Is thine a hopeless case? May be not. Lift up thine eye once more; and make bare thy bosom to him whose eye traverses the innermost recesses of thy heart. Hast thou no place for repentance? Listen to the sinner's friend a moment: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as wool." Again: "I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." O that the eternal Spirit would guide my pen, so some thought should drop in the way of that desponding soul, who, by temptation and sin, is sitting in darkness, brooding over the past, while tears of regret course down those haggard cheeks; and bid him rise, and go to his Father's house, where there is welcome and pardon for all that will come in true repentance.

O for more of the Spirit of Jesus, which begets repentance in one's own heart, and radiates with salutary beams, penetrating the darkest corner of the sinner's heart.

Thank God for a high priest that can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities. O hear his pardoning voice. Return without delay. Are not thy chastisements grievous to bear? Are thy wounds past healing? Try the great Physician. Let Gilead's balm heal thy wound. Bind it close to thy heart, lest its throbbings cease ere peace again fills thy breast. Wheel into line, while the conflict rages. Be at thy post, though the volleys fly. Soon, eternal triumph will be the shout of warriors bold; and shall we not hear thy voice blending with the swelling strain? Make one more resolve, and rise with maddened zeal determined to conquer though you die.

WM. A. FENN.

LOOK NOT UPON THE WINE.

Shun the flashing wine-glass!
Shun its glittering light!
Shun its deadly poison,
Shun its withering blight!

Look not on its color—
Rosy to the brim:
Neath its rosy sparkle,
Coils a serpent grim.

Yield not to the spirit,
Lurking in its glow!
Yield not to be smitten
By its fatal blow!

Should the hand of beauty
Proffer you the bowl,
Dash to earth its contents,
Peril not your soul!

Trample on the goblet,
Shattered let it lie;
In your noble manhood
Pass the Tempter by.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ONE WEEK.—DAN. 9: 27.

"And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself; and the people of the prince [the Roman prince] that shall come shall destroy the city [Jerusalem] and the sanctuary, and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined. And he [the Roman prince] shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it [Jerusalem] desolate, even until the consummation [of the world], and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate (margin) desolator, which was the Romans. Dan. 9: 26, 27.

The covenant of ver. 27 is the one which God made with the Jews (Deut. 11: 26-29: 29: 19, 21. (Ant. b. 5, c. 1, s. 19;) which covenant they broke. Dan. 9: 11-14. And the Romans were the people to desolate Jerusalem for one week, or seven years; and the seven years were fulfilled to a day, from A.D. 72. It cannot be shown that Christ confirmed any covenant for seven years; for he only preached three years and a half; and he had been in heaven about forty years when Jerusalem was destroyed.

And it was not fulfilled by the apostles, for they preached more than seven years. The prince that was to destroy the city [Jerusalem] of ver. 26 is the one denominated by the personal pronoun he of ver. 26, that was to confirm the covenant with many for one week. And the personage spoken of by Daniel, that was to desolate Jerusalem, is the one spoken of by Moses in Deut. 28: 49-57. Moses and Daniel use the personal pronoun he alike. "And he shall eat the fruit of thy cattle; . . . and he shall besiege thee in in all thy gates." Ver. 51, 52. This is what was to befall Daniel's people in the latter days. Dan. 10: 14. Josephus says,

"When the people were come in great crowds to the feast of unleavened bread, in the month Nisan [the first month of their year,] at the ninth hour of the night, so great a light shone round the altar and the holy house, that it appeared to be bright daytime; which light lasted for half an hour. Moreover, the eastern gate of the inner court of the temple, which was of brass, and vastly heavy, and had been with difficulty shut by twenty men, was seen to be opened of its own accord about the sixth hour of the night. But the men of learning understood it, that the security of their holy house was dissolved of its own accord, and that the gate was opened for the advantage of their enemies."

Now by turning to Lev. 23: 5, 6, we shall see that they kept the feast of unleavened bread on the 14th day of the first month, which was Nisan. Then we see the seven years began on the 15th of the first month in A. D. 65. Josephus says,

"So these people died, nine hundred and sixty in number, with this intention, that they would leave not so much as one soul among them alive to be subject to the Romans. This calamitous slaughter was made on the 15th day of the month Nisan. They chose ten men by lot out of them, to slay all the rest. And when these ten had slain them all, they made the same rule for casting lots for themselves, that he whose lot it was should first kill the other nine, and then should kill himself." Wars., b. 7, c 9, s. 1.

This was fulfilled in seven years to a day, from where the gate opened. In the marginal reference of Josephus the writer says, the whole number of the Jews that were destroyed during the entire seven years, is summed up by Archbishop Usher out of Josephus, and amounts to 1, 337, 490.

In the midst of the week, the Roman prince caused the sacrifice to cease. And now Titus gave orders to his soldiers, that were with him, to dig up the foundation of the tower of Antonio, and make him a ready passage for his army to come up, for he had been informed that on that very day, which was the seventeenth day of Panemus (Tamus,) the sacrifice called the daily sacrifice had failed, and that the people were grievously troubled at it. Wars, b. 6, c. 2, s. 1.

Nero began to reign Oct. 14th, A. D. 53. He reigned thirteen years and eight days, and died Oct. 22d, A. D. 66. Josephus says the war broke out on Jerusalem in the twelfth year of Nero. Add twelve to fifty-three and you have A. D. 65, just where the seventy weeks ended, and the one week began.

Galba succeeded Nero, and reigned seven months and seven days. Otho reigned three months, and two days. Vitellius reigned eight months and five days. Add the reign of these three emperors together, and we have eighteen months and fourteen days. Now add this to Oct. 22d, A. D. 66, where Nero died, and it will bring us to May the 6th, A. D. 68, to the death of Vitellius; and the year that that Vespasian was made emperor, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, were all assassinated. Now turn to Josephus, Wars, b. 6, c. 10, s. 1, "and thus was Jerusalem taken, in the second year of the reign of Vespasian." Now add two years to A. D. 68, where Vespasian began to reign, and we have A. D. 70, for the destruction of Jerusalem. And there is where the sacrifice ceased in the midst of the week. Thus far we think we are on solid rock. A. SIMPSON.

A SAVOR OF LIFE—A SAVOR OF DEATH.

READING ROOMS, PUBLIC AND SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARIES.

"Good books and papers live, while we are dead,
Light on the darkened mind they shed;
Good seed they sow from age to age,
Through all this world's pilgrimage;
They nurse the gems of holy trust,
They wake untired when we are dust."

Good books and papers preach; bad books and papers preach. One is a savor of life to life, the other of death to death! One preaches salvation, the other damnation! Look at this subject, friends; turn it over, view it on every side; peep into Sunday school libraries, public reading rooms. What do you see? scorpions, adders that sting, serpents that bite? satanic transformations, the old serpent the devil, with cloven foot concealed? "As is the tree, so is the fruit?" "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" "Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?" "Evil communications corrupt good manners."

Do you ask what harm books and papers will do tinctured with romance and folly? The same harm that personal intercourse would with the bad men who wrote them. "That a man is known by the company he keep," is an old proverb; but it is no more true than a man's character may be determined by knowing the books he reads. If a good book can't be read without making one better, a bad book cannot be read without making one worse. A person may be ruined by reading a single volume. Bad books are like ardent spirits; they furnish neither aliment, nor "medicine;" they are "poison." Both intoxicate: one the mind, the other the body. The thirst for each increase by being fed, and is never satisfied: both ruin—one the intellect, the other the health, and together the soul. The makers and venders of each are equally guilty and equally corrupters of the community; and the safeguard against each is the same total abstinence from all that intoxicates mind or body.

The love of fiction is a growing appetite, and one which generally wastes more time than any other. It produces a distaste for healthy mental food, and a dislike to strengthening mental exercise. However good the tone of a fiction may be, or its moral, the habit of craving fiction, once formed, cannot be prevented from gratifying itself with those novels and romances of the day which may well be described as "Satanic literature." The person who enters upon a course of novel-reading, may be said to be rapidly unfitting himself for a noble and useful life. Then, all this reading is positively worse than useless to children. We have no faith in the effect of teaching moral truth in fiction. No real knowledge is stored by it. After reading a thousand novels, the youth may be still unfurnished with the most necessary information.

Nothing should find lodgment for a moment in our families and Sabbath school libraries, reading rooms, on our centre tables, but the salt of the earth, light, heavenly, intellectual and spiritual, life-giving, soul-kindling; such reading as elevates, purifies and sanctifies.

Family books and papers should be of the purest kind; nothing should be introduced that tends in the least to pervert or corrupt the rising generation. It is truly painful to see in some reading-rooms popular works of fiction, novels, romances, and works positively infidel in their tendency?

Such libraries and reading-rooms are a curse instead of a blessing, to the community. Many a young man has been ruined for time and eternity by this corrupting literature.

No book or periodical, whatever its merits in other respects, which takes the name of God in vain, uses it profanely or irreverently, which contains a profane oath, an impure or libidinous thought, or speaks lightly of the word of God, should ever be allowed in a family or reading-room. A parent ought never to allow a fascinating writer to say that, behind the screen to the eye of a child, which he would not permit any one to breathe into the ear.

Byron, Scott, Shakspeare, are more or less defiled by profane and impure allusions, dashes or exclamations, that offend the ear of modesty and virtue. What christian father or mother would allow Shakspeare, if he were now alive, to associate with a blooming circle of sons and daughters, or read his plays, just as they now stand in the best editions? Is it possible for them to pass through the youthful mind, and not leave a foul stain behind? Read the "Personal Recollections of Charlotte Elizabeth," and see how narrowly she escaped the loss of both body and soul by poring over Shakspeare's corrupting fascinations.

Are not editors and publishers rolling up a fearful amount for facilitating the circulation of these reptiles now flooding and cursing the land. Unless some means can be devised to arrest this rapidly augmenting currency of licentious and semi-infidel literature, its demoralizing effects everywhere manifest we are lost! lost!

Cease? When will this curse of all curses cease, that poisons the fountains of mercy, eats out the life-blood of spiritual life and salvation, ushering millions into the gulf bottomless? When will this death of deaths cease? Never, till God in mercy opens the eyes of religious editors to see the enormity of their guilt in puffing this light bread, these popular, fashionable monthlies, stepping stones to the vilest French novels! Until ministers and church members cease to patronize these sugar-coated poisons of Satan. D. F. NEWTON.

For the World's Crisis.

THE 1260 YEARS.

The great question is, when did this period commence? In order to know this, we must ascertain when the wilderness state began, or when the saints were given into the hands of the persecuting power. This persecuting power was to tread under foot the holy city forty and two months,—1260 years, prophetic time. And they worshiped the dragon, which gave power unto "the beast," and they worshiped "the beast," saying, "Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him? And there was given him a mouth [church power] speaking great things and blasphemies, and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months" (1260 days).

This beast received his power from the dragon, which was a voluntary gift on the part of the dragon (Rev. 12th chapter), and continued 1260 days, constituting the great blasphemous, persecuting power, brought to view in Dan. 7th chapter, and also Rev. and Thess.,—Paul's man of sin. We must look, then, for some law, passed by some Roman emperor, and sanctioned, in order to find the commencement of the 1260 days, or the church in the wilderness.

We find that Justinian, emperor of Constantinople, formed a code of laws about 532 to 534, which was published and sanctioned in the Western Empire at Rome, about 538 A. D., on which code of laws the Pope has claimed his authority to rule over kings and punish heretics, with confiscation of their goods, imprisonment, or torture of body, and death, which laws continued in force until 1260 years afterwards. In the year 1798 the French people under Bonaparte abolished the laws and constituted Italy a republic.

I conclude it was at about this time (1798) the church began to come up out of the wilderness, leaning upon the arm of her Beloved (Christ). The law of outlawry against the church must be abolished, before she could enjoy rights and privileges. In this war—the great French Revolution—the barriers were broken down. And now the church is permitted to publish the gospel among all nations. She can now translate the Bible into every language. By this means the armies of Christ are to conquer his enemies by the "sharp sword which proceedeth out of his mouth." "The kingdom and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High."

The Jews used carnal weapons in their wars with the inhabitants. The church of Christ is commanded to use spiritual ones, to the pulling down of the strong-holds, etc. This gospel of the kingdom must be preached in all the world as a witness; then shall the end come. At the beginning of the time of the end the people saw a "great light." The great Reformation had accomplished a glorious work, preparing the way for the proclamation of the last great message to the last generation; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up. From that time it began to be preached, "The kingdom of God is at hand." "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come. "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." "Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps."

Nearly all has been accomplished, and we may expect the Bridegroom will soon come. I do not know, but I believe he will come about the years 1873 to '75. May we all be watching, and ready for the soon personal advent of our blessed Lord. J. E. CLARK.

For the World's Crisis.

STRANGE, STRANGE.

Yes, it is strange to see how people do talk, and how people will act. Act how? says one. Act just as they have a mind to. Yes, they will talk about this thing and that thing, and small things and mean things, and contemptible things, large things and inferior things and unholy things. People will talk about the very same things they do themselves, and condemn others in that they almost daily perform. I have known people, under my own observation, who will condemn and slander some of the humble saints of God, when they felt the love of the Lord like fire in their bones. They do not seem to know that that is the spontaneous production of a warm heart, fired by the Holy Spirit of the Almighty.

Saints of ancient times sang aloud the praises of the Lord. Some will say what fools, what enthusiasts, to make a great noise over vague expectation; over uncertain hope. Is it not time that those same individuals should find out that things of time and sense are uncertain? The saints are looking for eternal things,—"a city" out of sight, one that "hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." That is what makes them shout; that is what makes them rejoice. Only think for a moment. Who made these promises? Was it man? Was it a king, a potentate, or a sage? Was it from the mouth of any worthless hero, who had immortalized his name on the pages of history, for shedding rivers of blood, or causing great grief, or spreading desolation? Nay, verily; but it was God, who "inhabiteth eternity," who is Maker, preserver, the bountiful benefactor, the unchanged, the unchangable. He has made promises, and they are sure. He has delivered them to faithful men, and glory to God, they are believed by some, who are willing to be called fools for Christ's sake, until the time of restitution of all things. Will it not be sweet, dear brethren, when Jesus comes to take his weary ones to himself? Redemption, O how sweet the sound, even now; but then, while it rolls back with its echo to all ages, and then reaches forward amid the lapse of endless years, the sweet song of Moses and the Lamb, how glorious it must be.

Yes, dear brethren and sisters, wherever you are, scattered up and down the world, you may shout aloud, for the day of redemption is near. It will come soon. Not long from this, and the day will break; the morn will dawn, the harvest time will come. Glory to God. Is it strange, I ask, to be rejoiced when the time draws near? Is it not strange that people will not be interested in these things, so sublime? Remember me in your devotions, as a servant of Christ, looking earnestly for the adoption, to wit: the redemption of our body. D. N. CHADSEY.

PLEDGE OF THE TEE COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the "Children's Corner."

FROM SR. MATHEWSON.

DEAR CHILDREN:—Would you like to hear a few words from us away up here in the Green-Mountain State? We love to hear from you in the "Children's Corner" of the Crisis, as well the "Young Pilgrim." And if our Editor please, I would like to tell you we have an interesting S. School here in Castleton, quite a good number of boys and girls who seldom miss one school, and always have something to repeat from the Good Book, which we hope will make them wise unto salvation. Some three or four times in the year (according to the wisdom of the Superintendent,) we have half a day devoted to the interests of the S. School, in which each scholar is expected to furnish some part of the entertainment, by repeating some selection of Scripture, or describing some Bible character, or some piece of poetry proper for the occasion; these being often interspersed with songs from "The Pilgrim Praises." Our Superintendent, who is quite gentle and accomodating to the little ones, allows them to make selections for themselves, if they so desire. Sometimes we get up for some of them, who desire, a dialogue, calculated to bring out Bible truth; thus interesting and making a more indelible impression upon the memory. I thought I would send you one that was spoken at our last concert, the 10th of this month, hoping you will invite your teachers to send us one they may get up for you.

Yours, B. MATHEWSON.

A DIALOGUE RESPECTING THE EXAMINATION OF THE "TIME" OF THE LORD'S COMING.

(Eveline and Amelia meet and shake hands.)

AMELIA. How do you do? I am happy to see you in such good cheer.

EVELINE. All right, and can assure you of reciprocated pleasure.

AMELIA. How do your church and S. School prosper of late? I have heard some hints that more heterodoxy has recently appeared in your pulpit.

EVELINE. Ah! what do you particularly allude to now?

AMELIA. I suppose I might as well tell you right out, without mincing the matter at all.

EVELINE. Just so; please do be plain, without hints or inuendoes.

AMELIA. Well, I should think when your people had been disappointed once, they would learn wisdom about setting the time, and that, too, when the Bible tells them they "know not the day, or the hour."

EVELINE. Ha! ha! it is the time question, is it, that gives such umbrage, and draws out insinuations of a disagreeable cast?

AMELIA. Yes, and for my part, I do not think mortal man has any right to set the time for the judgment day and the resurrection of the dead.

EVELINE. Neither do I; but the Bible tells us God has appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world; and if he pleases to inform mortals about when to expect it, by giving certain signs, and then when they had seen those signs, command them to KNOW he was nigh, even at the door, I think he has a perfect right so to do; and I think mortals become culpable when they neglect to obey this command.

AMELIA. Well, "of the day and hour knoweth no man," you know.

EVELINE. Do you know where to find that Scripture?

AMELIA. Not e-x-a-c-t-l-y; but you would not insinuate that it was not to be found in the Sacred Volume?

EVELINE. O no. But I think it is quite obvious you do not understand its connection. Now really, do you think that Scripture proves the children of God will never know anything about the second coming of Christ until he comes?

AMELIA. I have, previous to this.

EVELINE. Will you listen while I read this much abused passage, with its connection?

AMELIA. Of course, I have no objection to the reading of the Scriptures.

EVELINE reads,—"But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Beside, you must see if this Scripture proves the church never would know, then it proves Jesus Christ and the angels would never know."

AMELIA. I now see what is predicated of man is predicated of Christ and the angels.

EVELINE.—Now we consider that this very Scripture, with its connection, proves that the righteous will know about it, just as certainly as Noah knew the flood was coming.

AMELIA. Well, I must acknowledge it does seem to favor your side more, come to hear its connection.

EVELINE. Please notice a few verses preceding this noted passage, and you will see Christ, in answer to the question of his disciples, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" tells them the sun and moon should be darkened, and the stars should fall; and the Revelator tells how they should fall, to distinguish it from other celestial phenomena of this kind.

AMELIA. And do you claim these things have been fulfilled?

EVELINE. We do. And the next in the series is the sign of the Son of man.

AMELIA. It may be you are right.

EVELINE. We believe we are, and therefore "lift up your heads and rejoice."

AMELIA. You make that quite plausible; but there are other objections, you know; the Bible says "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night."

EVELINE.—It says just those words, and the connection plainly tells you the class upon whom it will come as a thief. If you please, I will read it with its connection.

AMELIA. (bows assent.)

EVELINE, reads, 1 Thess. 5: 1-5, "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them . . . and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night, nor of darkness," (then adds), You see it is not to come upon Paul's brethren as a thief, but upon the opposite class it will come as a thief.

AMELIA. It looks so.

EVELINE. My dear A., do you not believe all Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable?

AMELIA. Certainly.

EVELINE. Well, you know the Bible has given prophetic numbers that commence and end at a given point; for e. g., the 430 years of the sojourn in Egypt; the 70 years captivity in Babylon, and the 1260 for the Papal persecution, and many others.

AMELIA. That is all very true.

EVELINE. You, of course, believe these numbers were profitable for God's people, or they would never have been given them?

AMELIA. Yes.

EVELINE. Are you aware that God has given prophetic numbers reaching to the resurrection of the dead?

AMELIA. I suppose he has. (Speaks it reluctantly.)

EVELINE. Can it be said such numbers are profitable unless they are understood?

AMELIA. I do not see how they can be.

EVELINE. Then should we not by fasting and prayer search the Scriptures diligently, that we may understand what God in his kindness has given us for our good?

AMELIA. It must be right to search the Scriptures, because that is the command of God.

EVELINE. And now that all the marked events in prophecy are fulfilled, both the moral and physical signs, do you not think it is time for God's children to engage in prayerful investigation upon this subject?

AMELIA. Well, I do not know but you will convert me over yet.

EVELINE. Will it not be perfectly natural for those who have given all for Christ and love his appearing, to do so?

AMELIA. Love his appearing, did you say? Do you believe any one really desires to see him come in the clouds of heaven?

EVELINE. Most certainly. There are a great many little flocks that say with the Revelator, "Come, Lord Jesus" and "come quickly."

AMELIA. How can they desire so terrible an event? Many, you know, consider it the same as death, and we naturally desire to live in the world as long as possible.

EVELINE. There is where many good people mistake, I doubt not. Why, it is right the opposite of death. He is coming to give life, to open the graves of loved ones, and give them all the beauty and vigor of immortality.

AMELIA. That is altogether a different view from what I have been in the habit of thinking.

EVELINE. You must own it to be a Bible view. Yes, he is coming like a loving father, as well as Savior, to live with his children, even the meek, which are to inherit the earth, when cleansed, and made over new, as when Adam first awoke unfallen in Paradise.

AMELIA. Well, I must own this is a subject worthy the investigation of the wise.

EVELINE. I hope you will use your influence to have it done.

AMELIA. But why not exhort people to prepare to die? And if they are prepared to die, that's enough.

EVELINE. My dear friend, if the word of God taught us to preach and exhort people to prepare to die, instead of preparing for the coming of the Lord and the judgment, we would most assuredly do it. But I assure you there is not a passage within the lids of the Bible commanding people to prepare to die, or commanding them to repent because they must die; but often are they called upon to repent because of Christ's second coming to judgment.

AMELIA. I have no doubt of your motive to truthfulness in this statement, but—

EVELINE. But what?

AMELIA. I think the Bible tells us somewhere about God's sending his prophet to warn the king of Israel to prepare to die.

EVELINE. No. You are mistaken. God sent Isaiah to king Hezekiah, saying, "set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and and not live."

AMELIA. Well, does not that mean the same as I have just been telling you?

EVELINE. Not at all. Hezekiah was a good man at that time, and prayed to live so that he might praise the Lord; and God heard his prayer, and added fifteen years to his life.

AMELIA. But what do you think it means about setting his house in order?

EVELINE. Why, as he was Israel's king, he had much to do to arrange the affairs of the kingdom, and make disposal of his own property, etc. Remember the prophet did not tell him to set himself in order, but his house.

AMELIA. Y-e-s. But do you not feel discouraged waiting so long for Christ's coming?

EVELINE. Oh no. Events prove unmistakably that it is very near, and the hope keeps us full of good cheer.

AMELIA. I suppose you are. I often hear you singing about it, and enjoy your Advent songs very much. Will you please sing the one in your S. School hymn-book about the sun's being darkened on the nineteenth of May?

EVELINE. Yes, if our leader will give us the key note. (Eveline addresses the leader, who starts the tune, and all join in singing) "Watchman, tell me does the morning."

READ AN HOUR A DAY.

There was a lad who, at the age of fourteen, was apprenticed to a soap boiler. One of his resolutions was to read one hour a day, or at least at that rate, and he had an old silver watch, left him by his uncle, which he timed his reading by. He stayed seven years with his master, and said when he was twenty-one he knew as much as the young squire did. Now let us see how much time he had to read in, in seven years, at the rate of an hour each day. It would be two thousand five hundred and fifty-five hours, which, at the rate of eight reading hours per day, would be equal to three hundred and ten days; almost equal to an entire year's reading. That time spent in treasuring up useful knowledge would pile up a very large store. I am sure it is worth trying for. Try what you can do. Begin now. In after years you will look back upon the task as the most pleasant and profitable you ever performed.

IN GOD'S BRIGHT HOLY CITY.

In God's bright holy city,
That cometh from above,
I long to meet dear Jesus,
My Savior whom I love.
In clouds of brightest glory
To earth he's coming down,
To give his faithful children
A pure, unfading crown.

With all his holy angels
He comes to reign a king,
And from the grave's dark prison
His sleeping saints he'll bring.
With harps and crowns of glory,
Beside the crystal sea,
They'll gather fruits ambrosial
From Life's immortal tree.

They'll drink of Life's pure river,
Clear gushing from God's throne;
Will drink, and thirst and fever
By them no more be known.
In God's bright holy city,
That cometh from above,
I long to meet dear Jesus,
My Savior whom I love.

"THAT MAN OF SIN."

With deference to the conscientiousness, the painstaking researches, and the ability of brethren who love the word of God and the appearing of Jesus, let us inquire,—Is the interpretation correct, that refers this expression and the person or character denoted by it, to the pope, to popery, or to any phase or stage of papacy proper? I am aware of the strength of previous and fixed opinions. I appreciate the tenacity with which views long held and earnestly proclaimed are apt to be maintained. But on this subject I am constrained to declare that I believe the view is incorrect, and the application mistaken. It is a very simple question, and quite pertinent too, whether two expressions, and two figures in prophetic imagery, so strikingly contrasted as the harlot and the man of sin, denote the same character. Let us see. The harlot does denote and define the papacy. In dress, in figure, in feminine demureness, in adroit intrigue, in artful ceremonial, in gorgeous melodies and splendid decorations, and especially in spiritual sorceries, and adulterous connection with civic powers, the Romish harlot is perfectly indentifiable and conspicuous through her whole 1260 years' history of corruption and cruelty. So much by universal consent through protestant Christendom.

But now of the "man of sin." Is it likely that a wicked man and a corrupt woman, as symbols, mark or identify the same thing? Do they signify the very same identical object of sight, or subject of thought, whether person, character or system? The harlot is cruel and wicked, with all feminine enchantment of iniquity, with studied art, with caressing blandishments, with heartless hate of her victims and opposers. But after all, she rides on the civic power. She is carried by the therion. The church thrives through the friendship of state. The pope is upheld by the governments of earth, chained by flatteries, or intimidated by menaces. Popery, though powerful, is yet a woman.

But the apostle foresees another character, to wit, that "man of sin." What have we here, then? A masculine and mighty antichristian power. A civil ruler wielding extraordinary and unparalleled forces and resources, and intensely the enemy of God and heaven. Not only eminent and powerful with imperial worldly honors and prerogations, but uniting in himself the imperial and ecclesiastical, the royal and pontifical. A great, impious, and infidel earthly King, who has absorbed the harlot in himself, who has embodied in his own person and dynasty every element in the system she represented, that would accrue to his advantage.

The man of sin, we repeat, supersedes and absorbs the harlot. There is no longer the everlasting catalogue of papal fornications with European kings. Babylon is fallen. The man of sin rises on her ruins. He is not one whit less aspiring, less unscrupulous; less intriguing, less unholy, less desolating. Nay, he exceeds and eclipses the arrogance and blasphemy, the cunning and cruelty of Rome. He is utterly infidel. He is antichrist that denies the Father and the Son. He is self-styled Messiah to miserable and misguided adherents. He arrogates divine honors. He idolizes himself, and exacts human worship. He is masculine in wickedness, for he is the man of sin. His number is the number of a man, and is 666. If the papacy was a fearfully corrupted system of religion, this is absolute apostasy. If the papacy was a formidable engine of mischief and evil, this is even greater, for it is the sequel and heading up of the mystery of iniquity. If the papacy was Satan's masterpiece for ages, this is his masterpiece at the inevitable end.

As our blessed Lord condescended to style himself the Son of man, the Holy Spirit has designated the last great, human enemy of Christ as the man of sin. As Jesus lived and labored after his baptism about three years and a half, so antichrist, or Satan's counterfeit, will probably thrive about the same space of time after his inauguration at the head of the organized apostasy. As Christ is called the Lamb of God, so antichrist is denoted as the lamb that speaks like a dragon.

Brethren, we will neither arrogate nor dogmatize, but we believe this is the solemn truth, according to the Spirit of inspiration and the word of the Eternal. Let no one say, "This is a subject of no interest to me; for the domination of Satan through an apostate world, and the judgments of the Almighty on the devil's representative, or emperor-pontiff-in-chief, are no special concern of mine while I am mercifully, by translation, 'kept from that hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell on the earth.'" We do think it is a subject of awful, sublime, and solemn interest, and the more especially since translated saints may be actively associated or employed in the administration of the judgments.

But let us look a little further. Now as to the occasion of this special prediction of Paul, who was not an apostle only, but a prophet (though some might affirm that the latter is included in the former), we find it arising from an agitated or aroused expectation of the immediate coming of Christ,—though we prefer the rendering which represents the alarm of the Thessalonian brethren to consist in a fear that the day had come, while they were not made partakers of its expected glory and fruition; as if through neglect or some great fault or misfortune of theirs, they were left out. The apostle corrects their mistake, and notifies them in the plainest manner that "he apostasia, the apostasy, must come first, and the man of sin be revealed." This latter day evolution of evil, this elect of Satan, and recipient of the dragon's authority, this uttermost and lattermost incarnation of pride, this infidel and antichrist, pope-and-Cæsar, "the Lord will consume with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy with the appearing of his presence." The location of this event is clearly the end of this dispensation. As if Paul had said, "Brethren, you may be assured that the period of this grand event,—the coming of Christ, is to be marked by the apostasy immediately preceding. By that you may know it, and by the manifestation along with it of the man of sin. That very man Jesus will destroy at his coming. That very man will be 'revealed' before the day, too." That is to say, the watchful and praying saints will be able to detect and identify this person. I ask now, in all candor, how we can extend the duration of this apostasy and the career of this man of sin, over a period of 1300 years, when the apostle was obviously, I think, pointing out a particular and conspicuous token of the immediate revelation of glory? The sanguinary domination of the great harlot is indeed thus long prolonged, but this was not to be a sign of the near advent of Jesus, except as her swaying and crimson form, in the last hour of her apocalyptic ride, is about to topple in an apoplectic fit from the beast that carries her. O! heartless sorceress. O! goblet-bearing equestrienne; known by the multitude, the mystery, and the cruelty of thy historic horrors; no wonder John eyed thee with amazement! But thy day of doom is nearly come.

Yet after thee cometh the sphinx, the man of sin,—Napoleon. Not leaning on a civil arm for support, as thou hast done, but inscrutable, imperial, masculine, outdoing thy iniquity, author, inventor, soldier, scientist, diplomat, and emperor, skilled in political, literary and military art, wielding both an individual and a confederated secular power, and so changing, superseding and subordinating the arts and mysteries of that system, represented by the heartless harlot with her worn-out pomp and magnificence, as to bear him to the summit of the predestined eminence.

Now we simply say and repeat, that it is this man of sin, seeking and even succeeding, through Satanic aid, to deify himself for an awful moment on earth, whose appearance marks emphatically the time of the end. Paul gives the photograph expressly to show the time. "His coming will be after the working of Satan," in a far more emphatic and mysterious manner, and by signs, and omens, and supernatural and infernal manifestations much more wonderful and extraordinary than ever marked the history of the papacy. When Satan sees his end approaching, he is mad and desperate, and ready to lend and concentrate every possible element and energy to retard the consummation. So he delegates sovereignty to man. He sends out and sets up his christ, that is in every feature antichrist. There is no doubt about it. And if that man is now nearly ready for his revelation, is sixty years old, and will appear in his real prophetic character in a few months; how solemn and stupendous is the time, and the lesson of the time! I will acknowledge that while deeply interested in the history and prophetic import of that feminine inebriate, the apocalyptic harlot, riding on her steed with seven heads, or seated in scarlet splendor in her bagnio at Rome, no circumstance of her history ever affected my mind with half the interest, as a special and pressing sign of the returning Redeemer, which I have felt in watching the rise and maturity of Napoleon as the man of sin. It is this sign and this development which the Spirit of God has specifically pointed out to foreshow the near and certain and tremendous consummation.

I am aware that many discredit, and some even ridicule, the identification here submitted. But I can not help it. Substituting a single word, we may quote the familiar adage, Fiat veritas, cœlum ruat,—"Let the truth prevail, though the sky falls." To me it is a subject of the deepest interest. I have no confidence in the representation that times of persecution and trouble are over. It is not a pleasant prospect, certainly. But I pray God shield and save and keep our little ones. One thing we can do, and we will do, to wit, look and pray for the kingdom and coming of Christ. We do know that an escape by translation will be a perfect and blessed deliverance.

Will that translation occur this year? I dare not assert unqualifiedly, yes or no. One thing is clear, mighty changes are at the door; not at the gate, but at the door. Christ is in the midst of them. He may come in May or September, or sooner or later than any particular, or particularly affirmed period; I do not know. It is my desire to beware of erring in either direction, whether by secretly delaying this great day in my mind, as if it might not occur immediately, or influencing others to do so; or again, on the other hand, by asserting and proclaiming a time, definitely, when it will arrive. One thing Jesus has said, "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh"; from which I am led to doubt if it will occur at an hour specially designated by man. Still if it arrive at a moment not specially set in expectation, I trust the Lord will find us ready, expecting and prepared in an instant to leave all and follow him. How welcome will be that hour and that moment to many a poor, afflicted, suffering and weary soul, agonized with pain, tried with temptations, or tired with long and arduous labor. Lord, glorify thy name in their rest and redemption. C. Colegrove.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE MIDNIGHT CRY."

A BRIEF REVIEW.

It is evident to my mind that the midnight cry has not yet been given. For, first, in the parable of the ten virgins (Matt. 25), there is an expectation created that causes the church to take their lamps and go forth to meet the Bridegroom; evidently expecting the marriage to be celebrated at a given point of time; in which they are disappointed; then in the delay they slumber and sleep. At length they are aroused by the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." Mark the expression, "A cry made; then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps."

What next? "And the foolish said unto the wise, give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out" (or going out—margin). Take notice of the attitude of the virgins; they "arose," some prostrate in sleep, some half prostrate with slumber, but part of them awake to find they had no oil at hand by which to replenish their lamps; having taken only a sufficient quantity to last to the time when they expected to have met the Bridegroom. But in the emergency of the tarrying of the Bridegroom they had made no provision. Therefore they say unto the wise, "Give us of your oil. . . . But the wise answered saying, Not so, lest there be not enough for us and you; but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the Bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not."

The easy and natural interpretation of this language is, that after the cry is made, it is too late to obtain oil; proving that the cry is made in close proximity to the coming of Christ, too late for any to get ready: those "that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut."

Now it is an undeniable fact that the history of the Advent movement for the past twenty-five years differs from any thing that has taken place in the history of the church, since the day of Christ. All the previous excitements in relation to the imminency of the advent have been short-lived, being based on no reliable evidence. But the great movement that we have been identified with as a people has been of a remarkable character, and is destined to continue in existence till the day of Christ shall burst upon the world in its awful grandeur. It is a matter of prophecy in Hab. 2: 2, 4, that the vision which refers to the coming of Christ should be written "and made plain upon tables," or charts, and that it should tarry beyond the time affixed, so the prophecy reads. For "the vision is yet for an appointed time. . . . Though it tarry, wait for it"; proving the vision reaches beyond the time that it was first announced to terminate.

That the vision refers to the coming of Christ may be seen by comparing Hab. 2: 1–4 with Heb. 10: 35–39.

In 1843–4 there was an apparent termination of the vision; but the real termination is still in the future, but now close upon us. The argument for 1843–4 had the so-called Canon of Ptolemy for its basis, and has been regarded by the learned as of great authority. According to this so-called Canon, the first year of the reign of Cyrus, king of Persia, was in B. C. 536–8, and the seventh of Artaxerxes B. C. 457. This last date is the one from which the seventy weeks, the sixty-nine weeks, the sixty-two weeks, the one week, and the 2300 days of Dan. 8 and 9, were reckoned, that terminated the vision in 1843–4. Time and facts have proved this whole arrangement incorrect.

It was assumed that the seventh of Artaxerxes was the point from which the commandment went forth to restore and build Jerusalem, and that the said commandment could be found recorded in the 7th chapter of Ezra. It is strange that learned men could find a commandment to restore and build Jerusalem recorded in said chapter. The nearest approximation to such a commandment in the seventh of Ezra, that I can find, is a permission for Ezra to beautify the house of God in Jerusalem (Ezra 7; 27), which had been built a long time previous by the command of Cyrus, in the first year of his reign.

Now that these facts have been all brought out and made to appear, from evidence that cannot be gainsayed, including a harmonious application of the several dates given in prophecy that point to their true termination; instead of the light being embraced and confessed with joy, the "virgins" are in such a state of slumber and sleep in relation to the time of the "marriage," that it is doubtful whether they will be aroused by any thing short of the cry itself, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh."

We affirm that the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9: 25 commence in the first year of the reign of Cyrus, king of Persia, and end at the birth of Christ; and that this is a standard and important date by which several other dates can be adjusted. For if the 483 years (the number of years in sixty-nine weeks according to the year-day system) commence in the first of Cyrus, 488 years before our A. D., then the twelfth of Ahasuerus (alias Artaxerxes), when the decree was signed for the entire destruction of the Jewish nation, would synchronize with 426 before our A. D., the point where the seventy weeks are to be dated; and the thirty-second year of the same king, when the wall of Jerusalem was finished, would synchronize with 406 before our A. D., where the sixty-two weeks, or four hundred and thirty-four years, begin. The corresponding points of the termination of these several periods of time are in harmony with the prophecy and the facts of history, as all may see by investigation.

That the seventy weeks of Dan. 9: 24 are a part of the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14, and that both commence at the same point of time, is as plain (it appears to me) as language need to make it; and that the seventy weeks have been fulfilled in four hundred and ninety years, in the events of A. D. 65, proving the 2300 days to be symbols of years (for 490 years cannot be taken from 2300 literal days), and will terminate in A. D. 1875. We affirm that the "daily," or the Pagan abomination, was taken away by the conversion of the last pagan army to Christianity in A. D. 508.

In this year legalized Paganism ceased in Rome. At this date the 1290 years commence, and terminate in 1798, when the Papal abomination was crippled by the capture of the Pope by the French (under Berthier, their general, acting under the authority of Napoleon Bonaparte), and the abrogation of the whole Papal government, the Pope being carried to France a captive, and died in 1799.

We have never been satisfied with the application of the 1290 years commencing with the setting up of the Papal abomination in A. D. 533, and ending in 1823; as the "daily" is evidently the Pagan abomination, and the prophecy reads—"From the time the daily shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up." Here in the prophecy two events are brought to view, and two measurements of time annexed. It is evident that the two periods of time do not commence simultaneously; and as time has proved by its passing that the 1335 years did not commence in A. D. 508, as Bro. Miller thought, they must commence in A. D. 533, where the Papal abomination began; and will end in 1868, if our view of the subject is correct.

We affirm that if there is any significance in the law of types, such as the paschal lamb, the feast of weeks (or Pentecost), the feast of harvest and the jubilee; and that part of them have been fulfilled, according to the time, in the type; in the antitype it follows that the remaining types, especially that of the jubilee, will be fulfilled according to the time in the type, which was on the tenth day of the seventh month.

The sabbatical cycle of seven years were to repeat their course without interruption, according to the requirement of the law recorded in Lev. 25; to commence the reckoning from the month Abib, which the Lord said should be the beginning of months, and the beginning of the year from the time they left Egypt; i. e., the children of Israel were specially required to observe this divine arrangement. They were to be a distinct and separate people from all other nations in all that God required them to observe. Therefore if they had carried out faithfully this special divine command, all their transactions should date according to it.

The cycle of seven years could no more be interrupted, than the cycle of the seven days of the week. Because a fiftieth year is spoken of in connection with the jubilee, it no more interrupts the cycle of seven, than because an eighth year is mentioned, that interrupts the cycle of seven. Those who attempt to make a distinct and separate fiftieth year for the jubilee, immediately introduce confusion into the whole sabbatical arrangement; besides it makes the Scripture contradict itself. For the Scripture says of the jubilee year, "Ye shall not sow, neither reap. . . . It shall be holy unto you."

Now if the jubilee did not commence till the seventh sabbatical year ended, then it must necessarily comprise the whole of the eighth year; yet the Scripture says (Lev. 25: 22), "Ye shall [not may] sow the eighth year." No prohibition here. But if the jubilee comprised the whole of the eighth year, the Jews would not have been permitted to have sown that year; because it would contradict the express command of God Lev. 25: 11. Now it does not change the law nor the requirement in the least, if the Jews had failed in any or every particular to observe it.

But place the jubilee where it legitimately belongs,—to commence on the tenth day of the seventh month of the forty-ninth year, it will end in season for the sowing of the land in the eighth year, according to the specification of the law (Lev. 25: 22), and would leave time for the work to be finished that was to be done in the solemnity of the seventh year of release (Deut. 31: 10), and time for all that was required to be observed in the jubilee. For the first part of the jubilee would be the last portion of the seventh sabbatical year; and the last part of the jubilee the first year, or a portion of the new sabbatical cycle of seven.

The above is the only view that will harmonize the scripture touching the jubilee arrangement. Let the truth, then, be received by all who desire it.

In Dan. 8: 4, the "pushing" of the "ram" was evidently against the Jewish nation for their entire destruction; for the term "beasts" in this verse is not the same as in Dan. 7; for in Dan. 8: 4 it means life, or living; while in Dan. 7 they symbolize civil governments. Therefore as the three ribs in the mouth of the Persian bear (Dan. 7: 5, which represent a remnant of the nation of the Amalekites) say to the Persian monarch, "Arise and devour much flesh"; so in Dan. 8: 4 the power of Persia is brought into requisition, that no "life of living" might stand before it. In other words, that all the Jews might be destroyed in one day. That Amalekite, Haman, had been elevated to the position of prime minister at the court of Persia; and out of hatred and revenge which he bore the nation of the Jews, he sought their entire destruction. But instead of accomplishing his purpose, in the providence of God he and his ten sons were slain, and probably seventy-five thousand of his nation beside. This is the last we read of the Amalekites in the Bible, or history. This is evidently the occasion the Lord took to fulfill his threat recorded in Ex. 17: 14,—"And the Lord said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book, . . . for I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven."

If these several events referred to do not date the several periods of the prophecy, will not some of the servants of Christ, who are competent to show their fallacy, please undertake the work, for the good of the household of faith? It appears to me this is demanded, and is a duty devolving upon those who regard the honor of God and the good of the church of Christ. But if these points referred to can not be overthrown, ought not all, who wish to be found faithful, give these things their support, and faithfully make them known to the best of their ability? The Lord help all to awake to their duty, especially the watchmen. Amen. L. T. Cunningham.

WHEN ARE THE SAINTS TO BE REWARDED?

BY WM. SHELDON.

The testimony of inspired witnesses on this point is abundant and clear. Let us look at a little of the strong evidence bearing upon the question.

Said Jesus: "Behold, I come quickly: and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." (Rev. 22: 12.) "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." (Matt. 16: 27.) "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." (Luke 14: 14.) "Thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints." (Rev. 11: 18.) Could testimony be plainer? Does it not connect the Christian's reward with the coming of Christ at the resurrection of the just? And does it not also place the reward of the prophets at the same point of time? In view of this fact, well might Paul say: "When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3: 4.) And in consideration of this truth, Christ could reasonably say: "I will come again, and receive you unto myself." (John 14: 3.)

Thus the truth is clearly stated, that Christ is to receive the saints unto himself, and that the saints are to enter glory at Christ's appearing. Why not enter glory before? Because they cannot enter glory unjudged, and the judgment is at the coming of Christ. Why does not Christ receive the saints unto himself before he comes again? Because he does not judge them before his coming; and it would be a shocking idea to see unjudged men entering glory, and subsequently see them all turned out of glory, to appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, to be judged.

Peter informs the faithful that they should be rewarded with a "crown of glory," and also tells them when they should get it: "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (1 Pet. 5: 4.) Paul speaks to the same effect: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 8.) This crown is to be given by the "righteous Judge;" and as Christ is not to "judge" the living and the dead till his "appearing," the crown cannot be given before the appearing of Christ.

Job expected to see his Redeemer "at the latter day" (Job 19: 25;) David expected to be "satisfied" when he should "awake" from death's slumbers, in the Savior's "likeness" (Ps. 17: 15;) Isaiah prayed that his Redeemer might "rend the heavens and come down" (Is. 64: 1;) Ezekiel's attention was fixed upon the time when God should "open the graves" of his people, and cause them "to come up out of their graves," and "enter the land of Israel" (Ezek. 37: 12;) Jeremiah's mind was directed to the time when the slaughtered innocents should "come again from the land of the enemy" (Jer. 31: 15;) Daniel records a time to come when "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life," and deliverance come to "every one that shall be found written in the book" (Dan. 12: 1;) Christ predicts a time to come when "they that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world" to come "and the resurrection" shall be made "equal to the angels" (Luke 20 36;) John could affirm, "We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him" (1 John 3: 2;) Paul tells us of ancient saints who "died in faith not having received the promises," affirming that "they without us should not be made perfect" (Heb. 11: 13, 40;) Peter exhorts us to "hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 1: 13;) and the Revelator could exclaim: "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

In fact, all of God's inspired saints have had their eyes fixed upon this glorious event as the time of redemption and reward.—Adventism.

For the World's Crisis.

PRACTICAL FAITH.

We find it recorded on the inspired page, "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." When the children of Israel were about to leave the land of bondage, to commence their long and dreary march through the deserts, they were commanded to borrow of the Egyptians jewels of silver and jewels of gold, and raiment. Now what can we learn from this? They were at the commencement of the old dispensation, and as a remuneration in part for their servitude was this allowed, and for future use during their long pilgrimage; and for the good or bad use of the same they were alone responsible. Can we not see a striking contrast between them and ourselves? They were at the beginning of a dispensation, and we are at the ending. They were just starting on a weary pilgrimage, and we have arrived near the terminating point.

Again, as they were about to commence their journey, and eat the passover, they were instructed, "And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat in haste; it is the Lord's passover." Thus they were instructed, and when they strictly obeyed, all went well with them. Now what are our instructions from the Chief Shepherd? "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

Brethren and sisters, are we not also enjoined to show our faith by our works? Let us not turn away sorrowful at this point like the rich man, and lose our share in the kingdom. Says Jesus, "Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth." Is this unreasonable? "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Brother, sister, if Christ is our treasure, is our life, who will soon appear, shall we not cheerfully comply with these instructions? Are we not to "be doers of the word"?

Furthermore, "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." Will not this be far better or preferable to any earthly honor, or earthly treasures, to be ready to be called to the marriage supper of the Lamb? to eat and drink with him at his table in his kingdom? Still further, "And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants." "Be ye therefore ready also, for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not." Thus are we plainly instructed, and this is the way pointed out to us to be ready. Would the children of Israel have been delivered from Egyptian bondage had they refused to obey instructions? Or shall we obtain final deliverance and complete redemption when Christ shall come, unless we follow his instructions also? Come, brethren and sisters, it is time for some of us to do far more than we yet have done to have our preparation complete, "to be ready to be called to the marriage supper."

Invest in the Lord's treasury, and then all is safe. The means are now wanted to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to supply the wants of the orphan and destitute, the poor and the needy; to assist the widows in affliction and the fatherless, to visit the sick, the imprisoned and the stranger. Like the acts of the good Samaritan, are we not to "go and do likewise"? Shall we pass by on the other side, or neglect the providential calls and wants of humanity? Shall we remain insensible or inactive, and like the covetous rich man, say "Saul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease." Says the apostle, "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." Remember now we have the opportunity, but judgment scenes hastens and the opportunity will soon be in the past.

Let all the needy preaching brethren be sustained, and their families not suffer for want. Let poor preaching brethren, who are wanting for means, be at once supplied, and immediately sent out to proclaim the last gospel message. Let every field be occupied, and new ones be entered upon; the mission fields be sustained and enlarged, and new ones speedily established. Let the means be speedily be forthcoming, not only for all this, but for a more liberal circulation of those papers, which are endeavoring to faithfully warn the people of the nearness of a coming judgment. Let the messengers of the coming Bridegroom be multiplied and amply sustained. Obtain or send on voluntarily the names of your friends or others, with the funds, and have them sent free to their address. Let not the means be wanting for more tracts to be written and published, and their circulation be increased ten-fold. Let every one become a voluntary missionary and tract distributor. Let these last day messengers be distributed freely in railroad cars, steamboats, stages, and every mode of conveyance as opportunity presents.

Brethren and sisters, these are golden moments. Let us awake to duty and redeem the time. Our working day will soon be past, and faith without works will not avail us then. Our last call to active practical duties, as faithful stewards or laborers in our Master's vineyard, will very soon be in the past. The absent Nobleman will soon return, and if our talents are found buried in the earth, our loss will be irreparable. Therefore, let us heed the message, and at once hasten to make the required and needful preparation; and then with our loins girt about, having on our wedding garments, with our lights burning, we shall be found like unto men who wait for their Lord, and ready to be called to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Brother, sister, awake! awake! AWAKE!! Heed these last solemn admonitions in Jesus' name. Set your house in order. Look about you. Show your faith in Jesus' words by corresponding works. Be in time. Be in haste to get all on the altar. Leave nothing exposed to consuming fires. "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." In brotherly kindness and love to all,

Marion, N. Y. S. L. Manley.

YET ANOTHER CASE.

A lady correspondent has been exercised over a matter pertaining to this life. Having a vivid conception of the individuality of woman, and of her equality in talent and position with man, society and in the family, she has a similar trouble as our friend above with her reason, which refuses to accept of Paul's doctrine as stated by the critics and commentators. Here are her emphatic words:

"I am conscious that I am not, nor ever will be, 'in subjection' to any man living or dead. If Paul teaches that I must be, then I have only to let Paul go, for he says that God commands injustice, and that contradicts my reason. I do not shut my eyes to one of the sad correlatives of such a conclusion, but toward it the premises inevitably point. And so, from the long catalogue of the fathers of the church, who assert that Paul taught the doctrine that women must submit silently to men, (how far, pray?) there is no refuge but in skepticism."

Several thoughts came to our mind as we read this. As to the involved fact that Paul did teach that officially, in the family and in society, woman was "subject" to man, we recalled his words: "Wives submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church. . . . Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything." Eph. 5: 22–24. "But they [the women] are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law," or Old Testament, referring to Gen. 3: 16, "Thy desire shall be [subject to] the husband, and he shall rule over thee." 1 Cor. 13: 34. "Let the woman [in public meetings of the church] learn in silence in all subjection." 1 Pet. 3: 1. There can be no doubt, then, as to the doctrine of the New Testament on this subject. Woman is to be loved, cherished, honored, protected, provided for, consulted with, and in every way rendered happy by her husband, and she is to have full scope for individual spiritual life, and for holy, useful action, in the domestic and social sphere; but the husband is clothed with the responsibility of final decisions in matters affecting the general interests of the family and the community.

Now we thought, as we read the good lady's words, Why should a woman imagine that such a doctrine is full of injustice, and so clearly contrary to reason, as to compel her to deny Paul's inspiration, and take refuge in skepticism? What a curious affair her reason must be! What a misfortune to possess it, and, in consequence, to lose such a treasure as the Bible! May it not be that pride usurps the name of reason? Are we not all made "subject" in various ways? and do we not find in the fact an important and needed influence upon character, from infancy to death? What is the great duty of childhood, but to learn filial subjection, the mothers thus ruling over and forming the men? What is the position of every pupil, apprentice, clerk, agent, officer of a company, employee of any kind, but one of subjection in certain repects? Do we ever attain to a position in no respect subordinate?

All citizens are subject, officially, to the chief magistrate. He must make many decisions of great moment for them, though he be but an Andrew Johnson, and they far his superiors in education, morals, statesmanship, and every other quality. In an army, soldiers, though often individually richer, wiser, stronger and more capable than their officers, are yet subject to them. In business life partners divide up the processes of manufacture and sale, and assign the control of this to one and of that to another, and thus, though equal in one sense, become subject to each other in another sense. The aim of life is to become perfect in subjection to God, and the main disparities of rank and position on earth properly train the will to recognize in various relations other guide than one's own desire.

Where, then, is the manifest unreason in teaching wives that, as marriage is a partnership for life, as family interests are of exceeding value, and as ultimate authority must be lodged somewhere, so God has appointed an outward sphere for the husband, an inward sphere for the wife, and that in cases of doubt and difficulty, the right of headship or final decision shall be in the husband, on whom the principal burden and responsibility for support is laid? And then the idea suggested itself, that it were better to trust God speaking in the Bible, than to be wise for ourselves. Surely he knows female nature and interests better than the most intelligent woman of the nineteenth century, and would not command what we have cited from his word, unless he saw that in the end such a course would tend most to woman's happiness and influence. At all events is the case to the contrary so self-evident, that a woman must throw away her Bible to preserve her reason? After searching the world around, is she certain of finding a better adviser than Paul?—Independent.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, June 3, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

PRAYERS FOR THE POPE.

The Pope feels that his position is a critical one; and that unless help comes from the Lord soon, his condition will be hopeless. He now sees no way of escape, unless by some special providential favor. He thinks it is an unheard of sacrilege that his patrimony should be taken from him, and "the Eternal and Holy City" of Rome should be occupied by any other power than by the Catholic Church. It is now proposed to have special prayers offered in behalf of the Pope and his supporters.

The following is from the "Pastoral Letter" of the Right Rev. Bishop of Pittsburg," published in The Catholic, May 2nd, 1868:

"Now, dearly beloved children, you have plainly before your eyes the object of the Holy Father in his Encyclical. By the recent attempts which have been made to take violent possession of his temporal dominions, and by the plots which are constantly concocted to renew them again, and to never cease until this object is accomplished, the Sovereign Pontiff has been convinced that the enemies of God are preparing the chains to enslave him, as the Supreme Head of the Church. The example of his glorious predecessor, St. Peter, cast into prison and bound with chains is before his eyes. The example that "prayer was made without ceasing by the church, to God, for him," that by these prayers of the faithful St. Peter was miraculously delivered, is also before his eyes. Thus he has recourse to the same means, to obtain the divine interposition on his behalf, to be delivered by the power of God from the power of his enemies, by whom he is constantly threatened.

For this purpose, the Holy Father, in his Encyclical, has directed all the Bishops of the Catholic world to announce public prayers in their Dioceses for three days. In order that the faithful may assist at these public prayers, and beseech God with more devotion, he has graciously granted a plenary indulgence to all and each of the faithful who shall approach to the holy Sacraments of Penance and Holy Eucharist, with the due dispositions, and who shall attend devoutly on the three days, and pray to God according to his intentions, in the present needs of the church. He also grants an indulgence of seven years, seven times forty days to those of the faithful who being contrite of heart shall on any one of these three days perform the other works. He also grants that these indulgences may be applied, by way of suffrage, to the souls of the faithful departed. Now, venerable brethren, and beloved children, we beseech and implore you to second the pious views and designs of the Holy Father."

GAINING-FAVOR.

That Spiritualism is rapidly gaining public favor is a fact too well known to be disputed by those who are posted in relation to passing events. The publisher of popular journals, who, a few years ago denounced Spiritualism, now speak of it in favorable terms. As it enters politics, it will have plenty of flatterers. It is destined to prevail beyond all other systems of religion, and will fit for perdition those who choose to be duped by the cunning wiles of Satan.

We clipped the following from the Banner of Light, May 9th, 1868:—

SIGNIFICANT.—"Spiritualism is gaining in favor rapidly among skeptics. By-and-by those who have opposed us without stint, will boldly declare they have been Spiritualists for years. The sun is surely rising; the clouds are already fast losing their sombre hues. The press has in a great degree ceased its ridicule of our beautiful, scientific religion. True, now and then such one-sided, weak papers as the 'Boston Journal' and the 'World's Crisis' repudiate the incoming glory of the New Dispensation. But these examples are rare. On the contrary, the most talented sheets are at least treating us respectfully. Hear what the 'Wide World' says, for example, in allusion to our late Festival:

Tuesday, the Spiritualists of Boston and vicinity celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the advent of modern Spiritualism. Now don't 'pooh!' Two-thirds of creation do not understand what 'Spiritualism' means. They think it an 'ism' of any diabolical tendency, and blindly disguise their perception of its pure, holy, harmonic nature. They think it the creed of an outcast sect, like Mormonism, Free-Love-ism and the like, when in fact it is the essence of life—the inner religion of all humanity, the foundation of all church creeds, but not a creed in itself."

"A NIGHT OF CRIME."

While some try to persuade themselves and others that the world is growing better, because their theories require it should be so, the facts are most positively against them, and are rapidly accumulating which go to show beyond all controversy that the moral condition of the world is fast sinking into a state like ancient Sodom; thus proving that the prophecy of Paul in 2 Tim. 3: 1–9, 13, is true. Papers which have been expecting good times now begin to acknowledge the sad state of things in the world.

The following is from the Pittsburg Christian Advocate:—

"Human affairs seem to be approaching a crisis. Great events thicken around us. Decades of years now accomplish results that formerly required centuries. Sin moves with quickened steps; so too holiness. The hour is instinct with momentous deeds.

A night of crime is settling down upon the world. In our own nation it is dark and tempestuous, passional and tragic. Drunkenness runs riot. Speculation is unsettling the foundations of public confidence. Skepticism is robbing all classes of their faith and hopes. Fraud and dishonesty darken the halls of trade. Robberies and murders are frequent. Peculation and bribery dwell in high places. The land is full of wickedness. Great cities are seats of sin, pollution, wretchedness. Not over-drawn is this life-picture of to-day.

The counterpart and corrective of all this is seen in the steps of God's Providence, admonishing men in the tempest and the earthquake. Turn seaward, and behold the tornado engulfing vast argosies of ships. Look northward, and witness the earthquake shocks that extend far inland from the ocean; or southward, and see them accompanied by mountainous tidal waves that submerged fleets and cities. It is Jehovah who speaks to man in the tremblings of the rock-ribbed earth and destroying winds. And what shall we say of cholera, travelling like a destroying angel among the nations; of other epidemics, decimating ship loads of emigrants, or falling upon communities and depopulating them; or of fires, explosions, and railroad accidents that destroy millions of property and thousands of lives, and send thrills of sadness through widely-scattered homes? Are not these God's messenger's of wrath—his visible footsteps—dissuading from evil deeds, and sent as warnings to the incorrigible? They premonish the evil-doer that God is just, as well as good, and that the day of retribution will certainly come. They are daily occurring revelations of God to show his eternal hatred of sinful deeds."

The note of alarm comes from all parts of the world, and many begin to see that we are really in the last days of the present dispensation. Men who have been dreaming of "a good time coming" are aroused like those waked from sleep by the roaring of the devouring flames at midnight's hour. We fear many of them will cry for help when it is too late.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 23d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Saturday, Aug. 29th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

LONG SERMONS.—Do not fail to read what Bro. Munger says about "long sermons." It might be well for the preachers to read that article. O when shall we learn wisdom? We do hope, for the sake of the welfare of the churches and the preachers, that there may be a reform. Condense, give the germ, the marrow and fatness of the "blessed hope." Do have mercy on the weak. We know that there is much complaint about "long sermons." Why not preach shorter, when more good can be accomplished, strength saved for more sermons, and the church be much bettet entertained and be more healthy? Why not?

"THAT MAN OF SIN."—Under this heading our readers will find in another column an interesting article from Bro. Colegrove. We commend it to the careful student of prophecy, as worthy of his candid attention. In the main, we think Bro. C. is correct in his remarks on that subject. If so, there will be developments in that direction soon. It is sublime to be living now, when the Lord is about to fufill the last jots and tittles of prophecy.

LADIES' (?) GAMBLING SALOON.

Progression is the order of the day. The spirits keep talking through their mediums in earnest affirmations that the world is progressing rapidly towards the millennial state. We think it is very evident that the progress in wickedness is without a parallel. Of course this would please the demons; and as they put error for truth, and commend what Christ condemns, and approve of what the Bible forbids, we may expect they will be delighted with the progressive wickedness of these last days. It seems as though Satan was busy night and day inventing ways to lead people to perdition. There is an insatiable thirst for criminal amusements. Moral restraint is rapidly departing from what is called fashionable society; and all classes are drifting away from the doctrine and principles of the christian religion. Of this, we see no room to doubt. The following is from "Perley," the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal:—

The Chronicle of to-day, April 12th, asserts that there are two fashionable gambling houses, both within half a dozen squares of the Treasury Building, which are exclusively for the uses of ladies. At those places, at nearly all hours of the day, may be found richly dressed ladies, connected with families whose standing is high in the community, earnestly engaged in faro, and staking their money with an abandon that would excite surprised. The sterner sex is rigidly excluded, and the players feel themselves secure from the intrusion of watchful fathers or angry husbands, while they at the same time place firm reliance on the silence of their fair companions. It is rumored that a certain divorce case now pending in the District Court is attributable in a measure to the squandering of a husband's money on the tables of one of these places—Madame Rumor placing the amount of the losses as high as $50,000."

THE MILLENNIUM.

This is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. It is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second coming of Christ. For ale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage. Ten copies for $1.00; fifty copies, $4.00.

The Young Pilgrim for June 1st.

The number for June 1st contains the following good reading:—

"The Great and Beautiful City"; a sweet poetical piece, with a beautiful picture of "Christ and the Little Ones"; "The Happiest Birthday," or the story of the little girl who would rather have a prayer-meeting than a party; "Edwin's prayer"; "Going to Sabbath School" (with a cut); "The Proof of Love"; "Sins of the Tongue"; "Sabbath Schools—authority for them"; The Young Pilgrims' Love Feast; The Wee Ones' Column; "How Quarrels Begin"; "I'm glad you told Jesus my name"; "The Fallen Youth"; Bible Questions; Pilgrims and Strangers; Bible Enigmas, etc., etc.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

DEAR BRN.:—The Lord is still doing a great work here. The church numbers about seventy-five members, and still increasing. The great Advent truths are going all through this country. The ball commenced moving in Memphis, and its march is onward. I do not think there is such a church in the United States. They stand tip-toe for the coming of the Lord. We commence our meetings about eight o'clock, and have hard work to get them to leave before twelve at night. And this people work hard every day. They say they love Jesus. We have sinners around the altar every night. There are being raised up in this church men and women who can and do preach the gospel of the kingdom at hand. These freedmen are going through this country preaching Christ and the truth to those of their own race.

This church is in good working order. Things are working just as I anticipated. Bro. Leslie and Sister Northrup have their hands full. They commence school at half-past nine, and dismiss at five. Three hundred and seventy-five scholars. On the Sabbath the school commences at nine o'clock, with four hundred scholars, and is dismissed at two. Then we commence preaching, and continue our meeting until about twelve. Sr. Steere takes her hands full of tracts, and goes out among the freedmen, talking and praying with them. Some of our congregation come from fifteen to twenty miles back in the country. Thus they get hold of the truth and carry it back. They say they know the Lord is coming; the Spirit told them so.

What could we do without this meeting-house, with this multitude of people hungering and thirsting for the word of God? I know that God sent me down here to build him a house, and his blessing is on it. I feel that my work here is done at present; that God would have me go out with my tent; and as it is too hot here to hold meetings in the tent this summer, I am going north to carry the news of Christ's soon coming.

I want you to pray for Bro. Leslie and Sr. Northrup; their labor is great.

I received $1.00 to-day from Bro. Dinsmore of Vt., sent by Bro. Adams. I gave it to Sister Northrup, to help build her mission house for her help to live in. God bless you, my brother. It will pay you compound interest for ever. I will see you in the "morning," after my work is done. God help us to work hard until our Lord shall come; then we will rest from our labors. Heaven bless the scattered flock, and gather me with you in the morning. Let us not be weary in well doing. Glory to God! I feel his peace.

In hope, D. D. REED.

THE ANNIVERSARIES.

The anniversaries of the various religious and benevolent associations have just closed, but judging from the attendance, compared with former years, there has not been so much zeal and interest manifested in them. The meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, held on Thursday evening, the last one of the series, and considered the most important, has in former years been crowded; but this year there were many hundred vacant seats.

There were two foreign missionaries present, who gave stirring appeals in behalf of the fields in which they labor. One of them has come home for recruits; he has been here several months, and visited five or six colleges, but has not yet found one to enlist in this service. The chairman in opening the meeting said we were now living in an eventful day; the openings for the introduction of the gospel among the heathen have never been so free as at the present time; and he verily believed that Christ is soon to come, and the world be converted to him.

The most interesting meeting I attended was the anniversary of the Little Wanderer's Home, Baldwin Place. There were some statements made in the report which should be circulated far and wide. It is a cause of rejoicing that there are those who seem to be burdened for the welfare of this class of children; but notwithstanding there is so much being done by these public institutions, and by private individuals, there are tens of thousands of these little wanderers who, if not rescued soon, will probably find their way to some of the criminal institutions of the land.

It was stated in the report that in the city of New York there are five hundred thousand living in tenement houses, whose children are growing up with very little religious culture. In the vicinity of the Howard Mission there are forty thousand to the square mile, and one part of the city the churches have abandoned. Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers few.

We know there are a few benevolent souls who have a heart to feel for the sufferings of others, and are doing all in their power to rescue the fallen.

The question comes home to us all, Are we doing all we can to rescue these little wanderers, and cooperate with Christ in carrying the glad news of salvation to the lost? He will require at our hands the talents he has given us; and may we so labor in this great moral field, that Christ will say to us, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of thy Lord." LONG SERMONS.

How long, O Lord, will it be before some of our brethren will learn that a long sermon, however good, kills their influence quicker than a poor one? In nearly every place we visit, there is a complaint about long sermons. One brother said he got into the habit of going to meeting late, because he could not endure long sermons. One hour is very long to sit and give attention to any subject. Forty-five minutes is long enough in ordinary cases, especially on funeral occasions. One brother in Conn. said he attended a funeral last winter on a very cold day, and one of our Advent preachers held on two hours; and when some of the people went away he cut short, and soon wound up by saying his time was too short to finish his discourse. No wonder the mourners felt abused. Such a course is not gentlemanly, saying nothing about christianity. It is an imposition on the living; the dead could stand it. Some outsiders dread to go to funerals where some of our Advent brethren attend. Others have called upon other denominations to attend funeral services on this account.

If long services bring people to meeting late, it is doubly inconsistent; for what is more annoying to a preacher than to have some come in at eleven o'clock or later? Nothing looks more heedless and unbecoming than to come to meeting late, when many must stop listening, and go to looking and moving to make room for you. All preachers feel annoyed by such a course, but dare not speak; and if the preachers' long sermons have given birth to such an inconsistent practice, you ought not to find fault. But we as a people, believing in time, ought to be on time in going to meeting and closing meetings. He is not a suitable man to be intrusted with important business, who is behind time in getting to meeting. Mark it. If he is sluggish about the Lord's work, he will be about others' work. I doubt if God ever called a sluggish, half-awake, dronish man to do his work. I never knew one but what was under foot, and generally in the way of those who can work quick.

We are in the quick time of our generation, the "quickly"; and such as will not heed the entreaties of the church, and move out of the way and reform, those marching on quick time will win the battle and take the prize.

There, I have written this because there has been so much complaint about long, dead sermons; and being so often disturbed myself with lazy people who get to meeting late. I had rather people would stay at home than come after preaching begins. They do more hurt than they get good. You who come late on account of those who preach long sermons, come in season, and go home in season, whether he has got through or not. This is a better way, to give him a hint. Yours, of long experience in these matters,

HIRAM MUNGER.

ANOTHER HORSE WANTED.

Who will help to buy one? I will be one of them. Another opportunity to gain the Lord's blessing. I have just received a letter informing me that Bro. Jeremiah Carr, of South Albion, Me., has been deprived of the use of his horse, (a good horse), by lameness first, and then by a fall which ruined him. Bro. Carr is one of the Lord's faithful and industrious ministers, who has for some years past traveled quite extensively through a destitute part of Maine, preaching, visiting, and distributing tracts, earning the chief support for himself and family, with his own hands,—preaching where there were no societies to sustain him. His labors have been blessed of the Lord, souls converted, and saints enlightened, and a healthful influence follows.

He is without means to purchase another horse, and in a part of the country where there are no railroads, and but few stages. His health is too poor to work to earn a horse. His labors cannot be had in the cause without one, only very limitedly. I believe the Lord will furnish one, therefore I begin to beg for him, Those brethren who know him, and with whom he has labored, can now see a good chance to aid him, by giving as they are able. Others all through the state, and out of the state, can give from a ten-cent bit, to ten dollars, as the Lord has given them. "God loves a cheerful giver."

Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of a disciple, send in your mites to Bro. J. Carr, South Albion, Me., or to me, Yarmouth, Me.

I. C. WELLCOME.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to acknowledge through the Crisis a large trunk of provisions and clothing, which Sister Saulpaugh brought last February. I thought it was acknowledged until to-day, and I would like to beg pardon of the many dear ones who had a hand in filling that trunk. Almost every thing was in it that could be used in the mission work; clothing, provision, books, medicine, etc., etc. Many hearts were made glad, both with the food and clothing; and how I came to overlook its acknowledgement I cannot tell, unless because I had so much else on my mind. I have been driven from one thing to another so fast since then, I have hardly had time for anything, only from day to day. Will the brethren and sisters accept this apology, and pardon me?

Sr. Saulpaugh at the same time did me good service in preaching, visiting the sick, and sewing. She worked faithfully for us here; soul and body all in the work; and Bro. Saulpaugh was here a day or two, and painted the rooms which Sr. Holden furnished. Bro. Clark also did some carpenter work.

To all who contributed for and prayed over that trunk, I would say, the Lord bless you. It was called the "Lord's trunk" all the way from Worcester. It drew a crowd at every depot where it changed cars. There are several anecdotes connected with its journey from Manchester to New York, but it takes too much room in the paper to relate them.

TO THE ADVENT CHURCHES IN CANADA EAST.

It will be seen by reference to the appointments in the last Crisis, that an efficient laborer and servant of the Lord, a man of rare talent, Eld. H. Munger, is about to visit the churches in this province,—Montreal, Melbourne, Danville, Compton, and Barenston. This will be hailed with much satisfaction, and we hope that the more healthy among us will be active in bringing out the supine, the sick, the lame and the lazy in our ranks, even though they should be carried upon beds and litters. And let us pray that the stagnant pool may be moved. J. PORTER.

Danville, May 25th, 1868.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. Sherwin.

BRO. GRANT:—I came here Tuesday, the 14th inst., believing that God would open the way for his truth. I found Eld. Thos. Davis (F. W. Baptist), who heard Bro. Himes and others lecture in Maine, in 1843, and was much interested. They are truly a christian family, and kindly entertained me during the week. Bro. Panten, of the M. E. church, loves the coming of Jesus, but takes medium ground on the intermediate state. Mr. Bowen, of the Baptist church, and President of the National Bank, is interested in life through Christ. Others are interested. I believe we shall see the truth preached here soon. I have bought a little office on Washington St., opposite the P. O., and Merchant's Ex., as a home for myself and the brethren who come to work for the Master. I will at any time meet brethren at the depot, day or night, and do the best I can for all who belong to Christ.

The office is nearly new, and stands on a corner lot separate from other buildings, and can stand there for the present. I am to pay $85 for it, and have possession the 25th inst. I know where a part of the cash is, and the Lord knows where the other part is. I purpose, if the Lord will, to be a missionary, and I pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers full of faith and the Holy Spirit. Let our prayers and alms come up together for a memorial before God. I have been in darkness, but thanks be to God, who always causeth us to triumph in Christ. He has given me the victory. I am willing to work for him, and wait till Bro. Paul gets his reward. I want books, tracts and clothing for Christ's little ones.

Bro. H., of Amboy, formerly a Methodist preacher in Canada, has a wife and five children, and is very destitute. He begins to see the truth. I think he will come to Mendota. Pray for us. O. SHERWIN.

BRO. GRANT:—For some time I have been thinking of writing to you, but have neglected it until to-day. I have for some months been an attentive reader of your excellent "Crisis," which has been to me a "feast of fat things"; and I trust I am humble enough to "confess" "that after the way which" the so-called Evangelist "call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets"; and am waiting publicly to acknowledge that I feel proud (if I may be allowed the expression), to belong to a sect that is every where spoken against. But it is now as in apostolic times, that those who "will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." And I know of no denomination that is more persecuted, slandered, reviled, and rejected of men, than the sect of Second Advents. And yet, I read of no people, who are doing more to help and assist the poor; and by way of missions to spread the gospel, to lead sinners to repentance, and to build up the Redeemer's cause, than the despised and tauntingly called "Millerites."

In a late number of Zion's Herald there is a notice of a great revival of religion in progress in Rhode Island, through the united influence of six different religious denominations, viz., First Day Baptist, Seventh Day Baptist, Christian Baptist, Congregationalists, Methodist, and Episcopalians; but not a word said, or any credit given to the Advent, nor their name mentionad. Why was this? Were there none there? If there were, why were they not mentioned? Notwithstanding Advent preachers are having so great success in the conversion of sinners in the different parts of the United States, I know of no so-called, evangelical religious periodical that ever alludes to it, and many give it their disapprobation, calling it fanaticism, enthusiasm and heresy. A member of a Methodist church recently said to me, that the greatest sign of the near coming of Christ was the increasing and growing sect of Adventists, and that they had done more to increase infidelity than all the world beside. I also heard a Methodist minister recently in the pulpit, denounce the doctrine, as taught by some of the Adventists as fooleries; and another preacher represents their peculiar views as a "new-fangled doctrine, and unworthy of patronage or credence." Surely, then, this sect is "every where spoken against." It is spoken against by all the "evangelicals," by the Catholics, by the Quakers, by the Universalists, by the Spiritualists, by the Infidels, by the Swedenborgians, by the Nothingarians, by the worldly-minded, and by all the ungodly men of the nineteenth century. But, say they, "'tis a new-fangled doctrine." But I would ask these honorable opponents, is it a "new-fangled doctrine" that life and death are set before us (Deut. 30: 19)? That "the soul that sinneth it shall die?" that the end of the wicked shall be cut off? that the wicked and their place shall not be? that the wicked shall be destroyed root and branch? that the broad road leadeth to destruction? that the "wages of sin is death," and that the gift of God is eternal life? that the wicked "shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and the glory of his power?" that "the dead know not any thing?" that in that very day their thoughts perish? Is it a "new-fangled doctrine" that "God only hath immortality"? that man is finite, is mortal, and must seek for immortality? (Job 4: 17; Rom. 2: 7; 1 Tim. 6; 16)? Did St. Paul preach a "new-fangled doctrine" in the fifteenth chapter of 1 Cor., and 1 Thess., chap. 4th? and did Peter, in his 2d epistle, 4th chapter? No; they all taught the pure, unadulterated gospel. The "new-fangled doctrine" taught by many of our Christian opponents, who add to the word of God such phrases as "endless torment," "endless misery," "endless hell fire, "unending woe," "never-dying soul," deathless soul," "eternal pain," "the soul that never dies," "immortal soul," "never ending torment," "the death that never dies." Such are the "new-fangled doctrines," and not to be found in the Bible, and never were taught, either by Jehovah, prophets, Christ, nor his apostles. Had such doctrines been true, they would have been written so plainly, that the simplest capacity might have understood them.

I have for many years (now being in my seventy-fourth year) searched the Scriptures prayerfully for light and truth, and have carefully examined the various popular creeds of the day, and am constrained to acknowledge that among them all, I find no doctrines which so well harmonize with inspiration, and are so congenial with the best feelings and desires of the "pure in heart" as the doctrine advocated and proclaimed in the "World's Crisis." Therefore, Bro. Grant, I bid you God speed in your labors to convert the people from sin, and the errors of their cruel words, and from the tradition of their fathers, and to prepare them for the coming kingdom.

South Carver. JOHN MAXIM.

From Bro. B. H. Albee.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel that we are occupying a solemn moment of time, and nothing but the pure love of God in the heart and his all-sufficient grace will enable us to stand amid the buffetings of the enemy and the fiery darts which are continually being hurled at us on every side, by those who are under his control and led captive by him at his will. We are still in the dark night of earth's history, though "the night is far spent, and the day is at hand"; but "until the day dawn" in its heavenly splendor upon the waiting church, the "light" of prophecy will continue to shine in its clearness.

God in his wisdom has seen fit to so mark off the different stages of earthly history upon the great stream of time, that the church might understand when they were nearing the time of their redemption. Not once merely has this work been done, but repeatedly; thus showing the great anxiety of Jehovah to have his children understand their nearness to the close of earth's sad history and death, and also their nearness to the establishment of a celestial kingdom on this now sin-cursed earth, after sin, death and the curse shall have been removed and for ever obliterated; a kingdom under the supervision of the great Messiah, who shall be escorted from heaven to earth by every holy angel that dwells around the brilliant throne on high, to call up the sleeping saints from their dark beds of death, to wear the robes of immortality.

Since God has taken so much pains to minutely mark off the various sections of earthly history, even down to the close of probationary time; and since he has so plainly shown the interest he has felt in the matter of repeating the work, and also by giving prophetic measurements limiting the continuance of human rule, let us have interest enough in the matter to carefully examine the prophetic programme, and learn our true relation to the judgment scene which is to close up earth's history.

If the very last section of our world's history is about closing, certainly we should be willing to acquaint ourselves with the fact. If prophecy has plainly portrayed the history of earthly governments to the time when they are to be exterminated by a mighty display of divine power, preparatory to the ushering in of a heavenly kingdom of endless duration; and if those earthly governments have all had their day, and have about filled out heaven's measurement of time, which reaches to the end of their allotted seasons, we should feel an insatiable anxiety to learn the facts in the case.

If the slumbering saints of past generations are about to spring into real life again, and the living ones about to be immortalized, and be made "equal to the angels," our hearts should glow with a fervent desire to compare the prophetic record with historic facts; for while prophecy tells what shall be, history what has been. Should we not be willing to learn what God has taken so much pains to teach us?

The millions of saints who are now reposing in death's embrace, having then arisen from sea and land, and having been judged out of the books that were opened when "the Ancient of days did sit," and having met the divine approval, will be entitled to an entrance into a kingdom of heavenly origin, where the cruel ravages of death and the ruinous poison of sin will have no existence; where the high praises of God and the sweet songs of deliverance shall blend harmoniously through endless futurity, as they gush from the warm hearts and pure lips of the blood-washed throng; where the redeemed ones "shall shine as the brightness of the firmament," in a sinless, sorrowless, graveless and deathless realm; and that unparalleled scene is now almost due.

Cheer up, lone pilgrims, your redemption is very near. Soon we shall see the blessed Jesus. Endure a little longer, and you are saved for ever, to enjoy all the blessings of eternal life. We have the promise of it through our Savior. Let us walk in his steps, keep his Spirit, and he will own us when he comes.

Your brother in Christ, BENJ. H. ALBEE.

From Sr. M. Mayhew.

BRO. GRANT:—For the first time I write a few lines for our much loved paper, for it is next to my Bible in value to me. How cheering to read letters from the loved and scattered ones. Toil on, dear children, a little longer; soon we shall meet in our Father's house, free from all earth's trials.

How much of the love and grace of God we need to keep us humble and fit us for that home with Jesus. I often think that we as a people, above all others, should be watchful of what we do and say; that we should have on the whole armor, keep it bright and shining, that we may be able to overcome all evil. Let us seek that christian charity which covers a multitude of sins, praying for those who do not see as we do, instead of saying hard things about them. May the Lord help us to live with reference to that day. Your sister in hope of soon seeing Jesus,

Salem. M. MAYHEW.

SOLOMON'S THRONE.

The following account of Solomon's throne purports to have been taken from the Persian manuscript, called "The History of Jerusalem:"

"The sides of it were of pure gold, the feet of emerald, and rubies, intermixed with pearls, each of which were as large as an ostrich's egg. The throne had seven sides, on each side were delineated orchards full of trees, the branches of which were of precious stones, representing fruit, ripe and unripe; on the tops of the trees were to be seen figures of plumage birds, particularly the peacock, the etaub, and karges. All these birds were hollowed within artificially, so as to occasionally utter melodious sounds such as the ear of mortals never heard. On the first step were delineated vine branches, having bunches of grapes, composed of precious stones of various kinds, fashioned in such a manner as to represent the various colors of purple, violet, green and red, so as to render the appearance of real fruit. On the second step, on each side of the throne, were two lions of terrible aspect, large as life, and formed of cast gold.

The nature of this remarkable throne was such that when Solomon placed his foot on the first step, the birds spread their wings and made a fluttering noise in the air. On his reaching the third step, the whole assemblage of demons, and fairies, and men, repeated the praises of the Deity. When he arrived at the fourth step, voices were heard addressing him in the following manner: 'Son of David, be thankful for the blessings that the Almighty has bestowed upon us.' The same was repeated on his reaching the fifth step. On his reaching the sixth, all of the children of Israel joined them; and on his arrival at the seventh, all the birds and animals became in motion, and ceased not until he had placed himself on the royal seat, when the birds, lions, and other animals, by secret springs, discharged a shower of the most precious perfumes on Solomon, after which two of the karges descended and placed the golden crown upon his head.

Before the throne was a column of burnished gold, on the top of which was a golden dove, which held in its bill a volume bound in silver. In this book were written the Psalms of David, and the dove having presented the book to the King, he read aloud a portion of it to the children of Israel. It is further related that on the approach of evil persons to the throne, the lions were wont to set up a terrible roar, and to lash their tails with violence, the birds also, and the demons and genii to utter horrid cries; so, for fear of them, no one dared be guilty of falsehood, but all confessed their crimes. Such was the throne of Solomon, the son of David."—The American Baptist.

HODSDON. Died in Boston, Mass., May 19th, 1868, Charles Henry, eldest son of Eleazer and Susan Hodsdon, aged thirty-five years, one month, and seventeen days.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." The deceased peacefully fell asleep in Jesus as a weary child falls asleep upon its mother's breast. During his severe and painful sickness he was led by the Holy Spirit to see his lost condition by nature, and felt himself sinking into endless despair and ruin. But oh, amazing love! at that desperate moment the Savior smiled upon him. He opened his arms of compassion to receive him, forgave his sins, and bade him hope with joy unutterable beyond the grave. He leaves a bereaved wife and parents, six brothers and three sisters. His last prayer was a blessing pronounced upon us, that we might meet an unbroken circle in the kingdom of God. He was conveyed by his friends to his parental home in Moultonboro, N. H., where his funeral services were attended on the 22d, and words of comfort spoken by Bro. J. G. Smith, from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

How tender is thy hand,
O thou most gracious Lord;
Afflictions come at thy command,
And leave us at thy word.
How gentle was the rod
That chastened us for sin;
How soon we found a gracious God,
Where deep distress had been.
A Father's hand we felt,
A Father's heart we know,
Mid tears of penitence we knelt,
And found his word was true.

JULIA A. HODSDON.

BREWSTER. Died, May 22d, 1868, after a long and painful sickness, which he bore with great patience and resignation, Bro. Joseph F. Brewster, of Williamsburgh, L. I., aged sixty years and nine months.

Our brother has been a humble follower of Christ for about thirty-four years. His conversion to God took place about that time, and after he united himself to the Episcopal Methodist Church, and continued a faithful member until 1842, when he heard the joyful tidings of the coming and kingdom of Christ, which to him was good news. He fully embraced the doctrine of Christ's personal advent, the doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead, and the final destruction of the wicked. He was a firm believer in the doctrine of a future life for the righteous only, by a resurrection at the last day. He died in great peace. His funeral discourse was preached by Bro. George Storrs, Sunday, May 24th, to a large and attentive audience. The precious truths presented made a deep impression on the minds of many.

Our brother was buried in Stonington, Ct. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace."

ELDER WM. ROWORTH.

MANNING. Died at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Timothy Manning, on the 22d May, 1868, Artemus Newton, aged eighty-three years.

Father Newton embraced the gospel hope of the restitution about 1842, and, by a holy life and uncompromising faith, since then has been an honor to the cause, has been a living epistle, a lively stone, yea, a pillar in the Advent Church in Waterloo, C. E., to which he belonged. He did not expect to live again until Christ who is our life shall appear. Then his faith embraced an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom.

By his request, I attended the funeral. The day was most lovely, and the community turned out in almost endless numbers to demonstrate the high respect in which they held the early pioneer of the country, and the aged patriarch of the nineteenth century, who had lived to see the most of a large family converted to God. His aged companion accompanied us, strong in the faith, and giving glory to the Almighty Jesus.

AMES. Died in Rogersville, Steuben Co., N. Y., Feb. 8th, 1868, Sr. Mary Ames, wife of Bro. Wm. Ames, aged forty-four years.

Sr. Ames was converted to the truth as it is in Jesus under the labors of Bro. C. B. Turner. She took a decided stand for the truth; lived in all good conscience towards God; was loved by all who knew her. A few minutes before she died, on being asked if all was well, she replied, in full confidence, "All is well." Bro. J. K. Bellows, of New York City, spoke words of comfort to the mourning ones. C. COGSWELL.

BANCROFT. Died in Waterford, May 11th, 1868, Eben Bancroft, aged eighty years, four months, eleven days.

Bro. Bancroft fell asleep in Jesus with the blest assurance of participating in the first resurrection. His death was occasioned by a rose cancer on the hand. His sufferings were intense, but borne with patience. May the son, the only one living of the family, be ready with the large circle of mourning friends to greet him on the other shore. A discourse was delivered by the writer from Job 14: 14. JARED WHITMAN.

TIBBETTS. Bro. Isaac Tibbetts departed this life at North Whitefield, May 19th, 1868, aged seventy-five years.

Truly a good man has gone down in peace, leaving a christian example behind him. May he rest in peace till Jesus the life-giver comes. Funeral attended by the writer. S. K. PARTRIDGE.

PARTRIDGE. In North Whitefield, May 21st, 1868, C. H. Partridge, son of Eld. S. K. Partridge, aged thirty-one years.

He died in peace, with strong faith in Jesus, leaving a wife, three children, and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

MUNICH, May 26. A treaty for the mutual protection of naturalized citizens, which the American Minister, Mr. Bancroft, has been negotiating with the Bavarian Government, has been signed.

PARIS, May 26. Marshal Niel, in an official report, declares the Chassepot rifle to be the best firearm known. He also states that these guns are now being manufactured in Government arsenals at the rate of 1600 a day, and that all the infantry of the French army are now supplied with them.

BERLIN, May 26. Prussia has taken the initiative in the proposed general disarmament. By command of King William a reduction is to be forthwith made in the Landwehr of Kingdom.

LONDON, May 26. Dispatches have been received from Shanghai which state that the Chinese rebels have laid siege to the important commercial town of Tien-Tsin, on the Peiho river, about seventy miles from Pekin and the port of that capital.

LONDON, May 27. Dispatches from Warsaw report that bands of Polish exiles, said to have been recruited in France, have appeared on the frontier of Gallicia, and are now making riotous demonstrations. It is believed that Languevictz, the leader of the last Polish insurrection, is at the head of these bands.

PARIS, May 28. All the leading journals of this city have editorials on the result of the impeachment of the President of the United States.

The Moniteur says the Radical party has lost ground without gaining the end which it proposed.

The Presse thinks the result is not final, and believes the nation will decide the issue in the coming Presidential election.

L Opinion regrets the vote of seven Republican Senators for acquittal, and attributes their action to the fears that the conviction of the President might precipitate a crisis.

PARIS, May 29. Rio Janeiro dates to the 9th inst. have been received. The latest news from the scene of war which had reached Rio Janeiro was to the effect that a decisive action was about to take place before Humaita.

The latest dispatch from the allied camp states that the bombardment of the Paraguayan stronghold had ceased, and orders were given for a general assault on the works.

DOMESTIC.

Havana, May 25. A dispatch from Minister Holdster at Port au Prince to the American Consul here had been misdirected. Mr. La Reintrie received it only to-day. The Minister demands that in case no American men-of-war be at the disposal of the Consul he shall telegraph to Washington for help.

Havana, May 27. Venezuela dates of the 7th inst. state that President Falcon had disappeared, and Congress was thus compelled to dissolve. Caraccas was besieged by Gen. Buezual, who had declared against the government. Only 1600 troops are in the city, while 4000 rebels had appeared on the hills around Caraccas, and a battle was imminent. Several skirmishes had occurred at other points, and the rebels were evidently gaining great advantages.

Haytien dates of the 13th state that the rebel attack on the capital on the 14th was repulsed. All the citizens have been ordered under arms. Salnave attacked the rebels on the 16th, but was beaten back into the city with a loss of 80 men. The general attack on Port au Prince was renewed on the afternoon of the 17th, but the result was unknown when the mail left. Salnave threatens to burn the capital to the ground if the rebels beat him, but the American Minister is determined to prevent him if possible. The British gunboat Royalist had got ashore at Port au Prince. After her commander had effected the release of the imprisoned foreigners, she steamed to the outer harbor where she got aground.

The U. S. man-of-war De Soto arrived on the 17th, but she was short of provisions and proceeded the next day to Key West, despite of the protestation of the American Minister, who had promised to secure the lives of all Americans and those who had taken refuge in the Legation.

Owing to the Treasury of Matanzas being empty, contractors refused furnishing bread to public institutions for two days, and were arrested. The Captain General is considering the Custom House fines and the American Consul is urging a speedy settlement of all American cases. War vessels are watching for the arrival of an expected slaver.

Washington, May 28. Information has been received here that the Provisional Government of Crete has decided to convoke a regular Parliament. Elections are taking place in all parts of the island. The members elect will hold their first session at Canea, the capital of Crete. Another battle took place near Spakin, on the 3d inst., during which the Cretans drove the Turks from the blockhouse which they had built only recently for their intrenchment.

New York, May 28. A Montreal special says the troops in the garrison here are under orders. The soldiers' wives at St. Johns have been ordered out of the barracks and accommodations for two thousand troops are being prepared. The hospitals are provided with field panniers. Government detectives are watching the frontier.

Washington, May 30. To-day is almost wholly observed as a holiday. All of the Departments are closed, and flags are at half-mast in memory of the dead whose graves are being decorated at Arlington Heights. The ceremony, the first of its kind observed here, is impressive and solemn, while the floral decorations are of the most beautiful and elaborate character, including flowers and evergreens wrought into wreaths, crucifixes, etc. The day is warm and cloudy, and the attendance is very large. Before the close of the afternoon thousands of graves will be strewn with flowers.

VOLCANIC ERUPTION AT HAWAII, SANDWICH ISLANDS.—A letter from Kealakekua, Hawaii, dated April 13, gives a very interesting account of the fearful volcanic eruptions which occurred on the 7th, and subsequent days at the above named place. The valley just west of, and opposite, the Mamalu Pali of Kaluku, was floored over with a pavement of fresh lava, from ten to twenty feet deep, thrown from a crater about ten miles up the mountain, which burst out on the morning of the 7th. This crater and stream had ceased flowing and was rapidly cooling. But at five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, a new crater several miles lower down, burst out with a heavy roar and a fearful crash. The inmates of several houses near by had barely time to escape with what clothes they had on before the houses were surrounded with streams of fiery lava, varying from five to fifty feet deep. Fortunately all the inmates escaped, but the path by which they did so was covered with lava within ten minutes after they had left it. The river of fire flowing from this crater varied from five hundred to fifteen hundred feet in width, with a descent of two thousand feet in five miles, and flowed at the rate of ten or twelve miles an hour. The scene is described as most brilliant, while it was a melancholy one to witness. Several hundred of fine cattle grazing around the farm houses in the vicinity were swept away by the fiery element. The sufferings and alarm experienced by the residents of Kau, during the two weeks that the earthquakes and eruption continued, appear to have been great. Night after night they were compelled to sleep on the mountain ridge back of the village, exposed to the cold and damp winds and rain from the sea, subsisting on taro and fishes when they could get these, or fasting when they could not. The whole district is in ruins, a field of desolation, and probably five hundred thousand dollars would not restore it to what it was a month ago. The number of deaths will be between eighty and one hundred. The exact number may not be known for some time, as some persons are missing whose absence may yet be accounted for.

☞ The Abyssinian expedition has cost the British Government $24, 731,250.

FEMALE COLLIERS.—An unpleasant feature of the English coal mines is the large number of women employed at the pit mouths. The number thus employed in the neighborhood of Wigan alone is five hundred, most of whom are unmarried. They vary in age from twelve to fifty years. They generally wear a peculiar attire, consisting of coarse trousers, resembling those worn by men, fastened by a belt round the waist, a soft bonnet and a shawl. The petticoats are generally tucked into the trousers. Sometimes they may be seen wearing jackets like the men, smoking, drinking and behaving as if completely unsexed. The habitual wearing of this costume tends to destroy all sense of decency amongst them. They naturally belong to a very low class, but in some cases make good wives and mothers. The labor required of them is hard and very dirty, rendering their persons and clothing as black as a coal. They have to assist in removing the tubs of coal from the cages at the mouth of the pit, sometimes assisting to tip the tubs into the coal wagons. The work is severe even for men, yet the women appear accustomed to it, and, as a class, seem healthy and robust. Their average wages is 1s 2d per day.

VISIT OF THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON TO ORLEANS.—The Moniteur of May 11th contains an account of the visit of the Emperor and Empress to Orleans on the previous day. Directly after their arrival the proceeded to the cathedral, where they were received by Mr. Dupanloup, the bishop, at the head of his clergy. They then inspected the Agricultural Exhibition, and distributed the prizes. At the railway station the Mayor of Orleans made a speech to their Majesties, in which, after recalling the past glories of the city, he said that although Orleans was now a place of industry and commerce, loving peace and appreciating its benefits, yet if France, "strong in her right and jealous of her honor," were compelled to draw the sword, the inhabitants of Orleans would be found worthy of their ancestors. In reply, the Emperor said: "I accepted your invitation with pleasure, because I am always happy to find myself again in the midst of a city which, while religiously maintaining such glorious memories and patriotic sentiments, devotes itself with ardor to the struggles of labor and industry. I was desirous to ascertain for myself your progress, and to encourage it, convinced that amid the general tranquility of Europe it may be developed with confidence. I thank you for the sentiments you express toward the Empress, my son, and myself."

At the entrance of the cathedral the Bishop of Orleans addressed their Majesties. He made bold to say, he observed, that in all France, the Emperor had never visited a city more noble, more christian or more French. Twice it had been the last rampart of the country against foreign invasion. Paris, which he named with respect, had allowed her gates to be forced several times by the foreigner—Orleans never. It had not only been the rampart but the heart of France; and the inhabitants of Orleans were still the same amid the confusion of men and things. In Orleans, more, perhaps, than in any other part of the empire, his majesty would feel that France, when her spirit is closely examined, is, and wishes to be, the very christian nation, and that patriotism and faith have always constituted her honor and fortune since Charlemagne. In conclusion, the bishop, addressing the Empress, referred to the maternal joy she must feel at the religious ceremony in which the Prince Imperial had recently taken part.

In reply the Emperor said: "I am much touched by the noble words which you have just addressed to me. It is on this spot that we can dwell with delight upon how much religious faith and true patriotism can effect for the safety and grandeur of a country. In this city was produced one of the most wonderful facts of history, and the river which flows beneath your walls was formerly one of the ramparts of our independence in the same manner as it protected, in less distant times, the heroic remnants of our grand armies. The Empress and myself, in coming to share in the popular festivities of Orleans were desirous first to kneel within that ancient Basilica, and surrounded by the grand remembrances of the past to ask from the Almighty his protection for the future. I thank you, Monseigneur, I thank your clergy, for the prayers you address to Heaven for the Empress, the Prince Imperial, and myself."—Tribune.

PHENOMENON.—A few days ago nearly two acres of land on a farm in Hamilton county, Fla., sank suddenly to the depth of about fifty feet below the surface of the surrounding earth. The immense vacuum thus formed almost instantly filled with water, submerging the tops of the tallest trees. At the last account the land was still sinking, an area of four acres having disappeared. The streams and creeks lose themselves in the surrounding country, which forced an outlet in this way. These sinks occasionally occur, but the present is the largest and deepest ever known.

THE PLANET SATURN.—The rings of this wonderful planet are approaching the period of their greatest aperture, and will be observed with great interest throughout the civilized world. At the equator and in the parallels of forty degrees south the planet will appear to the best advantage. It is in the sign of Scorpio, and about two hours above the southeast horizon at ten o'clock in the evening.

IMMENSE LOSSES OF AN ENGLISH NOBLEMAN.—A cable dispatch received in New York states that the Marquis of Hastings lost one million pounds on the Derby races yesterday, and committed suicide last night, 28th ult.

☞ The late Bishop of Lichfield was once traveling in a railway carriage in England, when a blustering man exclaimed, "I should like to meet that Bishop of Lichfield; I'd put a question to him that would puzzle him." "Very well," said a voice out of another corner, "Now is your time, for I am the Bishop." The man was rather startled, but presently recovered and said: "Well, my Lord, can you tell me the way to heaven?" "Nothing easier," answered the Bishop; "you have only to turn to the right and go straight forward."

Items.

☞ The Post Office carriers in Philadelphia will, after the first of June, have for sale to the public, in amounts less than $1, postage stamps of the various denominations. When parties desire stamps in amounts greater in value than $1, the carrier will receive the order and deliver the stamps upon his next trip.

☞ John S. Hubbard of East Glastenbury, Ct., reports that on Sunday morning, with a noise like thunder, the water in his well under his house burst through the floor, lifting up the wall of heavy stones with which it was built, and rising over twenty-two feet in five minutes, subsiding in about a half hour and leaving in the water on Monday morning a thick yellow scum.

☞ Galveston News of May 15, learns from planters from Fort Bend county that the cotton worm or caterpillar has again made its appearance on many plantations, and is rapidly destroying the young cotton to such an extent that many persons are ploughing up their cotton and planting corn. There are similar reports from Brasoria, Wharton and Polk counties, Texas.

☞ Singing oils the wheels of care and supplies the place of sunshine. A man who sings has a good heart under his shirt front. Such a man not only works more willingly, but he works more constantly.

☞ A young man in England, who called himself the "Star Diver of the world," recently killed himself by a leap of 120 feet into the water.

☞ The bill permitting the British Government to acquire the various telegraph lines has been withdrawn from Parliament.

☞ A few days since one of the towers of a new church at Breslau, 283 feet in height, fell with a tremendous crash, leaving the other tower in such a state that it is doubtful whether it will stand. The church cost £45,000, of which £15,000 was spent upon the towers. No persons were injured.

☞ In New Orleans a few days ago an ice-cart was struck by lightning. The bolt descended on a block of ice, shivering it into a thousand pieces and scattering it in all directions. Singular to state, the driver, mule and vehicle escaped without injury.

☞ Pope Pius is remarkable for many things, but it is not perhaps generally known that he shaves himself, and is an accomplished performer upon the violincello.

☞ The staircase of Niagara Falls, descending to the path leading under Table Rock, tumbled down a few days ago. A number of persons had passed up and down the day previous.

☞ A firm in Aberdeen, Scotland, workers in polished granite, have offered to the Fortieth Congress, in trust for the American people, a handsome red pillar of polished granite, upon which to place a bust of the late President Lincoln.

☞ Professor Loomis of Yale College says 8,000,000 shooting stars shoot through the earth's atmosphere every twenty-four hours. Most of them are very small—480 to the ounce!

☞ It is said that among two million of people by whom Yeddo, in Japan, is inhabited, there is not a beggar in the streets, not a drunkard, not a ruffian.

☞ The first party up Mt. Mansfield, Vermont, a week ago, ascended until they found snow nearly as high as the tops of the trees, and returned.

☞ Speaker Colfax's grandfather was one of the heroes of the revolution. He was the commanding officer of General Washington's life guards through the war.

☞ Chicago has recently completed another immense grain elevator, and now boasts of sixteen, with a total capacity of over nine million bushels.

☞ Don't drop letters into the offices directed with pencil. The Postmaster General has instructed to treat all missives thus addressed as dead letters.

☞ The Italian Garrino says that Napoleon has spies at Washington, as well as in two other American cities and the European capitals, in the persons of "ladies" of the demi-monde, whose fashionable establishments are maintained out of the Emperor's private purse.

☞ A letter from Fort Lyon, Colorado, says that Kit Carson died there on the 23d inst., from the effects of a rupture.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, June 3d, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. LEAVITT.

A Grove Meeting in Charlton.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove or tent-meeting in the south-easterly part of Charlton, Mass., two miles east of Dresser Hill, one half mile from Rams-Horn factory, about five miles from Webster, Oxford, Dudley, and Southbridge; on land owned by Mr. Green, commencing June 16th, at 7½ o'clock, P. M., holding over Sunday. Preaching three times each day. Brethren and sisters in regions round about, let there be a general rally to this meeting. It is the first of the kind in this section. The field being nearly new, come provided for yourselves as far as you can. If any have tents to stop in, it will be well to bring them. Bro. L. Boutell and other preaching brethren are expected there to help preach the word of salvation. We are nearing home. Soon our work will be done. Shall we have it well done? Sinners around us need salvation through Jesus. Shall we make efforts to have them hear? Now is our time to work. Up, then. Let us put shoulder to the wheel. Tell them of a dying, risen Jesus; his willingness to save all that will come unto him, and of his coming again. Let us be urgent in the matter. Dear brethren and sisters, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that the name of God may be glorified. Come one, come all.

GEO. A. STREETER.

Tent Meeting.

We purpose, the Lord willing, to pitch the Maine Mission Tent, for our first meeting, in Greene, Me., on Tuesday, June 9th, to continue as the interest of the meeting may demand. Our friends there are John and Stimson Parker, who will help arrange for the meeting. I shall expect Bro. W. H. Mitchell to be with me to help in preaching the word. J. A. LIBBY.

P. S. Friends desiring tent-meetings will write to me. Address West Poland, Me. J. A. L.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly session of the Advent Christian Conference of this State, will be held in Whitefield, N. H., commencing June 12th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large gathering of the friends of the coming One at this meeting. Bro. Couch and others of the Lord's servants will be present to preach the word. A. W. SIBLEY Secretary.

Maine Western Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held with the church in Biddeford, commencing in their chapel, Wednesday evening, June 17th, and continuing over Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend, and unite in the worship of the Lord and the work of saving souls. Call on Bro. J. C. Libby, who will direct you to places of entertainment. I. C. WELLCOME.

Rutland (Vt.) Conference.

Saturday, June 6th, at half past two P. M., and Sunday the 7th at half past ten A. M., two and half past seven P. M. This will be our last quarterly in Rutland, Vt. Sister churches are invited. A full attendance of the church is desirable.

G. W. STETSON, Pastor.

Conference.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held in the "Free House" at Lincolnville Centre, Maine, commencing Thursday, June 18th, 1868, at 7 P. M. Call upon E. Calderwood, Moses Young, D. Fletcher, and E. Blood.

Per order of Conf. Clerk, F. A. BAKER.

Notice.

Quarterly meeting at Star of Hope Mission, New York city, June 6th. Love-feast at 7 o'clock in the morning. Communion in evening. All are invited.

Also quarterly meeting at Hackensack, Sunday, June 14th. Love-feast in the morning at 5 o'clock; preaching at 10½ o'clock. Baptism at 3. Communion in the evening. From twenty to twenty-five to be baptized. ANNA E. SMITH.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Savoy, Mass., to commence Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see many of the lovers of Jesus and his coming at this meeting. Come, leave your work, brethren, and come to this meeting all ready to work in harmony with Christ. E. OWEN, Secretary.

Notice.

A tent meeting near South Vernon Depot, Vt., is contemplated, commencing Thursday, July 2d, and holding over the following Sabbath, to which all the lovers of Jesus and his appearing are invited. Further particulars next week.

For the brethren, C. W. SARGENT.

Hymn Book.

The Second Advent Hymn Book can be obtained at the following prices, of Mrs. P. A. Smith, No. 4, Frank St., Rochester, N. Y. (by sending the money with the order): Less than one dozen, 25 cts. per copy; postage 3 cts. One dozen, $2.50; postage 36 cts. One hundred, $15.00, sent by express. For sale at this office.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. BOUTELL.

Conference.

There will be a conference at South Livermore, Saturday, June 13th. Brethren are invited. Also over the Sabbath, June 14th, at the same place.

JESSE GAY.

Conference.

The New York State Conference is expected to be held in Rochester about the middle of June. Particulars hereafter. H. PRATT.

Missouri Campmeeting.

All persons coming from abroad to the Missouri campmeeting, which commences Tuesday, June 9th, holding over the Sabbath following, will come directly to Advent Christian Hall, 1136, south east corner of Fifth and Biddle Streets, St. Louis, Mo. The horse cars, which pass the hall every five minutes, will carry us for five cents to within three-fourths of a mile of the camp-ground, which is in a beautiful cotton wood grove, situated on the bank of the Mississippi river, north from the city, instead of the west part, as first proposed. Bro. Clark will be present with his large tent.

Our churches are dwelling together in unity and love, and it is our only hope of success, as it secures to us the favor of God. We therefore cordially invite all who labor in word and doctrine, whose aim is the glory of God, and are not seeking to divide the little flock of God with questions to no profit, to come and help us.

Our people here are in earnest to do all in their power to have the meeting a success. The chief of the city police promises us all the aid, day and night, that we need. We do sincerely hope and trust that brethren in this section of the country will come over and help us. Brethren, pray for us, that we may have above all other things the favor and blessing of God.

In behalf of the Committee,
H. K. FLAGG,
COMMODORE DECATUR.

Tent and Campmeeting.

There is to be a tent and campmeeting, to commence June 8th, 1868, and continue one week, to be held in the timber between the branches of the Maquoketa, nine miles from Maquoketa City, eight miles from Canton, twenty miles south-east of Cascade, twenty-four miles from Bellevue (on the Mississippi river), in Jackson Co., Iowa. Eld. Miles Grant is to be there to preach the word. We cordially invite all who are interested in saving souls from death, preachers and lay members, to come and help us. This is a new field. We need help. All bring tents and provision that can. Leave your hobbies behind. Come in the Spirit of Christ. Provision will be made for horse-keeping and board for those that cannot board themselves. We expect Bro. D. S. Clark, from Illinois, to be there with the large tent for our meeting-house.

In behalf of the Committee,
MOSES CHANDLER.

Minnesota Annual Conference.

The sixth annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Minnesota will commence on Thursday evening, June 25th, 1868, in Burr Oak, six miles east of Elliota. The members of the conference are all especially requested to be present, or report themselves by letter. The churches within the bounds of the conference are respectfully requested to send delegates.

N. B. All persons wishing to connect themselves with the conference, will please remember that according to the constitution adopted last year, such candidates must be previously recommended by the quarterly conference, or church to which they may belong. THOMAS R. ALLEN.

Conference.

A conference of brethren believing in the personal coming of Jesus Christ nigh at hand, in Mecosta, Isabella and adjoining counties, will convene at Millbrook, Mich., on Thursday evening before the first Sunday in June, to hold over Sunday. The object of this conference will be to unite the means of the scattered brethren, and employ an evangelist to proclaim the coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in this northern field. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers and people. We expect some preachers from other parts of the State. Millbrook is situated on the county line, between Mecosta and Isabella counties, and forty-five miles north of Ionia station, on the Detroit and Milwaukie Railroad. Provisions for the entertainment of all will be made.

JOHN BOWER,
PETER S. DECKER,
LEVI W. KING,
RICHARD S. DECKER, } Committee.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us. WM. SHELDON.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, we will attend a meeting on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, June 7th, 1868.

C. GOODRICH.
D. CHURCHILL.
J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of days in Carthage, Maine, to commence June 10th, at 7 P. M., and hold over the following Sunday. Bro. Rufus Wendell, of Salem, Mass., is expected with us to preach the word. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord.

For the brethren, J. C. WHEELER.

The Maine Tract Fund.

WM. H. MITCHELL,
R. R. YORK,
S. K. PARTRIDGE, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,

No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

ANNA E. SMITH, Superintendent and Manager.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

To the Preaching Brethren.

The brethren in West Haven, Ct., have hired a Hall for the purpose of holding meetings, and would be glad to have the preaching brethren visit them. But, to save confusion, before sending their appointments, they are requested to consult M. J. Brooks, Cor. Sec.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. WENDELL.

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

THE FULLNESS OF JESUS.

I lay my sins on Jesus,
The spotless Lamb of God;
He bears them all, and frees us
From the accursed load;
I bring my guilt to Jesus,
To wash my crimson stains
White in his blood most precious,
Till not a spot remains.

I lay my wants on Jesus;
All fulness dwells in him;
He healeth my diseases,
He doth my soul redeem.
I lay my griefs on Jesus,
My burdens and my cares;
He from them all releases,
He all my sorrows shares.

I rest my soul on Jesus,
This weary soul of mine;
His right hand me embraces,
I on his breast recline.
I love the name of Jesus,
Immanuel, Christ my God;
Like fragrance on the breezes,
His name is spread abroad.

I long to be like Jesus—
Meek, loving, lowly, mild;
I long to be like Jesus—
The Father's holy child.
I long to be with Jesus,
Amid the heavenly throng,
To sing with saints his praises,
To learn the angels' song.

For the World's Crisis.

FIRE! FIRE!

It has been the opinion of many, even away back in heathen antiquity, that the present world would be consumed by fire. Plato admitted a general conflagration. The stoics made it part of their philosophy, as also many other schools of heathen philosophers among the Greeks and Romans. Many of the Eastern nations, the Egyptians, the Persians and the Phœnicians, taught it. The Celts, Scythians, Chaldeans, the Indian philosophers, also, and the ancient Druids. Many authors of antiquity taught it. It was a common opinion among the Stoics that the moisture of the earth being consumed, the whole world would catch fire.

Gibbon, the infidel historian, (Decline and Fall, chapt. 15), says the Christian faith coincides with the tradition of the East, the philosophy of the Stoics, and the analogy of nature; and even the country from which religious motives had been chosen for the origin and principle scene of the conflagration, was the best adapted for that purpose by natural and physical causes; by its deep caverns, beds of sulphur, and numerous volcanoes, Etna, Vesuvius, etc. The calmest and most intrepid skeptic could not refuse to acknowledge that the destruction of the present system of the world by fire was in itself extremely probable.

Dr. Hitchcock, of Amherst College, remarks in his Lecture on the New Earth:

"Some author has remarked that, from the earliest times, there has been a loud cry of fire. We have seen that it began with the Egyptians, and was continued by the Greeks. But in recent times it waxed louder and louder, arnd far more distinct. The ancient notions about the existence of fire within the earth were almost entirely conjectural; but within the present century the matter has been put to the test of experiment. Wherever, in Europe and America, the temperature of the air, the waters, and the rocks in deep excavations has been ascertained, it has been found higher than the mean temperature of the climate at the surface; and the experiment has been made in hundreds of places. It is found, too, that the heat increases rapidly as we descend below that point in the earth's crust to which the sun's heat extends. The mean rate of heat has been stated by the British Association to be one degree of Fahrenheit for forty-five feet. At this rate all known rocks would be melted at a depth of about sixty miles. Shall we hence conclude that all the matter of the globe below this thickness, (or rather for the sake of round numbers, below one hundred miles), is actually in a melted state? Most geologists have not seen how such a conclusion could be avoided. And yet this would leave only about one-eighth hundredth part of the earth's diameter, and about one-fourteenth of its contents, or bulk in a solid state. How easy, then, should God give permission, for this vast internal fiery ocean to break through its envelope, and so to bury the solid crust, that it shall all be burned up and melted! It is conceivable that such a result might take place, even by natural operations. And certainly it would be easy for a special divine agency to accomplish it."

"Dr. Boynton, an eminent geologist, remarked in my hearing, in one of a course of lectures a few years since, in effect, that the world was a vast bed of fire internally, and all matter was in a melted state, and that the shell of an egg was thicker in proportion to its size than is the crust of the earth compared to its bulk.

"Pliny the elder, the celebrated Roman Naturalist, born A. D. 23, in contemplating the abundant existence of fire, so devouring an element, in the earth, air, and all terrestial universe, both in a latent and active state, made the following startling remark: 'It exceeds all miricles, in my opinion, that one day should pass without setting the world all on fire!'"—Voice of the Church.

In a number of the North British Review, is the following extract on Ignorance of great Physical Truths:

"How few men really believe that they sojourn on a whirling globe, and that each day and year of life is measured by its revolutions, the labor and repose of every race of beings. How few believe that the great luminary of the firmament, whose restless activity they daily witness, in an immovable star, controlling by its solid mass the primary planets which compose our system, and forming the gnomon of the great dial which measures the thread of life, the tenure of empires, and the great cycle of the world's change. How few believe that each of the millions of stars—those atoms of light which the telescope can scarcely descry—are the centres of planetary systems that may equal, if not surpass our own? And how very few believe that the solid pavement of the globe upon which they nightly slumber, is an elastic crust, imprisoning fires that have often burst forth in tremendous energy, and are at this very instant struggling to escape, now finding their way in volcanic fires, now heaving and shaking the earth, now upraising islands and continents, and gathering strength for that final outburst which is to usher in the new heavens and the new earth,—wherein dwelleth righteousness. Were these great physical truths objects of faith, as well as deductions of reason, we should lead a better life than we do, and make a quicker preparation for its close."

A few years ago, a star that required a telescope to discern it, suddenly increased in brilliancy to such a degree as to be visible to the naked eye, and so continued for a short space of time, finally growing fainter and dimmer, until it again required the telescope to discern it, and at last disappearing altogether from view. Astronomers who witnessed the scene agreed generally that it was "a star on fire," which burned until it was entirely consumed.

Now if one star could burn up, why could not this, our world, only a star in the universe, burn? Beneath the earth's surface science proves that heat increases rapidly as we descend. Below lie vast beds of combustible matter—sulphur, bitumen, petroleum, etc. And if, as geologists generally admit, the interior of the earth is a vast body of fiery matter, how easy it would be to burn up all these different substances that lie in the bowels of the earth, and thence speedily burst through the fragile crust separating us now from what lies below, enveloping all on land and ocean in one overwhelming, universal, smothering, stifling shroud of everlasting destruction of devouring flames!

Even now, sometimes, "men's hearts fail them for fear," but they dare not confess it; they strive to make themselves believe they are not afraid, very much as the boy passing through a church-yard whistled to try and convince himself he was not frightened. Read the following half fearful-of-what-may-come article. I clip from one of the public prints:

"The recent signs and wonders in the heavens above and in the earth beneath—the flashing meteors, the destructive tornadoes, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, which we have chronicled of late, are setting people to inquiring what they mean. In olden times such signs and wonders were tremblingly witnessed as the forerunners of some terrible calamity, or the demonstrations of the Almighty's wrath. They were supposed to portend dire disasters to man to punish him for his wickedness, and thus they may have had a good effect, by causing people to repent of their evil deeds, and live better lives. But in these days of science natural phenomena of all sorts are not looked upon in that light. They may, indeed, be witnessed with awe, as illustrations of the wild forces of nature, but they convey no threats to those who intelligently contemplate them. Nevertheless, it is well enough to remember that the earth on which we live is a very uncertain ball, that there may be weak spots in the crust of which we know nothing, and influences in the immensity of space which man has never measured."

The Ogdensburg (N. Y). Journal says of the earthquake which was felt in and around that vicinity on Dec. 18th, 1867, (and which also shook St. Thomas so terribly:)

"The more we hear of the impressions produced upon the minds of the people by the visitation of Wednesday morning, the more we appreciate its awful grandeur. Very many fervently pious people supposed that the judgment day had actually arrived, and remained in a state of almost suspended animation for several seconds, expecting to hear the last trumpet sound. In the third ward a dancing party suddenly broke up and departed for home and places to pray. A knot of gamblers in the lower part of the village dropped their cards, looked each other in the face, and skedaddled for refuge. Very few, in looking over the records of their deeds and misdeeds, which always pass so rapidly in moments of such fearful suspense, were satisfied with the balance sheet."

And if an earthquake's shock strikes such awful terror to the hearts of men, what tremenduous crushing weights of agony and despair will paralyze them, when "the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunken man!" They may then be glad to rush for places to pray; but no place is left as a shelter in the storm of vengeance bursting in all the pent-up fury of ages of mockery and sin. Yes, they will pray for "rocks and mountains to fall on them, and hide them;" but there is no "Rock in the weary land" for them any more!

In the old world, "that then was," men were wicked, and God purposed to destroy them by water. He warned them by Noah of the coming flood; but they believed not, and mocked on. There never having been a flood, they would not believe there would ever be one. But it came, and they saw and believed, but too late. God says he will destroy this "world that now is," by fire. Men are warned of it in his word. But they won't believe it, and scoff and mock on worse and worse. The world never having been burned, they defiantly assert it never will. But God says he will do it. It will be done, and you will see and believe it; and if you are not "caught up," you will "burn up" with all the stubble and chaff. There is no dodging the issue.

Sodom and Gomorrah were once pleasant to gaze upon, and the sun shone as brightly there as here; the flowers bloomed, the fruits ripened, and men lived there as you now do here. But their cup of indignation became full, as yours is filling, and it at last overflowed. God said he would destroy the city. They were warned of it, but the warning voice "seemed like one that mocked." How could "fire and brimstone" rain down and consume their cities? Such a thing never happened! And so they mocked on still worse, while the stars perchance beamed faintly and sadly over the doomed lwellers of the plain. And the next sunbeams of morning peered faintly through the murky cloud ascending from their burning cities, whilst the lightnings of Jehovah flashed through sulphurous smoke, and peals of deafening thunder rolled over the angry sky! They believed then the sad warnings of that poor old man who the night before urged them with tears to fly for a shelter. But they believed too late. They might have escaped in time, but they would not. And so old men and matrons, young men and maidens, all perish together in one vast funeral pyre, with the curses of despair and pleadings for mercy alike unnoticed upon their lips!

Think of these things. They are worthy attention. "As it was in the days of Sodom and Gomorrah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man. The elements being on fire shall melt with fervent heat, the earth, also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up."

Heed, oh! heed the warnings you hear from day to day of "those things that are coming upon the earth." For the time will come when you will believe what you have heard; but don't delay until it is too late.

It is a chemical fact, I think, that by separating the gases composing the air we breathe (which extends about forty-five miles above the earth's surface), instantaneous combustion would take place. It is a fact that by separating the elements of water, a gas can be made that burns as freely as that we light our cities with. I have seen it done. If mortal man can do this, cannot the Almighty do it? Who dares say he cannot, or will not? And if he does, what will become of you?

Herculaneum and Pompeii once existed as thriving cities. But their deeds of iniquity became too great for God's justice to suffer longer to go unpunished. And in the mighty volcano lay hidden his wrath, which descended upon them, sinking them to destruction beneath a rolling billow of red hot lava, and clouds of sulphurous ashes from mortal eye.

Now, after centuries have flown on their ceaseless wings, man is exhuming these ruins. Deep buried under ground—on which other cities have since been built, whole streets have been found. Within these dwellings, household implements are discovered. There is seen the gay votary of fashion, whose hand clasped the jewels that oft bedecked her once brazen brow. There is seen the maiden with features all distorted by agony of pain and fear, her face half concealed by a handkerchief, as she tries to hide from the coming danger upon her mother's bosom, who shew, in the almost petrified substance remaining, the look of hopeless despair. Here, too, is the grasping old miser, clutching, with the dying grasp of aveaice, his box of silver and gold, as if it were his only hope of safety, and all the God he knew. And here is the mechanic engaged at his daily avocation in his shop. There, at the city's gate, stands the sentry encased in Roman armor with his weapons grasped firmly in his hands—the same man who stood there, the same hands that wielded the sword and spear in defense of his country nearly a thousand years ago.

But this power that destroyed his city was beyond the ability of even Roman arms to stay; and on rushed the besom of destruction, overwhelming hamlet and palace, beggar and millionaire; infants of days, and old men of hoary years; scenes of pleasure, and haunts of vice of such blackness that are not often mentioned, seldom described, and scarcely exposed to travelers now visiting those subterranean places, so hideously vile, and shockingly appalling are the decorations and apartments of the rooms. Ah! no wonder God's forbearance had ceased! No wonder the storm of volcanic ashes descended fast and deep upon them, while rivers of fire rolled over land!

O! what shrieks of agony must have arisen amid doomed multitudes as they saw the coming destruction. But it was all of no avail. Probation had ended with them, and so it will with all. Then fly for refuge to the place of safety; have your life insured in the company based on the promise of eternal life, to be given by Him who paid the price of it,—even He who hath bought us and redeemed us by his own precious blood, whose pitying eye and loving arms now welcome all to come.

The earth is growing old. It trembles with age. It is passing away. The time must come when the "last day" will dawn, and the last sun arise upon us in mortal life; and the day of wonders will be ushered in; "and who shall be able to stand?" The day for preparation will be passed forever away then! The hope of "some other time" will never present itself again then! "Tomorrow!" ah! tomorrw, never will dawn upon many—oh, how many!—then. Regrets will be in vain! Tears of no avail! Pleadings for mercy will be unnoticed! Imagine it, if you can!

Here we part with our loved ones for a time, but hoping to greet them again; and it gives us sorrow for even this. But there the parting will be final! The most tender ties of love and friendship will be severed forever, then. "One shall be taken and the other left." Mother, father, your little ones, will be taken, and you may be left! Child, your pious father and mother will be taken, and you be left! Brother, your sister may be taken, and you left. Sister, your brother may be taken, and you left. Husband, your devoted wife may be taken, and you left. Wife, your praying, faithful husband may be taken, and you left. Young friends, those whom you love may be taken, and you left. And left to what? Death! eternal death! No faintly glimmering star of hope will light you then. No cheering ray of sunny peace will ever more shine on your pathway then. No promise of a future life will ever more be offered you! And a long, long wail of agony will roll over this sad earth, till all that can die will be dead.

"Oh! there will be mourning,
Mourning! mourning! mourning!
Oh! there will be mourning
At the judgment seat of Christ.
Parents and children there will part,
Brothers and sisters there will part,
Wives and husbands there will part,
Will part to meet no more!"

Shall we be parted then? How can you bear the thought? And, oh! how could you bear the reality? Shall we be parted there?

NOT APPRECIATED.

That was a wise utterance of Dr. Deems, that this shrewd old world with which we have to deal knows the price of things too well to let anything of worth, in the way of talent, escape its notice.

"Your congregation is a greater help to you than mine is to me," said one clergyman to another; "they give you their attention while you preach."

"Yes, yes," was the answer, "people are always attentive when they have anything to attend to." When once a man falls into the habit of prating about his mistreatment, and begins to labor under the conviction that he is not appreciated, and to play the role of a martyr on small capital, the conclusion is safe that he is of light draught in the world's great scale, wherein all things must be weighed.

Some men debar themselves from success because they are too impatient of time, and cannot bear to wait the development of things. Isaiah says that he who believeth shall not make haste. Solomon is somewhat rougher about the matter, and says, "Seest thou a man hasty in his words? there is more hope of a fool than of him."

Others defeat their own cause by a kind of continual churlishness, and then wonder why men do not take a greater interest in them. If a man persists in acting the part of a porcupine, let him not marvel if he is treated as such. On the other hand, he who, with faith in his Maker and his fellow-men, is content to do what he can, will find a ready market for his richest productions. Gustavus Vassa, of Sweden, came forth from his concealment among the miners of Dalecarlia, and overthrew, in the strength of severe virtue, the oppression of the Dane. It was a while lashed to the oars like a convict, on the rivers of France, that the imperious John Knox blew his "Blast of the First Trumpet," which startled the people as if from a sleep.

From the wilderness came John the Baptist, who with a strange power denounced vice in the face of transgressors, and emptied the city of its busy throng to listen to his preaching by the river Jordan. Paul being called, retired three years, no one knows whither, and then returned to shatter the theology and customs of Judea, Greece, and Rome.

Trusting in the truth which they had in commission, these men sought no backing, nor waited to wonder whether they would have a hearing, but braving life's hated extremities, stood forth in their own defenseless humanity.

Burns may compose his songs while digging in the field, and sing them following his plow; but noblemen will bind them in gold and give them a place in their palaces, while generations to come will sing them with joy, and immortalize the author. Bunyan, despising accommodations and conveniences, dares to deal with nature in simplicity and independence. He is denied the light of heaven, and must write in a cell. But after him comes an innumerable host of christians, who will weep and take courage at the recital of his simple story of Pilgrim's Progress.

No one need fear that his talent, if he have any, will not be appreciated. If the metal be really in the man; if true nobility be in his heart, and royalty stamped in his nature, live or die, but sooner or later the world must do him reverence, and men bow before him, just as surely as did the sheaves of Joseph's brethren to his, as seen in the dream.—Religious Telescope.

SEPTUAGINT VERSIONS.

"And who has seen the spirit of the sons of man, whether it goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast, whether it goeth downward to the earth?" Eccl. 3: 21.

"For there is hope of a tree even if it be cut down, that it shall blossom again, and its branch shall not fail. For though its root shall grow old in the earth, and its stem die in the rock, it will blossom from the scent of water, and will produce a crop as one newly planted. But a man that has died is utterly gone, and where a mortal has fallen he is no more. For the sea wastes in length of time, and a river fails and is dried up. And a man that has lain down in death shall certainly not rise again, til the heaven be dissolved, and they shall not awake from their sleep."

"For O, that thou hadst kept me in the grave, and hadst hidden me until thy wrath should cease, and thou shouldest set me a time in which thou wouldest remember me."

"For if a man should die, shall he live again having accomplished the days of his life? I will wait till I exist again. Thou shalt call, and I will hearken to thee, but do not thou reject the work of thine hands." Job. 14: 7, 15.

"And Job died an old man and full of days, and it is written that he shall rise again, with those whom the Lord raises up." Job 42: 17.

I submit the above for the benefit of those who like to see the different versions of Holy Writ. I. C. WELLCOME.

LETTTER FROM SR. S. A. INGHAM.

BRN. GRANT AND ADAMS:—I received your letter, thirteen days after date, with $30 enclosed, and can only say I thank you with my whole heart for the interest you have manifested for my welfare. May our gracious Father bless the givers with the hundred-fold here, and in the world to come the life everlasting. It came very unexpectedly, and when Bro. Bowlby told me that there was a part of a letter of mine in the "Crisis" (for we did not get that number here until last week), I was still more surprised, though it has been remarked that I wrote it to some one at the office to enlist their sympathies. (Can I make them believe differently?)

After campmeeting I went to Bro. P.'s and stopped two weeks or more, to rest and regain my health, as I was quite sick; and after we came home I wrote to them. They replied, and wished to know particularly how Bro. I. was, and in their letter stated to me how they had been getting along since Bro. P. went back from N. S., having been here on a visit (his native place). His letter to me is mislaid, but as near as I can recollect, he said he had not done a day's work since he got home, as times were so dull then, and they only had their three women boarders, and were some dollars behindhand; but said he did not fret, for he expected to have work soon; and so forth. I thought then how I would like to send Sr. P. a token of remembrance in the letter, for her kindness to me and mine. So I wrote how I was getting along, but I was not in a destitute condition, for I had some money in the house; and I designed to say, no means to spare to pay postage. (You know it is ten cents on every letter.)

I needed some groceries about that time, but I could not bear to take the money to get them with, for I really thought I would not get any more, unless I sold the machine, for money down here was very scarce; so I kept asking the Lord what I had best do about it, and kept pinching along for several days. One bright morning a friend called and gave me $5.00. (This was after the letter went.) I knelt down and thanked the Lord. I then thought I would never distrust him again.

Then about the distance around the South Shore. Instead of 700 miles it was three. He went seven hundred with Bro. Fitch previous to that. In my trouble, and writing in a hurry, I might have got Bro. Fitch's and Bro. W.'s names blended. My motive in writing as I did was not to get aid, as people surmise; we were two of the poor ones writing to each other.

I thank Bro. P. for his interest in our affliction. I had a colt my father gave me, which I sold just after we got home, and got $21 down. I gave $5 of it away the same day I received it, and about the time husband was taken sick he had a debt due him of $50, that Capt. P. paid, and gave him $5.00 as a present.

It was said we had three months' provision in the house. We had a barrel of flour, and a half barrel of oat meal, and some things that would not last a week. (You know it takes something to keep up a house, with ever so much prudence.) So I used my means along to live, and began to get short, and the future looked very dark sometimes; but I prayed to the Lord to open the way. I believed he could take care of us as well as of the big families of the "Dorcas Mission" and "Star of Hope Mission," and the Southern ones too; but I felt my unworthiness so sensibly that I went to him in fearfulness and trembling, as a child to a parent when he is afraid he will not get what he asks for.

Oh! I would like to get out where I could exercise living, active faith in God. It seems to me if I could, that husband would get well. He goes out every day now, but has no appetite, and he raises like those who are in a decline. He is no trouble at all, but will talk but little; says he does not like himself at all, but does not hate any one." I see he is failing, but it may be because he eats so little; but if his work is done, and he must sleep in the ground a little while, my dear brethren, will you pray with me that the sunset of his life may be tinged with the unfading glory of immortality? Oh! if he should die in that desponding state, and not give me one look of affection, one word of comfort, I am afraid I could not bear it. * * * *

I received your last letter with $10 enclosed, with Bro. Mansfield's, and one from Brn. Wm. Ingmire and Corker of New York, $1 each. In haste, and with much regard, I am your friend and sister, S. A. INGHAM.

HAND WRITING OF GOD.

Reader, we wish to call your attention to the truly valuable work, which well merits the high encomiums so liberally bestowed upon it by the clergy and press. It is a portly volume of travels, over seven hundred pages, written by Rev. D. A. Randall, and profusely illustrated with maps, diagrams, and views of various places, by the accomplished artist, Mr. C. L Rawson.

"There is much yet to be learned from the new disclosures that are being constantly made in these ancient and sacred localities. . . . . Over these memorials of the past, the desolations of war have rolled; the foot of the ruthless barbarian has trampled upon them; the elements of nature have combined for their destruction, and yet, during the long lapse of ages, the eye of an Omniscient God has watched over them, and his almighty arm has preserved them, till, in his own appointed time, he draws aside the veil, and now the valley of the Nile uncovers its hieroglyphics to confirm and illustrate the sacred page; and Nineveh, out of the wreck and rubbish of three thousand years, yields up its ruins to corroborate and glorify the Hebrew Oracles' testimony of that other record—the word of the eternal Jehovah."

To the Bible student, this work is particularly valuable. The descriptions of the Sinaitic inscriptions, the planetary configurations on Egyptian monuments, and the discovery of the Samaritan Pentateuchal manuscripts, purporting to have been "written by Abishrea, the son of Phineas, son of Eliezar, son of Aaron," are of thrilling interest.

This work is sold only by authorized agents. Having obtained the agency, we will send the work postpaid on reception of the stipulated price, which is as follows: Cloth extra, bevelled boards, $3.50. Philadelphia Library style, $4.00. Cloth extra, fine gilt, $4.50.

It is only from us this work can be obtained postpaid for the above price. This deducts 50 cts. from our per centage, but we are willing to aid in its circulation for a trifling sum above its cost to us. We believe every one who purchases will be well satisfied with the investment. M. D. WELLCOME.

Yarmouth, Me.

Thirteen reasons why everybody should possess a copy of the handwriting of God.

1. For being the latest work on Egypt and the Holy Land published, it contains complete accounts of the recent remarkable discoveries by which Bible Chronology is fully established, and the theories of Manetho and other writers completely overthrown.

2. For its thrilling incidents of travel, biographical sketches, and historical information; portraying the past and present condition of these Bible Lands, as well as the manners and customs of their inhabitants, with the telling touches of a master-hand.

3. For its singular tracings, through the records of past ages, the wonderful dealings of Divine Providence in those countries that have been the scenes of the most stupendous events that have transpired in the history of the human race.

4, For it unfolds, in the clearest light imaginable, the testimony of the lands of the Bible to the truth of that sacred volume on which our Holy Religion is founded.

5. For it connects, in a most interesting way, the scenes and places visited with the most striking and instructive historic events with which they are identified, and draws such illustrations of Sacred Scriptures as tend to bring out more clearly the meaning of the inspired writers, and imperiously enforces those important moral lessons which their past history and present condition are fitted and designed to suggest.

6. For it deciphers for us the record which has been preserved in the sculptured tablets of nations now extinct, and lifts the veil from the crumbling piles and moss-grown mounds of riuned cities.

7. For it uncovers the hieroglyphics of the Nile, to confirm and illustrate the sacred text, and causes the wreck and rubbish of Nineveh to yield of its ruins in corroboration and glorification of the Hebrew Oracles.

8. For its plain and simple narrative so seizes on the heart and captivates the mind, the reader is at once made the companion of the author; is even at his side, and participates in his emotions—wanders with him at the base of Cheops, and weeps with him at Gethsemane.

9. For it is a valuable book of reference to the minister of the gospel, a great aid to the Biblical student, and an interesting and useful book in the family circle.

10. For it is written in a style of unusual brilliancy and richness, which must make it extensively popular with all classes of readers.

11. For when read it is not thenceforth good for nothing, but remains like an historical painting, for ever eloquent in reminiscence and suggestion.

12. For it removes difficulties, refutes scepticism, and confirms faith in the word of God.

13. For its pathetic and fervent religious spirit so ingeniously insinuates itself into the hearts of its readers that many, by the grace of God, are constrained to submit to the blessed Redeemer.

A GOOD PRICE FOR PREACHING.

The Rev. Henry Davies began his labors in Pembrokeshire, but was soon dismissed from his station on account of his faithfulness; afterward he frequently preached in the open air. An anecdote is related of him, that as he was walking early one Sabbath morning to a place where he was going to preach, he was overtaken by a clergyman on horseback, who complained that he could never get above half a guinea for a discourse.

"Oh, sir," said Mr. Davies, "I preach for a crown."

"Do you?" replied the stranger; "then you are a disgrace to the cloth."

To this rude observation he meekly replied, "Perhaps I shall be held in greater disgrace in your estimation, when I inform you that I am going nine miles to preach, and I have but sevenpence in my pocket to bear my expenses out and in, and do not expect to bring home the poor pittance that I am now in possession of; but I look forward to that crown of glory which my Lord and Savior will bestow on me, when he appears before an assembled world."

GOOD ADVICE.—Stop grumbling. Get up two hours earlier in the morning, and begin to do something out of your regular profession. Mind your own business, and with all your might let other people's alone. Live within your means. Sell your horses. Give away or sell your dog. Smoke your cigar through an air stove. Eat with moderation, and go to bed early. Talk less of your own peculiar gifts, and virtues, and more of those of your friends and neighbors. Be cheerful. Fulfil your promises. Pay your debts. Be yourself all you would see in others. Be a good man, and stop grumbling.

THE MINISTER'S HINT.

A curious story is told of an eccentric old minister who was sorely annoyed by a habit his people had acquired (and which prevails, by the way, in all other churches, even now and hereabouts, to some extent) of twisting their necks round every time anybody entered the door and passed up the aisle of the church, to see what manner of person it might be. Wearied with the annoyance, the old man exclaimed one Sunday:

"Brethren, if you will only cease turning your heads round whenever the door opens, and you will keep your attention on me, I will promise to tell you, as I preach, who it is that comes in."

Accordingly he went on with the services, and presently made a stop as one of the deacons entered, saying: "That is the Deacon——, who keeps the grocery opposite."

He announced in turn the advent of each individual, proceeding the while with his sermon as composedly as the circumstances would admit, when at last a stranger came in and he cried out; "A little old man in green spectacles and a drab over-coat—don't know him—you can all look for yourselves."

It is hardly necessary to add that the good man carried his point, and there was but little neck-twisting in his congregation after that day.—Ex.

FRETTING.—This is a petty fault, but one which has much influence upon character and happiness. There have been men of strong and cultivated intellects, whose minds have been sadly weakened, and their acquirements made utterly useless by their subjection to this miserable habit. We have seen christians, also, otherwise highly furnished for extensive usefulness, whose influence has been completely nullified by it; while on the other hand, the power of the religion of Christ has never been more distinctly or healthfully manifested than by its rescue of many from its domination, and their return to a cheerful submission. In the serenity of his declining years, John Wesley was enabled to say, "I feel, I grieve, but by the grace of God, I fret at nothing." His words are to us a sure sign, both of the ripe wisdom of age, and of the thoroughness of the work of grace in his heart.

TO CURE A WEN.

Some years ago I was troubled with a wen on one side of my neck. It grew larger for four or five years, till it was the size of a hen's egg, and it pained me so much I could rest but little day or night. Finally, I was advised to go, as soon as I heard of a death of a person, and take one hand, while it is warm, and rub the hand on the wen four or five times. A few weeks after that, I heard of the death of a person, and took the opportunity to go as soon as I could, and told the inmates of the house what I came for. I followed the prescription above, and in the course of that year the wen disappeared, and has not troubled me since. This I testify as the truth. ENOCH WOODRUFF.

GLUTTONY, OR EATING TO EXCESS.

Gluttony is also almost universally practiced by eating too often; and under this head we would first notice eating between meals. This habit is generally acquired in infancy, under the influence and through the sympathy of parents, who, when they see their little ones suffering, or out of humor, will try to pacify them by giving them something to eat. Such, perhaps, are not aware of the many evils consequent upon this pernicious course. In trying to obviate small difficulties, they create some that are far worse in their nature, and which will cause them more trouble in the end.

First, they create in their children unnatural appetites, the demands of which will increase and grow stronger, and whereby they, as well as their offspring, are made slaves to lust.

Again, when children are thus humored, their appetites take the lead, and all the happiness they see is that derived from the gratification of their animal nature. Their moral and spiritual natures are neglected and become weakened, so that they cannot discern spiritual things. They cannot be made to appreciate divine things, or respect and obey God or their superiors. Being shut up to themselves, the selfish and animal in them rules supreme, and it is impossible for them, so continuing, to bow to authority. They see no greater authority than that which they possess. Hence they make it a light thing to disobey their parents and other superiors, to be profane, independent and daring in their language and actions, to be unthankful, unholy, and without natural affection, to let their passions take the lead, causing them to practice licentiousness, and to form premature and unwise attachments with those of the opposite sex, only to bring more trouble and misery into the world. And thus children often bring their parents and guardians to sorrow and shame.

Dear reader, permit me to here express it as my strong conviction, that we have before us the root of the matter, one of the great causes of the lawlessness and lack of reverence in most of the children and youth of this age. Look where you will, and you will see that these evils prevail to an alarming extent. Times have greatly changed for the worse We do not see that regard for law and authority in children that used to exist. Many good parents may wonder why it is so difficult for them to bring up their children. Let me repeat, we have before us one great cause of this state of things, which cannot be improved, unless the axe is laid at the root of the tree. Can pious parents take hold of this work in earnest? Can they deny their little ones that which they know will hurt them? or will they be so weak and foolish as to let their sympathy govern them instead of reason? Can they not see the tremendous bearing this subject has on the present and future happiness of their children, and on their own happiness? Can they bear the thought of seeing their offspring grow up selfish, stubborn, licentious, and without natural affection? It is very apparent that there is not that natural affection in children and in society generally that characterized past generations, and so sweetly united parents and children, and made home so pleasant and attractive; that consolidated society, and brought neighbors and fellow citizens in such sweet and strong relations to each other. How easily is union broken in families and neighborhoods. It takes but a trifle to rend family ties asunder, to bring division and trouble into neighborhoods, towns, states and nations; and selfishness is at the foundation of these evils; and a great promoter of selfishness is gluttony, which is generally established by bad habits acquired in infancy.

But parents are often in error in their habits of eating, and need to reform themselves before they can effect a change in their children. It is a true saying, that what children see their parents do, they will exhibit themselves in their lives; that as face answers to face in water, so the conduct of children generally answers to that of their parents. True, there are exceptions; but this is the general rule.

Parents frequently tempt their children to sin, by giving them only such presents as will satisfy their appetites, as candies, nuts, etc., which strengthens in them the belief that there is no other source of happiness but the gratification of flesh and sense. We do not say it is always wrong to give them such presents; but let gifts be so diversified, and given in such order, and with such instructions, as will leave with the children proper impressions as to what constitutes true happiness.

Again, one kind of intemperance opens the way for another, and it is often the case that those whose appetites have been perverted and unduly strengthened in infancy, by frequent and improper eating, will be led by the imperious demands of appetite to indulge in the use of the filthy weed, to keep up a continual worship and gratification of taste, or in the use of intoxicating liquors, to be accompanied with an almost endless train of evils, which so often disgrace families and society.

But another important idea is, that eating between meals is very deleterious to health. It lays the foundation for stomach diseases, which are always connected withother maladies; for the stomach, as we have seen, exerts a mighty influence on all other parts of the system. If the stomach fail, the whole system, and especially the weaker organs, will suffer; but if it is kept in a healthy state, other things being equal, health and strength in the other organs will be the result. Now the health of the stomach depends as much on its having a sufficient amount of rest, as it does on supplying it with food. But how can the stomach rest when it is kept almost constantly at work? When will men and women awake to their best earthly interests? Another weighty consideration is, that the digestive organs are as truly set to work by introducing a small quantity of food into the stomach—whether it be an apple, nuts, berries, candies, or even a pea, or a bean,—as it would be if you were to eat a larger amount; and to eat even a small quantity causes a flow of gastric juice from the coats of the stomach, which ought to be reserved to help in digesting regular meals.

We are living in an age of plenty. Especially is this true in regard to the American nation. But this great blessing is abused, so that it might be said that people now-a-days live to eat, and do not eat to live. Nearly everywhere, whether in a private or public capacity, you will see gluttony, in the shape of eating between meals, practiced. Is it not time that reasonable men and women begin to work to effect a reform in themselves? Is it not high time that professors of Christianity, that believers in the Bible, which condemns gluttony in an unsparing manner, commence to let their light shine in this respect, and manifest temperance, not only by abstaining from intoxicating drinks, but also in other things—in eating to the glory of God?—Health Reformer.

SUGGESTIONS ABOUT BREAD.

To our wise and prudent friends who have no desire to labor for that which satisfieth not, nor spend their money for that which does not profit, we offer a few suggestions about bread. Bread is denominated the staff of life; and, as our lives are of priceless value to us, we are interested to learn the best methods of making that which is so prominent in sustaining them. The best kind of bread costs no more than that which is of an inferior quality, nor so much. The fine flour, leavened bread, that is consumed daily from most of the tables in the land, is not the most nutritious and wholesome bread that can be eaten. All will be convinced of this fact when they come to understand the nature of yeast. Yeast is a vegetable ferment, produced by the decomposition, or breaking down of vegetable matter. This decomposition is, in reality, nothing less than a rotting process; and our raised or leavened bread is more or less rotten, according to the degree the fermentation is allowed to progress in the manufacture of it. This renders the bread less nutritious, less capable of being converted by the digestive organs into blood, from which bone, brain, muscle, nerve, and all the tissues, receive their support; and it is less fitted to give power, activity, and strength, to the whole system. Now, it is not according to principles of good economy, thus to waste, by decomposition, a part of the grain, and make worthless some of its nutritive elements. The putting of any inorganic substance into the food, as soda, salt, saleratus, ammonia, alum, cream tartar, etc., in bread and cakes, is also a pernicious practice, and always deteriorates them. Superior bread is made from good, fresh, unbolted flour or meal, and pure, soft water.

A brief experience in the use of such bread will be sufficient proof for persons who possess unperverted taste, that it is palatable, as well as healthful. Hygiene proposes to take away from us only substances which are innutritious and hurtful, leaving for us all that are beneficial. It never was nature's plan for us to live to eat. We should eat to live. Gustatory enjoyment should be a secondary matter, but yet it always accompanies the taking of food when that is normally done.—Ex.

RECIPE FOR GRUEL.—Take of unbolted wheat meal two large spoonfuls; wet it in a pint of cold water; stir it smoothly; let it stand a minute; then pour off the top in a saucepan; stir it until it boils and foams.

If you like, add milk, more or less, as you please; let it boil again.

Oatmeal gruel may be made in the same way.

This is excellent food for babies and young children when they are not quite well; and all young children would be much better with only something of this kind for their suppers. It can be made more or less consistent, as you like.

READING BY GASLIGHT.—The eyes are often injured by reading by artificial light, the light being so placed as to shine directly into the eyes. The light should be placed behind and above the reader, so that it shall shine upon the book or paper, and not into the eyes. Avoid much reading by artificial light.

THAT BEAUTIFUL LAND.

There is a land, a beautiful land,
Just on the other shore,
Where marshalled angels now do stand,
To gather the saints from every land,
And bear them safely o'er.

In that fair land, that happy land,
We cross a few days more,
There gathered millions then shall see
The glory and the majesty
Of Him they now adore.

In that blest land, that glorious land,
Where flows the river fair,
Thy high built wall, Jerusalem,
Thy golden streets and every gem
Cannot with him compare.

And in that land, that Eden land,
Which long, long shall endure,
Where crowns and palms and songs so free,
Would all be laid aside for Thee,
Thou blessed Savior, Lord.

Yes, in that land, celestial land,
With Christ we shall be blest,
With prophets, priests, we'll mingle there,
While kings and all shall then declare
Thee, Lord, our Righteousness.

WILL LUCIEN BONAPARTE BECOME POPE?

The faith of those students of prophecy, who have long believed that Louis Napoleon will be the final universal king foretold in Daniel and Revelation, has been sorely tried by the tranquil and uneventful character of the last few years. Napoleon III. has now ruled the French empire for twenty years, and has hitherto acted according to his motto, "The Empire is peace." It seems to superficial observers highly improbable that he will at the mature age of sixty, quit this peaceful policy and plunge headlong into a career of universal conquest, eclipsing even the warlike achievements of the first Napoleon.

The natural improbability of such an event will however only render it the more remarkable, when it actually does come to pass. We still adhere steadfastly to the general programme of future occurrences written seven years ago in the book "Louis Napoleon, the destined monarch of the world;" and we now behold this Napollyon of Revelation with an unsurpassed iron-clad navy, and an army reorganized to the number of a million of men, armed with heretofore unknown engines of deadly destruction, preparing to go forth ere long in the character of a mighty man of war, like Alexander or Cæsar, on a tide of resistless conquest, so as to gain "power over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." (Rev. xiii. 7.) * * * *

A significant circumstance has just taken place, March 13th, in the ordination of Lucien Bonaparte, at Rome, as a Cardinal, pointing to the probability of his becoming the future Pope. If this should come to pass, it would indeed be a most important step toward the establishment of a universal Napoleonic empire. * * * *

In reference to the above-mentioned ordination of Cardinal Bonaparte, the London Times remarks:—"This Italian or Roman branch of the house of Bonaparte at all times have exhibited in the highest degree those qualities, by which the house from the beginning achieved greatness—restless aspirations, facile adaptability, and the faculty of taking the tide at the flood. The Prince Canino, an irreconcilable foe to the Papacy, nevertheless encouraged his son, the present Cardinal Lucien Bonaparte, to become an ecclesiastic in the church of Rome. It has not been forgotten how, when Napoleon Bonaparte was head of the State, in 1800, he looked among his kinsmen for a future head of the church.

"It is said that history never repeats itself, but the instinct of men, nevertheless, is to go by precedents; one generation but too naturally falls into the track left by generations gone before. It would be difficult to say what fancies may have haunted the minds of the Emperor Napoleon III. and of Charles, Prince of Canino, when young Lucien, the second son of the latter, then twenty-five years old, was ordained priest in 1853. From that date to the present year, care seemed to have been taken to keep the future candidate for Papal honors, in the back-ground. The young Abbe Bonaparte grew up in the shade of the Vatican, in no apparent hurry for preferment—a solitary spirit, self-conscious and brooding, biding his time. Men stopped to gaze after him as he went past; they marked the marble brow, the firm mouth, the Bonaparte cast of features all over; a few muttered after him, 'Ce gaillard-la ira loin!' It is impossible not to perceive in that mere gift of the Cardinal's Hat an event of the deepest significance.

"No deep insight into the future is required to estimate the contingent results of this ceremony. Pius IX. is seventy-six years old; he has attained the twenty-second year of his Pontificate, and he cannot, consequently, according to old Catholic traditions, sit in St. Peter's chair for more than three other years. What the upshot of the impending Conclave may be it would be rash to foretell; but, by a practice which more than three centuries have hardened into rule, the next Pontiff ought to be an Italian, and, if possible, a Roman Prelate. What is very evident is that if the Emperor Napoleon wished for the utmost advancement of his ecclesiastical cousin, and if the Pope was bent on gratifying the Imperial wish to the best of his abilities, they could not have acted otherwise than they have done. The Abbe Bonaparte was, in all probability, a Cardinal in petto as soon as he was a priest. From that time, perhaps, the chances of his one day securing the votes of two-thirds of his colleagues in Conclave were dimly calculated.

"Napoleon I. wished the Pope to abide in Rome, but he also did all in his power to strip him of his temporal sovereignty. That this sovereignty was the bane of religious no less than civil society is one of those early convictions which Louis Napoleon, the insurrectionary volunteer of 1831, has never abandoned. For the application of his theories Louis Napoleon requires a Pope according to his own heart, and where can he find him, if not in a man bound to him by ties of kindred and gratitude, and—what is of far greater moment—a man bound by no precedents, committed to no known policy? Not a little of the power of the new cardinal lies in his invincible taciturnity. No man in Rome or in the world ever charged the Abbe Bonaparte either with Liberalism or Ultramontanism. His profession of faith, if we could only get at it, is, very likely, Bonapartism,—that kind of fatalism, that reliance on a "star," which makes a Napoleon believe first in himself, then in the never-sinking, never-receding fortunes of his family."

The Emperor Napoleon III. has published, in March, 1868, a new pamphlet to magnify his dynasty, called "The Titles of the Napoleon dynasty," with the Latin motto, Vox populi, vox Dei, in English, The voice of the people, the voice of God. The pamphlet traces the history of the elections of the first Napoleon, who was chosen, in December, 1799, by nearly four million votes to be First Consul for ten years. In 1802 he was elected Consul for life, by three and a half million votes, to be thenceforth hereditary in the Napoleon family.

The pamphlet then shows how, when France became a Republic, in 1848, four different Departments elected Louis Napoleon to be their Representative in the National Assembly, and recalled him from his long exile. Presently he was elected by more than five and a half million votes to be President of the Republic for three and a half years, from December 20, 1848, until the middle of May, 1852. By another election, in December, 1851, he was created President for ten years by seven and a half million votes, and on November 10, 1852, hereditary Emperorship was conferred upon him by nearly eight million votes. The pamphlet sums all this up: "From 1799 to 1804 Napoleon I. received ten millions of suffrages; from 1848 to 1852 Napoleon III. received twenty millions—altogether thirty millions of bulletins signed by the French people—these are the titles of the Napoleonic dynasty." The point is also dwelt on, that Napoleon III. has a double title to the French throne; not only the right of popular election, but also the right of hereditary succession, as he is the legitimate heir of Napoleon I.

In announcing that he assumed the name of Napoleon III. he said, in 1852, "The more I accept all that the history of the last fifty years transmits to us with its inflexible authority, the less was it permitted me to pass over in silence the glorious reign of the head of my family, and the regular though ephemeral title of his son, which the Chambers proclaimed in the last impulse of vanquished patriotism. Thus, then, the title of Napoleon III. is not one of those dynastic and superannuated pretensions which seem an insult to good sense and to truth. It is the homage paid to a government which was legitimate, and to which we owe the finest pages of our modern history."—Signs of the Times.

A COMING DELIVERER.

A saving hand will soon be extended to a redeemed people. Full redemption—"to wit, the redemption of the body,"—draweth nigh.

Day by day "the Sun of Righteousness," as an orb of glory, draws nearer to the earth, and in due time it will descend into the very range of our atmosphere, and, revolving on its own Almighty axis, will present its majestic structure to a waiting and expectant people. It will come in the full salvation of the glory of God. The sun that set in its own crimson blood on Calvary, as in the evening of that day, will shortly arise with resplendent light, to usher in the morning of hope, the like of which has never been seen. Our salvation now—although a reality—is only as an episode in the enormous action of the divine glory. The saving hand holds a precious treasure in its grasp; unknown, as yet, to mortal vision. Reaching out throughout space, beyond the eye of angels; penetrating all depths, beyond the foundations of the sphere; filling up all ages—where antiquity itself is but as yesterday: the glory of God in salvation—that wondrous epic—embraces in its action all events, times, worlds, universes, with all their good and evil, their terrible struggles, their agonies, and their triumphs. Who can describe the mighty deliverances held in that saving hand?

What a combination of events are being brought to our view! Let our attitude be that of "looking for" a coming King, in regal pomp. The sublimity of the scene will be beyond compare. Read it—Thess. 4. There the apostle—an Advent-loving disciple—brings great events together, as a skilful artist would depict a variety of ideas in a picture: and where, too, any one object is more grand than all the pomp of courts, and all the sublimity of battle, and all the grandeur of triumphal civic procession. The glory of the descending Head of the church; the attending retinue of angels; the awaking of the dead; the loud shout of the descending host; the clangor of the archangels trumpet; the bursting of graves, and the coming forth of the millions there entombed; the rapid, sudden, glorious change on the millions of living men; the consternation of the wicked; the ascent of the innumerable host to the regions of the air; and the consequent process of nuptial rejoicing—what has ever occurred like these in the world? And how strange it is that thoughts of men are not turned away from trifles, the show, the shadow, the glitter, the empty pageantry here, to these bright and glorious realities!

The written word of God, shining on the present momentous phase of affairs, and radiating its powerful light ahead, enables us to foreknow the exceedingly solemn and wonderful issue. We are living in a greatly notable epoch. The careless sinner, the dreaming and dead religionist, the scheming politician, the votary of fashion and pleasure, may go careless, dreaming, eager, giddy, and prayerless, each in his sphere; but amid the apparent calm and order of nature, a tremendous change is preparing. Far above and beyond the deep blue sea of air; above the placid moon, and beyond the labyrinth of stars, there is an array of holy ones, and the chief of the heavenlies—Jesus, the Son of God; these are meditating an instant re-visit to our world! The long periods are running out that should precede his revelation in glory; signs which have lain along for centuries in a more or less diffused and consecutive way, are now combining and simultaneous; that is, occurring together, at the very time when the simple computations by periods and dates, in prophecy and history, bid us know and understand the great and certain consummation. It is very true that the apprehension of particular events is painfully dull, in the world and in the church. The bloody history of the last few years in different quarters—the enormous sacrifice of life and treasure—have probably served to deaden sensibility to the significance of present agitations and changes; but the watchful and enlightened christian knows, that God is near to be revealed, in the person of his glorified Son.

Sin is at its height. The "falling away first," and the "waxing worse and worse," is apparent. The world—the philosophic and polished world, is filling up its measure of iniquity, and is thus ripening for an irrevocable end. There is no hope for its recovery. "If it will not hear Moses and the prophets,"—in other words, if it will not hear the word of God, the God-appointed means of reclaiming it—"neither will it be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." The evil heart is ever the same. "The works of the flesh" are now what they were when Paul described them. The state of the unconverted portion of mankind is now what it was in the days of Noah. The sins of Sodom, Egypt, and Jerusalem, are being daily re-produced before our eyes. How shall their imitators escape their doom? "The present state of the world, whether we view it socially, morally, religiously, or politically, tells but the same truth, and reveals the same fact, that no power, no government, no remedy can avail, but the coming of the Lord himself, 'to judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth.'" The world's lawlessness, and the world's religious errors, seem to be making such rapid advances, that all the powers of earth will fail to stem the torrent, or drive back the foe. We cannot see for the world that "good time coming" which some prognosticate. We see no tokens of it in the oppression, growing wickedness, and corruption about us. We see it not in the apathy, worldliness, and pride of the professing church. We see no portents of it in the godless intellectualism of the present generation. We see no omen of it in the hollow-hearted sycophancy that prevails on every side. We see no prospect of it in the fierceness of warlike nations, who have made slaughter a science, and bloodshed a glorious art! There are no indications of it in the unexampled collections of munitions of war—the unparalleled preparations for battle—the beating of ploughshares into swords, and of pruning hooks into spears, in making ready for scenes of carnage yet to come. We see no foreshadowings of it in the covetousness, the money worship, the mad lust for pelf and gold, which seems to rule the hearts of men with all the malignity of a demon's sway.

The apostle Paul declared that the last days should be days of especial peril and moral danger. Thus he wrote: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away. Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Such is the picture before our eyes. No language can more clearly disclose the precise character of the age in which we live, than that which we have quoted. Add to this our Savior's prediction—"For as it was in the days that were before the flood; they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not till the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." (Matt. 38.) And as in the days of Lot, "the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all; even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." (Luke 28, 29.) Locked in the security of worldly slumber, men heed not the approach of danger. And as the flood broke in among their dreams, or as the fiery storm turned to deep wailing the riotous pleasure of the cities of the plain, even so "the day of the Lord" shall thunder its terrors upon the careless and ungodly, who people the world at the completion of this age.

Is not this wide-spread carelessness then a most solemn portent of approaching doom? "it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent the day is at hand." It is emphatically "the night" of "the latter days." "And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" We once more raise the midnight cry. We warn, we entreat, "by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him"—yea, we entreat our readers by his coming thus; for instinctive fears of the judgment are dispelled by the thought of being gathered "UNTO HIM" ("even as the hen gathereth her chickens under her wings,") which ensures the church's safety. And what shall we say more—the fact of the Lord's speedy return ought to be allowed to exert a deep and abiding influence on those who "hope for the glory of God." Should they not feel there is nothing permament on this earth; that this is not their abiding place, and that their great interests are wrapped up in another world? While persevering in the path of duty—while redeeming the time and using it for the glory of God—should they not be serious, humble, prayerful, bold and courageous, decided and Christ-loving in respect to the solemn scenes through which they will soon have to pass.

Awake, ye heralds of the crucified One to a sense of your responsibilities! Proclaim more fully "the gospel of the kingdom!" Buckle on your armor, ye harbingers of the cross! "Cry aloud, spare not! sound an alarm, let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for the day of the Lord cometh; for it is nigh at hand." (Joel 2: 1.) Come, all ye lovers of truth—come, all ye watching, waiting ones, come to the front. Come and form a compact phalanx against the hosts and armies of the alien. "Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows; for she hath sinned against the Lord."—Her. of the Morning.

For the World's Crisis.

THE PROMISE.

As the Bible is a large book, it requires a great deal of study to become acquainted with it thoroughly, at the same time it is very plain and easily understood, if examined for the purpose of gaining light upon its great truths. It is called a "revelation from God to man"; consequently to be understood by man; and furthermore, men can understand it if they follow the advice given by Jesus and recorded in John 5: 39,—"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life," etc. That some have erred from the plain teachings of God's word through their ignorance of it, will not be denied. For instance, we have often heard men and ministers say, when questioned about some passage they did not understand, that we would understand it all when we get into heaven. Although these persons may have read the Bible through a number of times, it is very evident they are not familiar with its doctrines.

In the first place, David says (Ps. 119: 105), "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." Therefore when David died, it ceased to be of any use to him. In the second place, the apostle Peter, just after receiving the baptism of the Holy Spirit, preaches to the people, and proves to them conclusively that Jesus did really die and was raised from the dead; then he quotes from the Psalms what the inspired penman wrote concerning him. In order to show that David was not speaking of himself, he takes occasion to bring to the minds of the people the fact that "the patriarch David is both dead and buried. . . . For David is not ascended into the heavens."—Acts 2: 29, 34. Therefore we conclude that the idea of understanding the "word" after we die is erroneous; for David took it to guide him while he was alive; and as the apostle distinctly says that "David" (not David's house or shell) did not go to heaven, it must settle the matter of his not using the word there.

So in regard to "the promise." We have been told that the promise of God to man was that he should have heaven to dwell in; i. e., the atmosphere; and this conclusion is derived from a superficial view of John 14: 1, 2. But as Jesus came to "fulfill the law and prophets," it will be necessary to see what they say of the subject.

To show that the Promise of an inheritance was made, not by Jesus but through him, we will refer the reader to the apostle Paul in his epistle to the Galatians, 3: 14,—"That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ." That this promise was made before Jesus was on earth, Paul informs us in verse 17, for he says that the law [i. e., Mosaic] was four hundred and thirty years after the promise; then in the eighteenth verse he speaks of the promise as an inheritance.

It will be necessary to go back in the chronology of the Bible to four hundred and thirty years before the law was given to Moses, and accordingly we find at 2040 B. C. Abraham called to leave Haran, and in obedience to the command we find him journeying through the land of Canaan. Gen. 12: 6. Now the Lord appears to him and promises his seed the land, not air. Here we have the root of the matter, according to Paul. We follow Abraham, till he and Lot part; Lot choosing to go east, but Abraham dwells in the land of Canaan. Gen. 13: 12. Then we find the Lord talking to Abraham, and he says (v. 15),—"For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever." Here we have the former promise renewed, with an addition, viz., that Abraham himself was also to possess the land for ever, which Paul interprets to mean (Rom. 4: 13), "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world"; hence we read in Gal. 3: 29, "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

As we have found the promise, it will be well to examine whether it has been fulfilled. In the first place, we assert that it has not, and shall prove it from the "word," which we consider the best authority. If any would attempt to maintain that the promise has been fulfilled temporally, or that the word "forever" is used in a limited sense, it will be remembered that Abraham died; that the "seed" were several times subjected to captivity, and finally came under the Roman government, which destroyed their city, and they (the seed) were scattered throughout all nations, where they will remain till the "times of the Gentiles be fulfilled," when they that are Christ's will be "caught up in the air to meet the Lord," and they that are not will be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord." No writer, either prophet or apostle, refers to any other promise.

In following Abraham, we find him under a trial of his faith; for God calls him to make a sacrifice of his only Son, Isaac, whom he had received by a miracle, in order that the promise might be fulfilled. Now if God had permitted Abraham to slay his son, his hope in the fulfillment of the promise would have been cut off, unless Abraham received another; but Paul straightens this supposition for us (Heb. 11: 17–19), showing that Abraham had faith in God that he would raise Isaac from the dead, if necessary, to fulfill the promise. His faith stood the test, and it was "accounted to him for righteousness." But again we find in Gen. 12: 2, that God promises to make of Abraham a "great nation," when as yet he had no child, and was also advanced in years; but Abraham believed God; and Paul, in speaking of the same thing in Heb. 6: 15, says, "And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise"; that is, of a son; and this is the son that God commanded him to sacrifice, which, while Abraham was about to do, the Lord prevented, having seen that his faith was strong.

Then again in Gen. 15th, where God is talking more directly on the subject, we find in the seventh verse the promise of an inheritance mentioned again; and Abraham takes occasion to ask, "Whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?" that is, the land of Canaan. Then the Lord proceeds to tell him how he should know it, and among the rest we find in verse fifteen, "And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age." If Abraham did die and was buried according to the "word," then the word "forever" cannot relate to time.

In running hastily over the history of Abraham, we arrive at a time when he is bereaved of his wife, Sarah, and of course she must be buried. So we find Abraham making a bargain with "Ephron, the son of Zohar," for the cave of Machpelah, which was in the land of Canaan, which God had promised him; and refusing to take it as a gift, pays the sum of four hundred skekels of silver for it. Following on in his history, we find him a hundred and seventy-five years old, and "then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man and full of years, and was gathered to his people." Gen. 25: 8. Now his people were all idolaters, and if it is contended that M. T. is true, then Abraham went to the theological hell; but if God's Bible is true, he was buried in the cave of Machpelah. Gen. 25: 9. So Abraham did not receive the promise, according to the above. Let the "beloved Paul" answer. After speaking of the faith of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and Sarah, he says (Heb. 11: 13), "These all died in faith, not having received the promises; . . . and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." Again (vers. 39, 40), "And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Now as the one promise is spoken of in connection with the worthies mentioned in Hebrews 11; and as the apostle plainly declares that they all died not receiving the promise; and also that they cannot be made perfect without us, or, in other words, that they cannot receive the promise till all receive it at once; we think this ought to be sufficient to satisfy any one who has taken the name of Christian. L. F. Moore.

(To be concluded.)

IS NOT THE SOUL OR SPIRIT TO BE REWARDED BEFORE THE BODY?

BY WM. SHELDON.

Certainly not, unless it is rewarded before the judgment, and that would be a curious notion—one reward for the soul before the judgment, and another reward for the body after the judgment!! This theology has no existence in the Book of God, and is utterly subversive of the doctrine of a future judgment day, so clearly taught in the Bible. Whether the spirit is to be recognized as a distinct personality, or otherwise, Paul's desire was, "that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus" (1 Cor. 5); and when that day comes the judgment comes, and the spirit will then be connected with the body: so it will not be saved before the judgment, nor independent of the body, even if it were a deathless personality.

The Scriptures often speak of man's spirit and soul; and the inference has been drawn that the spirit is an organized entity within man, that can exist as a personality independent of the body, sometimes bearing the name of spirit, and sometimes called soul. But upon examination we find that these terms are never from the same original word, though used hundreds of times; hence, soul and spirit are not the same; and the same kind of proof that is used to show that the spirit is a personality within man would as clearly prove that the soul is a personality also; and that would prove two entities in one man, as really as one.

To prove that the spirit is an entity distinct from the body, we are often referred to 1 Thessalonians 5: 23: "I pray God your spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless." This simply proves that man has a spirit and soul as well as a body; but if it proves the spirit an entity distinct from the body, it as clearly proves the soul an entity distinct from the spirit; agreeing with Hebrews 4: 12: "Piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit"—showing that they are not one, whether entities or not. We believe that man has both a spirit and a soul; but not in the sense of an organized personality within the person, or an invisible man within the man. We as really read of the "spirit of the beast" (Eccl. 3: 21) as spirit of the man;" but are we therefore to conclude that every beast has an invisible, organized beast within, that escapes a beastly prison at death? We read of the "seven spirits of God" (Rev. 3: 1): but do they signify seven entities? or so many elements? Sometimes a class of beings are called spirits; as God, angels, devils, and men: but whenever the spirit of a being is spoken of, the term never signifies an entity, but an element, or an influence, residing in, or proceeding from, the being, as in the examples already cited—"spirit of the beast"—"spirit of man"—seven spirits of God."—Adventism.

ANNIHILATION AND SUICIDE.

Bro. Grant:—One of the leading preachers in Buffalo has violently attacked our views, and one of his arguments, which I heard, against annihilation was, that it led to self-murder. He compared us to French atheists who believe in no hereafter for any of our race. As it is doubtful if any one ever commits suicide unless more or less deranged, I send the following article, to expose the absurdity of such reasoning wherever it may be used. A number of his members read the Crisis. This article was in the Bible Examiner eleven years ago, and so will be new to most of your readers. J. Blain.

THE THEOLOGICAL HELL.

The following article appeared some three or four years since, in the New York Morning Express. We insert it now to make a passing remark. The Express said:—

The Boston correspondent of a city paper furnishes the following item, which is said to refer to the daughter of the Hon. Rufus Choate: "I learn that a very sad case of insanity occurred in this city but a short time since, and from a singular cause. The person deprived of reason is a young lady of great promise, of a very active and extraordinary mind, the youngest daughter of the most distinguished member of the Suffolk Bar. She attended church not many Sundays ago at the Trinity in this city, and listened attentively to a sermon on the subject of Hell! The influence of the discourse so operated upon her mind as to produce insanity of such a type as to require the use of a strait-jacket and confinement in the Hospital at Worcester. The parents are in the deepest sorrow in consequence of this sad event. It was thought by her medical attendants, some days since, that she would recover."

"Insanity" is the natural result—to a deeply reflective mind—of contemplating the theological hell, and a sincere belief of its existence. So natural is this result that Saurin, in his sermon on "The Eternal Misery of Hell," gave utterance to the following language, in view of his own description:—

"I sink under the weight of this subject; and I declare, when I see my friends, my relations, the people of my charge—when I think that I, that you, that we are all threatened with these torments—when I see, in the lukewarmness of my devotions, in the languor of my love, in the faintness of my resolutions and designs, the least evidence, though it be only probable or presumptive, of my future misery, yet I find it a mortal poison, which diffuses itself into every period of my life, rendering society tiresome, nourishment insipid, pleasure disgustful, and life itself a cruel bitter—I cease to wonder that a fear of hell has made some melancholy, and others mad; that it has inclined some to expose themselves to a living martyrdom by fleeing from all commerce with the rest of mankind, and others to suffer the most violent and terrible torments."—See Am. Tract Society's Tract, No. 277.

Thus Mr. Saurin freely admits all that we charge upon the doctrine of "The Theological Hell." Is such a doctrine from God, our Maker? the God whose "tender mercies are over all his works"? From a Being of infinite perfections, who has plainly declared, "As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked;" has the doctrine of such a hell, as that of eternal and unmitigated misery, proceeded? A Being of whom the beloved disciple saith, "God is love;" has he given existence to creatures whom he foreknew—and foreknowing it, determined they should exist—has he, we ask, contrived and brought into his universe such a hell as that described by Mr. Saurin, and indorsed by the "American Tract Society," as well as all other theologians who have set up the claim of "Orthodoxy?" Believe it, ye who can! We can no more credit such blasphemy against God, our Maker, than we can believe the Pope is infallible, or that Moloch is the God that made us. Such a theological representation of God and his intentions towards sinners, is well fitted to bring on such a state of mind as that described by Mr. Saurin; but that state of mind is anything, rather than that which the gospel demands and inspires.

The Bible hell is an eternal loss of life, as the result of a refusal to harmonize with God, or as the "wages of sin." The gospel is the good news of life eternal to all such as harmonize with God, or who embrace God's "promise of life" in Christ, and return from their sins to his service. Any other hell than a total and irrecoverable loss of life—as the wages of sin—is not exhibited in the revelation God has given to men; and those who continue to preach a hell of unutterable and endless torture will find themselves responsible for all the insanity and madness resulting from such a misrepresentation of God's holy and loving character. Let the utterance of Bishop Newton find way to your mind, if the testimony of God himself is slighted by you. Newton saith, "God is love; and he would rather not have given life, than render that life a torment and curse to all eternity. Imagine a creature, nay, numberless creatures, produced out of nothing, delivered over to torments of endless ages, without the least hope or possibility of relaxation or redemption. Imagine it you may, but you can never seriously believe it, nor reconcile it to God and goodness. God could never make any creature whose end he foreknew would be misery everlasting."—Bishop Newton's Works, London, 1787, "On the Final Condition of Man," page 330, and so on.

Bishop Newton looked for the final restoration of all men; but this arose from his belief in inherent immortality in man. His mind could not but reject the doctrine of endless sin and suffering; and believing man immortal, he was compelled to adopt universal restoration as his only escape from the Moloch God of the theological hell. We are not driven to his choice; because we know that no such doctrine as that of man's inherent immortality is any where found in the book of God; but that great gift is for the righteous alone, and bestowed through Christ, in the resurrection "at the last day." "The wages of sin is death"—(death from which there is no recovery and no revival into life.) Such is the Bible doctrine; and it commends itself as both just and rational, and will never drive men "mad" or make them "insane." "Life and death" is "set before" them, and God calls all to "choose life that they may life." If they refuse life, as a gift of God in Jesus Christ, they die, and that death is eternal. So we teach; and so we believe the Bible testifies.

For the World's Crisis.

PERSONAL EFFORT.

To the christian soldier, the definition of the term "personal effort" is, fighting the good fight of faith.

Many seem to feel that they can accomplish little, so little indeed that they think it not worth while to try. Perhaps at the same time they have met with a rebuff, or a scoff, when they have attempted to press the truth upon the conscience of a sinner. Should you be discouraged on that account? Are soldiers on the battle-field disheartened if the foe makes some show of resistance? If they can persevere and fight on in the face of opposition, why cannot you "endure hardness" as a good soldier of the cross? Is final victory less desirable to you than to them? Or is the promised reward less in your case than in theirs?

Think on these things, and "choose ye this day" whether you will venture to make an effort to turn a sinner from the error of his way, and save a soul from death, or whether you will act the coward's part, like the sons of Ephraim, who "being armed, and carrying bows, turned back in the day of battle"? The central thought around which all these words revolve is this: "your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Let this great truth be emblazoned upon your banner, and go forth with clean hands and a pure heart, and surely you shall carry with you a spirit and a power which all the adversaries cannot gainsay nor resist. Is your strength but perfect weakness? Is your courage deficient, and your talent small? So much the better. He who chose Moses, a man "not eloquent" but "slow of speech," and Jeremiah, who said, "I cannot speak, for I am a child," still chooses the weak things to confound the mighty.

And to you who now read or hear this I appeal, and ask, has not God chosen you? Has he chosen you to be an heir of salvation, and not at the same time chosen you to carry the glad tidings of salvation to poor perishing men around you? But some may say, "I am ready and willing to work, but am not able." Ah, is that so? The little child can talk of a Savior's love; can you not do as much? There is a magic power in the very word love. Go to the sinner with love in your heart, and it may be with trembling voice and tearful eye, and plead with him to be reconciled to God. Tell him the "old, old story," how Jesus died to save sinners, and rose from the dead, and even now stands ready to cleanse them in his own precious blood and present them faultless before the throne.

This do, and verily your labor shall not be in vain. The opposing forces of good and evil are so evenly balanced, that your feeble hand has power to turn the scale in favor of the right. But whatever you do, or whatever you leave undone, be sure to pray, pray without ceasing. Surely the blessing of God will crown your efforts, and "verily thou shalt in no wise lose thy reward."

Webster, Mass. F. H. Chamberlain.

PRACTICE WHAT YOU PREACH.

"Physician, heal thyself." "Thou, therefore, that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself?" Be consistent. "Consistency is a jewel." We hear severe admonitions against pride in dress, the wearing of jewelry, gay artificials, etc. This is right. God denounces these tinkling ornaments—the exhibition of pride—the outgoings of a vain and corrupt heart.

But what is your costume, sister? Far be it from you to adorn your person with jewelry—golden ear-rings, finger-rings, breastpins, etc.; but what are the materials of your dresses, shawls, bonnets, etc.? Are they not of the finest texture, the most costly? Is this expenditure on your person consistent with meek and humble follower of Christ? on bound to glorify God in body and in spirit—D. F. Newton.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, June 10, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

DISCUSSION AT STONEHAM.

Our late discussion with Moses Hull, at Stoneham, Mass., was one of special interest, and happy results in favor of the truth. We think the Spiritualists have no man in their ranks who is better prepared to defend their views than Mr. Hull. He was once an able opposer of the position he is now supporting. He has great skill in putting darkness for light, error in the place of truth, and in causing the careless to think he is right; but the brilliant sunshine of God's word exposes at once the hideous deformity of Satan's sugar-coated poison, and his old lie, so oft repeated,—"Ye shall not surely die."

Our discussion was held in the Town Hall, and was attended by an intelligent audience. We began Monday evening, May 18th, and continued five successive evenings. Mr. Hull introduced the usual objections that are presented by our opponents in the churches. We do not see how those who hold to the doctrine of the immortality of the soul can have any success in opposing Spiritualists, for both use the same arguments; but when we are clothed with the Bible armor, we have a shield that is completely invulnerable against all the fiery darts of the enemy.

Mr. Hull denied that God made man; claimed the Bible came from the Egyptians; and that Jesus was the hero of a novel written many years before he appeared on earth. After saying these, and many other blasphemous things, he claimed to believe the Bible, but wished for the privilege of using his own interpretation of the Scriptures. We found he had adopted Satan's rule of interpretation, as used to our first parents in the garden of Eden; and that was to flatly deny the word of the Lord where it did not suit his theory. We found him commending Satan, and finding fault with the Lord. Nothing could be more apparent than that the teaching of the spirits, as held forth by Mr. Hull, were in harmony with what the Devil has always taught; and that any thing that would weaken the confidence of the people in the Bible, and the God of the Bible, was most gladly presented. Every investigation of the system only shows more conclusively that the whole thing is antichristian in all its features; and that it is Satan's last grand effort to overthrow Christianity and establish the doctrines of demons.

WESTERN VISIT.

Tuesday morning, May 26th, we left Boston via Portland, Montreal, Detroit and Chicago, for the campmeeting at Fairfield in Wisconsin. In fifty-seven and a half hours we landed at Chicago, and put up at the Lloyd House, where we were kindly received and entertained. We had some interesting talks on the way with different individuals concerning the signs of the times, and the prospect of speedy deliverance. There is a general impression that great events are at hand. People are more willing to hear on these subjects than they were five years ago. They are really worried about the state of things in the world. They are perplexed, and anxious to know what the students of prophecy think of the signs of the times.

On our way through Maine we found the extremely wet season had put back planting and sowing very much, and that some who planted at the usual time are obliged to plough up their land again, because the seed had rotted in the ground. In Canada things looked backward, but when we entered Michigan, we found a most delightful change. The farms, gardens, fruit trees, and the general appearance of the country are unsurpassed by any thing we have ever seen in the west. The farmers' prospects looked bright for the coming harvest. It was a cheering sight to look upon their beautiful fields of grass and grain, blooming fruit trees, and pleasant homes. It made us think of the promised new earth, when paradise shall bloom again.

Friday, at 9 A. M., we left Chicago for Milwaukee, thence to Kilbourn City, one hundred and five miles west of M., where we were met by Brn. Sheldon and House, who accompanied us to the home of the latter where we found a pilgrim's resting place. We were glad to get sleep. We found Bro. Sheldon improving in health, but still unable to preach but little. He has been laid up most of the time for some four months, in consequence of a bad eye, caused by a tumor and an unfortunate operation upon it, by which he came very near losing his eye-sight. He is not able to read or write but very little. It is to be feared that he will not again be able to use his eyes as before he received the injury. It is sad to have such a useful man as Bro. Sheldon disabled at the time when his labors are so much needed. He has been instrumental in leading many to Christ, and in establishing faithful churches in an extensive portion of the western field. He is a true christian, an able preacher, very self-denying, whose praise is in all the churches where his worth is known.

Saturday, May 30th, we went on to the camp-ground, which is a lovely spot, in a very pleasant section of country. We really feel quite at home in this western field. The people are whole-hearted, frank, generous, and quite free from the hypocritical, artificial politeness, that is so often seen in high life, in the absence of christianity. There is much less of the selfish spirit than is usually seen among those in places that have been longer settled, and become richer in this world's goods.

We expect a large and good meeting. The prospect is encouraging. Seven tents are already up, besides the large one, which will hold about one thousand people. We have just had an interesting conversation with Bro. Geo. Thompson, who is now a preacher of the gospel of the kingdom. When we were in Montreal in the winter of 1863, he was a local Methodist preacher. He heard the people talking about "the infidel" who was holding meetings in the city. By "the infidel" they meant the writer. He saw one of his brethren, who happened to attend one of our love-feasts, and informed him that our meetings were conducted just like the Methodists; that we had singing and prayer. Bro. T. thought that was a strange way for an infidel to proceed, and concluded to go and hear him for himself. It resulted in leading him to give up his fables, and causing him to see the simplicity of the truth of the Bible, and to consecrate himself to the Lord more fully than ever before. His former friends forsook him, but he held fast to the blessed hope, and is to-day rejoicing in the prospect of soon seeing the King in his beauty. He wonders now that he did not see the light before. He speaks of the change as almost equal to a new conversion. His experience corresponds with thousands of others; while, on the contrary, those who oppose, find themselves going into darkness, losing love for the Bible, and becoming more and more worldly minded. Why is this?

Monday, June 1st. Yesterday was a good day on the camp-ground. The weather was warm and the whole scenery about was pleasant. We are elevated on the bank of a small river, in a clean oak opening. The grass grows all over the camp-ground. It is a spot that has been occupied for pic-nics, and is well adapted for a campmeeting. We had a good love-feast at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. At an early hour the people began to assemble, and at the hour for preaching, the large tent was well filled with a candid, common-sense audience, that listened very attettively, and seemed ready to receive the truth as fast as they saw it clearly. Our prospect is very encouraging for a good meeting. The saints rejoiced aloud at the sure evidence of soon seeing Jesus. We find a living faith here in the hearts of the disciples of the Lord. Nine ministers are present to assist in the meetings, and several more are expected. Our meeting is advertised to begin to-day; but it is already well begun, and advanced as far as such meetings are usually by Tuesday evening. It is expected that this will be one of the largest meetings ever held in the west, and, we hope, one of the best. It should be remembered that the Brn. and Srs. are not in villages here as in the east, but are very widely scattered; and most of them have to go a long distance by private conveyance, in order to get to the meeting. When they can get together ten or a dozen tents, it is considered a great meeting for the west. The Brn. and Srs. make large sacrifices to get to their meetings and to sustain them. We see very little selfishness among them. They are ready to share the last half of the loaf with those who are needy. They are in earnest to get into the kingdom of God. One can get a better idea of the christian religion in its simplicity, than in more populous places. They are plain in their dress, natural in their manners, and hospitable at their homes. The truth is spreading rapidly in the western states by means of the faithful labors of true men of God, who are not laboring for "the loaves and the fishes," but to save their fellow beings from destruction. It is a poor field for a lazy man, or one who wishes to take life easy; but an interesting one for the true minister of Christ, who is ready to endure hardships for the Lord's sake, to save souls from perdition. Many such men are needed in the west, who are ready to preach every day, and, if need be, willing to sleep in the barn, or camp by the road side for the night; and not utter a murmuring word about their fare.

"A SUPREME SANCTUARY."

The Spiritualists have established a secret society, which they call "The Order of Eternal Progress." They speak of their headquarters as "a supreme sanctuary," and then of state, district, and territorial sanctuaries, in all parts of the world." They intend, by means of this great secret society, to get control of the social, religious, and political interests of the whole world; which they claim will constitute the setting up of the "God kingdom." In setting forth the objects of this "Order of eternal progress," we are informed that it is designed to be "an organization with branches extending to all parts of our land, and of the world, to bring the liberal and progressive minds so that their power may be directed in such channels as may be deemed for the good of humanity." Again, we are told that any man or woman may become a member of this "secret order", "irrespective of belief."

Let us all keep clear of these "bundles," lest we be burnt at last with the "stubble" of this world. The time for the separation of the tares from the wheat is at hand. Satan is doing all in his power to get us to unite with some of his unholy associations. It is a perilous hour in which we are living. Keep on "the whole armor of God."

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF IT?

BRO. GRANT:—I was in a prayer and conference meeting a short time since, where one took the position that the wicked were not to become as though they had not been until after they had been punished according to their deeds done in the body; and as I have no recollection of ever seeing any thing of the kind appear in the columns of the Crisis, I thought that I would pen these lines to you, and see if you would not be so kind as to express your opinion upon such an idea; for if it be true that the punishment of the wicked is to take place before they become as though they had not been, then it seems to me that it is high time that it should be published in the Crisis, for if it be true (as I said before), then it follows that the wicked are punished before they die. Yours for light and truth, A. S. WHITNEY.

The Bible nowhere says the wicked shall "be punished according to their deeds done in the body." If they are to be punished before they die, then their punishment must end when they die. This cannot be true if the wages or punishment of sin is death, as the Bible declares. As the punishment is death, it does not begin till they are dead. If, after they have died "the second death," they never come to life again, then their punishment will be eternal—not eternal torment, but eternal death. As eternal life is the highest possible reward, its opposite, or eternal death, is the highest possible punishment.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Saturday, Aug. 29th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion.

A GOOD SERMON.

We give below an extract from a sermon delivered by Mr. Rowland, in Cincinnati, O. It contains some rich thoughts worthy of the consideration of all the friends of Jesus. May the reader receive from this article a quickening power to labor for the Lord, and to stand up against the enemies of the cross. This is the hour to "be strong." Mr. Rowland says:

"There is a passage in the writings of the apostle Paul so germinal of what I have to say upon the subject selected for to-day's meeting that, although it may seem to you very much like perverting, I cannot help making it my text. That passage is in 1 Cor. 16: 13–14, and reads: 'Watch ye. Stand fast in the faith. Quit you like men. Be strong. Let all your things be done with charity.'

These short and pithy expressions doubtless seem to you, as I read them, the warm but disconnected utterances of one who was solicitous concerning the activity of the Corinthian converts. If you will examine them closely, however, you will find them all circling about the central thought of a true life, and all adapted to bring that life to its highest development.

A true life is one which grows harmoniously outwardly and inwardly; or, in other words, a man must act right and believe right. No one can be a good and glorious man who does not keep himself unspotted from vice, who does not have his mind stored with right principles, and who does not act out these principles resolutely and lovingly before the world—men with earnest and intelligent convictions—men who guard themselves against all littleness and sin—men who will not be ashamed to live positive and heroic lives in the face of their fellow men—these are the characters for whom the world is longing, men for this and all time; and just such men obedience to all of the precepts of this passage will be sure to produce. Assuming that this will appear, as we discuss the various precepts of the passage before us, let us begin with the first one.

'Watch ye.' An army in an enemy's country always throw out strong lines of pickets. At every possible avenue of approach is stationed a little sqad of men, who, with unceasing vigilance, watch for the appearance of the foe. Through the long winter night, when the sleet is coating musket and cap, and smiting the face with its stinging lash, and when the slightest spark of fire would only light the way to his heart for the foeman's bullet, the guard stands shivering with cold, but with eye peering into the darkness, and with ear ever open to catch the softest tread. This painful vigilance is the safety of the army. There can be no success without it. Were the barriers to be taken down, and the enemy suffered to steal into the camp, all would be lost.

Now, every man occupies precisely the position of an army in an enemy's country. Around him are the swarms of foes eager to invade the camp of his will. Slothfulness, sin, false pride, and a host of other enemies to everything that is noble and good, stand ready, when the pickets are withdrawn, to rush in and overpower the better forces of the heart. But these once having entered, there is an end to true manhood. To be men for the times, then, you must watch. Standing firm on your guard, you must make each thought and wish bend over the bayonet of a determined resolve and give the password Holiness before you allow them to enter. Nor must you scruple, if they cannot give this password, to thrust them at once through the heart. Watchfulness is, then, the first step to a true manhood. The second is found in the words, 'Stand fast in the faith.'

The connection between what a man believes and what he does is closer than many seem to suppose. The fact is, no man can act very long what he does not thoroughly believe. All the heroes the world has ever seen have been men who have made themselves a political or religious formulary, wrote under this 'credo,' and then stood up against all odds to defend and die for it. There never was a grand epoch in the world's history, but that it was the birth-throe of some grand idea. There never was a leader in civil or moral reform who had not had the articles of some glorious creed burned into his heart. Paul, and Luther, and Bright, and Cromwell and Knox, and Garrison, and Lincoln, and all other positive and heroic men of all time, have been those who believed something with their whole minds and hearts.

Of inestimable importance is it, then, if we would be men for the times, to stand fast in some true and grand faith. The great difficulty with this age is, men do not enough understand and fix themselves upon principles. Even christian people have learned to snore and sleep under sermons and addresses which aim to expound some doctrine of that creed whose doctrines they profess to accept. We must take all our truth in homœpathic doses, and sugar-coated at that. But this will not, and cannot make strong characters. Positive men, since the world began, have had a set of principles wrought into their being, like the iron atoms of the blood, which gave them muscle and backbone. Would we be men for the times, we must be like them in this—fasten upon a faith (and you will find none better than the faith in Jesus,) and stand fast in it, come what may.

Then, 3d, we must 'Quit ourselves like men.'

A very poor soldier would that be who never got out from behind breastworks. To make men veterans you must give them the order Wellington gave at Waterloo, 'Up, boys, and at them!' There must be the long marches in the enemy's country; the fording of deep rivers; the sleeping out in the field with no canopy but heaven; the standing up in line when shells are falling and bullets are shrieking, and men dying around you; the fixing of bayonets and kneeling to receive the impetuous onslaught, and then the fierce countercharge up the hillside in the face of the belching volleys and over abattis and breast-works—all this bear before you can be a complete soldier.

Just so, no man can be a complete man until he comes out into actual fight and struggle. The men for the times are those who, having watched and prepared themselves for struggle, and having fastened upon a good set of principles, do not fear to carry these into exercise everywhere about them; men who hear the call of duty and hesitate not a moment to go to whatever lengths she may lead; men who hear in this command, quit you like men, the shout of their divine leader rung in their ears as they stand on the edge of battle, and who, in obedience to it, accept all sacrifices and wounds that the doing of his will and their duty may involve.

4th. We must 'Be strong.'

This precept I understand to refer mainly to the inner life. A man must not only have a creed, but he must be strong in it, ready to defend it in every possible way against his adversaries. A man will be good and generous always in proportion to the breadth and generosity of his faith. The hardshell Baptist, who believes only in the doctrine of election, can never be anything more than a narrow bigot. The lawyer who has read only the first chapter of Blackstone, will never be anything more than a pettifogger. The merchant who knows no more of the laws of trade than is sufficient to enable him to sell a yard of calico, will never be more than a clerk; and so everywhere. To be real, good, strong men, the men for the times, we must study, we must grow in mental and spiritual stature day after day.

And then, to insure all, we must let everything we do be done with love or kindness. Gentleman is a very hackneyed and misused word, but it is the only one term which expresses exactly what obedience to all these precepts of the apostle will produce. The men for the times are not merely those who will have intelligent convictions of truth, and be ready to maintain them, but those who while they act boldly and resolutely and without the least sacrifice of principle, attract all others to them by the display of a living and tender heart.

In a word, the men for the times are christian gentlemen; men who guard themselves against every unholiness and littleness, and dishonor; who stand fast in a faith which grasps tight hold of the Lord Jesus Christ as Savior and leader, who quit themselves like men, in the struggle the times present between the right and the wrong, who are strong in all that belongs to a live conception of the wants of the age and the work to be done, and who, like their Master, do all things so kindly as well as so resolutely, that others feel constrained to respect them, and range themselves under their banners."

THE MILLENNIUM.

This is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. It is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second coming of Christ. For ale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage. Ten copies for $1.00; fifty copies, $4.00.

"ADVENTISM."

We have just received a full supply of this valuable work. Price in cloth 75 cents, postage 12 cents. Flexible covers 60 cents, postage 12 cents. Paper covers 50 cents, postage 6 cents. In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

For the World's Crisis.

PLAN OF REDEMPTION.

WHAT THEY SAY OF IT.

"The 'Plan of Redemption,' is an earnest book, evidently prepared after no little study and with a conscientious desire to advance the cause of Christ. The Bible is very fitly made the basis of argument, and while some views advanced are open to criticism, which is almost inevitable from the nature of the topics treated, and from the present state of religious investigation, the careful reader will find much that is valuable, and many fresh and well-considered suggestions, as, for instance, on the atonement and the two resurrections."—Watchman and Reflector.

"The 'Plan of Redemption,' by Wellcome and Goud, is a new work or body of theology published at Yarmouth, Me., and sold by I. C. Wellcome. A chain is the longest in its weakest point. This book exemplifies this adage. We have read it with much care. The ideas of the necessity of a general atonement are correct. The obligation of men to accept it are clearly set forth. Salvation is a part of its plan, but concerning the words perish, die, death of the soul, there is some ambiguity. The Bible distinctly says, 'These shall go away into everlasting punishment,' etc. We don't know anything about the annihilation of the soul—we don't believe it scriptural or possible. If Bros. Goud and Wellcome do, they will have about the usual amount of hard sledding to get it taught and believed. There is a hell for the wicked, is the doctrine of the church and the Bible of all ages, eternal and endurable."—Church Union.

Sold at the Crisis office. $1.25, postpaid.

ST. LOUIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—I have received since my last letter to the Crisis the following donations for the Mission here: One box and one barrel of clothing from Bro. G. T. Adams, Boston, and one dozen large bottles of Dr. Peirce's Bitters. I received one box of boys' clothing, mostly new, from John M. Stetler, Phila., Pa., also a suit of new clothes for myself, which were needed and appreciated. From Bro. Moses Smith, Chicago, Ill., through Bro. S. S. Brewer, $10.00. From Bro. William Simes, Dover, N. H., $5.00. A letter from Sr. S. Thayer, Seneca Falls, N. Y., containing $2, and informing me that the barrel of clothing rec'd Feb. 19th, and credited to Boston, came from her. I would here say that those sending articles of clothing for the Mission should always send a letter by mail. Brethren and sisters, it gives us much joy amid all our cares to know that we are so kindly remembered by you. If time was to continue, this Mission would shortly be able to take care of itself, so far as money is concerned. But we are expecting to be delivered soon.

Our churches are prospering as usual. Next Tuesday our campmeeting commences. We have a fine grove. We all need your prayers. Pray the Lord to give victory to his truth. In due time we hope to give you particulars of the meeting. Your Bro. in the blessed hope, H. K. FLAGG.

A UNION MEETING.

BRO. GRANT:—There was one meeting during Anniversary week which was peculiar in its character. It was a union of all religious denominations and sects who chose to participate in it. It was inaugurated by the Unitarians. There has been during the last winter a series of meetings of this character weekly. The manner of conducting them was for any one, who desired, to make remarks upon the subject before the meeting. A number of questions were discussed, such as, "The true tests of Christianity," "What is it to believe in Christ?" and others of a like nature. Unitarians, Universalists, Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists, Episcopalians, and Spiritualists, would often be heard in the same meeting.

This is truly progression. It certainly shows on the part of Unitarians a liberality which no evangelical church would inaugurate. It opened a door for every one to express their views upon the Scriptures. The meetings were often solemn, and always conducted with the best of order and good nature; and no doubt there was some seed sown which will take root and spring up to life everlasting.

THAT MAN OF SIN.—No. 2.

Is it the Pope of Rome? It may seem to some of our brethren an almost presumptuous, at least an utterly needless question, for they would answer promptly and emphatically in the affirmative. But if so in a prefatory, prefigurative way, is it so in an intensive, critical, culminating sense? I think not. I apprehend the earnest, definite, and especially the terminal fulfillment, is just now shortly before us. Far from me be dogmatism, for it is unholy and abhorrent. I tried to show, at least in a suggestive way, in a previous article, that Rome, the papacy, and the Romish hierarchy, are defined and identified in the harlot riding on the therion, or wild beast, and that the "man of sin" of St. Paul is more especially a new evolution. Does the essential fulfillment of the Apocalypse run through the whole mighty lapse of eighteen hundred years to the end? Very many believe this, and insist on it, nor do I any further object to the position, than that it is an inferior and shadowy accomplishment, while the tremendous and concentrated and more literal realization is just at and before the end of this dispensation.

Before the day of Christ, "the man of sin must be revealed," "and that wicked shall be revealed" (apokaluphthe, apokaluphthesetai, and apokaluphthenai, for the word is used three times in succession). Strictly the meaning of the word is, uncovered, unwrapped, unveiled, naturally implying not a long process of development, or at least of disclosure. Pertinently illustrative was the unveiling of a statue of Senator Benton, not long since, I believe, and quite recently of a large painting or portrait of Gen. Grant at the Chicago Convention. We do earnestly submit, therefore, whether this "apocalypse" or unveiling was not the subject of prophecy as a special and definite token of the immediate coming of our Divine Lord. When the first occurs, then be sure the second follows directly. "The mystery of iniquity" was beginning to work in St. Paul's time; it was fearfully energetic and baneful in Justinian's day; it grew and progressed in successive developments at A. D. 606, and at A. D. 756, on to the tenth, eleventh and twelfth centuries. This was a very long process of apocalypse or evolution; and now was this the specific object, the special revelation designed and defined in the apostle's prophecy of "the man of sin"? Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind.

A man utterly unused to railway traveling, and ignorant of distances, starts from Boston for Buffalo. He inquires of a fellow-passenger, "Sir, I am going to Buffalo, and I am a perfect stranger to the route; now tell me how and when I may know that I am almost arrived at my journey's end, if you please." Would the answer be—"When you have reached Albany, then you are nearly there"? Certainly not, but something like this: "Listen to the brakeman's cry at every stop; and mind, now, when he opens the door and shouts Batavia! then you are almost there. Be all ready, for in a few minutes afterward you will be in Buffalo."

So when the "man of sin" is revealed or unveiled, then the day of Christ is imminent indeed. Not but that there are other and notable signs. So there are, but this is a conspicuous one. This "man of sin" (anthropos tes hamartias) is the person, as well as character, whom the Lord will consume and destroy, not by a gradual wasting since Luther's day, a providential decay through political upheavals, or spiritual dispensations, but by the literal intervention of Christ at his coming. This is the work to be done, and the way in which it is to be done. It is not, I conceive, a long line of Popes, but a single antichristian man; not the last of a series, but an evolution at the end of a series; not any proper phase or constituent part of the harlot Rome, papacy, or priesthood, but a power rising and dominant after her; not an intriguing and powerful woman, but a more powerful man; not a dependent on the civil power, but a person and a dynasty independent and imperial; not papacy maintained by Cæsarism succeeding, subjecting, and appropriating the glories and prerogatives of the unseated harlot, and all the stronger and more terrible because rid of the burden so long carried.

The last head of the beast lifts up itself erect and intelligent; its ten horns are deflected backward with hostile expression toward the scarlet woman, and you have the masculine (literally) "man of the sin," the centaur (horse and man in mythology, but therionic man in prophecy. And here let me parenthetically suggest if in the seventh and seventh-healed heads of the wild beast we find no notable historical characters known as at home on horseback, as if almost grown to their stallions).

This man is numbered, too, and the number of his name is 666. Now it is clear, I think, that no Pope of any age ever had this number in his name. If it is said apostates is the word that fills the number, then I answer, the apostate preeminently is the successor of the harlot; the man who heads a new religion of demons; who unfurls a banner of a new religion and new revelation; who hides and disguises his true purpose and character as much as possible, to deceive the world; who confederates to be hailed as Messiah by the intensely infidel Jews, whose re-occupation of Palestine he promotes; such is the grand apostate of the last time.

I do not know why it is that so little attention is paid to this characteristic and diagnostic signal of the man, the number 666. It is put in its place expressly as a detective. I take it as such, and would give to it all its eminent value. And when it is intimated that too much is located in the future, and that this is something that has not happened, but is only supposed to be going to happen, I answer that when I find the number 666 in an astonishing variety of ways found and filled in one man, I can trust God's word for what is going to happen, and is probably right at the door.

And now I beg leave especially to say, in answer to the objection that we ought not to allow the idea of unfulfilled prophecies to come in before the coming of Christ, and obscure the expectation of waiting and watching saints; let it be remembered that the whole tenor and intent of all our representation is to make properly evident and prominent this great prospect and promise of a speedy translation of saints. It is from the terrors of this coming and unfulfilled prophecy, that christians ought by faithful warning and a correct representation of the future, to strive and pray to be delivered. I wish this might be constantly borne in mind. If a European potentate leagues with the infidel Jews, to replace them in Palestine, while they accede to the imposed condition of a confessed Messiahship, who does not then see that the day of God has come close at hand, for the man of sin is unveiled? If there be a head of political sovereignties thus accepting before the world such an extraordinary concession of tribute, what an astounding revelation it is indeed! Or if the Romish system is so modified that a great political ruler is seen to incorporate all the tremendous hierarchical prerogatives of the papacy in his own name and person and dynasty, who does not see or can not see that the "man of sin," the anomos, or "wicked one," is revealed? Then you have the man without a conscience installed in his place. Antichrist has come indeed. This is a great and intensely interesting subject, and I believe worthy of great attention, but not of the ridicule which it has received.

Now, I repeat, it is a removal of saints which goes before the inauguration of the hour of temptation through the world, and gives the signal for the great bell-stroke of coming judgment wonders. It is the angel proclamations are heard deep and loud and clear,—"Fear God," "Fallen Babylon," "Worship not the beast." A translation of saints, we say, comes first. Is not this a thrilling expectation and ecstasy of hope? Why do such as maintain that all prophecy is already fulfilled except the coming and kingdom of Christ, overlook the apocalyptic mustering of the mighty host, the beast and his armies, to war with the Lamb? Let us not pretermit such a stupendous item in the scenery of God's wonders; no! not this, nor any other.

Before closing, I wish to ask your attention particularly to the sixth verse of Rev. 13. "The beast" opened her mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven." Underscore this, put it in capitals, scrutinize and survey it ever so keenly and carefully, and what does it teach? What man will say and show that this has properly and truly been fulfilled? I do earnestly think it can not be done. For Rome, instead of blaspheming those that dwell in heaven, prays, or teaches to pray, to saints. And we know, brethren, from God's word, there are no saints in heaven until a translation. What then is intended? I do especially solicit an observation of the great fact brought to view in this passage, that at the time of the accomplishment of this prophecy, there will have been a translation of saints from the earth. And the apostate, infidel antichrist, seeing a brightness in the sky, or at least some visible token of a company raised, housed, and secured in the etherial vast above, is angry. He utters imprecations against the tabernacle of God, and those tabernacling in heaven; not some indefinite, invisible, and infinitely distant home and host in space, but earthly beings immortalized, and by the favor of God made visibly superior to earth and all the power of Satan. God, discriminating and eliminating his elect and praying people, has said in a voice of thunder, "Behold my work! and behold the cloud of glory in which the waiting disciples of the beloved Son of man are now secure." No wonder the man of sin is exasperated.

Yes! unless exceedingly in error, the time is portentously near. I have no sympathy with the setting of a day, as some have done. Still they may know far more than I in such a matter. Some day particularly mentioned may be the day, but I have not that knowledge; and to my mind the definite proclamation of such a time is taking a great responsibility, and, if a failure, will do great harm. I have no sympathy with it, without a better understanding than I have now.

Yours very sincerely, C. COLEGROVE.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—I leave for home this morning. We have had a very rainy day, nevertheless three went down into the river, while others were deterred by the storm. We remarked in our last that it was good to baptize in the sunshine; to-day we found it good to baptize in the rain. The poet had it right when he said,

"Sweet is thy work, my God, my King."

Pray for us. Yours, H. PRATT.

Rochester, May 24th.

From Sr. S. P. Green.

BRN. AND SRS.:—It has been quite a long time since I communicated to you through the Crisis, "our family paper." I prize these papers very highly, as they fail not of coming every week, laden with fresh perfume, a messenger of love and truth, a "silent preacher," wending its way to my humble home among the Plymouth mountains of Vt. This excellent paper ought to have a wider circulation, and might, if all its friends did their duty. Christians, we must not be negligent in little matters. Some of us have not the ability to accomplish great things, but we have "one talent" at least, upon which we must improve, and not "hide it in the earth"; for such will have their portion appointed with "hypocrites and unbelievers." Let us try to do all we can in the name of our blessed Lord; go to him with all our trials and sorrows, to learn our duty in everything; and if we promptly obey, we shall be blessed of him who died for us. Let us not be negligent in caring for the poor, the sick and afflicted, whether at home or abroad, north or south, east or west. Could we not take from out our store of garments and various articles which are laid aside for the present, perhaps, and box or barrel them up, and send them along? And let the poor not forget their duty either; for their mites will be as acceptable in the eyes of the Lord as greater donations of the well-to-do and rich.

I feel within my soul that time is short, and what we do must be done quickly. Soon it will be said, "Time shall be no longer."

"Watch, for the time is short,
Watch while 'tis called to-day;
Watch lest the world prevail;
Watch, christians, watch and pray."

I would be thankful to my heavenly Father for all his favors; would thank the Lord if he would send Bro. Grant, or some other one, to preach the word in this place. Think they would be kindly received. Yours in tribulation, SOPHRONIA P. GREEN.

Plymouth, Vt.

From Sr. F. M. Shimper.

Brethren and sisters of like precious faith: My daughter and myself are nearly alone here respecting our faith in God's blessed word, and we naturally turn for communion and fellowship of saints to those whose weekly letters and communications come to us through the Crisis. Thursday evening is looked forward to with desire, when we usually have a season of rejoicing with those who rejoice, especially in the progress of truth and its effects on the hearts of sinners. We feel it our privilege, also, to sympathize with those who are sad and afflicted, and to remember in earnest prayer those who say, Pray for us. Particularly do we realize a deep and heartfelt interest in the labors of those dear brethren and sisters who have walked out on the promises of God, relying solely on his faithfulness and truth for direction and support; and we greatly magnify the name of the Lord in the gracious fulfillment of his word unto them. And should not his dealings with them lead us all, as God's dear children, to trust him more fully in all our temporal affairs, and to watch more closely for all the indications of his will concerning us?

We are truly living, not only in a "grand and awful time," but in a time rich with opportunities of doing the will of our Father, and of walking in the footsteps of Him "who went about doing good," and of proving for our own selves that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Thanks be to God that this blessedness is not restricted to those who are permitted to give of their abundance, but unto us all, who have but the lesser and the little sums to send, it may be said, "She hath done what she could."

How exceedingly great the privilege to us; and in Him wonderful condescension! to accept and use; and then, oh, then, the reward! May the Lord help us, every one, to be very faithful over the few things, that our account may be rendered unto him with joy when he comes. And how heart-cheering the hope that his glorious second coming will be so very soon. In view of it we often feel, as expressed in the lines—

"When on thine own image in me thou hast smiled
Within thy blest mansion, and when
The arms of my Father encircle his child,
O, I shall be satisfied then!"

Praised be his name, that we know our Redeemer liveth, and because he lives we shall live also. May an abundant entrance be administered unto us through our Lord Jesus Christ. Your sister in this blessed hope, F. M. SHIMPER.

Obituaries.

RICHARDSON. Died in Ellington, Ct., May 18th, 1868, of consumption, Bro. Solomon L. Richardson, aged twenty-four years.

Bro. R. suffered much from the ravages of disease for many months, but he now sleeps in peace waiting for eternal life, when Christ the great life-giver comes. He was wonderfully sustained in his last sickness by the grace of God, and proved that the blessed hope of the gospel was truly an anchor to his soul. He leaves a wife and two little boys, together with a large circle of friends, to mourn his loss, but they sorrow not without hope. May God sustain them in their affliction, and prepare them for a world where separations are unknown. The burial services were attended by the writer. P. S. BUTLER.

SANDERSON. Died in South Barre, N. Y., May 18th, 1868, Sr. Lottie Sanderson, wife of Bro. Edward Sanderson, aged thirty-eight years.

She was sister to Bro. A. P. Moore in the Crisis office. She rests in hope. Bro. Sanderson is left alone.

"How long shall death, the tyrant, reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

May the Lord comfort our much afflicted brother till death gives up her dead. This scattered family of Father Moore's will meet no more in this life. Wide, wide apart, it seems, is their path of duty here; but may they all meet at the marriage of the Lamb. Father's nor mother's tears could fall on Lottie's cold cheek, but though they fell far away from a beloved daughter's funeral, our Father saw them, and he pitieth them as a father pitieth his children. H. PRATT.

MOORE. Died in Rochester, N. Y., May 29th, 1868, Sr. Eliza Moore, aged sixteen years.

She embraced the truth and was baptized into the likeness of death last fall, and when consumption had nearly done its work, she sang sweetly of Him whose coming is nigh at hand; and while life and strength permitted, she gave assurance to all around that "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Ps. 116: 15. The funeral was attended at our hall, and a large congregation listened attentively to a discourse on the sleep and resurrection of the dead. H. PRATT.

RAYMOND. Died in Woodstock, N. B., May 8th, 1868, Samuel Raymond, aged eighty-one years, eight months, and twenty-one days.

He had been sick nine years. More than three-fourths of the time that he was able to sit up during these years, the Bible, or other good reading, was in his hands. Ten days before he died, when he could not very well sit in his chair, he was trying to read in the Bible, and to turn the leaves when there was no strength in his fingers.

My prayer is that his devotedness, patience and resignation may rest upon me, that I may be worthy to meet him with all the redeemed in a little from this, at the marriage supper of the Lamb. His funeral was attended by a Methodist minister. MARY J. RAYMOND.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

LONDON, June 2. Dispatches received by London journals from Abyssinnia state that Gen. Napier reached Senafe with the rear of the expedition on the 24th of May. The widow of the late King Theodore was reported dead.

VIENNA, June 2. Advices have been received from Athens that the representatives of foreign powers in that city have formally protested against the admission of Representatives from Candia to the Grecian Chambers.

LONDON, 3. Official dispatches from Gen. Napier state that his column has passed Senafe, one of the last posts on the route to the coast. He reports the rainy season had set in with the usual violence and disastrous consequences to the inhabitants. The flood running through the Sooroo defile, a vast mountain gorge, was already in such volume that six hundred natives have been drowned.

The Morning Herald of to-day comments on the report of the Royal Commission on the Neutrality laws. The writer says the changes in the existing laws recommended by the Commission are altogether too harsh in character, and, if carried out, will fall with great severity on the shipping interests of England.

VIENNA, June 3. Plans for the reorganization of the military forces of the Empire are being gradually carried into effect. The standing army is to consist of 800,000 men and the Landwehr 200,000 men.

LONDON, June 4. It is rumored in Paris that the Emperor Napoleon is very sick.

PARIS, June 3. France has resumed diplomatic relations with the Bey of Tunis.

MADRID, June 3. The Spanish Government has granted the necessary authorization for the establishment of additional sub-marine telegraph lines in the Gulf of Mexico.

LONDON, June 4. Official dispatches from Gen. Napier, dated Adeguit, May 21, have been received. A small detatchment of troops will remain at Zoulla. All the remaining troops of the expedition have gone forward to Annesly Bay to embark for home. The last dispatch, dated June 1, reports that the royal crown of the late King Theodore, which the soldiers captured in Magdala, was returned to his Queen, who remained at the capital. Gen. Napier also states that the great flood swept through the Sooroo defile, causing great damage and rendering the road impassable. The loss of life, however, was small, only six natives were drowned, instead of six hundred as reported.

DOMESTIC.

New York, June 2. A London special says letters from Abysinnia, dated on the river Tacossi April 30, have been received. Anarchy and civil war prevailed all over the country. The released chieftains had raised armies against Golazaya. The General of the latter, Masheba, pursued one of the released chiefs named Ali Funns, and a battle was fought on the 20th of April, in which Ali was victorious. When the Walda men with Masheba saw Ali, their former chief, they reversed spears and rushed to him with joy. They then turned on Mashesba, defeated the remainder of his army and took him prisoner. Queen Mustevat, with 12,000 Galla horsemen, held Magdala. The priests say Menelek is the legitimate King. Sad stories are related of the cruelties practiced by Theodore. It is believed that when the English leave the country the Egptians will take possession of it.

Rockland, Me., June 2. During the rain last Friday a waterspout swept down Moody's mountain in the town of Hope, cutting three ravines down the mountain, one of them four rods wide and eight feet deep. It also uprooted in its course trees ten inches in diameter, and raised Linconville pond in one night three feet higher than ever known before.

New York, June 2. A Montreal special says the Fenians are quiet at Malone and St. Albans. There are 25,000 stand of arms at Ogdensburg, and beef and pork for 6000 men for ten days are on its way. An attack is menaced on Prescott and Cromwell, to cut the canals. Government detectives report all ominously quiet, but a raid is certain before the 1st of July. The Dominion Government protests against the removal of troops, and insists that three regiments be sent out and four batteries. Two batteries have been sent to the front and two million rounds of cartridges. An order to-day doubles the volunteers' pay, in order to keep the efficiency of the force.

Havana, June 1. Honduras dates of the 18th ult. state that there is great excitement in Honduras and Nicaragua owing to the renewal of British pretensions over the Mosquito country.

The new tariff law at Honduras is postponed till the first of August.

Havana papers assert that Salnave was beaten and escaped from Port au Prince.

The commander of the American man-of-war was informed, on good authority, while at Port au Prince, that the complaints of foreigners about their treatment were exaggerated as well as those of the United States Minister who wanted a large war vessel to be stationed there for the purpose of watching the coast, making a demonstration and forcing the Haytiens to salute the "Stars and Stripes" whenever they may be raised.

New York, June 5. Letters from Lima, Peru, state that there was some apprehension of war between that country and Chili growing out of differences arising between the two countries relative to proceedings pertaining to the settlement of the late war with Spain.

A special Montreal dispatch, dated yesterday, says: The scare throughout the Dominion is increasing instead of abating, and the authorities add to the general fear of an impending raid by the extensive preparations they are making. In this city a flying column of four companies of regulars and two battalions of volunteers are under orders to move at a moment's notice to any point they may be ordered. At Quebec, the volunteers have been ordered to draw the requisite amount of ammunition and rations, and to keep themselves prepared in every particular for a campaign. A large force of British regulars is to be sent to Prescott next week, and in the meantime large quantities of ammunition and other war materials are being forwarded to that point.

At Athelone, Canada, the Fenian sympathizers are jubilant, and boast that the news they have of the movements of the Irish leaders makes it certain that the invasion will take place before the 20th inst. Two men were arrested at Sweetsburg yesterday, charged with being Fenian spies. Maps and papers implicating them were found in their possession. One of the men has but one arm. He says that he came from New York. Both of the prisoners are now confined in jail and strongly guarded.

Another dispatch dated Malone, yesterday, says: "Fenian fairs are to be gotton up here and at St. Albans, Vt., for the purpose of covering up the collection of men for the coming raid into Canada. A large number of arms are rapidly arriving at this point and elsewhere, and prominent Fenians say that within the present month they will have a large force and firm footing in the Dominion. Two car loads of small arms have arrived at Chateaugay Four Corners. An invasion into Canada is certain to take place by way of Burke and Chateaugay."

TERRIFIC HAIL STORM IN TEXAS.—From the San Antonio Express of May 21st we gather interesting particulars of a disastrous hail storm which visited that locality. The city, it says, is a perfect wreck; every house in it has received some damage; many are in complete ruins, with nothing but fragments of walls standing. The hail stones penetrated the best roofs, going through tin roofs like cannon balls. All the windows facing to the north have been smashed in, even window shutters and doors were broken down. The appearance of the city could not have been worse under a severe bombardment. Trees were stripped of their leaves and branches, which lie piled up in the yards and streets—the sides of houses exposed to the hail have the appearance of having withstood a thousand discharges of grape and canister. The roofing of the entire city is perforated like a sieve. One hailstone weighing over five pounds was found, and a great many as large as a man's fist were picked up. Many of the families whose houses were beaten down took shelter under beds and thus escaped bodily harm. Only one death is reported—that of a negro boy. Several persons had limbs broken. The corn patches and gardens are flattened to the ground, and have the appearance of having passed through a chopping mill. All the fruit crop is destroyed. The damage exceeds $500,000. The storm resembled a terrific battle, the lightning flashing in fearful vividness, the thunder crashing like a thousand cannon, and the hail falling like shot; so fearful was the noise that no one could hear unless they screamed in each other's ears. It commenced near New Braunfels, and extended from five to twenty miles in width—destroying everything over a region thirty miles from north to south and ten to twenty miles from east to west."—Journal.

THE CATHOLICS IN NEW YORK.—From official sources we learn that the Catholic population numbers about 550,000. It is the great power in the city. Nearly every office of emolument is filled by members of this church or controlled by them. Were it not for the rural population, even the school fund would be appropriated by them to what they call religious instruction. In estimating the church accommodations of the Catholics, it is usual to count the sittings as in a Protestant church. By this computation a large portion of the Catholics would be deprived of church privileges. No computation could be more fallacious. The St. Peter's Church for instance is a large church, but no larger than many Protestant churches in this city. Its average number of worshipers on the Sabbath is 25,000. The Mass commences at six o'clock in the morning, and is repeated every hour during the forenoon. The church is emptied and filled at each service. This is true of all the Catholic churches in the city. At the same time the basement is full of children, who do not mingle with the congregation up stairs. To them Mass is said.

THE LARGEST CITY IN THE WORLD.—A very erroneous idea is indulged in by many people in relation to the largest city in the world, many confidently asserting that London, or as it is frequently termed, the Great Metropolis, is far superior, both in size and number of its inhabitants. But such is not the case; Jeddo, the capital of Japan, is the largest and most populous city in the world. It contains the vast number of 1,500,000 dwellings, and 5,000,000 of human souls. Many of the streets are nineteen Japan series in length, which is equivalent to twenty-two English miles. The commerce of Jeddo far exceeds that of any other city in the world, and the sea along the coast is constantly white with the sails of their ships. Their vessels sail to the Southern portion of the empire, where they load with rice, tea, sea-coal, tobacco, silk, cotton and tropical fruits, which can find a ready market in the North, and then return, freighted with salt, corn, isinglass, and various other products of the North, which have a market in the South.

PERSECUTION FOR SINGING HYMNS.—On Friday last the General Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church of Pennsylvania suspended from eldership and membership Mr. George H. Stuart of Philadelphia for the offence of singing hymns. The rules of the Synod forbid the use of any other metrical compositions in divine worship than a certain version of the Psalms of David—the versification of which in some instances is very quaint and poor. Mr. Stuart, however, had attended what are called union prayer meetings, and on those occasions had joined in singing the hymns given out from what is called the Union Hymn Book. He was accordingly suspended, after a sharp and somewhat excited debate, not without protest from several influential members of the Synod, but to the great satisfaction of the adherents of the old fashioned customs. Mr. Stuart is widely known from his connection with the United States Christian Commission.—Journal.

REMARKABLE PRESERVATION OF THE REMAINS OF HON. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.—An inspection of the remains of Stephen A. Douglas was made on Tuesday, preparatory to their removal to the tomb erected to his memory. Upon removing the lid covering the glass, the face of the deceased was found to be in a remarkable state of preservation, almost as natural as when buried seven years ago. The complexion is very fair, the contour of the head and face apparently unchanged, and the expression quite natural and plainly recognizable. The hair looks as black and glossy as ever, and the raiment as new and tidy as when first put on, not presenting the least evidence of mildew or discoloration.

POSTPONEMENT OF JEFF DAVIS'S TRIAL.—Richmond, Va., 3d. The U. S. Court met this morning, Chief Justice Chase presiding. In the case of Jefferson Davis, after consultation between the counsel and the Court, a postponement was granted until the next term. The Chief Justice said he would attend next term, if possible, in view of his other duties. Gen. R. E. Lee was recognized to appear on the fourth Monday in November, and the prisoner's bail bond was renewed.

KING THEODORE. The London Times' correspondent says that the day before the arrival of the British army at Magdala, Theodore summoned all the prisoners to his presence, and in cold blood butchered over three hundred of them, some with his own hand, almost within sight and hearing of the rest. The King, after he found resistance to the English useless, shot himself with a pistol.

☞ The persecutions of the Israelites in the Principalities have enlisted the sympathy of the Austrian Government. It is reported at Vienna that Baron Von Beust has decided, in the event of a satisfactory reply not being given by the government of Roumania to the last despatch of Baron Eder, the Austrian Consul General at Bucharest, to refer the matter to the decision of the guaranteeing powers. This course is rendered necessary by the Treaty of Paris, which forbids the intervention of any single power in the affairs of the Principalities.

☞ Arizona has cactuses fifty feet high and bearing delicious fruit.

Items.

☞ The defiant churchmen who will not obey their Bishop and let other denominations alone met in council in Brooklyn a short time since. The rector, Rev. Mr. Brewer, had with him in his chancel John Cotton Smith, Rev. Mr. Malcome of Newport and others. On introducing Mr. Malcome, Mr. Brewer said: "I have had the pleasure of having in this chancel ministers of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches. I am now happy to introduce to you a Baptist clergyman who will address you."

☞ An Austrian, condemned to six years hard labor, has made a curious time-piece, mostly from refuse of his rations of rye-bread. The clock indicates the hours, minutes, seconds, the days and months of the year. The hands are of wood and the figures and dial plate of straw; the rest, even to the key, is made from the crumbs of bread.

☞ The Emperor of Austria asserts that he had to make his choice of two alternatives with regard to the recent laws hostile to the concordat—to sign them or abdicate—and he chose the former. This explanation is intended to soften the resentment for his violation of the concordat.

☞ A furious storm of wind, hail and rain, accompanied by a great deal of thunder and lightning, passed over Central Illinois and Southern Indiana on Thursday evening. At St. Louis it was very violent. It created sad havoc with the telegraph wires, tearing down many poles, uprooting trees and unroofing houses through Illinois.

☞ Great fires are raging in the pine woods of northern Wisconsin. The village of Palmer's Falls has been entirely burned. Several farm houses and barns have been consumed, besides many thousand cords of cut wood. The roads in many places are obstructed by the conflagrations.

☞ Mayor Wallach of Washington officially denies the story of two gambling houses in that city at which richly dressed ladies, connected with families whose standing is high in the community, earnestly engage in playing "faro."

☞ Deep sea soundings off the island of St. Croix, W. I., reveal the fact that no bottom is found at the depth of six thousand feet, only a mile and a half from the shore, from which it is inferred that St. Croix is the apex of an immense submarine mountain.

☞ The letter of the Emperor of China to the United States Government, formally presented on Tuesday last, extended over twenty-five feet of parchment.

☞ Hon. Charles Sumner, in reply to a query put by the Hon. Hiram Ramey of New York in regard to the proper way to spell the name of our new territory, says Alaska is right.

☞ While we on this side of the Atlantic have been shivering from the backwardness of the season, the English and French papers have been complaining of unseasonable and unusual heat.

☞ The French are agitating the subject of introducing wool growing into Algeria, in the hope of making it the Australia of France.

☞ The Bishop of Exeter has attained his ninetieth year, having been born at Bridgewater on the 6th of May, 1778.

☞ There are no less than eighty-seven steamers sailing to Europe from New York, and all—with, perhaps, one exception—are owned abroad.

☞ In Indiana they have discovered that there is a sort of lining to the sweet gum tree which answers all the purposes of chamois leather.

☞ By a slight alteration in the Prussian needle gun, it can be made to discharge thirteen shots per minute, instead of eight, as at present.

☞ There is living in New Haven an old soldier of Napoleon the 1st, who fought all through the campaigns of the Empire, including Waterloo.

☞ Fifteen thousand United States knapsacks have been sent to Milford from the War Department to be made into boots.

☞ Franklin Pierce is the only man living ever elected President of the United States.

☞ The telegraph offices in London give steady employment to more than three hundred women.

☞ A parrot died recently in Durham, England, at the age of 75 years.

☞ The book trade throughout the country is dull, even for the beginning of summer.

☞ France pays $3,000,000 for its Legislature, and $5,000,000 for its Emperor.

A Grove Meeting in Charlton.

The Lord willing, there will be a grove or tent-meeting in the south-easterly part of Charlton, Mass., two miles east of Dresser Hill, one half mile from Rams-Horn factory, about five miles from Webster, Oxford, Dudley, and Southbridge; on land owned by Mr. Green, commencing June 16th, at 7½ o'clock, P. M., holding over Sunday. Preaching three times each day. Brethren and sisters in regions round about, let there be a general rally to this meeting. It is the first of the kind in this section. The field being nearly new, come provided for yourselves as far as you can. If any have tents to stop in, it will be well to bring them. Bro. L. Boutell and other preaching brethren are expected there to help preach the word of salvation. We are nearing home. Soon our work will be done. Shall we have it well done? Sinners around us need salvation through Jesus. Shall we make efforts to have them hear? Now is our time to work. Up, then. Let us put shoulder to the wheel. Tell them of a dying, risen Jesus; his willingness to save all that will come unto him, and of his coming again. Let us be urgent in the matter. Dear brethren and sisters, make this meeting a subject of prayer, that the name of God may be glorified. Come one, come all.

Those coming from a distance, can have provision made for them and their horses. Preaching brethren are invited. GEO. A. STREETER.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting commence at Wednesday Hill, Lee., N. H., on land of Bro. Leonard Wiggins, (near where the barn meeting has been held for the last two years), on Saturday, July 4th, 1868, and hold over the Sunday following, and as much longer as may be thought proper. We have engaged the new tent in Bro. D. M. Leavitt's charge. We hope there will be a general gathering of our brethren and sisters. The blessed work has begun.

It is expected during this meeting that the ordinance of baptism will be attended to. Come, you who have been staggering at this command, and go forward with the young converts and be baptized.

Those going from Mass. will leave the cars at Newmarket Depot, and thence by conveyance to the ground in Lee, about three and a half miles. Those coming from Great Falls and Dover, will leave the cars at Durham Depot, thence to the ground, two and a half miles. Those coming to remain through the meeting must bring some bedding; but the brethren and sisters in the place will do all they can, no doubt, for their hearts are open. For the brethren, GEO. H. CHURCHILL.

Annual Conference.

The New York State Annual Conference will meet at Rochester, Thursday, June 25th, 1868, and continue over the Sabbath. A tent will be pitched and straw furnished to "camp on the field." Friends will bring provisions, and, as far as practicable, bedding. Come to take care of yourselves, to work for the Lord, to help save the perishing; come with the armor of God, the spirit of Christ, and bring in the worthy poor, and we will provide for them. Come to sacrifice for the truth, and to worship God. Come, brethren, the shades of evening are lengthening, and soon our work will be done. May it be well done. In behalf of the church at Rochester, H. PRATT.

The members of the New York State Christian Conference, and all interested in the soon coming kingdom, are requested to meet in pursuance of and in the spirit of the above notice.

C. W. LOW, Vice President.
W. MARLATT, Secretary.
B. P. STEVENS.

Annual Grove Meeting.

The annual grove meeting of Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., will be held June 20th and 21st, on the Morris farm, two miles and a half east of the village. Let there be a general gathering to this meeting. Come, with hearts uplifted to God for his blessing, to labor for the cause of God and the salvation of souls. All are invited, both ministers and laymen. For the brethren,

C. F. SWEET.

P. S. Meeting to commence at 7½ o'clock P. M., at the school-house, on Friday, the 19th, and at one o'clock P. M. on Saturday, in the grove.

C. F. S.

Star of Hope Mission.

RECEIPTS. Henry Hart, O.D. Woodruff, Southington, Conn., $5.00; Bro. Pierce, Nantucket, R. I., $5.00; from the church of Honeoye, N. Y., by E. S. Jennings, a barrel of clothing, etc., also $6.00; J. B. Morgan, for rent, $1.25. West Northfield; [illegible] Old Lyme, Ct., $2.00; H. L. Woodard, Webster, Mass., $2.00; A. H. Stowe, New Haven, Ct., $2.00; G. F. Tripp, North Bridgewater, Mass., $1.00; Sr. Cora C. C. Smith, a barrel of clothing and sundries, South Hadley Falls, Mass.; Mrs. G. P. Persons, Hockanum, Conn., $5.00; Bro. Moses, Chelsea, Mass., by H. L. Hastings, $10.00.

ANNA E. SMITH.

Fourth of July Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Exeter, Me., on the fourth of July, and continue over the Sabbath, in the old meeting-house, which is now being repaired. We give a hearty invitation to brethren who live in other places to attend this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of the Lord, ready to work for the Master. We some expect that a young brother from Philadelphia will be with us. We would be glad to meet other servants of the Lord who have the word of God to preach to the people. There will be homes enough for all who wish to attend. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting. Let us see who loves the cause of God more than pleasure. The Lord is at hand. Awake, awake, put on thy beautiful garments, O Zion! ALLEN DAMON.

Meetings.

The Lord will, I shall attend the grove meeting at Charlton, Mass., commencing June 16th, also the conference at Savoy. Let preachers and people come out with hearts to work, and they will find that to do which will glorify God and make men better. I will come first train, Wednesday, June 17th, to Webster, Mass. L. BOUTELL.

Conference.

The conference in Poultney, Vt., will be held June 27th and 28th. All the brethren and friends of sister adjacent churches are invited to come to this conference and participate therein. No one need feel that he or she is not invited to this gospel feast. In behalf of the church, J. B. COOK.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. SMITH.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting at Greenville, Smithfield, R. I., about half a mile north of the village, to commence June 17th, and continue a week or more, as the interest demands. Stages run from Providence, R. I., and Putnam, Ct., directly to the village. E. BELLOWS.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our conference will hold its next session at Westerly, R. I., commencing Wednesday, July 1st, at 2 o'clock P. M. We trust no exhortation is necessary to have a full representation of preachers and delegates from all churches. Be sure and write us a good letter if not represented otherwise. H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly session of the Advent Christian Conference of this State, will be held in Whitefield, N. H., commencing June 12th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large gathering of the friends of the coming One at this meeting. Bro. Couch and others of the Lord's servants will be present to preach the word. A. W. SIBLEY Secretary.

Maine Western Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held with the church in Biddeford, commencing in their chapel, Wednesday evening, June 17th, and continuing over Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend, and unite in the worship of the Lord and the work of saving souls. Call on Bro. J. C. Libby, who will direct you to places of entertainment. I. C. WELLCOME.

Minnesota Annual Conference.

The sixth annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Minnesota will commence on Thursday evening, June 25th, 1868, in Burr Oak, six miles east of Elliota. The members of the conference are all especially requested to be present, or report themselves by letter. The churches within the bounds of the conference are respectfully requested to send delegates.

N. B. All persons wishing to connect themselves with the conferernce, will please remember that according to the constitution adopted last year, such candidates must be previously recommended by the quarterly conference, or church to which they may belong. THOMAS R. ALLEN.

Conference.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held in the "Free House" at Lincolnville Centre, Maine, commencing Thursday, June 18th, 1868, at 7 P. M. Call upon E. Calderwood, Moses Young, D. Fletcher, and E. Blood.

Per order of Conf. Clerk, F. A. BAKER.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Savoy, Mass., to commence Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see many of the lovers of Jesus and his coming at this meeting. Come, leave your work, brethren, and come to this meeting all ready to work in harmony with Christ. E. OWEN, Secretary.

Conference.

There will be a conference at South Livermore, Saturday, June 13th. Brethren are invited. Also over the Sabbath, June 14th, at the same place. JESSE GAY.

Conference.

The New York State Conference is expected to be held in Rochester about the middle of June. Particulars hereafter. H. PRATT.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us. WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

I shall be at home till the 16th of June, instead of leaving the first, as has been stated in our papers. So brethren can continue to send for works till then. But letters sent to Buffalo after that will be forwarded, and answered as soon as possible. J. BLAIN.

Hymn Book.

The Second Advent Hymn Book can be obtained at the following prices, of Mrs. P. A. Smith, No. 4, Frank St., Rochester, N. Y. (by sending the money with the order): Less than one dozen, 25 cts. per copy; postage 3 cts. One dozen, $2.50; postage 36 cts. One hundred, $15.00, sent by express. For sale at this office.

The Maine Tract Fund.

WM. H. MITCHELL,
R. R. YORK,
S. K. PARTRIDGE, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,
No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

ANNA E. SMITH, Superintendent and Manager.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. BOUTELL.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. WENDELL.

To the Preaching Brethren.

The brethren in West Haven, Ct., have hired a Hall for the purpose of holding meetings, and would be glad to have the preaching brethren visit them. But, to save confusion, before sending their appointments, they are requested to consult M. J. Brooks, Cor. Sec.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

For the World's Crisis.

THE RESURRECTION MORNING.

When Christ shall come, with glory crowned,
To raise his saints who sleep,
The righteous then, at trumpet's sound,
Shall rise no more to weep.

All tears shall then be wiped away,
All sorrows will be o'er;
There's no more death from that glad day,
On Eden's blissful shore.

There's room enough for all who will,
To enter Zion's gates;
O! sinner, come, God loves you still,
For you the Savior waits.

Behold the light! break forth and sing,
For soon the morn will come,
When we shall see our heavenly King,
And dwell in peace at home.

Look to the Savior,—He's our guide
Through all life's rugged path;
And soon we'll meet beyond the tide
Of this world's sin and wrath.

O! hail with triumph that glad sound,
When we our Lord shall see;
And may our hearts be ever found
Full of his grace so free.

These days of toil will soon be past,
Soon we shall shout for joy;
For our blest Savior's come at last,
And nothing will annoy.

Then let us ever cast our care
On Jesus, our best friend;
He ever will our sorrows share,
If we on him depend.

Brimfield, Mass. GEO. E. LEE.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM CHICAGO, ILL.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, Greeting:—"Grace be unto you, and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ, in whom we have redemption through his blood, and the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." Beloved: be it known unto you that I, Charles C. Ramsay, of Boston, Mass., left that ancient and (dis)-honorable city on the eighth day of Jan., and proceeded westward; and by the blessing of God I arrived safe on the eleventh in this city of lager beer and plank sidewalks. Lager seems to be one of the staple articles of the place; almost every grocer has a sign marked "Premium Ale and Lager Beer." The sale of it is open, and no one interferes, either week-day or Sunday; and notwithstanding all this, one sees less drunkenness in Chicago in one week than in Boston in one day; yet Boston boasts of her temperance reform!

Now one word about sidewalks. If Chicago people love their beer, they also prize their sidewalks; for if the one helps them into the mud, certainly the other helps to keep them out of it. Plank, plank, and clank, clank, is the order of the day, and night too. As far as one can see in this level city, it is one long line of plank. The monotony is occasionally broken by the insertion of a few steps, either up or down, ranging from one to a dozen, which make it very tiresome for the pedestrian; but were it not for the plank, people would be unable to go about, for brick and stone are not so easily obtained. The city being young, reminds me of a boy growing so fast that there is a long space between the top of his shoes and the bottom of his pants. So with this young city; the houses are built for miles out on the prairie; sidewalks of plank aid in reaching them; but the city government cannot keep pace with them and improve the streets as fast as the inhabitants extend them.

Almost every kind of business is carried on extensively, and Chicago is acknowledged to be the great centre of the Northwest. Churches are being built every year, and the constant tide of emigration affords to the servants of God a field of labor without a parallel. Men of all classes, in pursuit of wealth, coming from different parts of the world, bringing with them their customs and prejudices, settle in Chicago. The German States are largely represented. Norway also claims her thousands. Sweden is not to be left out. And Erin exhibits her green flag with as much pride as in Boston. There are men also from every State in the Union, from Maine to California. Every body seems to be alive; not only those who labor with their hands, but those who have brains enough to act as though they thought they ought to use them (although I am sorry to say most of the brains in Chicago are suffering from an inflammation, which may culminate in congestion). The money fever has swept over this tract of country. Some of those who have had the disease in its worst form have tried the greenback remedy, and it worked so well that they persist in being sick for the sake of taking the medicine, which is said to be quite palatable, and even children will cry for it. But after all, there are some here who are not living for this life only, but are laying up treasures where moth doth not corrupt, who are disposed to work while the day lasts, and be in a condition when the Master comes to hear it said, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

And now, dear friends, I will give you an account of things pertaining to the cause we love so well. I am very happy to say that it is in a prosperous condition, and the lovers of Jesus and his appearing are trying to please the Master by bearing their cross and testifying for him in every avenue of daily and business life.

I should like very much to tell you of the condition and prosperity of the church here, if I could do so without mixing myself up in the matter. And here let me remark that I very much dislike blowing my own horn, and it troubles me exceedingly to write of these things, not because I am ashamed of the cause, unless it is there has been so little done; but it is for this reason, beloved: there are so many I's and We's in these days, that I have thought I would say nothing; but friends have said, Why do we not hear from you in the Crisis? Dear ones, it is for fear that I might boast; for you know how easy it is to say, "We shall," "I will," "I have," "I can," "I must," "I did," etc. Now I feel just as though every I referring to myself should be dotted, and if you will consider that it is little i writing to you, I will tell you what the little ones are doing for the Master here.

First after my arrival, secured a boarding place, and the next day being Sunday I set about finding that sect of whom we hear it sometimes said they are "every where spoken against"; but it was not so in this instance, for I could find no one for a long time that could speak either for or against them, they were so little known. After several hours of unsuccessful hunting, I finally heard of them, and upon repairing to the place I found twelve gathered together in an upper room. I was not long in making myself known as the bearer of despatches from the King of kings, and the dear ones received me with open arms and hearts. We had a good time, and I announced that I would speak the following Sunday.

When the time arrived the people came, also the Spirit of the Lord met with us, and I trust that it was for the mutual benefit of both preacher and people. I feel that God sent me to this place, and am willing to labor until he sends some one better fitted for the place. I found a little vineyard here, but the foxes had nearly destroyed the vines. Some weeds also had sprung up and were thriving finely, especially that infernal evergreen, Envy, which is like the deadly Upas; but, thanks be to God, there is a disposition here to pull up and root out all such things, and bear fruit unto holiness, and in the end reap everlasting life. The lovers of Jesus and his appearing have resolved to be found of him in peace, and in order to work efficiently in the cause of the Master they have covenanted together, and now by his blessing expect to save some souls from death. But not without some severe struggles, for the enemy is on the alert, and he will not give up his prey until he is obliged to. We do not expect he will let us alone, for he appeared in the garden of Eden almost as soon as Adam did, and every garden that has been planted since that time has been visited by his Satanic Majesty. Pray for us, that we may be enabled to stand and withstand the wiles of the enemy.

Now I must tell you that connected with our little church there is one of the most interesting Sunday Schools I was ever in, considering the time it has been in operation. It was organized amid some discouragements, for very few seemed to favor it. Our first meeting for organization was attended by four individuals, but the thing moved, and it has been blessed by the Lord. The first Sunday thirteen scholars came. The second Sunday twenty-three. A constant increase in numbers has attended the prayers and efforts of the people. God has blessed the school with a superintendent who has its welfare at heart. He loves his work, and also the Master; and Jesus manifested his pleasure by blessing him in the enterprise. May it be his happy lot to meet scores of the little ones in the kingdom. The teachers also are worthy of the name they bear, and if faithful to their charge God will give them a new name in the kingdom of his Son; and when the great gathering day shall come, superintendent, teachers, scholars, ministers, brethren, sisters, all God's family, will be gathered to part no more.

Since I came here I have enjoyed the blessed privilege of burying seven souls with Christ by baptism in the waters of Lake Michigan. It was a heavenly season; although the waves run high and the wind blew furiously, it was peace within. One sister, in relating her experience for the day, remarked that she was greatly blessed in doing her duty, and felt when she went down into the water that if Jesus had told her to walk across the Lake, she could have done it. May her confidence never be less in her Savior's power to save.

The little church here are desirous of obtaining a chapel, the place they now occupy being too small. One friend has pledged five hundred dollars, others one hundred; and undoubtedly a place will be provided for their accommodation. Pray for us, dear pilgrims, that we may be able to gather many souls to meet the Lord when he comes.

There is an interest here to hear the truth. The Germans are awake, and God has raised up one of their number, Bro. Sneider, a Baptist minister and pastor of a church in this place. He is interested in the coming of the Lord, and sound in respect to the life and death question. His people love him dearly, but his brethren in the ministry are not friendly. They called a council to try him, but his people rallied to his support and would not allow it.

I have been delivering a course of lectures on the prophecies. Bro. Sneider attended. He has procured a chart, and is giving lectures in German. God bless him for the noble stand he has taken. Pilgrims, pray for him, that he may be able to feed his flock with the bread of life, and that we may all meet on the mountains of Israel, where there will be one nation.

Having now given you a description of this city, and told you of the prosperity of Zion, I bid you farewell, praying God that he may keep us all in his peace and love, and the patient waiting for his Son from heaven. Your brother, waiting for eternal life,

C. C. RAMSEY.

LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION.

BY REV. NORMAN A. MILLERD.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of our Puritan ancestors, for which they suffered persecution and ridicule, was their opposition to certain forms of worldly amusement. The churches descended from the Puritans have inherited much of their sentiment upon this subject. There are certain forms of amusement which excite the passions and tend to excess. These, Christianity has always condemned, and not without reason. It is no blind and cynical opposition to human happiness, no sour austerity of the christian heart, that begets this opposition. There is reason for it. So Christ and his apostles thought; for their warnings against the danger of worldliness are thickly scattered over the pages of the New Testament. The danger is positive and distinct. It is this: Such amusements tend to engross the affections and keep souls from Christ.

Of late there has appeared a disposition to relax the strictness of christian requirement on this subject. It is one of the signs of incoming worldliness. It comes along with the disparagement of the vital and effective doctrines of Christianity, the dishonor of the Sabbath, and the depreciation of prayer-meetings, revivals, and earnest, practical spirituality. One who loves to sit at the feet of Jesus and learn of him, who loves the Bible and prayer and christian society, and, in sympathy with the Savior, delights to point sinners to the Lamb of God, will have but little desire for those amusements that absorb the affections and steal souls from Jesus.

It is urged that some of these reprobated amusements might be divested of their abuses, and then afford harmless and profitable relaxation. But they lose their interest when divested of their abuses. It is those fascinations of such amusements which consume time, excite the mind and pre-occupy the heart, that cause them to be so much desired. Few would enjoy a dancing party but for that excitement which awakens and increases the desire for stimulants; that excitement which prolongs its enjoyment till a late hour in the night or an early hour in the morning, and sends its jaded votary to a prayerless bed. The excitement of dancing is fascinating and excessive. Those who delight in it will leave almost anything for it. Mothers will abandon poor sick children for the night and risk their dying, to whirl in the intoxicating mazes of the dance. The separation and sorrow of how many families can be traced directly to dancing! Look at wives divorced from their husbands, children in disgrace, hearts crushed with agony, deepest misery that can befal a family, traced directly to this cause. If you ever pray "Lead us not into temptation," don't dance.

The game of billiards is a beautiful and fascinating game. But one cannot become proficient in it without consuming much time upon it. Moreover a billiard table costs more than most persons can afford to spend for mere private amusement, and hence billiard tables are only found occasionally in the houses of the rich, and in public places where liquor is sold and gambling is practised. Let a man indulge in this amusement in some reputable place until he is in love with it, and when he is away from the disreputable place his desires to play will be so strong that it will tempt him into the saloon and into the midst of all the evil associations that are found there.

The theatre would lose its popularity with the multitude and cease to be supported, if it did not minister to low and depraved tastes. Without the indelicate inuendoes, the indecent exposures, the vile excitements, the ridicule of sacred things, the unnatural and false views of life, and the confounding of virtue with vice, that are exhibited upon the stage, the actors might play to empty benches.

One cannot indulge a love for such things and yet retain an interest in religion. Remember the words of the beloved John: "Love not the world, neither the things of the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, these are not of the Father, but are of the world." A disciple does not long for sinful amusements until he has begun to lose his relish for the prayer-meeting, the closet and the Bible. When a professor of religion is found sighing for those worldly amusements with which Satan beguiles souls, there will almost always be found in such a one a want of spirituality.

"But christians must provide amusements to win the young," some say, as if amusement were the one thing needed to bring men to Christ! It is like a temperance society laying in a plentiful supply of the best wines for the purpose of reforming drunkards. The only way to win souls for Christ is to exhibit the loveliness of Christ himself. The one thing needful is not amusement, but heavenly wisdom; it is the friendship and society and instruction of Jesus. His presence must be the soul's sweetest refreshment. His society must be the greatest pleasure. Jesus must be the "chiefest among ten thousand, the one altogether lovely," or the affections are placed upon wrong objects, and the soul will be corrupted and destroyed.

It is to save souls from such temptations and dangers that the church has discriminated against those exciting forms of amusements that tend to excess; and to passion, lust, and intemperance as well, and has forbidden them. A revival season will always justify the wisdom of the prohibition.—Advance.

SINNING BY PROXY;

OR,

Partaking of Other Men's Sins.

"Neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure."—1 TIM. 5: 22.

1. Postmasters, under government, are partakers of other men's sins—sins of the nation, by opening, assorting, and delivering the mail on the Lord's day. "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?" Psalm 94: 20. "Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep; for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you. Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death; for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people." Ex. 31: 13, 14. The day being changed from the seventh to the first does not lessen, in the slightest degree, our obligation to keep it holy.

2. Those who vote for wicked rulers and officers in the city, state, or nation, not only become partakers of their guilt, but in a sense become responsible for every act of these ungodly men whom they have been instrumental in elevating to office!

"The wicked walk on every side,
When the vilest men are exalted."

"When the wicked bear rule the people mourn." Prov 29: 2. "Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men hating covetousness; and place such over them to be rulers." Deut. 1:13.

3. Sellers of intoxicating drinks, wholesale and retail, become, in no small degree, partakers of the sin, misery, and ruin of the drunkard and his family! Fearful! What a hell that, where drunkards and drunkard makers meet! Distillers, grog-sellers, saloon and hotel keepers, beware! Mark well the words of Christ, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

Dealers in strong drinks find this passage literally true—the curses they impart often return tenfold upon their pates, into their own bosoms. Very many children of those who traffic in liquid death and distilled damnation become inebriates, bloated sots, and find a drunkard's grave! Fathers, mothers, sons, and daughters, all find a common hell of weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth!

4. Those who rent stores, shops, houses, groves, or any property, for the sale of spirituous liquors or poisonous narcotics, are partakers of the sins of those who traffic in these poisons, as they are directly or indirectly instrumental in furthering the cause of Satan. Reader, how many church-members, think you, whose hands are thus imbued in the blood of souls! Open your eyes, look around in our cities and villages. What! rent your house, your store, your field, your grove, for purposes unhallowed—riot, drunkenness, dissipation, or Sabbath desecration? Dare you do it, friend, for silver or gold? God will frown on this iniquity, sure as life, and hold you responsible for all the evil resulting therefrom.

5. Those who rent halls or public buildings for any sinful or unhallowed amusements, such as circuses, opera singers, theatrical performances, lewd exhibitions, naked statuary, balls, dancing-parties, rioting, licentious dissipation, etc. Not long since we knew quite a conspicuous church member who prepared a hall expressly for renting to frolickers and other panders to vice and wickedness! Shameful! Man, where is your piety? "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God." "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

6. Owners of stocks in Sabbath-breaking companies, such as railroad, steamboat, manufacturing companies, etc., which companies employ these instruments in violating the commands of God, are verily guilty, even though they may be sitting demurely in God's sanctuary at the time of this Sabbath desecration. Stockholders, be sure your sins will find you out. "Thus saith the Lord: Take heed to yourself, and bear no burden on the Sabbath-day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem. Neither carry forth a burden out of your house on the Sabbath-day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the Sabbath-day, as I commanded your fathers." Jer. 17:21,22.

7. Those who advertise and puff infidel and licentious books, mixed publications, novels, romances, the light and frothy readings of the day, are instrumental in leading thousands into the path to hell, going down to the chambers of death, and thus become both instruments and partakers of these evils. How many termed religious editors, are in this way rushing the fiery car of Satan! Very many of these fashionable periodicals lead directly to the vilest and most corrupt and licentious reading. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

Satan transforms himself into an angel of light. Editors, are you aware of the mischief you are doing in giving favorable notice of these popular works of fiction?

"How shall I speak thee, or thy power address,
Thou god of our idolatry, the Press!
Like Eden's dread probationary tree,
Knowledge of good and evil is from thee!

8. Servants employed in the service of their masters and mistresses, partake of the sins of their employers, when they do those things on the Sabbath which God commands them not to do. During our residence in New Orleans we were shocked to hear ministers of the gospel, while preaching to the colored people, exhort them to be obedient to their masters, even though they required them to labor on God's holy day! "Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge." "Woe unto the foolish prophets." "If the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch. Matt. 15: 4. He that saveth his life shall lose it." "Let God be true, but every man a liar." Servants obey your masters in the Lord, and only in the Lord, come life, come death.

D. F. NEWTON.

ZION'S BANK.

I have a never failing bank,
My more than golden store;
No earthly bank is half so rich,
How, then, can I be poor?

'Tis when my stock is spent and gone,
And I not worth a groat;
I'm glad to hasten to my bank,
And beg a little note.

Sometimes my banker smiling says,
Why don't you oftener come?
And when you draw a little bill,
Why not a larger sum?

Why live so niggardly and poor,
My bank contains a plenty;
Why come and take a one-pound note,
When you may have a twenty?

Nay, twenty thousand ten times told,
Is but a trifling sum,
To what my bank contains for me,
Secure in God the Son.

Since then my banker is so rich,
I have no need to borrow,
But live upon my notes to-day,
And draw again to-morrow.

I've been a thousand times before,
And never was rejected;
Those notes can never be refused,
That are by grace accepted.

All forged notes will be refused,
The firm will them detect,
While those that deal in forged notes
Prove they're not God's elect.

'Tis only the beloved of God,
Redeemed by precious blood,
That ever have a note to bring—
They are the gift of God.

Thousands of ransomed sinners fear
They have no note at all,
Because they feel their misery
And ruin by the fall.

Though thousand notes lie scattered round,
All signed and sealed and free,
Yet many a doubting soul will say,
Ah! they are not for me.

Base unbelief will lead the soul
To say what is not true;
I tell the poor, self-emptied soul,
These notes belong to you.

Should all the banks in Europe break,
The bank of England smash;
Bring all your notes to Zion's bank,
You're sure to get your cash.

Nay, if you have but one small note,
Fear not to bring it in;
Come boldly to this bank of grace,
The Banker is within.

I'll go again, I need not fear
My notes will be rejected;
Sometimes my banker gives me more
Than asked for, or expected.

Sometimes I've felt a little proud,
I've managed things so clever;
Perhaps, before the day was gone,
I felt as poor as ever.

Sometimes, with blushes in my face,
Just at the door I stand;
I know if Moses kept the bank,
My soul would be condemned.

But ah! my bank can never break,
My bank can never fail;
The firm—three persons in one God,
Jehovah—Lord of all.

Should all the bankers close their doors,
My bank stands open wide
To all the chosen of the Lord,
For whom the Savior died.

We read of one young man, indeed,
Whose riches did abound;
But in the banker's book of life
His name was never found.

The leper had a little note,
"Lord, if thou wilt, thou can;"
The banker paid the little note,
'And heard the dying man.

Behold, and see the dying thief
Hang by his Banker's side;
He cried, Dear Lord, remember me;
He got his cash, and died.

His blessed Banker shall take him home
To everlasting glory,
There to shout his Banker's grace,
And tell his endless story.

With millions more—Jehovah's choice,
Redeemed by precious blood,
Oh, may my soul with him be found,
Among the sons of God.

Then will I praise my Banker's grace,
And sound his fame abroad;
Make heaven to echo with my voice,
Before the throne of God.

A PLEA FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Don't expect too much of them; it has taken forty years, it may be, to make you what you are, with all their lessons of experience; and I dare say you are a faulty being at best. Above all, don't expect judgment in a child or patience under trials. Sympathize in their mistakes and trouble; don't ridicule them. Remember not to measure a child's trials by your standard. "As one whom his mother comforteth," says the inspired writer, and beautifully does he convey to us the deep, faithful love that ought to be found in every woman's heart, the unfailing sympathy with all her children's griefs. When I see children going to their father for comfort, I am sure there is something wrong with their mother.

Let the memories of their childhood be as bright as you can make them. Grant them every innocent pleasure in your power. We have often felt our temper rise to see how carelessly their little plans are thwarted by older persons, when a little trouble on their part would have given the child pleasure, the memory of which would last a lifetime. Lastly, dont think a child a hopeless case because it betrays some very bad habits. We have known children that seemed to have been born thieves and liars, so early did they display these undeniable traits, yet we have lived to see these same children become noble men and women, and ornaments to society. We must confess they had wise, affectionate parents. And whatever else you may be compelled to deny your child by your circumstances in life, give it what it most values, plenty of love.—Episcopal Methodist.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

RECEIPTS. A firkin of maple sugar from Burlington, Vt; a friend in Pleasant Valley, $1.00; Gordon C. Cannao, $2.00; L. D. Merrill, 25 cts.; "The widow's mite," 50 cents; Geo. Y. Stacy, $2.00; M. L., $1.00; R. T. W., $2.00; "A friend to the cause," 60 cts.; friends in Whitefield, $4.10; Ellen, $1.00; C. C. Smith, $2.00; Susie L. Smith, a little girl, $1.25—earned by herself; S. H. French, of this city, $10.00. These donations are accepted with heartfelt gratitude, and we pray that our heavenly Father may reward these dear friends liberally.

On account of the impaired state of my health, the children's "Home" will be closed on the 20th of July. Our brethren and sisters and other friends will then be enabled to do more for other missions, as the demand for the other branches of our mission work will be comparatively small after the Home is closed. Provision has been made for all our children. We have got homes for all who were under our control, with the exception of one little boy. Fourteen children will remain with us through June, and on the first of July seven will leave, and after the fifteenth of July the balance will return to their friends.

I purpose to give a few more extracts from my Journal, for this year, and on the first of July a record of our receipts and expenditures from Jan. 1st to July 31st, the present year. Pray for me. Yours in Christ,

Phila., Pa. F. H. BURBANK.

THE DOXOLOGY.—Bishop Ken, born in 1376, and who died in 1770, was the well-known writer of the familiar doxology,—"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." The poet Montgomery has very properly remarked of this perfect composition that it has probably been more used than any other, except the Lord's Prayer; that it is a masterpiece at once of amplification and compression.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the "Children's Corner."

OUR PILGRIMAGE.

MY DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS:—All are but temporary sojourners in this world; how is it, then, that you as pilgrims differ from others? I think I hear you exclaim—"We have here no continuing city, but seek one to come." Yes, therein lies the difference between you and those who, though their years pass like a weaver's shuttle, are determined to "enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season," while you voluntarily practise self-denial, and press forward to your glad destination, over hills of difficulty and through valleys of humiliation. You are not so unreasonable as to expect the gratification of every sense in your progress to the celestial city. The way of life is so narrow that there is no room for lovers of ease, broad fields of pleasure, and dancing attendance upon every "Will o' the wisp" that attracts the eye: for these you must break through the fence of duty, and perhaps lose your way in the dark mountain of sin and stumble into ruin.

Yet let me say to those who would decide whether or not to enter upon this pilgrimage, "The path of the just is as a shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Sunshine is fairest, flowers most beautiful, the songs of nature most delightful, and the society of friends most cheering to those who look upon these things as gifts from a Father's hand; still, the pilgrim must be ready to relinquish these and more, for the crown of life which he presses forward to obtain.

If you have a certain work to perform, or a lesson to commit to memory, you do not go where good attention will be continually diverted from your task, but, retiring, shun all temptation to leave it. You, dear young pilgrims, have a momentous work to do, even by "patient continuance in well doing" to seek for eternal life. Let all your energies be directed to that end. Let no allurements of wealth or ambition turn you from that purpose. Restrain unprofitable desires, curb wandering impulses. If need be, compel yourselves to impart the blessings of cheerfulness and kind deeds to your fellows. Let your hearts, ever in communion with the divine nature, be so many channels through which divine love shall flow to refresh and benefit mankind.

Think of our Examplar who "pleased not himself," but spent his life in holy ministrations, and at last yielded it a ransom for many. Think of the pilgrims of all ages who "counted not their lives dear," but girded with christian resolution "battled till death." Their reward is sure, for the Conqueror of death will soon come to gather them with all his jewels from the dust of past ages.

Think of those heroic pilgrims who are now toiling, exposed to many vicissitudes, to fatigue and privations, not doing their own will, but the will of the Father. Perhaps you have personal acquaintance with those who have thus ventured ease, property, health and life, that they may win souls to Christ. Have you read the story of one who, having heard the good news of the coming kingdom in a northern city, at once commenced his pilgrimage over the south, afoot and alone, to proclaim the tidings to all whom he should meet?

Learn the beautiful lesson such examples inculcate, and be encouraged not only to keep your own feet from wandering, but to assist in their heavenward course all to whom good influence extends, so shall you rest and be cheered upon the delectable mountains with bright views of "Jerusalem the golden," where you may soon hope to experience "fullness of joy and pleasures forevermore."

HARRY'S EARNINGS.

"Uncle," said Harry Gray, "can you help a poor man who lives down in the village? He is very sick."

"No," said his uncle, gruffly; "I haven't any money to spare."

Harry looked disappointed. After a moment he said, hesitatingly, "Uncle, I'd like to earn some money."

"Well," said his uncle, looking up from his paper, "I told you I would give you three cents for every wheelbarrow load of stones you carted away from the hill, but you did not want to do it."

"I will do it now if I may," said Harry.

"Very good; you may begin as soon as you like."

Harry jumped up, and ran out to find the wheelbarrow. Picking up stones was dull work, yet he set about it as eagerly and merrily as if he loved it. He wheeled the great barrow up the hill, and began to fill it with stones, singing away as gaily as a lark. The summer sun grew warm, and Harry's shoulders began to ache, but with a bright smile on his face he said to himself, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." That was the secret of Harry's readiness for this work; he was doing something for his Savior. He was determined to earn eighteen cents, so he tugged away at the heavy stones until the six loads were rolled down the hill.

Harry went home with that same happy look on his face, and said, "Aunty, will you give me a loaf of bread?"

"To take to that sick man?"

"Yes."

"But you are too tired to go with it now."

"Oh no; I can go. Please let me have a little pitcher too."

"What do you want that for?"

"I'll bring it back safely," said Harry, coloring a little.

So aunty gave it to him, for she loved the little motherless boy.

First he went to find his uncle, who gave him the eighteen cents. Then he went to the village grocery store, and bought a little bundle of sugar, a small package of tea, and his pitcher full of milk. If ever there was a happy little boy it was Harry, as he trotted up the village street, holding fast his precious packages.

He reached a forlorn wooden house and knocked at the door. "Come in," said a feeble voice. Harry went in, and there on a bed lay the sick man for whom he was looking.

"I have brought you something, because some one told me you were in want," he said gently.

"God bless you, boy," said the sick man; "I have not tasted a mouthful to-day." Just then a woman came in. "See, Mary," said he; "God has sent us food at last;" and the woman took Harry's hands in hers, and the tears poured down her face as she asked her dear Father in heaven to bless him.

Harry lay down upon his bed that night a weary little boy; but do you think he was sorry he had worked so hard for his Savior?—Ex.

WHO KILLED TOM ROPER?

Who killed Tom Roper?
Not I, said new Cider,
I couldn't kill a spider,
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not I, said strong Ale,
I make men tough and hale,
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not I, said Lager Beer,
I don't intoxicate. D'ye hear?
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not I, said Bourbon Whiskey,
I make sick folks spry and frisky,
The doctors say so; don't they know
What quickens blood that runs too slow?
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not I, said sparkling Champagne,
No poor man e'er by me was slain;
I cheer the rich in lordly halls,
And scorn the place where the drunkard falls,
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not we, said various other wines;
What! juice of grapes, product of vines,
Kill a man! The Bible tells
That wine all other drink excels;
We didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not I, said Holland Gin,
To charge such a crime to me is a sin,
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Nor I, spoke up the Brandy strong,
He grew too poor to buy me long,
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Not I, said Medford Rum,
He was almost gone before I come.
I didn't kill Tom Roper.
Ha, ha! laughed old Prince Alcohol,
Each struck the blow that made him fall;
And all that helped to make him toper,
My agents were to kill Tom Roper.

A LETTER TO LITTLE FOLKS.

Little folks like to get letters, so I will write to them, this time, instead of the ladies. Let me me see. Was there ever a little girl who did not wish to be both handsome and happy? I guess not. Well, I will try and tell you some things which will help you to be so. We often see advertised various cosmetics to make the face fair and beautiful. But, so far, as I know, they are all bad, making the skin sallow and unhealthy in a short time. The surface of our bodies is covered with a million pores, or little holes, through which much waste material passes off; so these little orifices should be kept clear, instead of being closed by powders and paint. I read long ago a funny story of a lady who made a mistake in preparing a wash for the face, and thus colored it a bright blue. She then tried to remove it with soap, which only turned it a pea green. There is a "wash" which is safe and sure, not only for the face, but for the whole body, and that is good cold water. Keeping the skin clean is the way to keep it healthy, and keeping it healthy is the way to keep it handsome. In summer you can all very easily take a bath each day, using a wet towel and a bowl of water only; and in winter, too, this will do quite well, if you have a warm room for it. This some of you, perhaps, could not do more than two or three times per week.

Little girls sometimes play in water and get chilly, which is bad for them; they should bathe quickly, rub briskly, and then take a good run, so as to both get warm and keep warm. The water should be cool, but not so cold as to make you blue as a picked pigeon. All my little girls here love baths when they are used to them.

Another way to make you both handsome and happy is to eat bread, milk, vegetables, and fruit, avoiding rich pies, cakes, candies, preserves, and the like. Too rich food makes little folks, as well as large ones, irritable and unhappy. Many a little girl is cross at breakfast because she had something at supper which she thought better than bread and milk, but which does not make her feel as well as that would have done. Many a fair face is faded or discolored by food so rich that the stomach could not make it into good blood. I could tell you how tea and coffee make little girls nervous, excitable, taking away their appetite for good nourishing food, such as would make them grow strong and well; but I can not stop to explain it all to you. Fresh air is good to give fresh cheeks. Little girls enjoy a run so well that they are likely to get many a good airing during the day, if they have not on too many fine things, which they fear will be soiled or spoiled by out-door play. But at night little girls are often so afraid of the cold or dark that they keep both door and window shut, when each should be open a little way, unless the wind is too strong; when one will do.

Many children, instead of being plump and fresh as a peach, are as withered and wrinkled as last year's apples, because they do not sleep enough. Some physicians think that the bones grow only during sleep. This I can not say certainly; but I do know that those little folks who sit up late nights are usually nervous, weak, small, and sickly. The reason why you need more sleep than your parents is because you have to grow and they do not. They can use up the food they eat in thinking, talking, and working, while you should save some of yours for growing. You ought to sleep a great deal; if you do not, you will in activity consume all you eat, and have none, or not enough, to grow with. Very few smart children excel, or even equal other people when they grow up. Why is this? Because their heads, if not their bodies, are kept too busy; so they can not sleep, rest, and grow strong in body and brain. Now, when your mother says Susie, or Mary, or whatever your name may be, it is time to go to bed, do not worry her by begging to sit up "just a little longer." But hurry off to your chamber, remembering that you have a great deal of sleeping and growing to do to make you a healthy, happy, useful woman.—Herald of Health.

PRAYING AND DOING.

"Bless the poor little children who haven't any bed to-night," prayed a little boy, just before he lay down on his nice warm cot, on a cold windy night.

"You have just asked God to bless the poor children; what will you do to bless them?"

The boy thought a moment.

"Why, if I had a hundred cakes, enough for ourselves, I'd give them some."

"But you have no cakes."

"Well, when I get money enough to buy all the things that I want, and have some over, I'll give them some."

"But you haven't half enough money to buy all you want, and perhaps never will have. I want to know what you will do to bless the poor now?"

"I'll give them some bread."

"You have no bread; the bread is mine."

"Then I could earn money, and buy a loaf myself."

"Take things as they now are. You know what you have that is your own. What are you willing to give to help the poor?"

"I'll give them half my money. I have eight cents, and I'll give them four—would not that be right?"

"Four cents would not go very far in making a child so poor that it had no bed, as comfomfortable and well provided for as you are. Four cents toward food and clothing, and books and a bed, for such a one, and four cents just for pencils or candy for yourself,

"Then, mother, I'll give all my money; and I wish I had more to give," said the little fellow, as he took his good night kiss.

Now don't you think his bed was made softer that night by his pity for the poor and shelterless? Don't you think he slept the more sweetly, and that ministering spirits watched his couch more lovingly because he was growing to be somewhat like his Savior, who "spared not himself, but freely gave himself up for us all?"

A great many children pity the poor a little, and wish God would be kind to them and take care of them. Perhaps they even pray to him to do it, like the little boy in our story. But we are afraid too many of them would have God do all the work. They don't want to help much; they don't want to give away much that is their own, they don't want to trouble themselves much about it. They do not really love their neighbors as they do themselves.—Ex.

A KISS TO GOD.

A very little girl, who says a great many strange things, and asks a great many strange questions about God and heaven and the grave, was one day watching her father dig potatoes in the garden. He was telling his little daughter how kind God was to make the potatoes grow for them to eat.

"Does God make the potatoes grow for us?" she earnestly inquired.

"Yes; God gives the potatoes, and all that we have to eat."

"Well," she said, "I will send a kiss to God."

This was the child-like but beautiful way she expressed her gratitude to the kind Being who was doing so much for her. When she wanted to express to her father or mother her gratitude and love, she did it by a kiss. In the same way she wanted to express her thanksgiving to her kind heavenly Father. "I will send a kiss to God."

GOOD MANNERS.—Young folks should be mannerly, but how to be so is the question. Many good boys and girls feel that they cannot behave to suit themselves in the presence of company. They are awkward, clownish, and rough. They feel timid, bashful and self-distrustful, the moment they are addressed by a stranger, or appear in company. There is but one way to get over this feeling, and acquire easy and graceful manners—that is, to do the best they can all the time, at home as well as abroad. Good manners are not learned, so much as acquired by habit. They grow upon us you use. You must be courteous, agreeable, civil, kind, gentlemanly and womanly at home, and then it will become a kind of second nature to be so everywhere. A coarse, rough manner at home, begets a habit of roughness which you cannot leave off, if you try, when you go among strangers. The most agreeable people we have ever known in company, are those who are most agreeable at home. Home is the school for all the best things.—Ex.

THE FIRST STEP.—Beware, dear children, of taking the first step in wrong doing. There is always danger that the first step will be followed by a second, and soon you may go from one thing, and one degree of sin to another, until you land where your heart will be as hard as a rock.—Ex.

NOT FOR EVER.

Not for ever are we chastened
By the might of sorrow's hand,
Not for ever pass we sighing
Through the stranger's weeping land.
There shall come a time of gladness,
When the heart may e'en forget,
In the melody of pleasure,
All the ills that grieve it yet.

Not for ever in the valley,
With the yawning gulf below,
Not for ever 'mid the briers
Zion's pilgrim bands shall go:
They shall tread with cheerful footsteps
On the pleasant sunny hills;
They shall march with mirth and music,
While their song the sweet air fills.

Not forever shall the darkness
Of the midnight's lonely hour
Overwhelm the timid spirit
With the terrors of its power.
There shall come the light of morning
To the weary, waiting heart,
And, amid the joy of daybreak,
Tears and sorrow shall depart.

Not for ever have they left us,
Those for whom we shed our tears;
Not for ever shall our mourning
Darken long and dreary years.
There shall be a joyous meeting
When the reign of death is o'er—
In the home where all are happy,
In the land of evermore.

And for ever shall the tear-drops
Vanish from each face away,
And forever is the darkness
Banished where 'tis endless day;
And for ever death and sickness,
Sorrow, sighing, pain and woe,
Shall be known no more nor looked for
In the house to which we go.

AN EXPOSITION OF REV. 20: 1--9.

The book of Revelation is a mixture of symbolical and literal language, and whatever is not probably symbolical must be considered literal. To teach otherwise, is to make its revelations uncertain and vague, and incapable of doing what its divine Author intended it to do—"show to his servants things which must shortly come to pass." Assuming, then, that we are not to regard any part of this book symbolical (which is not probably so), we shall not be so likely to err as those who substitute for its manifest meaning the conjecture that it may mean something not naturally implied by the language used. This chapter begins thus: "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand."

As an angel signifies a divine messenger, this may be here used to denote the coming advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, to put a period to the reign of sin and Satan. The key of the bottomless pit can only denote the power to open and shut it. The great chain denotes the power to bind Satan. Of the angel here spoken of John says, "And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years."—Ver. 2.

The symbolical meaning of "the dragon" is here explained to mean the old serpent, who began his career in the garden of Eden when he led our first parents into sin; for he is here said to be the Devil and Satan; who, according to Christ's testimony, "was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth"; and, according to John, "the devil sinneth from the beginning." And so instead of symbolizing Pagan Rome, as some have claimed, it symbolizes the spirit of Satan as manifested in Roman governments; for the Revelator authorizes this interpretation, but none other. So the thousand years are yet future, for Satan is not yet bound. After stating that the angel bound him, the Revelator says, "And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season."—Ver. 3.

"The nations" here spoken of can only be understood literally as the nations of the earth; for there can be no probable symbolical meaning denoted by this phrase. And that the thousand years are to be understood literally, is clear from the fact that where time is used symbolically, some intimation is given that it is so used; and no such hint being given here, and being connected with the measurement of events literally expressed, there is nothing to justify the supposition that these years may be symbolical. This view is confirmed by the following, which gives the duration of the reign of the resurrected saints with Christ on earth, before the final resurrection, as a thousand years: "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them; and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded, for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection."—Vers. 4, 5.

Under the sounding of the seventh trumpet it is said, "The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever. . . . And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward to thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them that destroy the earth."—Chap. 11: 15–18.

Hence when John says afterwards, "I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them," it denotes the justification of all the redeemed, both small and great. And since Christ is to judge the quick and dead at his appearing, and not before; and since according to Paul those that are Christ's are to be raised at his coming, the resurrection spoken of in chap. 20: 4 does not exclude those who were not beheaded, but includes all the redeemed who have "not worshiped the beast." For the fact that the martyrs are mentioned after those to whom judgment was given, shows that the first mentioned includes others besides martyrs. And since there is no judgment before Christ appears and raises the dead, those whom he saw seated on thrones must include the redeemed of all ages. Consequently, the living again of those martyrs is literally what the Revelator said it was—"the first resurrection." And the fact that he also said "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished," proves that the living again of the martyrs was intended to denote their actual resurrection from the dead. And since at the sounding of the seventh trumpet all the saved are to receive their reward, it is clear that none are to be saved who do not have a part in the first resurrection. Therefore the Revelator said, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

We have seen that when the seventh trumpet sounds, those who destroy the earth are to be destroyed, and so at the commencement of the millennium; and, therefore, those over whom the second death will have power, after the thousand years are finished, must be those, and those only, who are resurrected after the thousand years are finished. And these will embrace the nations that are in the four quarters of the earth, exclusive of Christians, who are not identified with these nations of earth.

The destruction of those who are living at the commencement of the thousand years will rid the millennial reign of sin; and the resurrection of all of them at its end will fill the earth with an innumerable multitude, who will be worthy to die the second death. And these are they whom the devil will go forth to deceive, in the vain attempt to get possession of the New Jerusalem; as brought to view in the verses following: "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations that are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them."—Vers. 7–9.

The innumerable multitude here mentioned implies that they are the resurrected millions of all ages. And the fact that the righteous are raised at the beginning of the millennium, and the rest of the dead at its close, as declared in verses four and five, proves that all mankind will be alive at one time; as also the fact that the innumerable multitude are to be devoured by fire from heaven, proves that the second death is a literal death after they are raised out of their graves. Death will then cease, by being cast into the lake of fire formed by the devouring flood which consumes them. For after this there will be "no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain."

We close, then, in the language of the Revelator—"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." Wm. Hobbs.

"BUT THE WISE SHALL UNDERSTAND."—Dan. 12: 10.

This subject, and especially this particular Scripture, has both a positive and a negative aspect. First positive, because it is a plain declaration of God by the angel to Daniel. And second, it is positive, because of its grammatical construction. It is a simple answer to a rational question.

Daniel did not understand the end of these wonders; hence he presses home the inquiry to the angel. What shall be the end of them? He is told to go his way, for they are sealed up. How long? Until the time of the end. This is not the end itself, for mark, he is told that at this time knowledge shall increase, and many shall run to and fro. This is an act accomplished in time, and not after the end of the world.

Again, Daniel is told that the "wicked shall not understand, but the wise shall understand." Here we have two opposite and positive terms. If one is true, then the other must be. If neither is, then we ask by what rule can we understand the Bible? But Daniel is told to go his way, for he shall rest and stand in his lot at the end of the days; showing that this is the point that he wished to know about, i. e., the end of the days. But he could not live to see them; but at the time of the end prior to the end itself, many would be purified and made white, and understand the end of these wonders. Many, however, have undertaken to make too much of it, by overlooking the negative; for mark it, it has a negative, given by Christ, that "of that day knoweth no man."

Now while Daniel's days are shown to be years, and have so been fulfilled, that of Christ is a day of twenty-four hours, which none dispute; hence both do not terminate previous to the end itself. This is what we understand our Savior to mean when he says that we should rightly divide the word, and give to every one their portion of meat in due season. By making too much of any one portion of truth, we bring it into disrepute. We weaken the force of that we wish to establish.

But we do not say that the day of which Christ is speaking shall never be known, only so far as it refers to the days of Daniel, that is, in years. For our Savior tells us it shall be as it was in the days of Noe. Thus we learn that Noe knew seven days, at least, before the flood came; but he was shut into the ark, and the world shut out. So I believe it will be down here. Daniel's days or years will end at the appointed time, and the wise will be shut in, and the foolish virgins shut out with all of the ungodly.

How solemn the thought, the harvest is past, the summer ended, and the wicked lost! S. Ayres.

THE PROMISE.

(Concluded.)

As the promise has not yet been fulfilled, we propose to show from the Word how and when it will be fulfilled. The promise was made before the law, and the law "was added [to the promise] because of transgression," and therefore can not disannul the promise. "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith." Gal. 3: 24. For the law could not, in that it was "weak through the flesh," justify any one; therefore when faith came it released us from the schoolmaster. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ."

So we see that the promise was not given through the law, but through faith; therefore before Abraham, Isaac and Jacob could receive the promise, it was necessary that the object of faith come. For Paul declares that "the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did" (Heb. 7: 19); "which hope we have as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast" (Heb. 6: 18); and this hope, being ratified by an oath, will stand.

Again, Paul in the eighth of Hebrews declares that "if the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Then a new covenant or law is made, consequently the first is passed away; and this Paul positively states in Heb. 8: 13, "In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." This new covenant speaks of a hope; and as the new covenant is the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, it will be necessary to look to that for a fulfillment of the promise.

Now as long as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and a great portion of their posterity are dead, it is necessary that they should live in order to receive the promise. True, under the law we read that they that obey it should live, and the resurrection is brought to view; still the source through which it is to be accomplished is hidden; so we read in 2 Tim. 1: 10,—"But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." We see plainly then how life from the dead is brought about; it is through the gospel.

Again, Paul in Rom. 16: 25, 26,—"Now to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, which was kept secret since the world began, but is now made manifest."

Again, Paul in writing to the Ephesians of the "mystery of Christ," or how the Gentiles were to be made "fellow heirs" of the same promise, says, "Which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs [with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob,] and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel."—Eph. 3: 5, 6.

We might multiply texts upon this point, but this is sufficient to prove that the promise could not be fulfilled till the object of faith came, which was Jesus Christ. Furthermore the way was not opened at all to fulfill the promise till Jesus was raised from the dead; for Paul declares that without a resurrection of Christ there would be no hope at all of the fulfillment of the promise; for he says (1 Cor. 15: 17, 18), "For if Christ be not raised . . . then they that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished"; and as the promise is to be fulfilled through Christ, we can not see how it is possible for any one to receive the promise till Christ comes.

Now as Christ has been raised from the dead, and we have shown how the promise is to be fulfilled, we will proceed briefly to show when the promise will be fulfilled. As none will deny that the apostles were all Jews, and the seed of Abraham, it cannot be denied that they were heirs of the promise; and as Jesus was the "Lion from the tribe of Judah," he must also be an heir; and as he was the Messiah who was to come, must be considered "the heir." While he was upon earth he instructs his disciples in the things that pertain to the gospel, being careful that no knowledge necessary for them should be kept back. He is crucified, buried, raised, appears to his disciples, promises them the Holy Spirit, and is taken up out of their sight, to "sit at the right hand of the Majesty on high."

Let us look at his teachings. In the first place, it is declared of him (Luke 1: 32, 33), "He shall be great, and shall be called the son of the highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Viewing him as a King (for, for this purpose he was born), we find him when before Pilate saying, "My kingdom is not of this world." Then again (Matt. 8: 11) we read that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob will be in the kingdom. Now we begin to get at the fulfillment of the promise. Before going further it will be well to remember that the throne of David was lost when Nebuchadnezzar took Zedekiah and destroyed Jerusalem; and the prophet of God has thus recorded it in Ezek. 21: 26, 27,—"Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; . . . it shall be no more until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." It is the establishment of this throne that must transpire to fulfill the promise; and as the throne of David does not now exist, it is self-evident that the promise has not been fulfilled.

Again. Jesus is speaking of the kingdom, and in order to show that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob would inherit the promise, speaks on this wise (Matt. 22: 31), "But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob? God is not a God of the dead [hopelessly], but of the living"; and this is the most positive declaration in the Word that these worthies will live; for Jesus is speaking of the resurrection; and Paul, in treating on this very same subject, says—Rom. 4: 17, ("As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations), before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were." It is not asserted that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are now in the kingdom; for as we stated, the throne of David is not established; but God speaks in express terms of the fathers, although they be dead; thus showing that it is absolutely true that the promise to them will be fulfilled by a resurrection from the dead. For we must remember that a thousand years are as one day with God, and he has declared the end of all things from the beginning.

Again, Jesus in concluding all that came to him in the promise says (John 6: 39, 40, 44), that he would raise them up at the "last day," meaning of course the resurrection. Paul, in writing to Timothy (4: 7, 8), does not expect to receive his reward or part in the promise until Jesus appears; for he says that his crown is laid up unto that day. So with Peter, speaking to the faithful ones (1 Pet. 5: 4), "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." As the Lord has not yet appeared, the expectation of the apostle is not yet realized. But again to the teachings of the Master (John 13: 33), "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me, and as I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come, so now I say unto you." It is very evident from this that the disciples could not go where Jesus was going; and as he was going to heaven they could not go; but the Master comforts them, saying to Peter, "Thou shalt follow afterward." Then in the fourteenth chapter goes on to tell them when that following will be. "Let not your heart be troubled"; "if I go away I will come again." Ye believed God, now believe me; for "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also." If he was to prepare a place, it is impossible for Abraham, Isaac and Jacob to be with him until the place is prepared; and as it was not prepared when Jesus was here, the fathers could not inhabit it. But Jesus was going to prepare a place, and we find the beloved disciple John describing it in the 21st of Rev. as the New Jerusalem "coming down from God out of heaven." Paul says that we (christians) shall "be caught up in the air," and as Jesus was taken up in the air, this catching up of the saints will constitute the "following after"; and as the throne of David was a literal throne, so will it be a literal throne when Jesus takes it; and it will be established in the "new heavens and new earth." The kingdom will be this whole world purified (2 Pet. 3: 10, 13), and the capital of the kingdom will be the New Jesusalem.

"Glory to God the night is almost o'er,
And we'll shout Hallelujah in the morning;
Soon we shall meet on Eden's blissful shore,
And we'll shout Hallelujah in the morning.
In the morning, in the resurrection morning,
Sweetly we'll sing the praises of our King,
And we'll shout Hallelujah in the morning."

BAPTISM.

A SHORT SERMON.

It would seem almost impossible that the minds of any could by tradition, prejudice, or any other cause, fail to discover the obligations resting upon us all to obey this, of all other gospel requirements, the most explicitly laid down in the word of God. It is an ordinance which, in completeness of type, transcends every other ordinance, and in point of solemnity has no parallel. It is a type of death and burial. "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death." Rom. 6: 4.

Notwithstanding the multiplicity of arguments used by immersionists, we think the full import of this ordinance is not even by them generally understood. There is a depth of meaning in the sentence—"buried with him by baptism into death"—that is not perceptible from a surface examination; but on looking for the object of the ordinance, we discover a fact that underlies all other facts pertaining to it.

There is no more reliable index by which to point out the nature of a thing than the object of the thing. For instance, I am presented for the first time with a certain instrument; my first inquiry is, For what was this made? On being told, to plant corn, I readily discover its nature, and see that the iron shield at the bottom is to be thrust into the ground, effecting the complete burial of the seed it contains. Now while we are positively told the object of baptism,—"For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection,"—it does not require the skill of a philosopher to detect the nature of the act which constitutes such a likeness.

The great truth depicted by this ordinance we discover to be death and resurrection; and not until we learn the fact that the only hope of a future life for the dead rests in this resurrection, shall we be able to see the force of this likeness or figure. Inasmuch as the thing illustrated forbids the enjoyment of life without a resurrection from literal death, so the act which illustrates this fact forbids the extension of life without a resurrection from the watery grave. Or, in other words, while literal death involves the necessity of a resurrection, that we may live; so the act typifying such an event involves the necessity of a resurrection from the watery grave, that we may breathe and live.

The mind of Luther seemed to grasp the same fact, although his surroundings forbade the practise of his convictions in this, which is manifest from the following: After speaking of baptism as a symbol of death and resurrection, he adds, "On this account, I could wish that such as are to be baptized should be completely immersed into water, according to the meaning of the word and the signification of the ordinance; not because I think it necessary, but because it would be beautiful to have a full and perfect sign of so perfect and full a thing; as also, without doubt, it was instituted by Christ."

If Luther's faith in the state of the dead had been correct, he no doubt would have considered this ordinance as a necessity, as well as admired its beauty and perfection as a sign. One incorrect idea often begets another, and the doctrine of inherent immortality has seemed to disjoint the entire system of redemption; so that in this error lies the reason why so many fail to see any beauty in the ordinance of baptism, until it has come to be considered quite unessential.

Our Savior says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." He has commanded us to be baptized; and can we feel safe while we refuse to illustrate the great event on which our hope of future life depends? Let us be more careful about the danger of not doing enough, rather than doing too much, in the line of duty. "To obey is better than sacrifice." Faith without works is dead. Let us show our faith in the resurrection of the dead by permitting our bodies to be buried in the liquid grave, thus illustrating that great event, and so "fulfill all righteousness." Wm. A. Fenn.

For the World's Crisis.

SMITING SERVANTS IN THE LAST DAYS.

Bro. Grant:—In Matt. 24, Christ gives us the signs of his coming up to the very moment when he appears in the clouds of heaven; and the last and strongest of all will be the two classes of servants; the "faithful and wise," and the "evil" or smiting servants. And here we have them before our eyes. One little despised class, with Bible in heart and hand, proclaiming the immediate coming of the Lord, showing a perfect fulfillment of all the signs,—the destruction of Jerusalem, the "wars and rumors of wars," the 1260 years of the papal "tribulation"; and "immediately" after this, the darkening of the sun and moon, A. D. 1780; and in A. D. 1833 we saw the stars fall from heaven, "as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs"; and next in order is this little Bible company, giving the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him." But this was too much for the lovers of this wicked world, and it brought into battle order the next sign, viz., the "evil" or smiting servants, saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming." And they drink and feast with the drunken. The next sign they see will be the "sign of the Son of man in heaven." Then will their eyes be opened, and their feasting changed into wailing, and the bitter lamentation, "The harvest is past, and the summer is ended." May the Lord help them to anoint their eyes with eye-salve, that they may see, and look to him for immortality when he comes.

My brethren, are we living in the Philadelphia and Laodicean state of the church? It bears very strongly that appearance. To the Philadelphians the Lord says (Rev. 3: 8), "I know thy works; behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it; for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word [the Bible], and hast not denied my name. Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie. . . . . Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation that shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell on the earth. . . . Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." Here is the crown for the "little flock" waiting for their King; the very crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give at that day to all those who love his appearing. And while he threatens the Laodiceans and "evil servants" with fearful judgments, he still loves and urges them to repentance, saying, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. . . To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne [on the renewed earth], even as I overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne" [in the heavens].

Praise God for the light of his holy word in these last days. The smiting servants often call us fools, and tell us the Lord will not come for a thousand years or more; and they intend to get the whole world converted, and have a good time before he comes, forgetting his instruction that the tares must grow with the wheat until the harvest, the end of the world, or its present polluted condition. Now if they can keep the Redeemer away, and themselves perform the work that God gave him to do, they will feel no cause to pray "Thy kingdom come," or ever love his appearing. There is but one in heaven who is "mighty to save," and this is He who is the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, and has bought this fallen world with his own blood on the cross, "whom the heavens must receive [again] until the times of restitution of all things." The first Adam lost the dominion of earth by his disobedience, and "all creation groans and travails together in pain until now." But the second Adam, by "obedience unto death," has bought it back; and now the "greatness of the kingdom and dominion under the whole heavens" belongs to him and his "little flock," and very soon he will come to take possession of his own. Then may we all sing—

"O hail, happy day, that speaks our sorrows ended,
The Lord has come to take us home."

Now let me ask the smiting servants, to whom shall we look for your good times for the thousand years to come? Who is sufficient to cleanse our sin-polluted world? Who can wipe the tears from off all faces, or bring down that holy city, the New Jerusalem, from God out of heaven, or abolish sickness, pain and death, and bring forth from their graves, into immortality, the sleeping saints? Then we shall hear the triumphant song, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Yours in this blessed hope,

Lunenburg, Vt. Henry Harris.

THE 1290 DAYS.

"And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."—Dan. 12: 11, 12.

I think it it looks clear that the thousand of the twelfth verse are the same as the eleventh, and commence at one and the same time. This was the view of Dr. Litch in "Prophetic Expositions," published in 1842, although he believed the "daily" was taken away in 508, and the abomination was set up some thirty years after. He says on page 130, "These days [the 1335] must begin at the same time with the 1290."—Prop. Exp. vol. 2. Wm. Miller and others also took the same view. I cannot see any possible chance to commence them at two different epochs.

It appears in several places in the book of Daniel that the "daily sacrifice" gives place to the "abomination;" when one ceases the other begins. And since it has been so clearly proved that the 1260 days of Rev. begin with the setting up of the abomination, and that events occurred according to history in A. D. 533 and 1793 to mark these beginning and ending, it follows that A. D. 533 is the time of the setting up of the abomination, and the date to start the 1290 and 1335 days.

"But the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand."—Dan. 12: 10. The question arises, when will the wise understand? Let the one clothed in linen answer (Dan. 12: 11): "And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be" 1290 days (before even the wise will understand; then they will begin to understand as never before.) I think I shall be able to show that in A. D. 1823, 1290 prophetic days from A. D. 533, the church of God began to get light from the prophetic periods as they had not done before. The first witness will be Wm. Miller, of Low Hampton, N. Y. In his "Memoirs," on pages 66 and 67, you will notice that he became converted, and erected the family altar in September, 1816. On page 67, he says:

"The Bible now became my chief study, and I can truly say, I searched it with great delight." On page 76, "I was thus brought, in 1818, at the close of my two years' study of the Scriptures, to the solemn conclusion, that in about twenty-five years from that time all the affairs of our present state would be wound up. * * * * The Bible was now to me a new book." Page 82, "I was occupied for five years [from 1818 to 1823] in weighing the various objections which were being presented to my mind. During that time, more objections arose in my mind than have been advanced by my opponents since; and I know of no objection that has been since advanced which did not then occur to me. * * * * I was then fully settled in the conclusions which seven years previously had begun to bear with such impressive force upon my mind; and the duty of presenting the evidence of the nearness of the advent to others,—which I had managed to evade while I could find the shadow of an objection remaining against the truth,—again came home to me with great force. I had previously only thrown out occasional hints of my views. I then began to speak more clearly my opinions to my neighbors, to ministers and others."

Thus it would appear that seven years from September, 1816, would end in September, 1823, when the church began to get light on the prophetic periods as they never had before, in America, at least.

Again, Bro. Grant says in the World's Crisis, Oct. 9th, 1867, speaking of the gospel being preached to every nation under heaven,

"It has been said that the Chinese and some other eastern nations have never heard the gospel. Joseph Wolfe, the noted missionary, who preached that Christ was soon coming to set up his kingdom, commenced his labors in the East, in 1823, preached in Egypt, Palestine, on the Red Sea, Mesopotamia, the Crimea, Constantinople, throughout the Ottoman Empire, in Armenia, Persia, Khorrosawn, Foorkestan, the Himmalayah Mountains, Cashmere, Hindoostan, the coast of Abyssinia, Yemen, and Thibet.' Thus 'the gospel of the kingdom' was preached again where it was first proclaimed by the apostles. Mr. Wolfe also preached in Holland, Scotland, and Ireland. Since then it has been proclaimed to all the other nations known in the world. It was said of Mr. Wolfe, that 'no individual has, perhaps, given greater publicity to the doctrine of the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, than has this well known missionary to the world. Wherever he goes, he proclaims the approaching advent of the Messiah in glory.'"

I find in a book called the "Time of the End," by S. Bliss, page 79, under the head of "The Epoch of A. D. 1873,"—

"This is an epoch assigned for the termination of the 2300 days of Daniel by J. A. Brown, in his 'Even-tide,' 2 vols., published in London in 1823." And also M. E. Greene, in The Voice of the West, March 3d, 1868, quotes from Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, by Charles Coate:—

"On the death of Pope Pius VII., Leo XII. was chosen his successor, Sept. 28, 1823, who granted toleration throughout the Roman kingdom. Says Dr. Coate: 'A chapel was allowed to be built in Rome for Protestants to worship in.' This was the first time for 1290 years, when the Pope was obliged to give up the power conferred upon him by Justinian in 533. This clears up all mystery in reference to what was to mark the end of the 1290 period."

Now I ask, is here not enough to prove the ending of the 1290 in A. D. 1823, when light began to shine on the prophetic numbers as it had not before? I think this position will in no wise clash with the time of the end commencing in 1793.

What startling events are just before us, if it be true that the 1260, 1290, and 1335 days commence at one and the same time, and that be A. D. 533. 1260 end 1793, 1290 in 1823, and will not the 1335 end just as certain in 1868, when Daniel will stand up for his lot, and all the saints with him? The signs show this to be the truth. What mean this groaning of earth, eruptions, earthquakes, atmospheric disturbances, etc., etc.? Are not the four angels about to let go, the seven last plagues about to be poured out? Who will escape the day of His wrath?

May we all be ready to hail the King with joy. Charles H. Shepherd.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO IS THIS?

Infidels acknowledge the fact that more than eighteen hundred years ago there lived and walked among men one who claimed to be the only begotten Son of the Most High God. While they deny his right to be called by the title he claimed, yet they do not dispute the historical fact that Jesus of Nazareth lived on earth at the time stated in both sacred and common history.

It is very strange that infidel writers of nearly every grade speak of him as one of the most pure and true of all that have lived, and they admit that his teaching and doctrines are mostly in harmony with truth and virtue. How can this be, if he is not what he claims to be— if he is an imposter? We, who admit all that is written in the Scriptures concerning him, believe him to be the only Son of God.

The audacious statement that every man is a son of God, we reject as an insult to the Creator, as well as contrary to the Scripture, which says of the wicked that they are the children of the devil. "Ye are of your father, the devil." John 8: 44.

In Matt. 21, we read of Jesus riding into Jerusalem with a very great multitude, who rendered homage and praise to him, as the king, the son of David who should reign on the throne of his father (David) in Jerusalem. "And when he was come into Jerusalem all the city was moved, saying, WHO IS THIS?" "And the multitude said, this is Jesus, the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee." Although he was despised and rejected by his own nation, the Jews, yet he was their rightful King, and is to reign over all the earth as Lord of Lords and King of kings. To him every knee must bow and every tongue confess.

On one occasion when he was with his disciples on the sea, there arose a great tempest, and the vessel was covered with the waves. The disciples were afraid and cried, "Lord, save us: we perish." At his word the storm ceased, "and there was a great calm." And the men were astonished, and said, "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him?"

Only a small part of his wonderful works are left on record for us; for John testifies that there are many other things that Jesus did; "but these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." See John 20: 30; also chap. 21: 25 ver. Think of some of the works done by him and by those who had authority and power to work miracles in his name. Devils were cast out of those who were possessed; the blind received their sight; the ears of the deaf were opened; the lame were healed, and all manner of sickness and infirmity removed, so that those who were healed had "perfect soundness," which was proved in presence of the people.

And still more, the dead were raised even after putrefaction had commenced, as in the case of Lazarus, who had been dead four days. Thus the works that he performed testify to his right to the title of Lord and Master, and Ruler over all the earth; and consequently establish his claim of being the Son of the living God.

Now this same Jesus is soon coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. Do you believe it? Read the 19th of Revelation, where his coming to rule the nations is spoken of, and in the 16th verse you may read his name or title. And in the 20th verse of the twenty-second chapter we read, "He which testifieth these things saith, 'Surely I come quickly.'" Lord, help us all to be ready and waiting.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion.

WISCONSIN CAMPMEETING.

In our last report we had just commenced the campmeeting at Fairfield, Wis. The location was a lovely one and seemed to grow more so the longer we remained. Some days it seemed almost like paradise. Heaven and earth smiled upon us, and the peace of God was shed abroad in the hearts of the happy saints. We could say of a truth it was good to be there, and we wished every christian could have shared in our joys. The birds of the wood united with us in their merry songs, and every thing seemed vocal with praise to the Lord. We almost felt that we had got out of the wicked world, and had pitched our tents on the suburbs of the coming kingdom. We were glad to enjoy this feast with the saints, with the hope of soon being with them in the kingdom of heaven.

A great work was accomplished during this meeting in the awakening and conversion of sinners, and in reclaiming backsliders. A large number of believers decided to consecrate themselves entirely to the Lord for the remainder of their earthly pilgrimage. The effect was glorious. They were filled with deep peace, and a strong assurance of their acceptance. We had many heart-cheering testimonies in our conference meetings. It was a common thing in those meetings to have one or two standing up waiting for an opportunity to speak of what the Lord had done for them since the commencement of the meeting. We trust that many will have occasion to praise the Lord for ever, because they attended the Fairfield campmeeting.

We find the truth is rapidly spreading in the west, in consequence of the earnest labors of the faithful men, who truly love the Lord and his coming; who have made and are making noble sacrifices to advance the cause of our Redeemer. They are practical men, real workers, and are devising all possible means to do more. They believe what they preach. Their circuits are large, pay small, but their hopes are bright. A great work has been accomplished by these devoted men, and they propose to renew the war against Satan's kingdom, during the short time that remains to work in the vineyard of the Lord. There is great need of more faithful preachers in the west, because the field is so large, and so few to occupy it. Who will go? Are there not men of faith and talent in the east, young men, who will take their satchels and start at once for the western field? There will be no danger of their appointments clashing as they often do in the east. Secretaries of churches in the west do not feel any necessity of publishing a request that preachers should write them before they send a notice of a meeting, lest they put an appointment on top of some one else. The Macedonian cry is a loud one, a continued one. Shall it be heeded? Thousands are anxious to hear the reasons of our hope, but no one can be obtained to unfold the Scriptures to them in their simplicity. The harvest is ripe, but the laborers are few. Let us pray the Lord to send out more faithful men to help gather into the fold of Christ.

Our meeting was noted for the best of order. We did not hear an oath on the ground nor a single disturbing sound from the wicked during the entire eight-days meeting. We lay down and slept as quietly, and with as little fear of disturbance as we should at home. Every one who came treated the encampment with respect. All seemed pleased that we had the meeting, and sorry to have it closed up. No one could say that such campmeetings do more hurt than good. It is a very successful way of spreading the truth, and awakening a new interest in the hearts of the friends of Jesus, and cementing them into one happy union in his love. The rough corners are worn off, cold formality is broken up, and a new life is put into the followers of Christ, and they go out from such meetings refreshed, and with a firmer purpose to do all to the glory of God, shining brighter wherever they go. We should make all possible efforts in our power to arouse the people of the world to a sense of their perilous condition in these last moments of time. Such meetings as the one just held at Fairfield, are specially calculated to produce the desired result. The more we have of such meetings the better it will be for the world. We hope our brethren will enter into the work with renewed zeal this year, and make more efforts to save people than ever before. Time is short. What is done must be done quickly.

Our conference and prayer-meetings were very heavenly seasons. One very important feature of them was the spirit of prayer. In many places we find a great neglect of this important part of christian worship. It often happens that not more than one or two prayers are offered during the whole prayer-meeting. The time is spent in talking and singing. It was not so at this meeting. The Brn. and Srs. were "instant in prayer" It was common to have fifteen or twenty prayers during the conference meeting, and from fifty to one hundred testimonies. They were not long, dull, prosy talks, but soul-stirring exhortations, that came out of hearts warm with love for Jesus. Such feasts as we there enjoyed are not common in this wicked world. O what a contrast between the joy and peace we there felt, and the very best that unconverted people experience. He who seeks comfort in the pleasures of this world has no idea of that which the humble christian feels. His is like the midday sunlight, and theirs as the gloomy midnight. Praise the Lord for the christian religion. It is perfectly adapted to the wants of man in this life, and without it, he has a gloomy road to travel, and a horrid end to meet. Let us all be true christians, and then we can sing "all is well." We shall expect to see scores in the kingdom of God as the result of the Fairfield campmeeting.

Monday morning, June 8th. Our great and good meeting is now closing. While we are writing, the saints are taking their last breakfast, and preparing to leave this lovely grove, which has been truly a consecrated spot, that will ever be remembered with pleasure by those who were privileged to enjoy the scenes of the past week. Yesterday was a lovely one. We almost had a glimpse of paradise. At 9 o'clock, we met for a love-feast, and had one of the best we ever enjoyed. One hundred and seventy-eight spoke in fifty minutes. We never saw the children of the Lord more anxious to confess our dear Savior than in that feast of love. There was a strife for the earliest opportunity. Our cup of joy ran over, and hearty praises ascended to the King of Zion.

At the hour for preaching, it was said we had the largest audience ever assembled in Wisconsin to hear on the great truths that we love so well. There were not less than two thousand people on the ground. When we consider the scattered population, it was a very great congregation. Nearly all came in private conveyances. A host of teams were on the ground. The people gave marked attention to the preaching, and observed most excellent order. It was pleasant to talk to such people, who were anxious to hear the reasons of our hope. Candid people were satisfied that ours was not a vain one, and many who had not heard before expressed much gratitude to the Lord that they had enjoyed the privilege of the meeting. In the afternoon twelve more were buried with Christ in baptism, and went on their way rejoicing. Some fifty or more were converted or reclaimed during the campmeeting. Many of these confessed Jesus in the Young People's meetings, conducted by Bro. G. G. Godfrey, who is an earnest laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. We had preaching from Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Turner, Geo. Thompson, J. Wilber, G. G. Godfrey, and Sr. R. Rowell. These are all true in the cause of Christ, self-sacrificing, and earnest in their efforts to save the perishing. Bro. Hough has had much experience is ministerial labor. He was formerly a Methodist preacher, but for many years has been sounding the proclamation, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." He is a father among the flock, and his labors are greatly blessed. Bro. Sheldon did not feel able to preach, but hopes to be well soon. He has had a hard time for three or four months. It is more of a cross for him to lie still than to labor. By the blessing of the Lord, he has accomplished a great work in the west. His praise is in all the churches. He lives in the hearts of the people, and merits all the esteem he receives.

In the evening we had the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, when one hundred eighty-two gathered around the communion table. It was a heavenly season. Thus closed one of the best campmeetings ever held. Every body seemed pleased with the meeting. Peace and harmony prevailed, and our hearts were cemented together in love. Many shed tears as the parting hand was given, and the farewell word spoken; but if faithful, we felt sure of an early meeting in the everlasting kingdom, where we shall part no more.

WAR IN EUROPE.

Preparations for war in Europe still continues, and judging from the extent of the preparations, the most terrible war in the history of the world may be expected when the blow is struck. The awful hour cannot be far in the distance. The nations are so corrupt, and the common people are so tired of the state of things, that revolution must soon come with a vengeance. The following from Brussels, June 7th, shows the expectations:—

"Le Nord newspapers assert that the opinion widely prevails in Paris that a war will break out in Europe before the close of the next autumn."

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.

BRO. GRANT:—When at Lowell two years ago, I received from your hand tracts, entitled, "The Spirit in Man," and "The Rich Man and Lazarus." I am grateful for the light and pleasure they have afforded. Will you please give me your views on Matt. 25: 46, and words of like import? And do you think this same body will be raised in the resurrection? If so, how possible? Could I understand these questions in a manner that could not be refuted by good reasoning, it would be a great satisfaction.

With gratitude and respect, yours in Christ,
N. D. WELLS.

Matt. 25: 46 reads as follows: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." We suppose our inquirer wishes to know our views on the subject of "everlasting punishment." The word aionon, rendered "everlasting," is the same one that is translated "eternal" in the same verse, to denote the duration of the life given to the righteous. Hence it follows that the punishment of the wicked will be as long as the reward of the saints. This verse does not tell us in what the punishment consists, but merely that it will be eternal. What is the wages of sin? Paul answers, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." If the punishment is death, it does not begin till he is dead; and will continue as long as he remains in the state of death. After the wicked die "the second death," they will never live again; consequently the punishment is eternal, not with pain, not with life in misery, but with death; which begins when the act of dying ceases, and will continue till he comes to life again, which will never take place; therefore is eternal.

In answer to the inquiry,—"Do you think this same body will be raised in the resurrection?" We answer most certainly, or else the word of the Lord will fail. The doctrine of the literal resurrection of the dead is very clearly taught in the Bible. If the "same body" does not come up, then there is no resurrection of the dead. If new bodies are created, such are not raised from the dead. In order to have a resurrection of the dead, it must be something that did live, then died and after that, the same one lived again.

It is asked, How is it possible? As it is impossible for God to lie, and absurd to suppose he would promise what he cannot perform, it follows of necessity that the dead must be raised from their graves. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"—Acts 26: 8. The resurrection of Christ was the model and pledge for the rest of the dead. His was literal, and all the saints will come up from their graves in the same manner. God is as able to raise man from the dead, as to create him at the first. Indeed, the creation is much more wonderful than the reorganization of the man after he had died, and been disorganized. It looks foolish to say that God, who made man at the first, cannot take him to pieces and put him together again. He has promised to do it, and though heaven and earth pass away, his word will not fail. Let us believe the word of the Most High.

GOOD ADVICE ABOUT TOBACCO.

We are glad to learn that many are feeling deeply that they must quit the use of tobacco. They are satisfied its use is injurious to their physical, mental and moral constitution. They would be willing to give much money, if they had it, if they were free from their tobacco bondage. The enemy tries to persuade them that they can not break away from the habit; that they will be sick, and unable to go on with their business. To all such we would commend the following, which we copy from one of our exchanges:—

"I am now forty-six years old. I formed the habit of chewing and smoking tobacco when about sixteen. When arriving at mature manhood I began to detest myself because of this filthy habit. I sought to break off from it again and again by using less and less, and trying thus to gradually emancipate myself from this great scourge of the 19th century. Sometimes I would leave it off almost entirely for six months, taking only a little, just enough to feed the appetite and thus keep it alive, till this real devil would again overcome me and again lead me into bondage worse than that of Egypt.

Thus matters went on till about eight months ago, when I resolved, live or die I would use no more tobacco. When I did this the enemy was more than half conquered. He rallied his forces a number of times, but always ineffectually. In short it was not long before he was completely subdued. I have never tasted tobacco since, and I wish to tell your readers, that God helping me I will never use it again. To those addicted still to this habit, I would say, if you wish to break it off, total abstinence is your only antidote. I speak from experience. Try this remedy and you will never regret it.

Since leaving it off, my health has improved greatly. My nervousness, my irritable temper, my wakefulness at night; and, above all, my cleanliness of person, have greatly improved."

We hope that all who use tobacco, and read this, will follow the foregoing advice, and ever more be free from the use of the poisonous weed. When we have formed bad habits, we should break them all when we become christians. The more fully we break our bad habits, the more we love the Lord, and the more good we may do among our fellow men. Let us make clean work of these things, and be ready to meet Jesus, whose coming is at the door.

"THE NEW CHURCH."

The Spirits and their followers talk largely and promisingly about "the new church," which they claim is about to be established upon earth through their agency. They talk as though they were very confident of success. They make great pretensions, assuming that "the new church" is even a decided improvement upon Christianity. It would hardly seem that Satan could be so impiously bold as to make such blasphemous pretensions as are set forth by some of his followers.

The Spiritualists at Berlin Heights, Ohio, have commenced issuing a monthly, entitled "The Principle." In the first number (for April) we find the following, which will speak for itself:—

"The absolute religion, the Church of the Future, is yet undiscovered. Swedenborg, Comte and Fourier are the prophets of the olden time, and scientific spiritualists of this age have caught glimpses of its living truth and love, and seen visions of its high harmonies, and of its refined and intensified joy. And prayers go up from millions of hearts, that the kingdom of God may come and His will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Weary and watching souls are seeking more earnestly and longingly than for continued life, the incarnation of God in society, and the operative expression of the divine attributes in the commonwealth, and the school, and in commerce, industry and art. And this prayer of the humanity shall be fulfilled. The existing civilization, so false and factitious, so selfish and unjust, so immoral and irreligious, shall give place to a society in harmony with the laws of order, and the principles of freedom that rule in the spiritual heavens. Social institutions, industrial relations, and the creative forces of man, shall everywhere become the exponents of the divine will, and distributive justice, economy of means, unity of system, a universal providence, and a direction of all life and movement by the laws of attraction or love, shall be exhibited in all animate and inanimate nature. All hail to the Church of the Holy Humanity."

"THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD."

Jesus said, "I am the light of the world."—John 8: 12. In the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," published in Chicago, of date May 9th, 1868, we find the following: "Spiritualism is the light of the world." Which light shall we follow, Jesus or Spiritualism? The two are as wide apart as they possibly can be. One must be a false light. Was Jesus a true light? Then Spiritualism is but an ignis fatuus. Let none follow it, unless they wish to be led into Satan's swamps and be for ever lost.

THE MILLENNIUM.

This is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. It is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second coming of Christ. For sale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage. Ten copies for $1.00; fifty copies, $4.00.

"ADVENTISM."

We have just received a full supply of this valuable work. Price in cloth 75 cents, postage 12 cents. Flexible covers 60 cents, postage 12 cents. Paper covers 50 cents, postage 6 cents. In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

For the World's Crisis.

DELINQUENT SECRETARIES.

I notice in the Crisis of May 20th, that some of our preaching brethren complain that Corresponding Secretaries are not so punctual about replying to the preachers' letters as they should be. It may be that there are some such secretaries, i. e., not so punctual as they should be; but having had considerable experience in this department, and having heard the troubles of other secretaries related in many cases, I wish to suggest a few thoughts for the purpose of drawing out some clear light on scriptural usage, or duty, in visiting churches, if any have that light to give.

It is not unfrequently the case that churches are informed by letter (or appointment) that such a minister will visit them, or wants to. This may be all well, they may be glad to receive him, but had not known where to write to him, and so had not written. But then it may be all wrong; said church may be supplied, or be seeking the labors of another, or be too poor to give the minister anything for expenses, or may not feel able to do it then, having been to great expense just before; or they may not want the labors of that preacher, may not think him suited to their community, may not believe he is called of God to preach, or for some other cause do not want him, and do not want to tell him why. In either of these cases, or others not named, what must the secretary do? "Why, write to the preacher, of course, and tell him." But several of the causes are very delicate, and a secretary does not want to take the responsibility of them. He waits to see the church together, and get instruction; or, he may feel that the church is capable of selecting and calling help to preach, when they want or can support it, and so pass the request of the preacher by without replying, and save labor.

I have known quite a number of churches annoyed by appointments appearing in the paper for their places, and also by letters sent them from preachers asking to come, when some such circumstances as we have suggested existed; sometimes they let them come, and complain afterwards.

We were never rejected by any of our churches when we went among them, but seeing the working of such circumstances as we have known, we have for some years adopted as a rule, never to send an appointment to a church, nor to ask a church if we might do so, where we had not been at some time invited to come when we could. And we are not obliged to be idle for want of places to preach. When we know of no church where our labors are wanted, we find many places in "the regions beyond."

I do not say this is the true rule, but it works well. I do not say I shall never visit churches which never invited me; I may yet visit many. I do not say it is wrong to write and ask for liberty to come, or to appoint to go to places where not invited. I believe it is right in some cases. But our mission extends to places where there are no churches nor corresponding secretaries. Let us go there and tell the gospel story.

I. C. WELLCOME.

PLAN OF REDEMPTION.

WHAT THEY SAY OF IT.

"Read it! Read it! 'The Plan of Redemption.' Having read this excellent book twice through, I take pleasure in recommending it to the attention and perusal of all who are concerned in this most sublime and important of all subjects."—Eld. F. A. Baker.

"Dear Bro. Wellcome:—Accept my gratitude for the beautiful volume—'Plan of Redemption.' It far surpasses all my anticipations. I think it decidedly the best volume ever put out on our faith,—one that will bear the closest criticism by opponents, and shed new light upon all."—Editor of "Glad Tidings."

MISSION LETTERS FROM SWITZERLAND.

NUMBER TWENTY-TWO.

BRO. GRANT:—Since writing my last report, I have labored most of the time near the shores of Lake Leman, at Geneva, Vevey, Nyon, and Lausanne. Notwithstanding strong opposition, I have been much encouraged by seeing several worthy individuals embrace with joy the blessed news of our Savior's soon appearing. I praise the Lord for this aid in enduring the fatigue and bitter persecution to which I am subjected while striving, with all the strength he gives me, to spread abroad the Scripture truth long despised and set at nought. Only his infinite goodness has preserved me until the present. Satan is terribly enraged, and he pushes his followers here to great lengths in opposing the truths of God's word, which are particularly designed for the present time, and it is extremely difficult for the people, so long shrouded in the darkness of error and sin, to receive the light of the word of God and follow it. But amid great discouragements, I rejoice that God gives to some grace to see the light, and strength to sacrifice all that they may walk in it.

I have also visited Basle since writing you, and labored some, and while there I made the acquaintance of a Baptist missionary; a true christian he seemed, and a seeker after truth, and much interested in what he learned of me of prophetical truth as taught in the word of God. This young man invited me to give several lectures at Mulhouse (Alsace), France, a city of ninety thousand inhabitants, noted for its manufactures, especially of cotton goods, where there is a church at my disposition. I expect to leave at once for that field of labor, and may God aid me by his Holy Spirit, and bless the truth to the everlasting good of many.

The Eastern question occupies much of the public mind at present. The great apprehensions of war cause those who have property to conceal it as much as possible. Much suffering results to the people generally from this, and we have our full share of it. But notwithstanding all these obstacles, the truths of the kingdom must be proclaimed, and we must make haste to do it; and woe to us if we do not labor in this great work heartily, and with the faith of Noah. Those whom God has called to preach these solemn, unpopular truths, must be sustained, however, by those to whom God has entrusted the "unrighteous mammon," or comparatively little can be accomplished.

We have been greatly crippled here for lack of this, and still are, notwithstanding the generous donation of our dear American brethren and sisters of 868.60 fr., through Bro. Adams, which we received the 8th of May, with much gratitude. But we trust that now our Advent brethren in the United States, of different branches, will seriously consider that we have but one Savior, Jesus Christ, for whom we look and wait, and but one mission in Europe; therefore we should labor and contribute together to form one church of Christ in union and love, and preach Christ and his glorious coming, permitting all weak christians to develop by degrees, as children develop in school, who in the end form but one people. Let all understand that they labor for Christ, and then each will do what he is capable of for this great work, the mission will extend through the earth, and many will be converted to the Savior, the name of God will be glorified, and together we shall be blessed. Let us march forward, dear brethren, in faith, hope, and love. Europe, Asia and Africa wait for this glorious message, the earth must be lightened with his glory (Rev. 18: 1), and the Lamb be victorious.

We have recently had some engagements with the brethren, called here Darbysts, respecting these doctrines which they teach:

1. That the church of Christ is his bride, and that its commencement dates from Pentecost.

2. That only this church will be raised from the dead at the first resurrection, and then she will reign with Christ on the earth a thousand years, and convert all the Jews, etc., etc., and afterward, at the second resurrection, Adam and all the rest of his posterity will be raised. We have shown:

1. That the word church signifies assembly, from the Latin word ligo, or re-ligo, translated in Greek ekklesia, and in Hebrew gnadath; and that Adam signifies man created in the image of God. Seth, to be in the place of, or succeeded. Enos, man of suffering. Cainan, lamentations. Mahalaleel, blessed of God, or divine light. Jared, will descend. Enoch, instructing (or consecrated, disciplined). Methuselah, his death will send, or, he will send his death. Lamech, to the humble. Noah, consolation or relief.

Here is good news (or the gospel) of the true church of God, from Adam to Noah, comprehended in the names of our fathers. And yet there are many in this age who pervert the word of God by teaching that the true church of Christ has existed only since the Pentecost! The same good news is confirmed by Jesus Christ. "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Matt. 11: 28. The word church may also be applied to any assembly, as may be proved by many texts of Scripture.

2. That the bride of Christ is neither the Darbyst church, nor the Catholic, nor the Anglican, nor any sect, but the holy city, the New Jerusalem (Rev. 21: 2), which is our mother (Gal. 4: 26). Jesus, the bridegroom, is our father (Isa. 9: 6), and we the church, gnadath, ekklesia, are his children. Gal. 4: 28.

As to the teaching of the Darbysts that only the church of Christ since the Pentecost will be raised at the first resurrection, it seems to us so clearly an error, that it is difficult to conceive how any one can try to sustain such a doctrine from the Bible, and yet we often meet it and must combat it. How multiform is error, and how few there are who profess to believe the Bible to be the word of God and to take it as their rule of life, who seem to understand some of its plainest, simplest teachings. May God help us, dear brethren, to a right understanding of the Word; may we preach it in demonstration of the Spirit and with power, and many be saved through our instrumentality; and may he bless abundantly all who contribute in aid of this great and holy work. Your affectionate Bro. in Christ,
M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

ORDINATION.

BRO. GRANT:—Bro. Oliver Bendixon, of Norway, was duly ordained to the work of the ministry, at the 24th St. church, on the 24th of May.

The ordination sermon was preached by Bro. A. H. Brown, of Rahway; prayer by Bro. A. H. Steele, of New Haven, the charge by the writer. Brn. T. Robjohn and W. R. Hoag, elders of this church, assisted in the services.

Bro. B., desiring to return to his native land, and entering into the mission work to proclaim the gospel of the coming kingdom, wished to take his credentials from the Advent church in this country, to show his acceptance by God's people and their recommendation of him to the work to which he is called. May the good Lord return him in safety to his home, sustain him in his duties, and give him many souls for his hire, who shall shine with him in eternal splendor around Christ's glorious throne. Yours in hope of the kingdom,
THOS. J. COX.

A WORD OF EXPLANATION.

We feel to deeply regret to state to our brethren and friends that we are compelled to discontinue the "Glad Tidings." Many, we know, will feel sad to learn this, for it had made many warm-hearted friends, and had comforted many a fireside with the blessed message of Jesus' return.

We started it upon the strength of the personal pledges made to us; and now with poor health and exhausted means, we can say that we did our duty. The Lord knew our pure motives, and we believe the record will be, we did what we could. Therefore, we feel that its failure is not wholly our fault. We even reduced the price, in hopes of increasing our subscription, but the responses were few. There appeared to be a wide spread interest in it, but the responses pecuniarily were not sufficient to meet its expenses, and lung complaint admonishes us that we shall not be able to earn enough with our own to sustain it, as we have heretofore. Therefore under the circumstances we are compelled to discontinue it.

We would here express our thanks to our many friends who assisted us and were interested in the work to which we consecrated ourselves. May the Lord bless you abundantly in all things. We have become necessarily involved financially, which we will straighten up as soon as possible. We have a supply of back numbers of the "Glad Tidings," which we will be glad to furnish for distribution to those who desire to help us. Let those inform us who desire to take the balance of their subscription in books and tracts for distribution. And above all, brethren, pray for us. Be watchful and prayerful, for the Judge stands at the door. I feel sad that I am so unprofitable a servant, when there is so much to be done, and so little time to do it in. But I am waiting for morning.

"Does your way seem dark and dreary?
Is your heart oft sad and weary?
Then wait, ever wait!
Wait, for the morn is breaking,
Signs foretell the kingdom near,
Soon the earth and heavens shaking,
Will fill all wicked hearts with fear;
But the angels to earth shall come
And gather all the pilgrims home!
Then wait, ever wait."

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRN. AND SRS.:—The Lord is with us. Bless his holy name! Yesterday we had one of the most blessed meetings we have enjoyed since we took this mission house. Our love-feast commenced at seven o'clock in the morning, and lasted till half past eleven. The Lord led the meeting, and it was blessed. We read a part of John's epistle, where he speaks about little children loving one another. It seemed to be a good lesson for them. Then came the breaking of bread with each other, which they could not do if they had aught against their brother or sister. While they broke, the power of God came down on both the white and colored people, and such a blessed meeting as it was,—we could all say it was good to be there. The old pilgrim of ninety-two down to fourteen years, told how good the Lord was. They all came without their breakfast, as is always their custom; some got such blessings, they did not want anything to eat till night. Some had to leave to go home and get dinner for their families; as they went out, they jumped and shouted all the way, and praised God in the street. I shall never forget that love-feast.

In the afternoon we had another blessed season around the table of the Lord. Fifty of the tried ones, who are willing to stand persecution for the truth's sake, partook of the communion, and what a blessed season it was. I thought it would be only a few times more, till we should have Jesus at the head of the table, and drink the wine anew with us in his Father's kingdom. Glory to God! my heart burns within me in anticipation of that day, and the signs are thickening fast around us, which bespeak the Savior's near approach. With all my heart I say, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." ANNA E. SMITH.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. Damon.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been in Philadelphia since the 13th of March. I trust that our labors have not been in vain in the Lord. We have seen some reclaimed, and others hopefully converted to God. While Bro. Hook was here he baptized twelve. Last Sabbath Bro. Thurman baptized ten more dear children, whom we love in the Lord. There seems to be quite a good interest yet to hear the truths of the coming King. My work is done here, and the question arises in my mind, Have I done what I could to get poor sinners saved? Lord, forgive me if I have not. I have tried to talk with persons on the streets, in the cars, and elsewhere. Some would listen to the truth, others would not. The very name of Jesus would cause a scornful look, and for an answer we would get—"I do not believe the things you teach"; and finally say, "I do not believe the Bible." One instance in particular I will relate. I called at a house one beautiful morning. It so happened that the man of the house was absent. I did my errand, and then began to talk with the woman about Jesus, and asked her if she loved him.

"O yes, I hope so."

I suppose you have heard of his coming?

"Yes."

Do you not think that we are living in a very strange time?

"Yes, very."

Don't you think that wickedness is increasing?

"Yes, I think it is."

I then quoted the saying of Paul in 2 Tim. 3, then asked her if she did not think that Scripture was being fulfilled?

"Well, I don't know but what it is."

By this time she became quite uneasy, and showed signs of a disposition to leave the room, or of wishing me to do so; but I kept on talking, and told her that this was the reason why we were looking for the Lord to come so soon; because we saw the signs of his approach. I soon found that I was not a welcome visitor, after I began to talk about Jesus' coming back to earth. But before I left, I asked her if we should not have a season of prayer. The answer she gave was,

"I can not stop now, for I have other engagements elsewhere," etc.

I left the house with a prayer upon my lips. Truly we are living in a fast age. Mankind are losing their desire for salvation through Christ, but are resorting to almost every other means for help and support. Must it be that our Lord will come and find some of our good brethren yoked together with unbelievers?

O, my brethren and sisters, did you not know that Jesus has chosen you out of the world and made you lights in it? "Ye are like a city which is set on a hill, whose light cannot be hid." Why then join yourselves to these "bundles" of "tares," unwilling for the world to know what you do in secret? "For ye are sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord; walk as children of the light; for the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth." "Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord. And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." "For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."—Eph. 5. Lord, help us to stand like bold soldiers for Christ and his word, and not preach to please any one but the Lord, who has called us.

I intend to go to Maine the middle of this month, to spend the summer, and preach the word wherever the door may be opened; and those wishing me to labor among them in different places will write to me at Corinna, Me., where my address will be after the 21st of June.

I would also say that I some expect that a young brother will go with me, if the Lord will. He feels that it is his duty to go and sound the alarm to the world that Jesus is soon coming. He has had these convictions for some time, but as he has looked somewhat to older brethren in the cause for help, he has been disappointed, and the result was, he almost gave up the idea of ever preaching, thinking that his convictions were not of the Lord. I hope that our older brethren will not forget us entirely, nor refuse to help us, and all other young preachers, with their prayers, exhortations, words of cheer, and encouragement. How many there are, we know not, who have fallen back from duty, for the very reason of which we have spoken. I would say to such, cheer up; if the Lord calls you, do not stop to confer with flesh and blood. You can tell this much, that Jesus has risen from the dead, and it is the very same Jesus that went to heaven, and it is he who is coming again. But remember that while you are speaking, God will help you, and he will be one of your hearers. And if you preach to please some one beside him, he will know it, and you will not receive that strength which you would otherwise. Lord, bless the dear young soldiers, and make them strong.

My brethren and sisters, shall we not pray more fervently than ever that the Lord of the vineyard may send out more laborers? He wants laborers in his service. There are enough now who lord it over God's heritage. My prayer is that we may be just what we have been called to be, and not get above our calling. O for more of the holy fire, that wherever we go, the flame of God's truth may reach the hearts of men. Your brother waiting for the Just One, ALLEN DAMON.

Phila., Pa., June 3d.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. D. B. Rogers, Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Bro. Grant, I have read several numbers of the Crisis, and find it sets forth Bible doctrine as I have understood it for many years. I have been in the habit of hearing the immortality of the soul preached, but did not see any particular injury it could do, until the late demonism has assumed that sentiment as its foundation stone. Now I see satan has been very successful in preparing the way for his spirit manifestations, under the deception that the soul, being a separate and distinct identity, and retaining the same affection for friends after death as before, would very naturally like to be conversant with them. And it is my candid opinion that this very power and work is a sure sign of the end being near. I am watching with much interest the movements of the powers of the old world, and especially the Jews."

Bro. J. W. Cook, Eudora, Kan., writes:—"Bro. Grant, the Lord is working with those who are trying to live humbly and serve him by teaching the truth in this western country. On Sunday last we had the joy of seeing ten more precious souls obey the glorious gospel by being baptized. How it rejoices the heart of the children of God to see their friends going down into the water in obedience to the commands of our blessed Savior.

There are a number of Germans here who would be glad to have some German tracts. If you have some for free distribution, I should be happy to get them."

[They have been sent.—Ed.]

Bro. N. Reed writes:—"It is a consoling thought that we are so near that glorious day when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal immortality. My faith is strong that this year we may expect it. Since reading your paper, I have been built up in this holy faith. I hope to read it as long as time shall last. It is all the Advent preaching I have."

Obituaries

Cheney. Died in Sutton, N. H., May 17th, 1868, Sr. Sally Cheney, wife of Bro. Thomas Cheney, aged fifty-six years.

Sr. Cheney was converted when about twenty years of age, and joined the F. W. Baptist church in Sutton. In 1842 she embraced the doctrine of the second personal coming of Christ. She has "fought a good fight."

She leaves a husband and children, brothers and sisters, and other dear friends to mourn their loss; but they sorrow not as those without hope, but believe that when David awakes with the likeness of Christ and is satisfied (Ps. 17: 15, from which words the writer endeavored to speak words of consolation), she will come forth, and with all the saints receive a crown of righteousness.

Frank Nelson.

Smith. Died in Holderness, N. H., May 19th, 1868, Ann Lizzie, daughter of Daniel and Mary Ann Smith, aged eighteen years, four months, and twenty-eight days.

Within a few years Bro. Smith has been called to lay in the cold grave a wife, father, mother, and four children; but although in deep sadness, he is comforted by the blessed hope. About two months before her death, Lizzie expressed her decision to live a christian, and within a few days of her death she praised the Lord, and thus "fell asleep," to await the trumpet of the last day.

J. G. Smith.

Cook. Fell asleep in Christ, in Strafford, N. H., May 20th, 1868, Sister Mary E. Cook, wife of Bro. Alden B. Cook, aged thirty years and six months.

Our sister experienced religion when fifteen, among the Free Will Baptists. She embraced the doctrine of the Lord's soon coming and the sleep of the dead, in the spring of 1867, and ever was faithful in the prayer meetings. She was a good mother and a kind wife. She leaves a husband and six little children among kind brethren and sisters in the Lord. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

J. Pinkham.

Alexander. Died in Sandy Hill, N. Y., May 14th, 1868, of consumption, Sister Sarah, wife of James A. Alexander, aged seventy-two years.

Sister A. was born in Buckinghamshire, England. In 1837 she with her husband came to America, and located in Sandy Hill, N. Y. In the early times of the Advent movement, she with her husband embraced the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus coming in glory; and this hope ever had its sanctifying influence on her mind and life. Her sufferings in her last sickness were great; but she bore them with christian patience and resignation. Her flesh now rests in hope. Bro. S. G. Mathewson conducted the funeral services. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 26.

C. H. Leverton.

Gove. Died in Meredith, June 3d, 1868, Hannah Gove, aged eighty-eight years and four months. She came into the faith of the Lord's coming in 1843. She sleeps in hope of immortality.

J. C. G.

Burbank. Died at Campton Hollow, N. H., May 23d, 1868, of lung fever and whooping cough, Estelle Davis, only daughter of Bro. John G. and Mary M. Burbank, aged three years, one month and seventeen days. John H. Evans.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

Paris, June 9. Baron Stackelberg, the new Russian Minister, presented his credentials and had a formal reception at Court yesterday. In the remarks which he made on the occasion he said he hoped for a continuance of the friendly relations between France and Russia on the basis of mutual interests. The Emperor Napoleon made a pacific reply. He reciprocated the hopes and thought that the appointment of an envoy personally so popular in France was a pledge of amity.

Berlin, 10th. The North German Confederation propose to the great powers of Europe and America the adoption of an international treaty to guarantee the absolute security from seizure of private property upon the high seas in time of war. The Prussian Government is about to commence works for the extension and strengthening of the fortifications of Cologne.

Paris, June 11. The Moniteur states that the Czar of Russia has made a proposal to the Emperor Napoleon that Russia and France unite in an effort to induce all civilized nations to abandon the use of torpedoes and explosive projectiles in time of war. The Moniteur adds that this humane proposition meets with the approval of the Emperor, who, however, thinks that it may still be necessary to employ torpedoes for defensive purposes.

London, 11th. The following particulars of the assassination of Prince Michael at Belgrade yesterday, have been received:

The Prince, while walking through the public park last evening, was suddenly attacked by three armed assassins, armed with revolvers. He was accompanied by his cousin and a daughter of the latter, with his usual attendants.

The assassins directed their fire promiscuously at the Royal party. At the first shot the Prince fell and expired immediately.

The cousin of the Prince was also hit and died in a few minutes afterwards. His daughter received a severe flesh wound but was not dangerously injured. One or two of the valets were also wounded.

The assassins were recognized as three brothers. One was promptly taken while hurrying from the scene of the tragedy and it is thought that the others will not be able to escape.

The assassination produced profound excitement throughout the country.

London, June 11. The last dispatches from Belgrade represent that the excitement prevailing in that city and throughout the Principality is intense and unabated. No outbreak, however, has occurred in consequence. Two of the assassins of Prince Michael have been arrested. It has been ascertained that it was not three brothers who fired the fatal shots, but a father and his two sons. One of the latter is still at large, but it is believed he cannot escape.

Belgrade, June 13. The nephew of the murdered Prince Michel was duly proclaimed Prince of Servia to-day.

Germany. The statement is confirmed that Bismark will retire from office for three months, solely for the restoration of his health, which has been greatly impaired.

London, June 14. The Sultan and his new Cabinet are maturing a plan to permit persons of foreign birth residing in Turkey to legally hold property, which right is to be guarantied by treaties with foreign powers.

DOMESTIC.

New York, June 10. Honduras advices state that a free port has been opened on Ruatan Island.

Carraccas advices state the internal troubles there were settled.

A Honolulu letter of May 9th says that the island is still shaking from the earthquake, which has been in operation forty-one days.

St. Domingo dates of May 20 state that Baez is supposed to have made the same proposition to France and England that he has made to the United States regarding the sale of Samana. He was persecuting all the eminent men who did not support his adminstration, and numbers were being sent into exile.

Ottawa, 10th. It is rumored that the English Government desires stipulations from Canada that the public debt shall not be increased until after the payment of the loan to build the International Railway.

Two battalions of Infantry, a field battery and a battalion of Cavalry, are held in readiness in Montreal to proceed anywhere at an hour's notice.

New York, 11th. Don Antonio Irisarri, Minister of Guatemala and San Salvador, died at Brooklyn yesterday.

A Brownsville, special says that Juarez has declared Garcia constitutional Governor of Tamaulipas, and he is to be installed August 1st. Troops and others, however, threaten civil war.

Six hundred bandits had captured Saltillo, murdered all the City Council, and all the soldiers on duty.

Santa Anna's Brownsville agent had purchased four hundred horses and equipments, and rifles, and on a signal being given by Ortega or Negrete, a movement will be made on Monterey.

New York, June 12. Lima (Peru) letters of May 22 state that ex-President Prado will probably be requested to resume the reins of Government on account of dissatisfaction with Cauzeo. The troubles with Chili were increasing. An early renewal of the war by Spain was apprehended. The military system of impressments was oppressive. The yellow fever was abating. The Chilian authorities are reinforcing their frontier ports.

Late Port au Prince advices state that the revolution was steadily gaining ground and Salnave found himself cooped up in his Capital and abandoned by his Minister Delorme, who had escaped to England. Incendiary fires were of frequent occurrence, and the responsibility was thrown on the laws and their sympathizers by Salnave. Foreigners, however, attributed them to the President's vindictiveness, as he had repeatedly threatened to burn the town sooner than allow the rebels to get possession. Ex-President Cabral of St. Domingo has reached Jacmel, and was actively supporting the rebel cause.

The Assassination of Prince Michel of Servia.—Our cable dispatches furnish an account of the assassination of this Prince in the public park at Belgrade on Wednesday night. Prince Michel the Third was forty-three years of age, being born on the 4th day of September, 1825. He was confirmed in the dignity of reigning Prince of Servia by a firman of the Sublime Porte, issued the 7th of October, 1860. He married in 1831 Julia, daughter of Count Francis Kethely, then a Grand Chamberlain of the Court of Austria. An elaborated dispatch says that the assassination is is some manner connected with the popular disturbance, by actual revolt, existing in Bosnia, the western border of Servia, from the last week in May, since which time the Bosnian movement has assumed large proportions, Osman Pacha operating with a strong force of Turkish cavalry for its suppression. The promulgation of the Sultan's plans of reform, accompanied by an announcement from Constantinople to the effect that Prince Michel, in receiving a deputation from the christian communities, declared that he wished that every one in his dominions might be able to rise even to the rank of Grand Vizier, without distinction of creed, have also tended to inflame a strong party feeling in the Turkish provinces, and the Prince Michel may have been taken off by the hand of some fanatic of the old school provincials, as he is said to have been friendly to the idea of progress in Turkey.—Journal.

A Whole Congregation Poisoned.—The Chicago Tribune has an account of the poisoning of the whole congregation in a church at Napierville, Ill., last Sabbath. The church were celebrating a love-feast. A quantity of meat had been prepared in a copper kettle, and allowed to remain in it all day, till the liquid had become oxydized. The scene that followed beggars description. In different parts of the church were the sufferers; some sitting, some lying on the floor, and all suffering the most excruciating pains. Medical assistance was at once summoned, but it was a long time before the entire number (about one hundred and thirty) could be attended to. About twenty of the number were regarded as in a dangerous condition, but none have, as yet, died, and it is hoped that all will recover.

Great Thunder Storm in England.—A very violent thunder storm was experienced in London and in other parts of the south of England on the 29th ultimo, and great damage was done. The Victoria Tower of the Houses of Parliament was struck by lightning, but not materially damaged. The Law Lords were engaged hearing appeals, and adjourned for a short time in order that inquiries might be made as to the injury sustained. At Birmingham the lightning struck a manufactory of railway fog signals. An explosion of signals followed. Two girls were instantly killed, and four were so much injured that it was believed they could not survive. At Ewell a party were journeying to Epsom Races in a wagonette, and one of the gentlemen in the conveyance was struck by the electric fluid and killed on the spot.

Observance of the Sabbath in New York.—A protest signed by the Sabbath Committee and many of the leading citizens of New York has been sent to the Mayor, remonstrating against the permission of such demonstrations on the Sabbath as that of the German Roman Catholic Central Union, on the 31st of May. Their convention was inaugurated on that day by a grand procession, continuing its march from early in the morning till noon. This procession was composed of several thousand persons, with several military companies as an escort, bands of music and numerous banners.

A Rainbow at Midnight.—The St. Paul (Min) Press says that on Thursday night of last week, as a severe thunder storm, which came up about midnight, was passing away, the moon shone out brightly, and a beautiful rainbow, complete in all its parts, spanned the northern horizon. The different colors could be distinguished, and the bow remained for some time almost as bright as many of those caused by the direct rays of the sun.

☞ The railroad between Florence and Bologna, crosses the Appenines by inclined plains, through a succession of nearly fifty tunnels. A train of forty wagons, with its precious freight of fifteen hundred lives, was recently descending the mountain, when the engineer discovered to his consternation that the prepondering weight behind had got control of the engine and all the brakes, and the mass was launching itself with the fury of a velocity of nearly a hundred miles an hour toward destruction. Signals of distress, apparently useless, were made, but onward rushed the swift procession, now plunging into tunnels, now shooting across viaducts, filling the mountain gorges with a clamor unknown before. Fortunately, one of the waymen, hearing the extraordinary noise long before he saw the train, and with quick intelligence suspecting the difficulty, changed a switch, which sent the train reeling up a side track which led to a stone quarry several miles up the mountain, where the force was spent without accident.

☞ Napoleon is preparing another monument to the glory of Paris and the empire in the form of an historical museum, intended to portray by visible memorials the history of Paris from the earliest times. He has selected for the Museum the Hotel Carnavolet, built by Pierre Lescot, restored by Mansard, and associated in the popular mind in France with memories of Madame Sevigne, and the famous men and women of that brilliant circle. The life of ancient and mediæval Paris is to be represented by such statues, bas-reliefs, costumes, pictures, specimens of architecture and of articles illustrative of common life, as can be now secured. Modern Paris is not to be neglected, but will contribute in parchments, medals, portraits, utensils, etc, such a gallery as will save future ages the trouble of beginning the work anew.

☞ The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who has just proposed to abdicate in favor of the King of Prussia, is Ernest II., 50 years old, and childless. He is a brother of the late Prince Albert, and the heir to the throne is the Duke of Edinburgh, the sailor Prince. Queen Victoria has been requested, as guardian of her son's right, to allow the Duchy to pass to King William. It has only 159,431 inhabitants, and covers only 816 square miles.

☞ A leading merchant in the grain trade writes from St. Louis that in two weeks the wheat crop will be secure, and that in quantity and quality it is all that could be desired.

☞ Last Monday night a lady in Springfield, Pa., dreamed that a brother of hers, employed in a saw-mill, had been killed. Something in the nature of the dream led her to relate it in the morning to her family and neighbors, and before night she received a telegram summoning her to attend the funeral of her brother, who had been suddenly killed as foretold in her dream.

☞ The grasshoppers are destroying the growing garden and farm crops in Central Iowa. The pests swarm over the fields and leave devastation behind.

☞ The star Venus, which is now at the time of its great brilliancy, was distinctly seen by numerous persons in Providence Wednesday noon.

☞ The Sultan has given the Emperor of the French a piece of antique ordnance, which was originally given by Francis I., in 1513, to the Venetian Governor of Cyprus.

☞ The Australians spent over £320,000 in entertaining Prince Alfred. The whole crew of the Galatea (about eight hundred) were supplied with fresh meat, poultry, milk, fruit and vegetables for the six weeks she was at Melbourne, and a ton of ice was sent on board every morning for their use.

☞ The French paper-makers are offering a prize to any one who will produce and apply in France any new material for paper-making.

☞ Five years ago, Callicott, the swindling officer of the Internal Revenue, went to Albany as Speaker of the New York House of Assembly. He now goes to the same city to be confined in the penitentiary of the place. This is an awful warning to New York Politicians.

☞ For the first time in six years the city of New Orleans is free from the presence of Federal troops, white or black.

☞ The Prince of Wales is growing bald and gray.

☞ A learned looking gentleman who wears spectacles, and who was elected as a judge at the recent election, draws soup regularly every day at the City Soup House in Montgomery, Alabama.

☞ The whole amount of gold mined in this country since the gold regions were opened a few years ago amounts to $1,250,000,000, or about half of our national debt.

☞ If you are of a fretful temperament, do not use your elbows upon those around you to bring them to the same irritable disposition with yourself.

☞ An institution of learning, called "Whittier College," in honor of the Quaker poet, has been opened at Salem, Henry county, Iowa. It is to be conducted according to the principles of the Society of Friends, and open to all alike who will conform to its rules and regulations.

Married.

In Richmond, Me., June 7th, at the residence of the bride's father, by Eld. A. H. Walker, Mr. George W. Meserve and Miss Josephine E. Brown, both of Richmond.

Notices.

Tent Meeting.

The Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in South Boston, Wednesday, June 24th, where the gospel of the coming kingdom will be daily preached with all its relative doctrines. The second coming of Christ, the signs that it is near, the sleep and necessary resurrection of the dead, the absolute necessity of experimental, practical christianity, to fit a man for good here and glory hereafter, will be freely discussed and faithfully enforced, in hope of saving men from the wrath to come. Brn. D. M. Leavitt, S. W. Thurber, with others whom the Lord may send, will preach the word. Preaching afternoons and evenings. Come all that can, and help on the work of God. By order of State Conference, L. Boutell.

P. S. The tent will be pitched on Dorchester Street, between Broadway and Third Street, for the above meeting in South Boston.

Big Tent Meeting.

The Advent Mission Tent, under the direction of the State Conference, will hold a meeting in Stoneham, Mass., to commence Tuesday evening, June 16th, and continue over the following Sunday. Preaching afternoons and evenings. Brn. D. M. Leavitt, S. W. Thurber, with others, will be present to preach the word of life. Come one and all. L. Boutell.

Mass. Quar. Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be holden with the church in Savoy, commencing July 1st, holding over Sunday. In behalf of the church, I cordially invite all to come, and come prepared to labor for God and his truth. Our work is almost done. Let us gird ourselves for the last hour of conflict, and be prepared to stand when the Master shall appear.

Our chapel will be dedicated in connection with this meeting July 4th, at two o'clock P. M. Arrangements have been made to entertain all. Those coming by railroad will stop at South Adams, where there will be a team in readiness to convey passengers to the meeting at twelve o'clock M., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. All will see the necessity of taking the early trains, in order to connect with our team arrangements, which will leave the depot at noon. Those coming from Boston will arrive in season by taking the first train, and change cars at Pittsfield.

In behalf of the church, E. McCulloch.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting commence at Wednesday Hill, Lee., N. H., on land of Bro. Leonard Wiggins, (near where the barn meeting has been held for the last two years), on Saturday, July 4th, 1868, and hold over the Sunday following, and as much longer as may be thought proper. We have engaged the new tent in Bro. D. M. Leavitt's charge. We hope there will be a general gathering of our brethren and sisters. The blessed work has begun.

It is expected during this meeting that the ordinance of baptism will be attended to. Come, you who have been staggering at this command, and go forward with the young converts and be baptized.

Those going from Mass. will leave the cars at Newmarket Depot, and thence by conveyance to the ground in Lee, about three and a half miles. Those coming from Great Falls and Dover, will leave the cars at Durham Depot, thence to the ground, two and a half miles. Those coming to remain through the meeting must bring some bedding; but the brethren and sisters in the place will do all they can, no doubt, for their hearts are open. For the brethren, Geo. H. Churchill.

"Antioch Tent"

Will be pitched as follows:—

California, Branch Co., Mich., June 19th and 26th. Eld. J. R. Preston and others will help.

Michigan State Campmeeting, near Jonesville, Hillsdale Co., June 27th to July 6th. Come, brethren, and bring your families and friends. Don't forget the children, converted and unconverted.

Deerfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., July 8th to 13th. Eld. J. V. Himes and others will help.

Dearborn, Wayne Co., Mich., July 15th to 22d. Eld. W. L. Himes and others will help.

Notice for Dauson Centre and Owano will be given in time.

Preparations Needed. A pole twenty-eight feet long and three and a half inches through at the small end. Thirty-four hard wood stakes, three feet and three inches. Lumber and stakes to seat about five hundred persons. Four kerosene lamps. Some one to help guard the tent.

J. M. Snook.

Annual Conference.

The New York State Annual Conference will meet at Rochester, Thursday, June 25th, 1868, and continue over the Sabbath. A tent will be pitched and straw furnished to "camp on the field." Friends will bring provisions, and, as far as practicable, bedding. Come to take care of yourselves, to work for the Lord, to help save the perishing; come with the armor of God, the spirit of Christ, and bring in the worthy poor, and we will provide for them. Come to sacrifice for the truth, and to worship God. Come, brethren, the shades of evening are lengthening, and soon our work will be done. May it be well done. In behalf of the church at Rochester, H. Pratt.

The members of the New York State Christian Conference, and all interested in the soon coming kingdom, are requested to meet in pursuance of and in the spirit of the above notice.

C. W. Low, Vice President.
W. Marlatt, Secretary.
B. P. Stevens.

Grove Meeting.

A grove meeting will be held in Kingston, N. H., July 4th and 5th (Saturday and Sunday.) Elds. Pearson, Cunningham and others, are expected to be present. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of adjacent towns to be with us. The meeting will be held in the accustomed place, near Bro. Gale's. W. E. Kinney.

Fourth of July Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Exeter, Me., on the fourth of July, and continue over the Sabbath, in the old meeting-house, which is now being repaired. We give a hearty invitation to brethren who live in other places to attend this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of the Lord, ready to work for the Master. We some expect that a young brother from Philadelphia will be with us. We would be glad to meet other servants of the Lord who have the word of God to preach to the people. There will be homes enough for all who wish to attend. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting. Let us see who loves the cause of God more than pleasure. The Lord is at hand. Awake, awake, put on thy beautiful garments, O Zion! Allen Damon.

Conference.

The conference in Poultney, Vt., will be held June 27th and 28th. All the brethren and friends of sister adjacent churches are invited to come to this conference and participate therein. No one need feel that he or she is not invited to this gospel feast. In behalf of the church, J. B. Cook.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting at Greenville, Smithfield, R. I., about half a mile north of the village, to commence June 17th, and continue a week or more, as the interest demands. Stages run from Providence, R. I., and Putnam, Ct., directly to the village. E. Bellows.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our conference will hold its next session at Westerly, R. I., commencing Wednesday, July 1st, at 2 o'clock P. M. We trust no exhortation is necessary to have a full representation of preachers and delegates from all churches. Be sure and write us a good letter if not represented otherwise. H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Maine Western Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held with the church in Biddeford, commencing in their chapel, Wednesday evening, June 17th, and continuing over Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend, and unite in the worship of the Lord and the work of saving souls. Call on Bro. J. C. Libby, who will direct you to places of entertainment. I. C. Wellcome.

Minnesota Annual Conference.

The sixth annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Minnesota will commence on Thursday evening, June 25th, 1868, in Burr Oak, six miles east of Elliota. The members of the conference are all especially requested to be present, or report themselves by letter. The churches within the bounds of the conference are respectfully requested to send delegates.

N. B. All persons wishing to connect themselves with the conferernce, will please remember that according to the constitution adopted last year, such candidates must be previously recommended by the quarterly conference, or church to which they may belong. Thomas R. Allen.

Annual Grove Meeting.

The annual grove meeting of Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., will be held June 20th and 21st, on the Morris farm, two miles and a half east of the village. Let there be a general gathering to this meeting. Come, with hearts uplifted to God for his blessing, to labor for the cause of God and the salvation of souls. All are invited, both ministers and laymen. For the brethren,

C. F. Sweet.

P. S. Meeting to commence at 7½ o'clock P. M., at the school-house, on Friday, the 19th, and at one o'clock P. M. on Saturday, in the grove.

C. F. S.

Conn. Conference.

The Advent Christian Conference of the State of Connecticut will hold its third quarterly session about the middle of July, we think at New Britain. This notice is designed to admonish the brethren of the importance of the early appointment of delegates, which is very urgent, and to give ministers an opportunity to arrange for their certain attendance. It is of the first necessity that delegates from all the churches be appointed and duly qualified to act in this conference. Do it at once, and show by the action that you have an interest in the work, and God will bless. Full particulars soon. W. S. Campbell, President.

Conference.

Conference in Poultney will commence Friday evening, June 26th, and hold over Sunday. Brethren and friends in Hebron, Low Hampton, Fair Haven, Castleton, Rutland, and all sister adjacent churches and believers, are invited to come to seek and enjoy with us a blessing from the Lord.

For the church, J. B. Cook.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Savoy, Mass., to commence Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see many of the lovers of Jesus and his coming at this meeting. Come, leave your work, brethren, and come to this meeting all ready to work in harmony with Christ. E. Owen, Secretary.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This meeting will be held in Wilton, (Intervale school-house), June 25th, at five o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. This is a new field. It is hoped our brethren and sisters will come to work for the Lord. Brethren will call on Brn. Welch, Wilkins, Palmer, and Small. Will our preaching brethren come to this meeting? Per order,

H. B. Sevey.

Conference.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held in the "Free House" at Lincolnville Centre, Maine, commencing Thursday, June 18th, 1868, at 7 P. M. Call upon E. Calderwood, Moses Young, D. Fletcher, and E. Blood.

Per order of Conf. Clerk, F. A. Baker.

Hymn Book.

The Second Advent Hymn Book can be obtained at the following prices, of Mrs. P. A. Smith, No. 4, Frank St., Rochester, N. Y. (by sending the money with the order): Less than one dozen, 25 cts. per copy; postage 3 cts. One dozen, $2.50; postage 36 cts. One hundred, $15.00, sent by express. For sale at this office.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. Smith.

The Maine Tract Fund.

Wm. H. Mitchell,
R. R. York, } Society Officers.
S. K. Partridge,

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do ibeir part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. Libby, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,

No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

Anna E. Smith, Superintendent and Manager.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week!

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. Boutell.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. Wendell.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

For the World's Crisis.

HYMN.

God is the sovereign of this world,
The universal King,
To whom we do all homage owe,
And should our tribute bring.

His power we cannot comprehend,
His mercy far exceeds;
Our most exalted thoughts of him
Are far beneath his deeds.

This world and all it does contain
Is but a speck, compared
To what Jehovah does maintain,
Created by his word.

The beasts upon a thousand hills
Belong to great I AM,
The gold and wealth that coffers fill,
Should be at his command.

H. A. ARNOLD.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRIST AND HIS KINGDOM.

"So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation."—HEB. 9: 28.

"So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many." Not for his own transgressions was Jesus the atoner slain, but for us he agonized in the garden of Gethsemane. For us he laid down his life, a willing sacrifice, that through the mediation of his blood we might be redeemed from the curse of sin and death, and at last obtain, through obedience to his revealed will, a state of eternal happiness in the everlasting abode of the saints. Behold him as in the agony of his heart he cries, "Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani!" "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" He dies, and Satan rejoices that he now has him under the power of death. The Roman soldiers guard the tomb and all is seemingly secure. The morning twilight of the third day breaks upon their vision, and an angelic messenger is dispatched from the court eternal. Swift from the throne of Jehovah he flies. He nears the tomb in which lies the body of the Redeemer of mankind. The keepers behold that form in all the glory of his angelic nature, unable to endure the sight of him "whose countenance was like lightning," and whose "raiment" was "white as snow." "And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men." And now the stone is rolled away, and Christ doth rise. The power of the Highest has been manifested. The bars of death are broken. The prison walls have burst asunder, for he would not leave him in the grave, nor suffer his holy One to see corruption. Again behold him at the Mount of Olives. The cloud hovers over him, and he is borne to the throne of the Majesty on high. Then we hear the promise, comforting the apostle's hearts, "This same Jesus" "shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Sweet promise from the lips of holy messengers, and we may rejoice in the hope of the soon realization of that promise.

"And unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin, unto salvation." First he came to die for a sin-polluted race, and to bring back to earth a state of Eden loveliness. Now he comes as a mighty conqueror, "King of kings, and Lord of lords." The graves will open, and death give up the sleeping saints. Ah! as the veil of blue, which hides from our gaze the throne of the immutable, is rent asunder, Messiah, the anointed, shall be seen "sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Then, as with myriads of attendant angels, a bright and shining retinue, he comes to sit upon the throne of David, those who have the promise of salvation, who are looking for him; who stand firmly on the immutable word of the Most High, and from the signs of the times, the position of the nations, the fulfillment of the prophetic word, and the numbers of Daniel and John, look for the soon appearing of the Lord, these shall sit on his throne, even as he has overcome and sat down on his Father's throne. He who is looking for Him shall find an entrance to the city of gold, when it is established on the holy hill of Zion.

He shall appear the second time. Yes, once more shall Messiah the anointed stand upon the earth.

"In that day" "shall his feet stand on Mount Olivet, and it shall cleave in the midst thereof towards the east and towards the west, and there shall be a very great valley: and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south." "All the land shall be turned as a plain, from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem, and it shall be lifted up, and shall abide in her place; from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's wine-presses. And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited;" thus enlarging its extent and forming the holy hill of Zion, the sanctuary of the Lord. The city of David will again arise and shine forth as the capital of the new earth, Jerusalem be created a rejoicing and her people a joy.

Then the question arises, what is the kingdom? Is it an etherial mansion in the heaven above? Says Daniel, "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to . . . the saints of the Most High." We here learn that it is to be under the whole heaven, and consequently not in heaven itself. But where are the redeemed to dwell? Let the Psalmist answer: "Here ye him." "Those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." "The meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace"; "for such as are blessed of him shall inherit the earth." "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever." Says Jesus, "The meek shall inherit the earth." Here is divine testimony that the earth is the abode of the redeemed saints. The rule of the King shall be established from sea to sea, and from the rivers to the ends of the earth. Then shall their swords be beaten into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks. "The ploughman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed." "The mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt, . . . for the seed shall be prosperous, the wine shall give her fruit, the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew." "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them."

Here all shall dwell in a state of harmlessness, for "they shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain," saith the Lord. "The knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea." "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree. The wilderness and solitary place shall be glad," "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." "Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." "The light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be seven fold." "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." "And in this mountain [the holy hill of Zion] shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees; of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined." "He shall swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it."

Lebanon's cedars again shall grow luxuriantly beneath the eastern sky. The oaks of Bashan shall lift their towering heads towards the heavens; Carmel once more regain its flowers; the lilies of the valley delight the eye of the beholder, and the beatified children of the Most High sing peans of praise to the King of kings. The glory of God shall fill the earth, and we shall dwell immortalized and glorified throughout all coming time, and sing the song of redemption in the kingdom of the great I AM. FRED. W. GREENE.

Portsmouth, N. H.

THE CONVERTED INFIDEL.

(From the Annals of a Missionary.)

"Your husband, I understand, is very ill," the missionary said, as he knocked at a door one day in H—— street, where he had heard that a professed infidel was very sick; "I am anxious to see him." Shutting the door with great violence, the woman hastened to a neighbor's house. Mr. P——, however, went in, and found the man in bed, reading the newspapers.

"What do you want?" said he, in a surly and somewhat sneering tone.

"You and I are strangers," replied Mr. P.——, mildly, "but I hope we'll not be long so. I'm a missionary; and as I was just visiting the neighbors, I heard you were in great distress, and am come in to see you.

"I don't want you," he said gruffly.

"But I want you."

"And what d'ye want with me?"

"I want you to come to Jesus, the Savior of sinners; and he wants you to come to him. Let me tell you, it's a serious thing to die."

"Oh! I've made up my mind to that; so you need say no more to me about it; and taking up the newspaper, he resumed his reading.

"What have you made up your mind to?"

"Oh! to die; to be sure: there's nothing for me but death."

"Well; but how is it to be with you after death? You know that after death comes the judgment."

"Oh! I want no more of you. God is merciful, and I've no fear of his damning me! He never made man to damn him."

"I know that; it is man that damns himself. The Lord says: 'Thou hast destroyed thyself,' and adds, 'in me is your help.' 'Look unto me,' says Jesus, 'and be ye saved.'"

"Oh! I've plenty of you; I want none of your talk."

Finding he could make nothing of him, he said, "Will you allow me to pray for you?"

"Oh! if you like; I don't much care about your prayer."

The missionary prayed; but the moment he began, the man took up his paper and read.

"I'll come back and see you," said Mr. P——, when he had finished praying.

"You may if you like," rejoined the man; "but I don't care about your coming." And he went away.

He returned next week. The invalid's wife opened the door, and, as before, left the house when he entered.

"How are you to-day?" said the missionary, as he entered, and found the man again in bed at the newspapers.

"No better, and never will."

"Hadn't you better go to the Infirmary?"

"Oh! I've been there already."

"Were you long there?"

"No: just a day. I didn't like it. There's no use about it: I'll never get better."

"Well, that may be; but it is right to use the means which God has put in our power; and look to him for the blessing——"

"Oh! I see what you are to be at again," he said, hastily interrupting him—"religion."

"I want you to come to Christ Jesus, the Savior, who alone can save your precious soul."

"Oh! you needn't trouble yourself about that. I've no fear."

"Perhaps not; but I have great fear you will die out of Christ, in your sins; and then there is no salvation after death. Jesus came into the world to seek and save sinners, even the chief."

"Do you think that I am the chief of sinners?"

"Do you think yourself a sinner?"

"Yes; but not the chief of them."

"Well, you say you're a sinner—then you need a Savior. You need salvation; and there is none other name given under heaven whereby you can be saved, but the name of Jesus. And I've to tell you that heaven is a holy place; and 'nothing that defileth, or worketh abomination, or maketh a lie,' shall enter into heaven. Jesus hath said, 'Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.'"

"Oh! I've enough of that: I've made up my mind; you needn't say another word to me; I'll take my chance."

"Ah! my dear sir, there is no chance in the matter. Jesus says, 'Marvel not that I said unto you, Ye must be born again.' And what's more, Jesus hath said, 'Except ye repent, ye shall perish.' 'He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life;' 'but the wrath of God abideth on him.' Think, my friend, of this. Your soul is so precious, that nothing can redeem it but the blood of the Lamb. Jesus, at this moment, stands at the door of your heart, and is knocking by his rod, word, and Spirit, saying, 'If you hear my voice and open the door, I will come into you, and will sup with you, and you with me.' He is at the door of your heart, with a free, full pardon; ready to forgive you all your sins; willing to wash you in his blood; to clothe you with his righteousness; and to put you among the children." And he left the house.

The third visit was like the preceding: again the wife fled, and the man was at his newspaper.

"Well, have you been thinking about what I was saying?" inquired Mr. P——, after a question or two about his health.

"No, I haven't," he replied, angrily.

"I am grieved to think, my poor man, that you're dying, and yet unconcerned about an interest in Christ."

"I told you before that I had made up my mind, and so you need n't trouble yourself."

"I cannot do that my friend; I'm greatly troubled about your state. Oh! if you would lay down those papers, and go to your Bible, you would see what you are as a sinner; and what you're exposed to. You're within a step of death and the grave, where the mercy of God is not to be found. 'Now is the day of salvation.' 'To-day if you will hear his voice, harden not your heart.' Let me tell you, Satan has got hold of your heart, and he is blinding your eyes, lest you should believe and be saved. Oh! hear the Lord saying, 'Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live.'"

As he went on in this strain, setting forth Christ to him, the man laughed in his face. "Well, I'll pray for you," he said, "that the Lord may bring you to a sense of your state. Oh! that he would quicken you!" He prayed. All the time the man read the newspaper. Having finished praying, Mr. P—— again left the house.

The next visit was the turning-point. As he entered, the wife was pressing past him, as usual, to get away.

"Oh; don't go out," said the missionary, kindly, laying his hand on her shoulder. "I'm sure it's from the best motives I come to see your husband. If I could do any good, either to his body or to his mind, I would willingly do it: just sit down." She sat down; and Mr. P—— began to speak to her husband a little; but he found him as hard-hearted as ever.

"I'll pray for you once more," he said. And as he began, the poor man resumed his newspaper. But before he had prayed many minutes, the paper fell from his hand. When the prayer was concluded, he was bathed in tears, and so, also, was his wife.

"Oh!" he said, with a faltering voice, and grasping the missionary by the hand, "will you come back and see me?"

"I will, with all my heart." And he left them both in tears.

"Come away; I am glad to see you," was the joyful welcome of the dying man, as Mr. P—— entered the next day, and found him poring over the Bible.

"I'm glad to see that book in your hands," said he, "What has led you to lay aside the newspaper and turn to that?"

"Oh sir, it was your last prayer. I felt my heart melted; and ever since then I have felt myself to be in an awful state. Oh, what a sinner I've been! All that you've said of me as a sinner was true"

"Well, I've said just what that blessed book says of myself and of every one who is out of Christ. But Christ died for the chief of sinners; his blood was shed for you and for me. Hear what he says: 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins; and cleanse us from all unrighteousness.' And once the Lord forgives, he also forgets. Hear again what he says, 'I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.' And again; 'He will cast all your sins into the depths of the sea.'"

"But I feel as if the Lord would not receive me, the way I have been living. I had no conception I was such a sinner as I am. The more I think of myself, and the way I've spent my days, the more I wonder I'm out of hell. How had you such patience with me?"

"Surely I should have patience, when I think of the patience and long-suffering of my God. He waited long on me."

"Did he?"

"Yes. He waited; and called again and again upon me; but at length he made me willing in the day of his power. 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.' Just go to him as a poor, condemned sinner, and he will give you an instant pardon."

"Oh! do you think so?" he rejoined, earnestly.

"Yes, I do; because he says so. He says, 'Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near.' Now, at this moment, he is near you, by his word. Then he adds: 'Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.' Now, will you think upon these truths till I call again; for they are God's truths?"

The man took hold of him by the hand. "I can't let you go away," he said; "you will pray for me?" He prayed.

"Oh! don't be long in coming back," he said, "I weary for your coming."

"Well, will you ponder what I have been saying? And remember to pray to God, that by his Spirit, he would make you know these truths, and feel their power."

"I will." And with difficulty he got away.

"Well, how are you to-day?" asked Mr. P——, the next time he called.

"Much weaker, but much happier. I think I can now lay hold of Jesus as my only Savior. I can trust in him now. I can cast on him all my sins. I believe that he died for ungodly me. Oh, those words that you spoke to me last! I've been looking at them, and praying over them."

"Are you suffering as much pain as you did?"

"Yes; but d'ye know, I can bear it better now."

"Oh, sir," said his wife, "every time you come, he seems to get more patience and submission. D'ye know he's just another man. He never prayed before, neither did I; but now he's often praying in the night, and also through the day."

"What do you think of Jesus now?" said the missionary, turning to the dying man.

"I'm sure I can say he is my Friend, my Savior, my Redeemer; for he has redeemed my soul from sin. Yes; he has given me to hate it, and to love him whom once I hated. Oh, that blessed book!" he added, taking up the Bible. "I once hated it; but now I love it. And its sweet promises, how they comfort me in my affliction! Blessed, sweet Jesus! None but Christ for me!"

He lingered on, says Mr. P——, in this blessed state of mind for several weeks, rejoicing in Christ. At intervals he fell into darkness; but it was only when he turned in upon himself. The moment he looked to the Savior, he got light and peace.

This case has in it a striking lesson for all who would "win souls." "The servant of the Lord," we read, "must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those who oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will."

And, what encouragement it should give to those who are visiting the dark places of our land. Go forward, dear fellow-laborers! Be not weary in well-doing! The converted infidel is an episode of facts. There are many, yea hundreds in every place, living in practical infidelity. Hundreds, lying in the deadness and darkness of their sin—and love to have it so. Who will come to the rescue? "He that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."—Herald of the Morning.

"A CROWN OF GLORY."

"The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness."—PROV. 16: 31.
"The glory of young men is their strength: and the beauty of old men is the gray head."—PROV. 20: 29.

Long life is a special mark of God's favor to his children; while to be cut off in the midst of their days is his threat to the wicked.

Is it not becoming in God's children to love that which God loves, and to prize that which he prizes? Is it becoming in them to be ashamed of, and seek to obliterate that which God has given them as a special mark of his favor? Would you destroy the ripening tints of the apple, the peach, the pear, the plum, and the strawberry, and cover them again with their unripe greenness? Would you, then, even more unwisely, seek to cover in your own persons those ripening tints which bespeak to all the loving favor of God to you in upholding you in being to ripened age?

What physician is sought after in a case of extreme danger? Is it the young practitioner in his beauty? or the practitioner ripe in age and experience? To whom does the sin-sick soul seek unto to be shown the way of salvation? Is it to the young and inexperienced in the church? or to the fathers and mothers in Israel? Are the gray hairs of these veterans any hindrance to the inquiring soul? Nay, they give it confidence, as the tints of red, yellow and blue show the fruit ready for use. Shall we seek to cover up these stores of wealth by an unnatural daubing of our own? Pursue the same course with the fruit, and what have you? ripe fruit looking worse than green, to be passed by and left to decay! O, when will we be wise and learn to prize what God prizes?

My beloved brethren and sisters, a word to the wise is sufficient. Let us strive to walk worthy the "crown of glory" with which our God has graciously pleased to honor us, and let it stand out in all its brightness before the world, commanding the respect due unto it; and let us be ever ready to use the experience which these many years in the way of righteousness have given us, and it will be a greater beauty to us than youthful bloom.

Shall the veteran of war be ashamed of the scars of a campaign of years? Is he ashamed of that lost eye, or arm, or foot? What do all these speak? a life of indolence and ease? Nay, verily; they speak a good soldier; one who feared not to face danger.

What do the gray head and the marred visage speak for the Christian soldier? They tell of many a battle with that arch old rebel, the devil, and of victory every time. Shall he be ashamed of such honors and seek to hide them under the badge of the novice? God forbid the thought of folly! Stand up, then, my brother and sister, in the strength which your years have given you, and lift high your voices to warn young volunteers of the enemy they have to face in that old serpent, the devil, who has been a warrior of the meanest grade ever since the earth was young, and encourage them to take unto them the whole armor of God, that they may be able to stand against his wiles, and attain to the honors which God has put upon you.

Make age honorable by honoring it yourselves, and by commanding for it the respect of others. If there be a class of persons deserving honor in the world, it is God's veterans; to these only has he given in his word "a crown of glory" for everyday wear.

Young man, if you will please God and have his favor, bow respectfully, at least in heart, when you see this crown. Young woman, take heed how you in your heart think lightly of the matron adorned with this crown. Parents, take heed how you neglect to instruct your children to rise up in the presence of the hoary head.

A crying sin of these last days is disrespect to age. A way is readily made for the young and dashing girl, while the wise and humble matron, wearing her crown of glory, is left to make her own way. God help his children to come up to his standard in this matter,—the aged asserting for themselves the place which God has given them, and the younger submitting to the elder; yea, all be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble. Your sister wearing "a crown of glory," E. S. WILLARD.

SHAVING WITH A BORROWED RAZOR.

BRO. GRANT:—I see by the Crisis that in your discussion at Dover with Moses Hull, he attempts to make a thrust at the God of the Bible, by saying that he does not believe God shaves with borrowed razors. See Isa. 7: 20. "In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria, the head, and the hair of the feet; and it shall also consume the beard."

Now what are the facts in the case? Did God really trim his beard as men do? No; but did as the latter part of the verse declares he would, namely, shave the kings of Israel and Syria by the king of Assyria, or Babylon, who was hired to help Ahaz against these kings after he had fought them single handed and been terribly beaten.

"Ahaz was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem; but he did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord, like David his father; wherefore the Lord his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to Damascus. And he was also delivered into into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter. For Pekah the son of Remalia slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all valiant men; because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers. And the children of Israel carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria."

Then, after this terrible defeat, other nations came against Ahaz. "For again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah," and carried away captives. The Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Bethshemesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shocho with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof; and they dwelt there. For the Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah naked, and transgressed sore against the Lord."

And Ahaz in his distress hires the king of Assyria to help him. "So Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son; come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me. And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him; for the king of Assyria went up against Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin."

Now see how he was paid. "And Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria."

From these passages we see plainly who is represented by the hired (not borrowed) razor, and in the eighteenth verse the same king is compared to a bee. "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is the land of Assyria. And they shall come, and shall rest all of them in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns, and upon all bushes."

But in the end Ahaz was not benefitted by hiring the razor, for he soon died in idolatry.

"And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord, and he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem. And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the Lord God of his fathers. . . . For he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also molten images for Balaam. Moreover he burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel. He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree. . . . And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem: but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead."

Soon after this event, the Assyrian king returns and conquers Israel and a part of Judah, and takes them into captivity, and in this way the word of Isaiah was fulfilled. Now if Mr. Hull had looked at this chapter with care, he would have seen a clear fulfillment of prophecy, instead of making ridicule of it; and it is often the case that examining the so-called objection to the Bible only makes the blessed truth shine with greater effulgence.

Permit me to say that this quibble of Moses Hull's is a very fair specimen of the arguments usually brought against the Scriptures. Let us dig deep and stand on the sure foundation.

SPIRIT OF MAN—WHAT IS IT?

BY WM. SHELDON.

1. Man possesses a mental spirit—the mind, or some of its passions, often being referred to under the term spirit: but mind, instead of being an organized personality, or entity, is simply the result of a well-arranged organism. The character and nature of the mind clearly proves this, for (1) the mind is feeble in infancy; not a feeble spirit-entity: (2) mind matures with the body; not a spirit-entity thus maturing: (3) mind is often affected by disease; and a spirit-entity could not be thus affected: (4) mind frequently becomes insane; and a spirit-entity could not get deranged: (5) mind becomes childish in old age; a spirit-entity would not thus reach maturity and then decline: (6) mind, on a smaller scale, is developed in the beasts, for "the ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib" (Is. 1: 3:) but this is not regarded as proof of a spirit-entity in the beast: (7) mind dies; "In that very day his thoughts perish." (Ps. 146: 4.)

2. Man possesses the "spirit of life," or "breath of life"—not the breath of air, but the "breath of life;" one element that produces life alike in man and beast, and is manifested long prior to birth or before inhaling the breath of air—not an entity, but an element. This spirit will return to God who gave it; and "the body without [this] spirit is dead:" with it we live, without it we die. The spirit that returns to God is simply the one that he "gave:" and the record says that was the "breath of life," or "spirit of life." (Gen. 2: 7.) We inhale and exhale the breath of air several hundred times each hour; but never does the "breath of life," or spirit of life," leave us till death; and after death a large amount of air still remains in the lungs; but life is extinct when the "spirit of life" leaves—an element of life, perhaps akin to electricity, different from mere air, though it may be one of its ingredients.

So while the mental spirit, or mind of man, may die, the spirit of life cannot properly be said to die, because it never lived, but simply produced life, or caused man and beast to live. An element cannot die or live. So while it is true that man has a spirit, it is never spoken of as masculine, or feminine; but always in the neuter gender; for it always signifies either the mind, which dies with the body, or "the spirit of life"—an element that leaves man at death.

If man possesses an immortal spirit-entity, what is its origin? How and when is it connected with the body? (1) Is it transmitted? Mortality cannot transmit immortality, as the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain: hence, it cannot be transmitted unless the spirit propagates its species independent of the body; and if it does, why not continue to do so after leaving its prison-house of clay, and thus eternally augment the number of spirit-entities in the spirit land? If we say this spirit entity is transmitted, since mortality cannot transmit immortality, it must be transmitted by spirit-entities, involving the idea of male and female spirits; furthermore: if spirits propagate their species either in or out of the body, it involves them in mortality: for that which is transmitted is divisible, and that which is divisible is destructible, and hence not immortal. This is plain to all.

(2) If not transmitted, is it created at birth? If so, it makes God sanction all the whoredom in the land, by imparting a spirit-entity to every illegitimate child. Is God thus compelled to obey the mandate of every vile prostitute? Is he continually laboring to help men transgress his own commandments?

(3) If this spirit-entity is neither transmitted, nor directly created at birth, is it a pre-existent entity? If so, why do we not remember our former existence? Could a spirit-entity forget its former existence by coming into a tabernacle of clay? If so, why do not those spirits who enter spirit mediums forget the scenes in the spirit land, and even forget their former existence, and remain in the medium till the death of the body, instead of giving their history of the spirit land and departing again? But if memory is not destroyed by coming into the body, why do we not remember our former existence, if we ever had such an existence?

We can easily find the origin of man's spirit of life, (an element that causes man to live,) and also the origin of his mental spirit, resulting from his organization; but if man has a spirit-entity within, give us its origin. To deny that it has an origin is to deny its existence, unless it is a personal god, and then its memory could not be blotted out by entering a house of clay, nor would a god shut himself up in such a prison-house voluntarily, and could not be placed there compulsively. Then is it the result of propagation, or the direct creation of God to infuse into mortals?

How spirits, upon entering the spirit land, can recognize their spirit friends, having never seen them, is a query. If they are to be known by the resemblance they bear to their former tabernacles of clay, various absurdities will follow, as for instance, a deformed man must have a deformed spirit, a dark complexioned man must have a dark complexioned spirit, a blue-eyed man must have a blue-eyed spirit, and the black, woolly-headed man must have a black, woolly-headed spirit, or else recognition on this principle would be impossible. The mother spirit upon arriving would, on this principle, look for her infant spirit child. Then will it always remain an infant? or do spirits grow? But the principle that will admit of increase will also admit of decrease, and thus deny the spirit's immortality. Thus the spirit must be full grown upon leaving the body, if immortal, or even upon entering it. Then how can the mother recognize the child?

The Bible asserts that man has a spirit, but theologians assume in the absence of proof that that spirit is an entity, and that it is also immortal. The Bible also asserts that the beast has a spirit—then why do they not claim that that spirit is also an entity, and likewise immortal? If one is an immortal entity, why not the other? The term spirit (Heb. ruach, Gr. pneuma) is applied to different classes of beings, good and bad; but when the spirit of a being is spoken of, it always represents either the mind, or some of its passions, or an element in a being or an influence from a being.—Adventism.

FEED THE LAMBS.

Nourish them, carry them in the bosom. Feed them with the sincere milk of the word. Gins, traps, snares and pitfalls are on every side. False prophets, false teachers, errorists, socialists, universalists, mesmerism, spiritualism, magicians, necromancers, witches and wizards, the gay party, the ball-room, the fashionable concert, the formal professor, the time-serving.

The young convert must be exhorted, entreated, to shun these temptations, the traps of Satan; to touch not, taste not, handle not, these unclean things; to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; to flee youthful lusts, that war against the soul; to read God's word, meditate in it day and night, hide it in the heart, drink into its spirit; to pray much in secret, pray always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, watching in the same with all perseverance; to be stedfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

The only sure way for young christians to live and thrive is to do good and communicate, be active in the cause of benevolence, labor for God, for souls; imitate Christ and his apostles. New converts need line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little. Public sermons and sanctuary duties, however scriptural and powerful, will not suffice; fireside, social, conversational, every-day instruction is called for. Nor should the minister or pastor alone do all the work; the experienced christian, the fathers and mothers in Israel have a weighty responsibility, yes, every church member should be a "living epistle, known and read of all men." Lambs cannot feed on chaff or husks, but on angel's food, the bread of heaven, the sincere milk of the word, that they may grow thereby.

Says a popular speaker in Brooklyn, "People will go where they are fed, and will not go where they are not fed." True indeed, but what is the food alluded to by this distinguished divine? Gospel food, that nourishes the soul? What does he preach? The doctrines of the Bible, "holiness to the Lord," entire consecration to God's service? Does he tell his audience to "come out from the world and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing"—abstain from all appearance of evil? Not so. People judge differently as to what is worth hearing, as preachers differ as to what is worth saying.

Very many are delighted with nonsense, trifling witticisms in the pulpit, foolish talking and jesting, and "heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, who would find no pleasure in hearing the sermon on the mount. This popular preacher, boasting of the multitudes that flock to hear him, should bear in mind that there are many kinds of eaters, many kinds of "fodder," and a correspondingly great variety in the feeders of the fodder. The crow that would turn up his nose at the manna that fell in the wilderness, would riot in the carrion that made the dove fly away in disgust.

The common supposition that a man "feeds" multitudes because they go to hear him; or that another man has nothing "worth hearing" because his audiences are not large, is the sheerest nonsense. A man in the pulpit and out of it that will serve the devil, or carry the world, the flesh and the devil in one hand, and the Lord in the other; though he may have the talent of an angel, faith to remove mountains, understand all mysteries, we are constrained to say of him, "Get thee hence, Satan."

"The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed. Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall wear a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

PHYSIOLOGICAL LETTERS ON SLEEP.—NO. 1.

I purpose writing a series of articles on a subject of the utmost practical importance to everybody. There is a daring thief that comes to you every day, and takes away your senses, your reason, and your will, and yet you cheerfully resign all your most valuable treasures into his possession. There is an imperious master that makes you a diurnal visit and shuts you up in a dark cell. He throws around you silken chains which you are neither able nor willing to break, and after a season of captivity he releases you; and yet you bless the bondage which gives you forgetfulness of care, relief of pain, and restoration of vigor.

I wish it to be understood that I shall consider my subject from a physiological and not from a metaphysical stand-point, and shall therefore regard the various mental functions,—thought, feeling, volition, perception, etc.,—as functions of the brain. The very intimate connection which exists between mind and brain makes it necessary, practically, to regard the proper attributes of the one as also attributes of the other. The validity of this statement is obvious when we consider the conditions on which the healthy action of the mind depends.

1. Integrity of the nervous substance (a.) Disease in the nervous centres impairs, if not destroys, the mental operations. It is an admitted principle among scientific men, that insanity, dementia and imbecility are always the result of a weakened or disordered state state of the brain.

2. A healthy circulation of the blood. If the circulation be suspended but for an instant, insensibility is the result. Tie the carotid arteries of an animal, and he falls powerless and insensible (b.) This truth is further illustrated by the phenomenon of fainting, where the heart temporarily loses power to send sufficient blood to the brain—nerve force and mental force cease till the normal circulation is renewed. Hence we see the dependence of the brain—and not merely the brain, but the MIND—on a proper supply of blood. It is the oxygen so plentifully furnished in arterial blood that seems to be the great vitalizing agent; otherwise nervous force and mental force would not cease immediately on the suspension of the circulation (the brain still preserving its normal quantity of blood.)

3. The necessity of sufficient food and a healthy digestion, that the brain may not suffer and the mental powers languish. I cannot insist too strongly on the importance of this point. You cannot have strong and healthy minds unless you are well fed; you cannot think clearly if you fast too long; you cannot enjoy or command your intellectual powers on bad food.

4. By the necessity of sleep, that the brain may be restored and the mind made strong. Behold the thief power that takes away your senses, your reason, and your will—the tyrant that periodically locks you up in his dark cell!

What is sleep? The normal repose of the brain. That unnatural state of physical inaction known as trance is not sleep, nor is that profound insensibility resulting from apoplexy and other diseased conditions, which is known as coma.

What are the essential elements of sleep? 1. Periodicity.—It is a periodical state. 2. It is a state in which the will ceases to exercise control over the body; hence we say all the voluntary cerebral and corporal functions are suspended.

But I shall consider this head more fully in my next. H.

MEDICINAL USES OF THE ONION.

Those who form their opinion of the onion by its value as a perfume for the breath should know of its worth in remedial science, lest they do that estimable vegetable injustice. A correspondent testifies—and is corroborated by others—that raw pounded onions immediately applied to the bite of poisonous snakes, or the stings of bees, etc., will extract the poison and largely prevent pain and inflammation. Quite probably they would in like manner be of service in the bite of a mad dog. As many mothers know, a syrup made by simmering together sliced onions and honey, or sugar, is invaluable in coughs and attacks of croup, and has saved many a child from probable death. They are also excellent for colds, when eaten raw with a little salt or vinegar. Of the use of onions in epidemics a correspondent of The Scientific American bears this testimony:

In the spring of 1849 I was in charge of one hundred men on shipboard, with the cholera among the men. We had onions, which a number of the men ate freely. Those who did so were soon attacked, and nearly all died. After reflection I came to the conclusion that onions should never be eaten during the prevalence of epidemics, for the probable reason that they absorb the virus and communicate the disease, and that the proper use for them is sliced and placed in the sick room, and replaced with fresh ones every few hours.

I have found that onions placed in the room where there is small pox will blister, and decompose with great rapidity; and not only so, but will prevent the spread of the disease. I think as a disinfectant they have no equal, when properly used; but keep them out of the stomach.

☞ The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

YONDER.

No shadows yonder!
All light and song;
Each day I wonder,
And say, how long
Shall time me sunder
From that dear throng?

No weeping yonder!
All fled away;
While here I wander
Each weary day,
And sigh as I ponder
My long, long stay.

No partings yonder!
Time and space never Again shall sunder;
Hearts can not sever;
Dearer and fonder
Hands clasp forever.

None wanting yonder,
Bought by the Lamb!
All gathered under
The evergreen palm;
Loud as night's thunder
Ascends the glad psalm.

THE SLEEP OF THE DEAD.

"Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age."—Gen. 15: 15.
"Then Abraham . . . died in a good old age, . . . and was gathered to his people."—Gen. 25: 8.

The phrases "gathered to his people," "gathered to his fathers," "go to his fathers," "laid unto his fathers," and the very common one "slept with his fathers," all have the same meaning. Theologians of the Platonic school have given expositions of passages in which these phrases occur, which it is the object of this paper to show are unscriptural and contradictory.

Dr. Clarke on Gen. 15: 15 says:—"This verse strongly implies the immortality of the soul and a state of separate existence. He was to be gathered to his fathers—introduced into the place where separate spirits are kept, waiting for the general resurrection. Two things seem distinctly marked here. (1) The soul of Abram should be introduced among the assembly of the first-born. (2) His body should be buried after a long life. The body was buried, the soul went to the spiritual world, to dwell among the fathers, and patriarchs who had lived and died in the Lord."

Here is Spiritualism unadulterated and unmixed. In relation to the "place of separate spirits" the commentator has followed Josephus, not the inspired word of God. The great Jewish historian, in his discourse to the Greeks concerning Hades, taught that the place "in a subterraneous region, wherein the light of this world does not shine," appropriated to the souls of the righteous, was called "the bosom of Abraham." (Query. Was there no paradise (?) before Abraham died?) Dr. Clarke thinks it is distinctly marked here that "the soul of Abraham should be introduced among the assembly of the first-born." In the passage which is the ostensible basis of his remarks, there is no allusion to the soul or spirit of Abram. God's promise to Abram was in these words, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace." The personal pronoun thou is never used except in addressing a person or thing personified. In speaking to Adam after the transgression the Lord said, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Here the word becomes intensive by being used five times in one verse. Adam was addressed as an intelligent individual, and whatever was addressed was to return to dust.

So in the case of Abram; as an individual, as a person, he was to be buried. Benson paraphrases Adam's sentence thus: "Thy body shall be forsaken by thy soul, and become itself a lump of dust." So Dr. Clarke says of Abram, "The body was buried, the soul went to the spiritual world." These remarks, for which they have no warrant in the Scriptures, show to what length prominent advocates of the natural immortality of man will go. But is Dr. Clarke consistent with himself? He asserts that Abram was to be "introduced into the place where separate spirits are kept, waiting for the general resurrection." He next says, "The soul of Abram should be introduced among the assembly of the first-born." Lastly he says, "His body should be buried." Now we will see how these assertions can be reconciled.

The expression "assembly of the first-born" is taken from Heb. 12: 22–3, a general explanation of which will be necessary. "But ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect." The expression—"Ye are come unto Mount Sion"—is clearly proleptical. To prove this it is only necessary to notice,

1. That the place of assembly is the "heavenly Jerusalem," which the apostle John saw in vision, coming down from God out of heaven, after the general resurrection, after the judgment scene, and after the first earth had passed away.

2. The spirits of just men are not to be made perfect until the general resurrection. The Apostle Paul said to believers in Christ, "After that ye believed ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession."

Again, speaking of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and other faithful ones, he says, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises," and after mentioning additional instances of faith in the resurrection he says, "And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." There is to be no partiality in Christ's Church. All the redeemed are to begin immortal life at the same time. See 1 Thess. 4: 15–17. If, then, the assembly of the first-born is the gathering of resurrected saints, going to a place where separate spirits are kept waiting for the general resurrection, would be very different from going to the general assembly of Christ's Church.

The charge of inconsistency is sustained unless it can be shown that Dr. Clarke did not by the expressions "Abram," and "the soul of Abram," mean the same thing. Dr. Clarke's note on Gen. 49: 33, shows that he was diligent, if not consistent, in propping up the pagan dogma of immortality. He says: "I cannot help considering this an additional evidence for the immateriality of the soul, and that it was intended by the Holy Spirit to convey this grand and consolatory sentiment, that when a holy man ceases to live among his fellows, his soul becomes an inhabitant of another world, and is joined to the spirits of just men made perfect." This doctrine allows of no intermediate state, and makes of no effect the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. This is directly opposed to the teachings of St. Paul, who said: "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

The advocates of the notion that "death is only a change of costume," seize with avidity upon every passage of scripture, that by any ingenuity may be tortured into a plausible support of their position. For instance, so respectable an authority as President Dwight says of Gen. 25: 8, "The true meaning of the passage is, that he was gathered to the assembly of the blessed. . . . The body of Abraham was changed to dust in the cave of Machpelah, while something besides that body, that is, the immaterial spirit, was gathered to the divine assembly."—Dwight's Theology, Vol. 1, p. 360.

Of course, this talk about the soul or spirit of Abraham joining the divine assembly, is entirely gratuitous, and has no basis except in the imagination of the writer. The testimony of other prominent writers of popular theology might be adduced, but enough has been given to show the prevalent belief.

I will now endeavor to give the true meaning of the text. As the testimony of Scripture is not explicit, the meaning must be gathered by implication rather than by direct assertion. We may arrive at the meaning by assuming the negative form of ratiocination.

1. Then, the phrases "gathered to his people," "gathered to his fathers," etc., do not mean being buried in the same place, with the person's ancestors. When Sarah died in Hebron, Abraham bought of Ephron, the Cave of Machpelah, for a burial place, "that he might bury his dead out of his sight." In this cave he buried Sarah, and when he died, his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him beside her. "There was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife." Gen. 25: 10. The proposition is also illustrated in the history of Hezekiah and Manasseh his son. "Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefest of the sepulchres of the sons of David." 2 Chron. 32, 33. "Manasseh slept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his own house." 2nd Kings 21: 18.

2. The promise to Abram, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace," cannot mean that he was to join them as a conscious being in paradise, for he was a good man, while we have divine testimony that his father Terah was an idolater. See Josh. 24: 2. Again, Samuel said to Saul: "to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me." Is it to be supposed that the next day, when Saul died, his soul or spirit joined the soul or spirit of Samuel? According to the prevalent theory regarding dead people, Samuel would be in Abraham's bosom, while wicked king Saul would be tormented in hell. But Abraham's bosom is said to be far off from the place where the wicked are confined, (see parable of Dives and Lazarus); hence the good and the bad according to this construction could not be together, so that we are forced to conclude, that good Samuel did not mean that wicked Saul would be with him in paradise the next day.

The same remarks apply to the expression, "slept with his fathers." King Jotham "did that which was right in the sight of the Lord," and he "slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers." 2 Kings 15: 38. His son Ahaz "did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord," but it is said that he too "slept with his fathers."

Nothing can better illustrate a certain phase of this subject than the Lord's promise to Josiah. "I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace, and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place." 2 Kings 22: 20. Here it will be noticed that whatever or whoever was to be gathered to the fathers, was also to be gathered into the grave. (Query. Are "immaterial" souls gathered into the grave?) Josiah was a good man, and of such the Psalmist says, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." Of the wicked it is said, "The transgressors shall be destroyed together; the end of the wicked shall be cut off."

King Hezekiah, though a good man, dreaded to die; and when in answer to his prayer, the Lord granted him fifteen years of life, he wrote these words, "The grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee. . . . The living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do this day." Isa. 38: 18, 19. This harmonizes with David's declaration, "The dead praise not the Lord."

The Apostle Paul, when invited by the rulers of the synagogue at Antioch to speak, among other things said, "David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his father's, and saw corruption."—The Apostle Peter in his sermon on the day of Pentecost, said: "David is both dead and buried," and again: "David is not ascended into the heavens." David himself said: "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15. Thus David, having the glorious hope of awaking from the sleep of death with the likeness of the Life-Giver, slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David.

"The glories of our birth and state
Are shadows, not substantial things;
There is no armor against fate;
Death lays his icy hands on kings,
Sceptre and crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal made
With the poor crooked scythe and spade."

What, then, is the true meaning of the text? Without being dogmatical I would say the meaning seems to be this: Abraham was to join his fathers in the unconscious sleep of death: that is, in the sense of being in the same state, and subject to the same influences with them while asleep.

Sleep as an emblem of death is frequently made use of by the sacred writers. Thus Daniel, speaking of the resurrection says: "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." And the words of Jesus: "The maid is not dead but sleepeth." "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth, but I go that I may awake him out of sleep." The words of the Apostle Paul embody the same metaphor: "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep. . . For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so, them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

In the sleep of death the lapse of time is unheeded. It has been many centuries since the patriarchs and fathers fell asleep and nothing will disturb their profound rest till the last trumpet shall sound, when they will awake from their long sleep, and rise from their dusty beds with the power of an endless life. So far as the consciousness of the person is concerned, the moment he breathes his last will be instantaneously succeeded by the awaking at the general resurrection. In this view it will really appear to the faithful Christian that he goes at death directly to paradise.

I cannot give my consent to the popular notion that they who are asleep, are awake, and the people who are dead are alive. How absurd is all talk about getting the victory over death, just when the King of Terrors has shown his victorious power by depriving his prize of all life and motion! Death is the great leveler of rank and station. Before his crumbling, dissolving touch, emperor and serf, king and peasant, rich and poor, make the same obeisance, and share the same fate. Gold cannot buy his favors, nor beauty share his empire. Whether we consider the number of his subjects or the universality of his empire, we must acknowledge that no earth-born monarch is his equal.

"All that tread
The globe, are but a handful to the tribes
That slumber in its bosom. Take the wings
Of morning, and the Barcan desert pierce,
Or lose thyself in the continuous woods,
Where rolls the Oregon, and hears no sound,
Save its own dashings—yet the dead are there."

Sad indeed would be the destiny of man were death's captives never to go free, were his reign eternal. But we read, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." When then is he to be destroyed? When this mortal shall have put on immortality, when this natural body shall have been raised a spiritual body, then death and hell will be cast into the lake of fire. "This is the second death." The rider of the "pale horse" may then hang up his scythe. His harvest will then be over. He will have no more victims. His work will be finished.

In view of the desolation of death's stern reign during the long lapse of centuries; in view of the untold amount of human misery and agony and distress, how ought our hearts to be gladdened when we read in the Scriptures of truth this most sublime and consoling promise: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain." Death will then have lost his sting, as there will be no sin or sinners in all the universe of God. Thus will he be destroyed. Then shall the pure in heart see God. Then shall the mourner be comforted. Then shall the merciful obtain mercy. Then shall they who hunger and thirst after righteousness be filled. Then shall the peacemakers be called the children of God. Then shall "THE MEEK INHERIT THE EARTH."

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the dread of foes.
Asleep in Jesus! time nor space
Affects this precious hiding-place;
On India's plains or Lapland's snows,
Believers find the same repose."

Dearborn, Mich. J. H. WHITMORE.

☞ A ruling desire to please God, to do good and get good, will bring profit and pleasure to the soul from every duty performed, every trial borne, every prayer offered, conversation with friends, and even from the abuses and insults of enemies.

"YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN."
John 3: 7.

There are four words rendered born, or begotten in the New Testament—Apokueo, tikto, anagennao and gennao. Apokueo is used only in James 1: 15 and 18, thus: "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth. Tikto is used twice. Once in Matt. 2: 2,—"Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" And, Luke 2: 11: "For unto us is born," etc. Anagennao is only used in 1 Peter 1: 3 and 24, thus: "Who hath begotten us again," "and being born again not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible, by the word of God." Gennao is used eighty-three times, rendered begat thirty-eight times, born thirty-seven times, conceived once, Matt. 1: 20. Brought forth, once, Luke 1: 57. Begotten, four times. This is the word used in Matt. 1: 2: "Abraham begat Isaac," etc. This is the word used in our text: "Ye must be born again."

As this word is rendered born or begotten according to the sense in which it stands, we are to be governed entirely by the sense, whether it be rendered born or begotten.

In comparing John 1: 13 with James 1: 18, we find the same sense, and yet differently rendered. The first reads: "Who were born not of the will of the flesh or the will of man, but of God." In James it reads: "Of his own will begat he us." What is accomplished in both cases is the same, and is by the will of God. Now, we cannot read in James, Of his own will born he us: then it follows that the word begat would be the proper word for both renderings in both cases.

Another instance of wrong rendering is in 1 John 5: 1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God, and he that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of God." Rendering the word born in this verse, begotten, and we have a harmony. Begat, begotten and born are from the same word in this verse.

How is this begetting effected? By seed: 1 John 3: 9: "His [God's] seed remaineth in him." What is this seed by which we are begotten? The gospel—the word of God. 1 Cor. 4: 15: "I have begotten you through the gospel." Phil. 1: 10: "I beseech thee, for my son, Onesimus' sake, whom I have begotten in my bonds." 1 Pet. 1: 23: "Being born [begotten] again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God." While this remains in us we cannot sin, as John says: "Whosoever is born [begotten] of God doth not commit sin, for his [God's] seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin for he is born [begotten] of God." So says David,—Psa. 119: 11: "Thy word I have hidden in my heart that I might not sin." Psalms 37: 31: "The law of his God is in his heart, none of his steps shall slide." This cannot, says one, takes away our free agency. Just as a mother's love takes away her free agency. You ask her if she can take the life of her child—she says no. Does she speak the truth? Yes; her love constrains her. With his love abounding in, and his law permeating our hearts, we cannot sin.

The command, the law of God and his love must be laid aside before we can do phat he has forbidden; as Christ says; "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." That settles it forever. A birth from an incorruptible seed produces an incorruptible being. "Ye must be born again." Two births are necessary in order to get the kingdom. One of corruptible seed ushers us into this life, one of incorruptible seed will bring us into the kingdom of God.

Has there ever been a birth of the Spirit? or a birth from incorruptible seed? Yes, one. Jesus has had two births. The first was of the Virgin, the second from the dead. Col. 1: 18: "And he is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead." If this was a spirit birth then the question is settled, that a change from mortality to immortality is this essential birth of the Spirit.

In Rom. 8: 11, we have the assurance that it was the Spirit that raised Christ from the dead. "For if the Spirit that raised Christ from the dead dwell in you, he that raised Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit dwelling in you." Therefore the change from mortality to immortality was produced at his birth from the dead, for we have the assurance that henceforth he is "alive forever more," and death hath no more dominion over him. Christ was made of the seed of David, according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God, with power according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. Rom. 1: 3, 4. This birth was necessary for the eternal life of Christ, and except a man be born again he cannot enter the generation of Christ—the kingdom of God.

The first birth brings us into natural life, the second into immortal life. The first is of the flesh, the second of the Spirit. In the first we have the image of the earthly, in the second the image of the heavenly. Like begets like. As we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, ye hear the sound thereof, but ye cannot tell from whence it cometh, or whither it goeth;" so is every one that is born of the Spirit. Christ, after he was born of the Spirit, could go and come, and none could tell how; this, he assures us, will be the case of us all who get a birth from the dead, or are born of the Spirit.

Christ is the head of the body (the church.) It was meet that the Lord should be born first. If it was necessary for the head to have a birth from the dead (a birth of the Spirit), it will certainly be necessary for the body to have a similar birth. Therefore, "Ye must be born again." "Except a man be born again," etc. At conversion we are begotten of God; thus of his own will begat he us by the word of God. Peter says: "Blessed be the God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which through his abundant mercy has begotten us again," etc. This begetting is by an incorruptible seed, therefore it must produce incorruptible beings. This change may be at the resurrection, or it may be in a moment at the last trump, upon those that are living when he comes. Some have been raised from the dead without this birth or change, others will be, but if the Spirit that raised Christ from the dead dwell in you, he that raised Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Retain, then, this holy anointing (for except ye have the Spirit of God ye are none of his,) this spirit of life, and it shall produce in you that change, or birth, without which we can never enter the kingdom of God.

"Waiting for the redemption of our body," was the language of one who affirms, that if there be no resurrection of the dead, then, they that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. O, how true the saying: "Ye must be born again,"—ye must have a birth, or be raised from the dead, in order to obtain the kingdom of God.

Weary and toil worn, seek Him. In him is life. Get this incorruptible seed in your hearts, retain it as a pledge of life—as life itself, and then when a nation shall be born at once, yea, all the righteous nation of God, then will he say to you: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom, prepared for you from the foundation of the world. May we share together in the spirit birth and in the kingdom of heaven.—H. Pratt.

For the World's Crisis.

"THY WILL NOT MINE BE DONE."

How hard it is for us to come to the place where we can say this with our whole heart; when trials follow each other in quick succession, and our experience is like David's when he said, "O that I had the wings of a dove, for then would I fly away and be at rest; lo, then would I wander far off, and remain in the wilderness; I would hasten my escape from the windy storm and tempest."

While gathered around the family altar this morning, as a dear sister was holding us and the mission up before God, my eyes rested on the following lines which hung on the wall, on the silent comforter, and as they were such a source of consolation to my own heart, no doubt they will be to hundreds of others:—

"Thy way, not mine, O Lord,
However dark it be;
Lead me by thine own hand,
Choose out the path for me.

I dare not choose my lot,
I would not if I might;
Choose thou for me, O God,
So shall I walk aright.

The kingdom that I seek
Is thine, so let the way
That leads to it be thine,
Else I must surely stray.

Take thou my cup, and it
With joy or sorrow fill;
As best to thee may seem,
Choose thou my good and ill.

Choose thou for me my friends,
My sickness or my health;
Choose thou my cares for me,
My poverty or wealth.

Not mine, not mine the choice,
In things, or great, or small;
Be thou my guide, my strength,
My wisdom, and my all."

ANNA E. SMITH.

WHAT IS THE SOUL OF MAN?

BY WM. SHELDON.

This term never signifies an entity within man; but it signifies primarily person, as in the following instance: "The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2: 7), or person. In a secondary sense it signifies life, or the mind. The Hebrew term nephesh, from which soul is translated, is one hundred and twenty times rendered life, in the singular and plural; and the Greek term psuche is forty times translated life. The present life is temporal, but the christian, by obedience, secures a claim upon an endless life, which "life is hid with Christ in God;" for this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." (1 Jno. 3: 12.) So the saint has an endless life deposited in Christ: "Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul" [psuche], or life; this future life of the saint is out of the reach of the assassin; but the sinner's future life (soul, or psuche) will be destroyed with the body in hell, at the judgment day. Matt. 10: 28.) "My soul" sometimes signifies myself, and sometimes my mind; but we have already seen that mind is not an entity, but the result of organism, liable to changes, and a victim of death. If the soul were an immortal entity, it would involve the idea of reward at death, contrary to Scripture and to the faith of the early Christians and Reformers.

1. Saints are not rewarded at death, but at the judgment day. (Read Luke 14: 14; Rev. 11: 18; 1 Pet. 5: 4; Col. 3: 3; 1 John 3: 2.)

2. The soul is not immortal, but dies. (Ps. 78: 50; Ezek. 18: 4; Ps. 22: 29; Rev. 16: 3; Ps. 89: 48; 49: 15.)

3. The dead are unconscious till the resurrection. (Eccl. 9: 5; 3: 19; Ps. 115: 17; 6: 5; 146: 4.)

4. This is not a new doctrine, but harmonizes with the views of primitive Christians, from which Christendom has apostatized. Says Justin Martyr, who was born fifty-six years after the cross, and martyred at the age of seventy-four: "If therefore you fall in with certain who are called christians, who confess not this truth, but dare to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in that they say there is no resurrection of the dead, but that immediately when they die their souls are received up into heaven, avoid them, and esteem them not christians."

Says Eusebius, in speaking of a class of christians in the third century, "These asserted that the human soul, so long as the present state of the world exists, perished at death, and died with the body, but that it would be raised again with the body at the time of the resurrection." (p. 153.)

Says Martin Luther, in his Defence (prop. 27:) "I permit the Pope to make articles of faith for himself and his faithful, such as that he is emperor of the world, king of heaven, and God upon earth—that the SOUL IS IMMORTAL, with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals." Again he says: "All souls lie and sleep till doomsday."

Duke George, in writing to Duke John, October, 15, 1521, says: "Some deny the immortality of the soul. . . . . All this comes of Luther's teachings." The Reformers were also charged with stating: "All which had been said about the immortality of the soul was invented by anti-Christ for the purpose of making the Pope's pot boil."

In a work published in London, in 1772, entitled An Historical View (p. 348,) it is recorded that Luther taught that souls "lay in a profound sleep, in which opinion he followed many Fathers of the ancient church." It adds: "The doctrine was held by the first Reformers." Also: "Luther died in the faith."

Says Wm. Tyndal, who first translated the Scriptures into the English language, for which he was martyred: "If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be?" Again he says: "And ye, in putting them in heaven, hell, and purgatory, destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. . . . . The heathen philosophers did put that the souls did ever live."

Says John Milton, author of Paradise Lost, in advocating the unconscious state of the dead: "It is evident that the saints and believers of old, the patriarchs, prophets, and apostles, without exception, hold this doctrine."

Says Herodotus, over four hundred years before Christ: "The Egyptians were the first who asserted the doctrine that the soul is immortal." (p. 144.)

Protestants received the doctrine of the immortality of the soul from the Papists, and the Papists received it from the Pagans. This doctrine makes of none effect the resurrection, and makes the future judgment unimportant. How strange that a sentiment that was Pagan in embryo, and Papal in childhood, should be Protestant in its manhood! Without this heathen dogma, Catholicism could not exist, and Mahometanism would go into nonentity. —Adventism.

For the World's Crisis.

"I HAVE MANY THINGS TO SAY UNTO THEE."

Beloved in the Lord:—For sometime I have had a longing desire to take my pen and unburden my heart; but the Lord found other employment for me, and while I have been active, my heart has been cheered with the weekly visits of the Crisis, full of so many good things pertaining to the kingdom.

We are living in a time when those who have the seal of the living God ought to be buoyed up with the glorious anticipation of the scenes of blessedness—of eternal glory—just before us. The night is far spent, and the morning begins to dawn; and soon by the power of an endless life we shall be brought to see the "King of Zion's hill" arrayed in his regal glory, and shall begin to realize the blessedness of eternally dwelling with him in the presence of the Lord, and surrounded by the untold glories of the Paradise of God. No one who has familiarized himself with the past, present, and future, can doubt that soon, yes, very soon, the Son of man shall come in the clouds of heaven, the reapers shall go upon their mission, and the earth shall be reaped,—the saints shall be gathered into the garner of God. But though we can view these things as just before us, yet we are in the enemy's land as "pilgrims and strangers," and beset with perils so great that we are threatened with destruction at every step, while we are waiting and groaning for deliverance, therefore "I have many things to say unto thee."

We are living in times of increased danger. Present danger is very great, and unless we exercise great caution, many will be caught in "the snares of the fowler." We shall be called to pass through the present season (if time should last), the greatest political excitement doubtless on record. It will be accompanied with great danger to the followers of Christ. These excitements are the work of the powers of darkness, and their influence upon the christian heart is always deadly. It is the spirit of the world and is enmity to God (James 4: 4), and will quench the Spirit whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption. In our daily walk we shall be surrounded by this influence, trying to crowd itself into our hearts by every conceivable way. Beloved, I admonish you to shun it, and by the grace of God "keep thyself pure." Every conceivable argument will be advanced to induce you to connect yourself with some political party; but beware that you fall not from your own steadfastness. Remember that your citizenship is enrolled in heaven (Phil. 3: 20), from whence we look for our King, the rightful heir to David's throne. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temples of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them; and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord of hosts."—2 Cor. 6: 14–18.

May the Holy Spirit bring this matter home powerfully to our hearts. Let all who desire to be found blameless at Christ's coming consecrate themselves anew to God; "draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." It is a great and solemn thing to prepare for the judgment, and it is all important that we make a sure preparation, for "the pure in heart shall see God." Oh! let us be sure that we partake not of Babylon's sins, that we "receive not of her plagues." Put forth every means in your power to sound the message, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," and by a consistent christian life show forth to the world that you believe it with all your heart.

It will avail you nothing to have the truth unless you are sanctified through it. I believe with all my heart that probation is about ended. "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."—Rom. 12: 42. WM. H. SPENCER.

For the World's Crisis.

THE BROAD ROAD.

"Broad is the road that leads to death,
And thousands walk together there;
While wisdom shows a narrow path,
With here and there a traveler."

In the book of inspiration we read the words of the Lord as follows: "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Reader, are you in the narrow path? If you are not sure of this, permit me to address you a few earnest, faithful words. I trust you have a desire to be saved, and gain eternal life. But where have you been straying? Did you see the open door of a "saloon" near your path, and was you tempted to enter there? Ah! were not your feet in the "broad road" then? "Wine is a mocker, and strong drink is raging." O shun the paths of the destroyer. "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." Prov. 4: 14, 15.

If you would obey God and resist the devil keep away from the "saloon." Be as decided in this as though you were sure that you would be shot through the heart as soon as you set foot inside. The wise man says, "surely in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird." The drinking saloon is a net, a snare of the enemy. It is in sight, that is, you know it is a snare, and that the path to that place is the way to hell, "going down to the chambers of death." Now if you are not "wise as a serpent," surely you ought to be as wise as a bird; and it is in vain to set a snare in the sight of a bird. Keep away from all bad company, and from all places of vain amusement and dissipation, if you desire to gain eternal life.

Not long ago I met one who was in deep trial, and who seemed to be seeking some one to lend him a helping hand, and give a word of encouragement. His language was something like this:

"I am in a very sad state. I am almost discouraged. I have tried to reform, but I am so weak, so easily led astray. I don't know what to do. The evil one seems to have control of me, and however strongly I resolve to keep in the right path, I find myself slipping and falling, and am sometimes on the point of rushing headlong down the broad road, and turning my back forever upon all hope of life and salvation. And yet I don't want to do this; but how shall I escape, or what shall I do to be saved?"

It is for the benefit of all who may be in a similar condition, that the foregoing is written, and may the Lord add his blessing.

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

SPIRITUAL LIFE.

"Thy words were found, and I did eat them."

Thus we should and must do to find the life they communicate. In reference to primary saving truth, this experience must be ours, for it is through faith we are to become recipients. As natural life depends on receiving atmospheric air, so heavenly life on our abiding in the atmosphere of truth, salvation truth. The life spiritual is thus spoken of,—"By his own will begat he us by the word of truth." Our earthly life is supported by the act of breathing, so heavenly life by inhaling "the word of truth"; and as in the one constant respiration is necessary, so with the other.

Remaining in the atmosphere of saving truth, we ultimately are favored with divine breathings indispensable to the divine life. The truths in connection with the natural life lose their force if refused; but accepted, minister to our wants, even support the earthly existence; so with salvation truth, it must be in acceptation to affect the heart; must there remain to be the medium of a new life, and a constant recurrence to, as well as adherence; yea, an abiding presence is absolutely needful, would we really live, and thus be able to say with Paul, "for me to live is [not self] Christ." Here alone is eternal existence. Again, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom," in all faith, this being the legitimate way to feed on "the true bread from heaven." Let us make it our experience, "Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart." C. GREENE.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, June 24, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion. *

OUR WESTERN VISIT.

Thus far our trip west has been specially interesting and pleasant. We left our readers at the close of the Fairfield campmeeting, June 7th. Monday the 8th, in company with Bro. Elliott, from Elliotta, Minn., we were taken by Bro. House to his hospitable home, where we took dinner, and was then conveyed by him to Kilbourne City, where we took the cars for La Crosse, arriving about midnight. On the way we enjoyed the company of Bro. Elliott, a noble-hearted, earnest, intelligent man, noted as a pioneer in the west, and for his energy of character, and executive power, who has recently embraced the blessed hope, and commenced preaching it to others. After doing all he could for our comfort, we parted with sadness, but with a bright hope of meeting soon in the company of all the redeemed. Soon after our parting, about one o'clock in the morning, we lay down to wait for the steamboat that would take us down the river to Dubuque.

At 3.40 A. M., its whistle sounded, and about 5 o'clock we parted from land and commenced our voyage upon the "FATHER OF WATERS,"

which is the meaning of the word Mississippi, as used by the Indians. The morning was clear, and the whole day one of extra loveliness. Fortunately our boat was the noble, fast sailing steamer St. Paul, commanded by Capt. I. H. Moulton, an experienced, kind, and gentlemanly commander, who seemed to feel best when his passengers were the most comfortable and happy. A fine band of music was provided for our entertainment, besides a piano, that was made to afford some very fine music by one of the passengers,—Mrs. Bates, from Chicago.

We thought we had seen beautiful scenery before, but that on the Mississippi eclipses all the rest. This was the most delightful day of travel we ever enjoyed. At one time we were so overwhelmed by the beauty, grandeur and sublimity of the scenery, that we wept for joy, and thanked the Lord that we were permitted to witness such an enchanting sight. When in the midst of the beautiful scene the fine band of colored musicians, that accompany the boat, played some very sweet pieces of music, which added a delicious charm to what already far surpassed any thing we ever expected to witness this side of the kingdom of heaven. It seemed as though we had arrived at the suburbs of the elysian fields promised to the faithful. We can hardly conceive how a more pleasing variety of scenery could be grouped together than we enjoyed while sailing down the great "Father of Waters." Here and there were high bluffs, some of which looked like an immense haystack, with one half cut away; others hung projecting far above the land below; next adjoining would be high banks undulated like the mountain waves of the sea, presenting a remarkable uniformity of size, as though they had been arranged by some skillful gardener, presenting a wave and a dell, a wave and a dell, and so on for some distance, and the whole covered with a beautiful green foliage; then might be seen a deep ravine where one might hide from storms, and pursuers, and be sheltered from heat and cold, by the projecting table rock, all a fit place for a poet's corner, or a painter's studio; intermixed with all these were handsome mounds and hills, like sugar-loaves, covered with green grass, that looked most lovingly inviting; others were adorned with trees that presented the appearance of an orchard; then below all these were beautiful meadows, shaded by noble elms like those on Boston common, then next the majestic river with its calm silver bosom, on which were floating immense rafts of lumber, with houses thereon, where the raftsmen remain for weeks, moving slowly down to their point of destination, plying their many oars to wind through the short turns of the river, and avoid the cozy-looking green islands interspersed, and the majestic steamers plowing their way up and down the "Father of Waters;" all of these, cheered by the soft notes of music echoing from bank to bank, present a scene really enchanting, and gave us a more lively idea of paradise than we ever before experienced, or expect to realize again this side of the coming kingdom. The sight of this beautiful scenery made us feel more anxious to see the coming paradise, and caused us to feel more willing to sacrifice for the glory of Him who has died to save us, and who has promised all the pure in heart a home where sorrow and pain, sin and death, will be feared and felt no more. Dear reader, shall we meet there? Let us put away every thing that will hinder our progress to that heavenly land. We must be very near to that happy home. If not ready, there is no time to be lost.

We arrived in Dubuque, Iowa, Wednesday morning about five o'clock, where we found Bro. Black waiting to take us to the Iron Hill campmeeting. We called a short time on Bro. Cook, at Dubuque, and took breakfast, and then went to the camp-ground, a distance of about twenty-nine miles. On our way we passed through the finest rolling prairie land we ever saw. The wheat is looking very well, but the corn is backward. It was a feast to the eyes to look upon such farms as we there beheld; but there is a lack of wood and water. So far as farming is concerned, Iowa presents some of the best examples in the world. After riding some twenty-four miles, we arrived at the pleasant home of Bro. Black. After taking some rest, we went on six miles further to the camp-ground, which was located in a vast forest of very large timber, composed mostly of stately elms and sugar maples. We found Bro. Deyo's large tent on the ground, and well filled by those who had gathered to worship the God of our fathers.

Immediately after our arrival we were introduced to Mr. Isaac Sheen, a Mormon elder, and the editor of the Mormon paper published at Plano, Ill. We found arrangements had been made for us to hold a discussion with him, which commenced the next day, and was continued two days, having three sessions each day of two hours each. We discussed the following questions:

"Is the spirit of man conscious after the death of the body?"

"Will the wicked finally cease to exist?"

This Mr. Sheen, like Goliath of old, has been defying the children of the Lord to produce a man that would meet him in debate on the foregoing questions. He holds views very similar to those entertained by Plato and the other heathen philosophers. His great point was expressed as follows: "The spirit in man is an immortal personality that existed from eternity to eternity." In addition to the heathen view, taught also by Spiritualists, he claimed that the spirits of wicked men went "down to the pit," which is deep down in the earth, where they must remain till by their suffering they should atone for their sin, then they can come out and be saved. Thus he advocated universal salvation; and even that the Devil himself would finally become good. He stated that infidels and Spiritualists were reckoned among the righteous. His whole system was a mixture of Orthodoxy, Paganism, Spiritualism, Universalism, Catholicism, with a sprinkling of the true doctrine of the Bible. Mormonism is one of Satan's traps to catch people from all religious denominations, and lead them into by-paths that will end in perdition.

Report of the campmeeting next week.

YEAR OF STORMS.

Calamities seem to come in clusters. Some years are noted for a multitude of terrible fires, some for floods, some for financial troubles, some for earthquakes, some for storms. There are indications that the latter may prevail this year. The following is a record of one in Texas:—

The San Antonio Express of May 21st, gives the following particulars of the late disastrous hail storm:—

"Our city is a perfect wreck; every house in it has received some damage; many are in complete ruins, with nothing but fragments of walls standing. The hail stones penetrated the best roofs like cannon balls. All the windows facing to the north have been smashed in, even window shutters and doors were broken down. The appearance of the city could not have been worse under a severe bombardment. Trees are stripped of their leaves and branches, which lie piled up in the yards and streets—the sides of houses exposed to the hail have the appearance of having withstood a thousand discharges of grape and canister. The roofing of the entire city is perforated like a sieve.

The hailstones were of irregular shape and all sizes, as if a mass of ice had broken above our devoted heads, and had been driven by a tornado to the earth. One hailstone was found weighing over five pounds, while a great many as large as a man's fist were picked up.

Many of the families whose houses were beaten down took shelter under beds and tables, and thus escaped bodily harm. We have only heard of one death, a negro boy; several had limbs broken, and were severely bruised, while the whole population was frightened almost to death.

The damage was of every character, and $500,000 will not cover it all, roofs were universally destroyed and windows broken in, household furniture was entirely demolished in some houses and in many stores the damage was great. The Menger House was greatly damaged, the Kleoper Hotel is almost a wreck, the Convent buildings are terribly cut up. All the blinds and window glass on the northern side destroyed, Frenche's buildings having windows to the north.

General Mason's residence was unroofed and his family exposed to the inclement storm. But the most distressing picture of all are the habitations of the poor people, their houses battered in, household goods destroyed, and their little gardens ruined.

The corn patches and gardens are flattened to the ground, and have the appearance of having passed through a chopping mill. All the fruit crop is destroyed.

The storm resembled a terrific battle, the lightning flashing in fearful vividness, the thunder crashing like a thousand cannon, and the hail falling like shot; so fearful was the noise that no one could hear unless they screamed in each other's ears. Never in the history of this city, never in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, was such a storm experienced.

We learn that the hail storm commenced eight miles this side of New Braunfels, reached only a short distance below our city, and extended from five to twenty miles in width—destroying everything over a region thirty miles from north to south, and ten to twenty miles from east to west."

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

We have great reason to praise the Lord for the continual manifestation of his favor bestowed upon the waiting ones as they assemble together in this Chapel from time to time. Yesterday, although rainy without, we enjoyed a most peaceful and heavenly season within. In the morning the love-feast was indeed a feast of fat things; the moments were all taken up, several being on their feet at a time, ready to testify of the goodness of God, and the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus.

At noon we repaired to the water-side, where Bro. J. G. Hook buried "by baptism unto death" five believers—strong men, who, we trust, will henceforth walk in newness of life.

At 3 P. M. Bro. Hook preached the word, "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," the Lord clothed him with power; there was a trembling in the congregation, and the evening meeting, which was designed for preaching, was devoted to giving those who did not enjoy the peace of God in their hearts an opportunity of coming out on the Lord's side. Eight arose for prayers. The Lord blessed, and we trust that there was joy in the presence of the angels of God. Thus closed one of the best days ever enjoyed at Lowell St. Chapel. *

ANTI-TOBACCO TRACTS.

GEORGE TRASK, Fitchburg, Mass., is the author of about one hundred excellent tracts on the evil effects of tobacco and rum, that ought to be scattered in society like the leaves of autumn. Thousands, tens of thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands are ruining their constitutions by the use of tobacco.

We will give our readers a list of some of Mr. Trask's anti-tobacco and anti-rum books and tracts as follows:—

Pierpont's view of the tobacco god, etc. Abraham Lincoln never used tobacco. Twenty reasons why clergymen should not use tobacco. General Grant and his cigar. The church of God and the temperance cause. The rumseller's reward. The poor old woman who put a stop to licenses. The old Lady Elcquent down on the rumseller. The rich man and the temperance cause. A library smoked away. How the old wagon wheels preached temperance. The drunkard's first step. An appeal to the Prince of Wales on the pernicious effects of his cigar. An appeal to Gov. Banks on furnishing tobacco to criminals and paupers. An appeal to a Boston deacon. An appeal to a Boston doctor, who apologizes for tobacco. An appeal to the American Board. An appeal to the Rev. Dr. Woodbridge, on the sin of raising tobacco. Appeal to Rev. Dr. Spring on his tobacco box in Music Hall. An appeal to a deacon who raises tobacco on the banks of the Connecticut. An appeal to the sons and daughters of temperance on the twin demons, rum and tobacco. An appeal to young men on the physical, mental and moral effects of tobacco. An appeal from ladies to railroad corporations. A reply to the lawyer who asks, "How shall I drop tobacco?" Tobacco destroys health and beauty. Women's rights as smokers. The anti-tobacco horse. The christian virtues of an old smoker. How friends cure friends. Is it safe to drop it? How shall I drop it? Song of the cigar; or, fairness to the fair. Appetite for tobacco unnatural; its use a sin. What harm is there in a pinch of snuff? One day and a half in the life of a tobacco chewer. Is tobacco good for the teeth? Statistics of tobacco; amount and cost. Young convert and a cigar. Fires by pipes and cigars. What have wives, mothers and sisters to do in this reform? Dialogue between Uncle Toby and a street smoker. College student and his pipe. Christian selling tobacco! Tobacco hinders revivals of religion, and the conversion of the world.

In addition to the above, he has the following interesting works:—

The Boys' Temperance Book, for Sabbath Schools and Bands of Hope, or Uncle Toby's Stories on Tobacco. The Rev. Solomon Spittle. The Temperance Convention of Brutes; or, The Young Man's Temperance Book, by President Hitchcock. All admirably illustrated by cutting cuts.

Send orders to Rev. Geo. Trask, Fitchburg, Mass.

"ANNUAL REPORT OF THE AMERICAN ANTI-TOBACCO SOCIETY."

FRIENDS AND PATRONS,—We have written and lectured against the common use of tobacco, twenty years; and, in so doing, many of our fellow-men have thought us fanatical and foolish. We, in turn, have considered them superficial, and blind to the mischief tobacco is doing, not only upon nations, but upon themselves. They have given this great evil no manly investigation, and in our good-natured way, we tell them they are as ignorant of our motives and work as Hottentots.

We say to gentlemen, who sit as lordly critics upon us,—

I.—We did not engage in this reform from any selfish desire to heap up riches, and deck ourselves with applause.

Tobacco is used by some three hundred millions of human kind, "by saint, by savage, and by sage," and is the most popular sin on the globe. Popular preachers and popular authors are altogether too wise to seriously assault this monstrosity, or touch it with one of their fingers. We wait for the man to be born who shall write a popular book against this popular abomination. Emerging from other unpopular reforms, we had but little popularity to nurse, and little to lose; and, as glorious John Brown thought he was worth more to be hung than anything else, we thought we were worth more to fight this battle than anything else, and laid our last iota of popularity a willing sacrifice upon this altar.

II.—We do not battle it solely because it is an impurity.

Every man who values unpolluted air, a cleanly pew or church or fireside, knows it to be an impurity and a nuisance. Flaming posters, "No Smoking Here," "No Chewing Here," in halls and depots, up and down the land, boldly proclaim it a nuisance. Why, then, waste breath in this direction, when a wayfaring man, though a fool, knows it to be an unqualified nuisance? Having been a victim of its fascinations, we can assure nice men and nice women, who expend the sum-total of their eloquence in sentimental whinings against tobacco as "a dirty thing," that they accomplish nothing. The skin of an old smoker too much resembles that of a rhinoceros, to be penetrated by missiles so delicate. Thousands, thank God, relinquish the "weed;" but not because it is "a dirty thing."

III.—We do not battle it solely because it is expensive.

The church, as Dr. Coles maintains, may annually waste five million dollars upon it; the nation may, in ten years, waste a sum sufficient to liquidate the national debt; the cigar-bill of thousands of poor mechanics may be a sum sufficient to bless their families with a life-insurance policy of ten thousand dollars,—and yet, knowing what we know, of the bewitching potency of this poison, we confidently affirm, that all such statistics, however formidable, produce little more effect than the whistling winds. The devotee loves his money, but he loves his tobacco better; and should government raise it to ten or twenty dollars a pound, he will have it, if he can get it.

Oh, no, friends and patrons, we battle tobacco for no such paltry reason; but because it is a great evil of the age, an evil touching both body and soul, both Church and State.

In our tracts, we maintain, that its common use is an "assault and battery" upon the body, the temple of God, and is a sacrilegious crime. True, we do not impute all the diseases beneath the skies to this poison, nor endorse the notions of a New York doctor, that eighty diseases, or more, owe their origin to this source. But we maintain, fearlessly challenging contradiction, that millions of its devotees are now, in the constructive sense, perpetrating suicide.

Our tracts are designed to meet this evil in its variety of phases. We see its victims on every hand.

We say to one friend,—Such are the constitutional humors of your body, that your pipe will probably converge them upon a given point on your tongue, lip, or face; and you stand a chance to be eaten up by a cancer! We refer to a college—a whole college—of French surgeons, to justify our warning.

We say to another, complaining of "goneness" and heart-flutterings, Friend, your heart-strings are horribly abused by tobacco; the organ resembles a rickety old wagon. You stand a chance to be found dead in your bed, or to drop dead on the sidewalk, within twenty-four hours! For authority, we refer him to Dr. Twitchell, or to any doctor who has given the subject suitable attention.

We say to another, who is irritable as a porcupine, gloomy as a ghost, and whose nerves flap like the sails of a ship when the storm subsides, Friend, we beg you to drop your pig-tail and cavendish, or you may die of delirium tremens or in a mad-house!

We say to another, whose body is reeking with the foul fumes of tobacco, Friend, your wife is tremulous, attenuated, and pale; your children are scrofulous liliputians! If you have no pity on yourself, do pity your babes, and give up this abomination. We refer him to Brodie, Victoria's doctor, to back up our advice. "Tobacco," says Brodie, "afflicts posterity; the sin is visited upon the third and fourth generation."

We say to Temperance Conventions, gentlemen, let us do our best to subdue alcoholic intemperance; but as tobacco commonly creates the appetite for strong drink, and paves the way to drunkenness, let us put down tobacco; otherwise we shall progress, and re-progress, and beat the air as aforetime. We name a dozen of the most scientific physicians in the world, to vindicate our doctrine.

No, friends and patrons; we have not fought this evil as a trivial thing, but a masterly vice. The first tract of the seventy-five tracts we have published is an appeal to "Thirty Thousand Clergymen," to show that "the common use of tobacco is a sin. Here and there a youngster in the ministry—here and there a doctor of divinity—"withstood us face to face," deacons, who were ready to sunder churches, cashier ministers, and discipline "God's elect," for insignificant heresies and peccadilloes, laughed at the idea, that the use of tobacco was a sin in the sight of God. Hence, we were compelled to show that, as tobacco is a poison, it must somewhere, somehow—in the smoker himself, in his wife, or his child—produce the specific effects of a poison; and that God had no such partiality for a tobacco sot, as to bid the sin stand still in his behalf, or a rank poison to do him no harm.

Our argument was short and simple. The common use of tobacco tends to sensualize our nature, and does sensualize it; it wastes time, strength, and health. Such use is a violation of the laws of nature. The laws of nature are the laws of God; and, if a violation of the laws of the supreme lawgiver is not a sin, there is no sin.

Many good men, we rejoice to say, when addressed in a philosophic and kind manner on its sinfulness, manfully confess, that they are "convinced of sin," and relinquish the idol forever. Thousands have done it. In fact, we have found but two arguments of much efficacy in dealing with veteran tobacco-users. The one, that the habit is immoral and sinful; and the other, that in cases innumerable, it brings its victim to face death, the king of terrors, before he is aware of it!

Tobacco destroys not only the body, but the soul. It pours its abominable feculence upon all which is glorious in man, and destroys not only the casket, but the jewel in the casket. Tobacco and opium, alike freely and persistently used, benumb moral sensibility, sear conscience, and by their narcotic power create an abnormal environment about the soul, which gospel truths do not penetrate. Many a smoker, paralyzed by this narcotic, is as far from the kingdom of God today, as the forlorn drunkard wallowing in the gutter. A Chinaman, stupefied and stultified by opium, or a Yankee, stupefied and stultified by tobacco, is as impervious to gospel truth, as an iron-clad ship in battle. The idea of converting the Chinese whilst besotted on English opium, or of converting the masses about us whilst besotted on tobacco, is as preposterous as the idea of driving a train of cars through an impervious snow-bank or a mountain of granite.

Patrons and friends, fathers and brethren, we tell you it cannot be done. Have we not treated this great matter, the conversion of the world, in a subjective sense, a subjective light, long enough? Have we not been simply exhorting one another, calling upon our churches for more faith, more prayer, more money, and more men—long enough? Is it not time to look at this matter in the objective sense, tear the scales from our eyes, and look at the obstacles before us? Is it not high time to cease this billing and cooing in our missionary meetings and revival meetings, and march out, and do something with sinners, as well as saints? Is is not time to cast aside the snow, bore the mountain, clear the track, and prepare the way of the Lord?

We know where we stand. We know we have dear men of God in high places, men we respect and love, who suppose they have no more to do with removing opium and tobacco out of the way, as obstacles to the conversion of men, than they have to do with Shay's Rebellion or the Gunpowder Plot.

An instructive fact. On the Sandwich Islands, where the gospel has had free course, the natives, at an early period, made an immense mound of their tobacco-pipes, and destroyed them all before the Lord. We can give a thousand facts in point, equally pertinent, though not so impressive.

In our last interview with Dr. Justin Edwards, the good and wise man said, "We need an Anti-narcotic Movement; sinners at home and sinners abroad will not be converted without it; and I am glad you have made a little beginning."

Sainted doctor! Amidst poverty and scorn, God has enabled us to make a "little beginning." "The American Board of Commissions for Foreign Missions," invested in a halo of prayer, and fed with millions of dollars, has made a beginning, a glorious beginning. But place a dime on the crown of your hat, and it illumines a much larger place, proportionately, than the Board has actually illumined on this dark globe in a history of more than fifty years. Unamiable and captious men say, we "have not done much." Very well; we will tearfully thank God, that we have done anything, and "magnify our office," notwithstanding all vituperations.

Our account of tracts gratuitously spread, our outgoes and incomes, are already made public. Our income has never half equalled the salary of a city clergyman!

Patrons and friends, dear men and women, who dare identify yourselves with this unpopular cause,—we assure you, we fight a powerful foe; the battle is a hard one. Do send us "the sinews of war," do send us "aid and comfort;" and the Savior—"whose we are, and whom we serve"—will reward you for the same. GEO. TRASK.

MISSION TENT.

The Mission Tent got up by the benevolence of Brn. Stone, Kingsbury, Ford, and others, made its first appearance in Charlestown, standing close by Bunker Hill, where meetings were held in it for a week daily under the direction of Brn. Leavitt and Thurber, H. L. Hastings and others helping by way of preaching and exhortation, singing and praying. The meeting closed Wednesday evening.

The meeting was an experiment in that city. I was able to be there but little, but from my observation, although the meeting was a good one, and the truth heard by many, some convinced that it was even so, with the conviction that they must bear testimony to its truthfulness, others brought in love with it; yet if the meeting could have been held longer the result might have been more salutary, even to the converting and bringing together of a church and the establishment of a meeting that would be permanent and abiding in Charlestown. I hope this may yet be, but it will take a united effort of all the lovers of Jesus and his coming.

The tent is of the right size, beautiful in appearance, round, sixty feet across it, making a convenient meeting-house, and will seat a thousand or more. It is just the thing for mission work; where no place can be obtained, this with little work can be put up, and the people called together where they can have this gospel, or the gospel of which Paul was not ashamed, for it was and is the power of God unto salvation. I hope wherever it is pitched it may be the means of raising up new interest in the cause of truth and Christ's coming kingdom. The true policy is, when an interest is awakened stay, if possible, till you have accomplished a good work, so that you can leave a working church and have a meeting established.

The tent is soon to be pitchee in South Boston. Pray, brethren, that it may be a great blessing in that place. Thine,

Chelsea, Mass. L. BOUTELL.

LONG SERMONS.

BRO. GRANT:—I am glad Bro. Munger has introduced this subject. I hope it will be kept before the people until there is a reform; and methinks I hear a multitude of patient listeners respond Amen. That they are an evil and productive of no good is evident, and if the voice of the church could be heard in relation to it, I think the vote would be almost unanimous against them. We know there are some men to whom we can listen an hour or more and be edified by every word they say, but the number is few; and while there is one such, there are scores who would exhaust the patience of an audience in half the time.

But how shall a preacher know whether or not his preaching is edifying, or meat in due season? We should say, if there is not a hearty response of the church to what he says, he had better close as soon as possible; for if the Spirit is in the church, and the preacher also, there will be a union with and response to his words.

There are, to be sure, some places where lengthy sermons would not be out of place, in remote localities where the preacher does not often visit. They could listen patiently to them; but in cities and villages, where there is regular service every Sabbath, condensed thoughts uttered in as few words as possible would be productive of greater good, giving the church more time for improving its gifts. But, as has often been said, long and cold and lifeless prayers and exhortations are as great a hindrance.

I once heard a deacon of a church in an adjoining city say that there was once a revival of religion in the church in which he officiated, and the first intimation they had of the presence of the Holy Spirit was in their short prayers. The church had settled down into a formal habit of long prayers and exhortations, long singing, and reading of the Scriptures, and had become cold and lifeless in spiritual things; and we suppose the Lord saw they were losing ground, and in pity poured out his Spirit and gave them a spirit of prayer. He said the burden upon them was a revival, and when he had uttered a few heartfelt petitions, another would be burdened with the same desire, and a revival soon commenced. But in addition to this, we have the Savior's words upon this point, when he spoke of the Pharisees for a pretense making long prayers. Are not many of the long prayers we hear in this age pretended, and not real? D. N. SMITH.

SISTER C. B. TURNER.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to make an appeal to the brethren and sisters at large in behalf of our Sister C. B. Turner, of Syracuse. It will be remembered that soon after the death of our much lamented Bro. Turner, an effort was made to raise an amount sufficient to place our sister beyond pecuniary embarrassment.

While in Syracuse last February, in company with Bro. Burnham I called to see Sister T., and found her a devoted christian, passing through a severe trial on account of her bereavement, but trusting wholly in Him who had promised to be the widow's God. She expressed a deep sense of gratitude toward those who had written letters of sympathy and sent "material aid"; when upon inquiry I learned that, although the friends had done nobly, there was still a debt on the house of some four hundred dollars, the interest of which would be due this month. To pay this amount and some necessary repairs, it would require about five hundred dollars. When I think of the good accomplished and of the many sacrifices made and privations endured by our brother who now sleeps in Jesus, I feel it to be a duty which we owe to God and to his family to see that they are free from pecuniary embarrassment.

Now, brethren and sisters, what say you, shall this amount be raised, and be raised at once? I know you have the means. I believe you have the will, and when you come to know the facts your duty will be plain.

I propose to be one of a hundred to raise the five hundred dollars the present month. Are there not ninety-nine persons who will respond at once? Perhaps there are some who will give more than five dollars, and I have no doubt there are many who can not give five, but who could give one, two, or three dollars. Let none decline, but each one do what he can, and do it at once.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

A friend in Portland sends for personal use, $5.00; Bro. Hathorne, $2.00; Bro. Higgins, $2.00; from parties through the Crisis office, $4.00; John G. Burch, $5.00; Jos. T. Howland, $3.00 for personal use, and $4.00 for the mission; Mrs. Silas M. Adams, $3.50; a brother in Springfield, $1.75; friends in Hinesburg, Vt., $3.50. These friends sent the firkin of maple sugar which came to us by the way of Burlington.

This article is being written by me at one o'clock at night. I am watching by the bedside of one of our little children who is dangerously ill, and who may not live twenty-four hours, unless God raises her up. It is sad to behold the sufferings of this little one, and it makes me long for the coming of the Savior, who will conquer the "last enemy."

Through the blessing of God my health is improving, for which I praise his name. May he cause blessings to be multiplied towards all our friends who have prayed for us, and who have also administered to our temporal necessities. My next communication will contain a report of our doings since the commencement of the year. Continue to pray for us. Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

"PLAN OF REDEMPTION."

The first edition of this excellent book is sold, and the second edition is just published, with the addition of four chapters on "THE TRUE ISRAEL," and "THE MILLENNIUM," at an extra expense of about two hundred dollars, leaving out the pamphlet on Baptism, and making it a book of 460 pages, beautifully bound in muslin. No pains have been spared to make it the best book of the class for all christian readers. We want agents in all parts of the country to canvass for it, and will give special terms when requested. We intend to put this book of Bible theology into the hands of all denominations as extensively as possible. Who will help do it? The first edition has made an indelible impression on the minds of thinking readers, and called forth important testimonies in its favor.

Sold by the hundred, or in less quantities, by I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., or C. Goud, Topsham, Me.; also at the Crisis office. Retail price, $1.25. I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

MONEY FOR THAT HORSE.—I have just received from Eld. D. D. Reed 50 cents, Martha Stone 50 cents, Eliza Fassett 25 cents, all the way from Iowa, to aid Bro. J. Carr in buying a horse. Also from J. Stevens 50 cents. "W." pays $4.50. Is it not a grand opportunity to invest something for a horse, to aid in publishing the good news of Christ's coming and kingdom and his great salvation? I think it is. Come, let us have this brother provided with a horse at once. "The King's business requires haste." This investment pays more than U. S. bonds. Try it.

I. C. WELLCOME.

"GOD'S PEOPLE ISRAEL AND THE SCRIPTURAL MILLENNIUM," is the title of a new pamphlet of 142 pages, by Wellcome and Goud. This pamphlet contains four chapters which they have added to the second edition of their book, "The Plan of Redemption," and is published separately, for the benefit of those who bought the first edition of that book, and may wish the addition. Yet as these chapters are complete in themselves, and on very important subjects, the pamphlet will be found of much value to all who love Bible doctrine. Sold at the Crisis office. Retail price, post paid, 25 cents.

THE MILLENNIUM.

This is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. It is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second coming of Christ. For sale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage. Ten copies for $1.00; fifty copies, $4.00.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

The little orphan girl referred to in another column expired on Wednesday afternoon at the Home. We shall bury her on Friday, the 19th. Her mother, who died nine months ago, was one of the first fruits of our labors in this city. When dying, she left her two fatherless children in my care, and they have been members of our family from that time.

We still have one month longer to remain here. We have packed up a lot of articles for the Memphis Mission, and shall forward them soon. The mattresses on the children's beds will be given to worthy poor families around us. They were cheap husk mattresses. All our bedsteads are sold; our limited receipts obliged us to sell them in order to keep out of debt. We have but little stuff on hand to sell. We never bought chairs, bureaus, tables, or stoves. Those in the house belong to the Quakers.

I have some valuable books to dispose of: Ancient History, twenty-one vols., $15.00; Olshausen's Commentaries, four vols., from Matthew to Ephesians, $8.00; Wakefield's Trans. N. Test., $3.00; Hagenbach's Hist. of Doctrines, two vols., $3.00; Dick's Complete Works, two vols., $2.75; Buck's Theol. Dictionary, $1.75; Hebrew Bible, $2.00. I will send all these books (thirty-two vols.) to one address, express paid, for $35.00, to any part of the New England or Middle States. Address your brother in Christ,

THE VALLEY OF JEHOSHAPHAT.

"Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat; for there will I sit to judge all the nations round about."—Joel 3: 13.

We were reminded of these words by the description given of this valley in the "Hand-writing of God." It is so interesting we copy it from the work. M. D. W.

"At Siloam we are in the renowned Valley of Jehoshaphat, meaning, 'Jehovah judgeth.' The origin of this name is found in a passage of the prophet Joel, in which he speaks of the 'Valley of Jehoshaphat' where God will judge the oppressors of his people. It is singular that this valley, in three of the great religious systems of the world, should be designated as the scene of the last great judgment. The Jew here looks for the appearance of Messiah and destruction upon his enemies. On yonder terrace wall of Mount Moriah, that overhangs this valley, the Mohammedan will tell you his Prophet will sit to judge the world; while from yonder summit of Olivet the Savior ascended to heaven, and many believe that on this spot he will descend, and that before him the nations will be gathered. Well is this wild ravine called the 'Valley of Decision.' Jews, Mohammedans and Christians all agree in the propriety of the present name. Jerusalem, what a place thou hast in the religious faith and affections of the world!

"The head of the valley is on the north side of Jerusalem, and at first very shallow. As you descend the valley to the southward, and come opposite St. Stephen's Gate, the depth is about one hundred feet, and the breadth about four hundred. Here, a little to the northward as you cross the valley, nestling under the shadows of the steep declivities of Olivet, is one of the sacred spots embalmed in the memory of every christian, and to which we are yet to pay a formal visit,—Gethsemane. As you continue down the valley, along the Temple area, it rapidly deepens and the hills rise in steep precipices on both sides. Passing the Fountain of Siloam, the valley again widens, the pleasant gardens and cultivated terraces make their appearance; and near by, in strange contrast, 'Tophet and black Gehenna,' called 'the type of hell.'

"The length of the valley, from its head to En Rogel, or its junction with Hinnom, is two and three-fourths miles. It then cuts its way through the wild, hilly country of the wilderness of Judea, past the convent of St. Saba, where it is called the 'Monk's Valley'; below the convent it takes the name of the 'Valley of Fire,' until it terminates at the Dead Sea, fourteen miles from Jerusalem. Such is the valley that now has an undying name in the records of our holy religion. 'A valley,' says one, 'which has witnessed on its banks the greatest scene in the evangelica drama—the tears, the agonies and the death of the Savior! A valley through which the prophets have passed, in their turn, uttering a cry of woe and terror which seems still to echo! And we may say, a valley from the banks of which the Savior ascended to be again with his Father; and a valley which, in the estimation of many, is destined to hear the stupendous noise of the torrent of souls rolling before God, and coming to their fatal judgment.' * *

"Jehoshaphat, like Hinnom, is a great sepulchral valley. Just under the east wall of the city, the Mohammedans have a cemetery, and a large extent of ground is thickly covered with their singular looking tombs. Here under the shadow of the great Mosque of Omar the Mussulman covets a tomb. On the opposite side of the valley is the great silent city of the Jewish dead. Here, since the days of David and Solomon, generation after generation have been gathered unto their fathers. For thousands of years bones have been piled upon bones, and the dust of the children has been mingled with the ashes of their forefathers. The whole of the east bank, all along up the side of Olivet, is covered with the tombs of the countless descendants of Abraham. It is still said to be one of the greatest privileges craved by the dying Jew, to have his bones laid in the sepulchral home of his fathers in the Valley of Jehoshaphat. Here they expect their coming Messiah to stand in the resurrection. Those buried in this valley, they say, will rise at once from their tombs; while those who have been buried in other lands will have a long and weary underground pilgrimage to make to reach this place."

Dr. Randall thus describes the many tombs of this valley and closes his very interesting remarks thus:

"The good and the brave, the mitred priest and the sceptred king, may here have sought a secure and quiet resting-place; but their secret chambers have been laid open, their costly sarcophagi dashed in pieces, and their dust scattered to the winds of heaven. There is no secure hiding-place but in Him who says, 'I am the resurrection and the life.' Standing in him while we live, entombed in him when we die, we may banish our anxieties about the fate of the frail tenement of clay. It may sleep in the deep, dark caverns of earth, or be inhumed in the fathomless waters of the mighty deep, or be burned and scattered like the dust of the summer threshing-floor; it shall not be lost; the eye of Omniscience will watch over it; it shall live again and live for ever."—"Handwriting," pp. 89, 101, Book II.

Correspondence.

From Bro. G. Wright.

Bro. Grant:—We have a small church here of twenty-six members, and are doing what we can to keep the light burning and spread the glorious news that a King is soon to reign in righteousness. We sustain regular preaching, have a Bible class on Tuesday evenings, a prayer meeting Wednesday evening, which are generally well attended and interesting. I labor during the week, and fill appointments in the country Sundays, as the way opens. The good Lord blesses me with liberty, the people have ears to hear, and take tracts eagerly. This is almost entirely a new field. If you can spare some tracts, I could use them to good advantage, and I have no doubt the blessing of God would attend them.

I never felt more like going to work for the Lord with all the powers of body and mind than now. Time is emphatically short. Now is the time to preach with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. O for more of the heavenly fire. Yours, Geo. Wright, Jr.

Lapeer, Mich.

P. S. Preachers coming west will please call on us. Lapeer is sixty miles west of north of Detroit. A man of God will receive a cordial welcome by the church in Lapeer.

G. W., Jr.

From Bro. J. H. Harding.

Bro. Grant:—I still love the truths with which the Crisis comes laden every week. It cheers me on the rugged way. When I read of the trials and self-denials of others, I am led to inquire, What are mine? and I press towards the gate. I am doing all I can for the cause. Some are prejudiced, some listen with attention, and have become interested in the truths of the Bible; and by the grace of God I mean not to hold my peace until Zion is made a praise in all the earth.

About three miles from me Sr. S. M. Shimper is laboring earnestly in the cause; and as we meet we thank the Lord that the toil is almost over, and that the great harvest is near. Brethren and sisters scattered abroad, cheer up, and keep the armor bright. Satan is busy, but, thank God, he cannot cut us off as long as we keep on the highway of holiness.

Vershire, Vt. J. H. Harding.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. L. H. Little, Rose Hill, Mo., writes: "Isolated as I am far from all who love the appearing of the King of glory, despised by the world, falsely accused by professed christians, with what joyful emotions I read the Crisis, which tells of redemption nigh, when I shall for the first time meet with the dear ones who love the appearing of Jesus. We read that there shall be a famine in the land, not of bread, but to hear the word of God. Such a famine prevails here in the far west. I am starving to hear the true word of life. O how I wish I had the means to help spread the glad tidings in the nations of the south; but, alas! I have not. I intend to take the Crisis till Jesus comes, which I think will not be long. God will bless his cause, and sustain his beloved children, and though we pass through trials and persecutions here, deliverance soon will come.

I hope that some in the east, who preach the true teachings of Christ and the Bible, will be induced by the divine Spirit to come to the far west, on the great Union Pacific R. R., and preach to the perishing people here the tidings of the near approach of the great event that will terminate the destiny of this world with all the inhabitants thereof. O shall not this people of the prairies of the far west hear the warning before it is too late?"

Bro. A. Rotherham, New Orleans, La., writes:—"Bro. Grant, there is one Freewill Baptist church here, and one of the other communion (colored.) It is their desire to get some one down here to preach to them. I sent to Bro. Himes when in Memphis, but he was too busy, and could not come then. I have distributed a few tracts among them. If any brother should come, my address is Henry Rotherham, 68 Marigny St., 3d Dist., New Orleans, La."

Obituaries.

Dodge. Died in Lowell, Mass., May 27th, 1868, Mrs. Lucy Dodge, relict of J. M. Dodge, aged seventy-one years.

Sister Dodge was taught by the grace of God to live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world, and to look for that blessed hope of Him who has redeemed and purified unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

Quiet, retiring, and unobtrusive, she did not strive nor cry, nor cause her voice to be heard in the street; but by her zeal and fidelity and christian charity she caused the hearts of the poor and sorrowful to sing for joy, and stimulated many others to acts of love and christian labor.

She has gone to rest, and has left behind her not only a name and example fragrant with many a christian excellence, but also substantial benefactions bestowed in aid of those for whose welfare she prayed and labored while alive. The occasion of her funeral was improved by the writer in remarks founded upon the record of the life and character of Dorcas, as recorded in Acts 9: 36–39.

Our sister rests in peace till the morning comes. May God raise up many more who shall be followers of her faith, love, zeal, and good works done heartily as unto the Lord. H. L. H.

Smith. Died in Addison, Vt., May 29th, 1868, peacefully and happy in the Lord, in the full consciousness of sins forgiven, and in the firm faith that she will rise again at the last day, Sister Lucy A., beloved wife of George H. Smith, aged twenty-nine years.

She received Christ in full in the fall of 1866, and took his dear name in baptism Nov. 18th, at the hand of Elder D. T. Taylor; became an acceptable member of the church in A., was loved and cherished by everybody, and was a model of patience and gentleness in her sickness. At her request Elder T. gave to her the bread and wine Sunday, the 17th, which was a great comfort and blessing to her weary heart, and on the 31st he conducted her funeral in the Baptist church, preaching from John 15: 4–8. Five other clergymen were present, two of whom, Elders Goodspeed, the Pastor, and Stetson, assisted in the services. Her dying words were, "Good by,—Happy,—Glory,—Amen." A husband who deeply mourns her, and a beautiful little boy who does not realize that he is motherless, are left behind, and home is lonely now. The blow falls hard. God bless them both. A great concourse of people testified their respect and heart-felt sympathy at the burial, while God's boundless love was the preacher's theme; and very sweetly over her coffin, when the sods were falling on it, did the choir sing,—

"Thou art gone to the grave, but 'twere wrong to deplore thee,
For God was thy Ransom, thy Guardian, thy Guide."

Preble. Died in Vassalboro, Me., June 11th, 1868, Lois W., daughter of Henry C. and Serena Preble, aged twenty-eight years.

From her childhood Sr. Lois was beloved by all who knew her. She suffered much from the ravages of disease for many years, but now sweetly sleeps in Jesus. She embraced Christ and was baptized last fall, and when consumption had nearly done its work, she sang sweetly of Him in whom she trusted, and at the last gave assurance to all, that "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." She leaves one sister and five brothers, father and mother, to mourn her absence. Appropriate remarks were made, as we laid her precious form in the grave, by Bro. J. E. Mills, of the F. W. Baptists.

N. W. Randall.

Starr. Died in Wallingford, Ct., April 23d, 1868, Bro. Luther Starr, aged eighty-two years.

He bore his sickness with patience, feeling the strength of the blessed hope like an anchor to the soul. He was converted in his youth, and lived a consistent christian life. He embraced the doctrines of the coming of Jesus, resurrection, and sleep of the dead, and expected to put on immortality when Jesus comes. He lies sleeping in Jesus to-day,

"But when the light of morning
Breaks in his little room,
He will rise and shout hosanna,
Deliverance has come."

The funeral was attended by the writer.

B. Hitchcock.

Pelton. Died in West Stafford, Ct., Feb. 24th, 1868, of consumption, Emelius V. Pelton, aged sixteen years.

Emelius was an orphan boy. He died in peace. Discourse by the writer, from Rom. 8: 32.

I. B. Potter.

Ellis. Died in West Stafford, Ct., March 26th, 1868, Clara P., infant daughter of Bro. Zina W. and Sr. Clarissa P. Ellis, aged nine months and fifteen days.

Sleep, little Clara, sweetly sleep
Deep in the silent earth;
Thy little form is laid away,
Till Christ shall give it birth.

Discourse by the writer, from Rev. 21: 4.

I. B. Potter.

Clough. Died in Benton, N. H., May 18th, 1868, Caleb Victor, only child of Chester C. and Marian M. Clough, aged ten months and twenty-eight days.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Mark 10: 14. Wm. H. Shaw.

Perry. Died in Redfield, N. Y., May 14th, 1868, Sr. Annie Perry, aged eighteen years and seven months.

She was a great sufferer, but embraced the truth and trusted in Jesus. May God bless the mourning circle. Funeral services attended by the writer. C. H. Williams.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

Paris, June 17. In the Ministerial report on the Budget, reference is made to the general arming represented to be going on in Europe. The report declares that both the people and the government of France desire peace, and there is now no evidence that the existing state of tranquility throughout Europe will be disturbed.

Berlin, June 17. A report is in circulation that certain important papers have been discovered in Silesia, which reveal the existence of a plot to involve the lesser European powers with France in war against Prussia.

King William has gone to visit Hanover for the first time since the late war with Austria.

London, June 17. Dispatches from Rome dated the 11th, state that the Pope intends to issue a general amnesty to political offenders on the anniversary of his accession to the Holy See.

The English journals publish a telegram from Zoulla, Abyssinia, dated June 2, which says that all the troops of the expedition except a small body of calvary have left Zoulla to embark for Bombay. Gen. Sir Robert Napier was to leave on the 12th inst.

In the House of Commons on Tuesday night an interesting debate took place on the petition of the people of Nova Scotia against the Canadian Union act. Mr. John Bright moved that a commission be appointed to inquire into the causes of the discontent in Nova Scotia in regard to the operation of the act of Confederation. He supported his motion with a speech, in which he declared that an investigation into this matter could not be otherwise than advantageous. If it was refused the people of Nova Scotia would feel that they were the victims of a policy with which they did not and could not sympathize. Such refusal would increase their hostility to Canada, estrange them from England, give them powerful stimulus to their sympathy with the United States. Justice to the people of Nova Scotia and generosity to the United States demanded this inquiry. The Ministry would be greatly to blame should any untoward event result from the refusal to grant this demand.

The Right Hon. C. B. Adderly, under Secretary of the Colonial Department, replied for the Government. He acknowledged that discontent prevailed in the Province of Nova Scotia. He took occasion to deny the correctness of the statement made by Mr. Bright in his speech on the 15th of last May, to the effect that the passage of the Canadian Union Act in Parliament here was not final, but merely preliminary to its confirmation by the acts of the Legislatures of each of the provinces concerned. The appointment of this Commission of Inquiry would be a great evil, and would be considered an insult to the Dominion of Canada. He informed the House that steps had been taken by the government to allay the present feeling in the North American Provinces. He said this feeling was not so bitter as had been represented, for the acts of the Canadian Parliament sitting at Ottawa had been approved of by Nova Scotia, and whatever discontent still existed would probably disappear, as the people of that province had no reason now to apprehend an increase of taxation or expenditure.

After further discussion a division took place on Mr. Bright's motion, which resulted as follows: For a Commission, 87; against a Commission, 183.

Paris, 19th. A solemn requiem mass was performed here to-day in commemoration of the death of the ex-Emperor Maximilian, it being the anniversary of his execution at Queretaro. The ex-Empress Carlotta, General Miramon and a large number of Mexicans were present.

Pesth, June 21. Prince Napoleon, who arrived here from Vienna last week, after a brief stay left for Constantinople. It is believed that a visit to the Sultan is the main object of his present tour.

Trieste, June 21. The last advices from Athens report that the Cretan representatives and exiles now in that city offered an address to the United States Consul. On the occasion of presenting it, certain citizens of Athens assembled in large numbers before the office of the American Legation, and made enthusiastic demonstrations of gratitude for the friendship and sympathy of the American people.

DOMESTIC.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., June 16. The reports circulated of a movement of Fenian war material and provisions along the frontier between this place and St. Albans, Vt., are pure fabrications. Officers who have been sent here by the Government to investigate the truth of such reports have ascertained the whole of them to be entirely imaginary. There has been nothing of an unusual character since June, 1866, nor is there any evidence or indication that any movement is intended.

Malone, N. Y., June 16. All reports about Fenian arms and ammunition being concentrated at this point are untrue and not to be relied on.

Chateaugay, N. Y., June 16. The several news items sent from this point to New York and other cities in relation to the gathering of Fenians, accumulation of arms, &c., are false.

Washington, June 16. Reports from the Indian Agent at Leavenworth of May 21st have been received at the Indian Bureau. They are dated at the Kiowa and Camanche Agency. They state that the raid into the Chickas district was made by three bands of Camanche Indians, who were largely represented at the Council held by the Peace Commissioner on Medicine Lodge creek last fall, where they received large drafts from the Commissioner and made fair promises of good faith and friendship to the whites and friendly Indians. The Agent recommends that the raiders be dealt with very severely and states that since he had arrived at the Kiowa and Camanche Agency he had rescued four captives from the Camanches—all white but one, and this was a black boy captured about two years ago near Fort Arbuckle. One is a little girl about twelve years of age, smart and intelligent, who had been shamefully abused by the savages who captured her after killing her mother and infant brother. Col. Leavenworth says his patience with the Indians is exhausted.

In relation to the Kiowas he informed the Bureau of many acts of outrage and cruelty, and gives accounts of ineffectual efforts made by him to recover some of the captives in their possession. The whole tribe are more or less implicated in the cruelties, and Col. Leavenworth recommends that their annuities, as well as those of the Camanches, be stopped, and all confiscated for the benefit of the orphans they have made, the guilty demanded according to our treaties with them, and if not delivered up, then let them be turned over to the military supported by the Navajoes and civilized Indians, and make short and sharp work with them until they can see, hear and feel the strong arm of the Government.

San Francisco, June 19. Honolulu dates of May 16 state that the volcanoes on Mauna Loa are dormant only. Steam is seen arising with occasional shocks of earthquake. Considerable freshets had occurred at Kola and other points. The proposed subsidy to steamship line between San Francisco and Honolulu is still under discussion in the Hawaiian Legislature, and is likely to pass by a small majority. Many persons are leaving the Island.

The Great Earthquake in the Sandwich Islands.—Accounts from Hilo, Kand and Kau give very full particulars of the most terrible and destructive earthquakes which took place in Hawaii from the 27th of March until the 2d of April, when the volumes of fire which proceeded from the crater of Kilawea and other volcanic mountains suddenly ceased, and the whole country was shaken, shattered and rent by internal convulsions. A letter from a correspondent of the New York Times at Hilo, describing the scene on April 2, says:

"Riders and horsemen were thrown to the ground, and multitudes of men were prostrated by the shock. In Kau the convulsions of the earth were so tremendous that men had to steady themselves by holding on to shrubs and rocks, in order to avoid being bruised against the ground. Our streets ran mud. Our houses were strewn with debris from garret to cellar. Bureaus, tables, cabinets, bookcases, wardrobes, glass and earthen ware—all movable things in short—were thrown pell-mell. My largest bookcase, which stood nearly east and west, was prostrated toward the north; while my cabinet of shells, which stood at right angles to the former direction, remained standing; seeming to prove that the most violent lateral oscillations at least, were in the direction of the magnetic needle. Dr. Wetmore's drug store was thrown into utter disorder; the whole house fumed with the wreck of glass bottles and retorts, and it is a marvel that explosion and fire did not occur. The confused noises, the dust, the awful throes of the earth, the falling of rocks into the sea, the consternation of men, and animals, made a scene which baffles description—a scene of terror such as our islands have never witnessed before. The crust of the earth rose and sank like the sea in a storm. It seemed as if the rocky ribs of the mountains and the granite walls and pillars of the world were breaking. At this moment the ground was suddenly opened in Kau, between the lands of Messrs. Reed and Richardson and Judge F. S Lyman. As quickly as the discharge of a battery or the explosion of a shell, a vast eruption of mud, rocks and earth (not heated) took place, disgorging a mass three miles long and half as wide, which instantaneously buried a village with its thirty-one native inhabitants and five hundred or six hundred head of cattle. The discharge was so sudden that there was no escape for those within its range. At the same time the sea rose and fell rapidly around the shores of the island, a coast circumference of two hundred miles. In Hilo Bay it came up to Front street, a hight of six or eight feet above high water mark. In the district of Puna it rose from ten to fifteen feet, sweeping away a number of houses and drowning one person. But at Kau the tidal wave came on twenty or twenty-five feet high, destroying all the villages and churches of the lower shores, and drowning scores of people. Men, women and children, with all their earthly substance, were swept away in an instant. Nearly one hundred people in all were killed, and seventy or eighty escaped, wounded, from the scene of the catastrophe.

Some of the survivors of that afflicted district escaped by sea to the Island of Oahu. Others are still holding on to the trembling earth where their desolated homes remain. But most of the inhabitants fled to the districts of Hilo and Puna, a two days journey. Hundreds are houseless wanderers, bereft of all worldly possessions. Scores of them are in our village. Not only their houses, but also, in many cases, their plantations and lands are swallowed up. Their accounts are affecting. This man says: 'My house is fallen, and my wife and two children are dead, "and I am left alone to tell thee."' They come to Hilo like Job's messengers of grief, one treading upon the heel of another. The next messenger says: 'I was eating with my family in my house on the shore, when suddenly a great wave struck the building, and, of six, "I am left alone to tell thee."' Another comes to me saying: 'My husband and children were fishing on the sea-shore, and a great wave took them out to sea, "and I am left alone to tell thee."' Another hurries in and says: 'I was in the field catching my horse, when lo! the earth rent and disgorged vast masses of mud, swallowing up my house and my lands and my family of thirteen "and I alone am escaped to tell thee."' And I might go on and repeat indefinitely these tales of woe—of parents made childless, children made orphans, husbands and wives sundered or buried together with children, friends, houses and all their possessions in a moment of time. But I forbear. God's dealings with Kau are indeed terrible, yet it cannot be because they are 'sinners above all men.'

The Irish Church Establishment. Our readers are aware that recent movements in England indicate that the Irish State Church will soon be disestablished and disendowed. The necessity for this will be seen from the following specimens of its benefices: The parish of Ginleagh contains 60 Protestants and 992 Roman Catholics; salary of the minister $500 and residence. The parish of Clashmore has 27 Protestants and 2148 Roman Catholics; salary $765 and residence. The parish of Templeree has 9 Protestants and 493 Roman Catholics; salary $780. As there is no church in this parish, the clergyman has no religious services to hold therein, and his salary is a sinecure.

Notices.

Tent Meeting.

The Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in South Boston, Wednesday, June 24th, where the gospel of the coming kingdom will be daily preached with all its relative doctrines. The second coming of Christ, the signs that it is near, the sleep and necessary resurrection of the dead, the absolute necessity of experimental, practical christianity, to fit a man for good here and glory hereafter, will be freely discussed and faithfully enforced, in hope of saving men from the wrath to come. Brn. D. M. Leavitt, S. W. Thurber, with others whom the Lord may send, will preach the word. Preaching afternoons and evenings. Come all that can, and help on the work of God. By order of State Conference, L. Boutell.

P. S. The tent will be pitched on Dorchester Street, between Broadway and Third Street, for the above meeting in South Boston.

Mass. Quar. Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be holden with the church in Savoy, commencing July 1st, holding over Sunday. In behalf of the church, I cordially invite all to come, and come prepared to labor for God and his truth. Our work is almost done. Let us gird ourselves for the last hour of conflict, and be prepared to stand when the Master shall appear.

Our chapel will be dedicated in connection with this meeting July 4th, at two o'clock P. M. Arrangements have been made to entertain all. Those coming by railroad will stop at South Adams, where there will be a team in readiness to convey passengers to the meeting at twelve o'clock M., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. All will see the necessity of taking the early trains, in order to connect with our team arrangements, which will leave the depot at noon. Those coming from Boston will arrive in season by taking the first train, and change cars at Pittsfield.

In behalf of the church, E. McCulloch.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting commence at Wednesday Hill, Lee., N. H., on land of Bro. Leonard Wiggins, (near where the barn meeting has been held for the last two years), on Saturday, July 4th, 1868, and hold over the Sunday following, and as much longer as may be thought proper. We have engaged the new tent in Bro. D. M. Leavitt's charge. We hope there will be a general gathering of our brethren and sisters. The blessed work has begun.

It is expected during this meeting that the ordinance of baptism will be attended to. Come, you who have been staggering at this command, and go forward with the young converts and be baptized.

Those going from Mass. will leave the cars at Newmarket Depot, and thence by conveyance to the ground in Lee, about three and a half miles. Those coming from Great Falls and Dover, will leave the cars at Durham Depot, thence to the ground, two and a half miles. Those coming to remain through the meeting must bring some bedding; but the brethren and sisters in the place will do all they can, no doubt, for their hearts are open. For the brethren, Geo. H. Churchill.

Fourth of July Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Exeter, Me., on the fourth of July, and continue over the Sabbath, in the old meeting-house, which is now being repaired. We give a hearty invitation to brethren who live in other places to attend this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of the Lord, ready to work for the Master. We some expect that a young brother from Philadelphia will be with us. We would be glad to meet other servants of the Lord who have the word of God to preach to the people. There will be homes enough for all who wish to attend. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting. Let us see who loves the cause of God more than pleasure. The Lord is at hand. Awake, awake, put on thy beautiful garments, O Zion! Allen Damon.

Annual Conference.

The New York State Annual Conference will meet at Rochester, Thursday, June 25th, 1868, and continue over the Sabbath. A tent will be pitched and straw furnished to "camp on the field." Friends will bring provisions, and, as far as practicable, bedding. Come to take care of yourselves, to work for the Lord, to help save the perishing; come with the armor of God, the spirit of Christ, and bring in the worthy poor, and we will provide for them. Come to sacrifice for the truth, and to worship God. Come, brethren, the shades of evening are lengthening, and soon our work will be done. May it be well done. In behalf of the church at Rochester, H. Pratt.

The members of the New York State Christian Conference, and all interested in the soon coming kingdom, are requested to meet in pursuance of and in the spirit of the above notice.

C. W. Low, Vice President.
W. Marlatt, Secretary.
B. P. Stevens.

Grove Meeting.

A grove meeting will be held in Kingston, N. H., July 4th and 5th (Saturday and Sunday.) Elds. Pearson, Cunningham and others, are expected to be present. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of adjacent towns to be with us. The meeting will be held in the accustomed place, near Bro. Gale's. W. B. Kinney.

"Antioch Tent"

Michigan State Campmeeting, near Jonesville, Hillsdale Co., June 27th to July 6th. Come, brethren, and bring your families and friends. Don't forget the children, converted and unconverted.

Deerfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., July 8th to 13th. Eld. J. V. Himes and others will help.

Dearborn, Wayne Co., Mich., July 15th to 22d. Eld. W. L. Himes and others will help.

Notice for Dauson Centre and Owano will be given in time.

Preparations Needed. A pole twenty-eight feet long and three and a half inches through at the small end. Thirty-four hard wood stakes, three feet and three inches. Lumber and stakes to seat about five hundred persons. Four kerosene lamps. Some one to help guard the tent.

J. M. Snook.

To the Advent Churches in Canada East.

By reference to the last Crisis, it will be seen that Elder Simpson, of New Hampshire, will commence a course of lectures in Danville, C.E., June 28th, and remain over the following Sabbath, and by request will proceed from there to Montreal, thence to Quebec, and will remain at the above cities as long as duty may require. Elder A. S. is among the ablest exponents of prophecy found within the pale of the Advent ranks, or ranks of any other name. J. Porter.

Star of Hope Mission.

Receipts. Marcell Morse, Ashburnham, Mass., $2.00. A Baptist brother, Warner, N. H., $5.00. Sr. Wells, of Sutton, N. H., $1.00. Z. A. Waterhouse, South Poland, Me., $5.00. Willmot B. Harwood, West Randolph, Vt., $1.00. J. Pulsifer, through the Crisis office, $1.00. C. and H., through Crisis office, $2.00. Hope, through Crisis office, $1.00. Worcester Sabbath School, 65c. S. Harper, Cooperstown, N. Y., $2.00. E. B. Stickney, Waubeck, Iowa, $2.00. A bundle of "The Christian," and letters, from Marian Foss.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our conference will hold its next session at Westerly, R. I., commencing Wednesday, July 1st, at 2 o'clock P. M. We trust no exhortation is necessary to have a full representation of preachers and delegates from all churches. Be sure and write us a good letter if not represented otherwise. H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Conference.

Conference in Poultney will commence Friday evening, June 26th, and hold over Sunday. Brethren and friends in Hebron, Low Hampton, Fair Haven, Castleton, Rutland, and all sister adjacent churches and believers, are invited to come to seek and enjoy with us a blessing from the Lord.

For the church, J. B. Cook.

New York State Mission Tent.

The New York State Mission Tent will be pitched on Baptist Hill, Ontario Co., N. Y., July 2nd, and remain as long as it shall seem to be duty. All who can, are invited to come and unite with us in contending for "the faith once delivered to the saints."

J. Wendell.
Wm. A. Fenn.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Savoy, Mass., to commence Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see many of the lovers of Jesus and his coming at this meeting. Come, leave your work, brethren, and come to this meeting all ready to work in harmony with Christ. E. Owen, Secretary.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This meeting will be held in Wilton, (Intervale school-house), June 25th, at five o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. This is a new field. It is hoped our brethren and sisters will come to work for the Lord. Brethren will call on Brn. Welch, Wilkins, Palmer, and Small. Will our preaching brethren come to this meeting? Per order,

H. B. Sevey.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. Smith.

Conn. Conference.

The appointment for the Conn. State Conference will be given early. W. S. C.

The Maine Tract Fund.

Wm. H. Mitchell, R. R. York, S. K. Partridge, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. Libby, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,

No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

Anna E. Smith, Superintendent and Manager.

Meetings.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. Boutell.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. Wendell.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

For the World's Crisis.

WALK BY FAITH, AND NOT BY SIGHT.

We walk by faith and not by sight;
The cloud by day, the fire by night,—
Show us the guiding hand,
That leads us through life's desert way,
While in earth's wilderness we stay,
Home to the promised land.

We walk by faith and not by sight,
And soon on Pisgah's lofty height
Our weary feet shall stand:—
Fresh Eschol clusters, ripe and fair,
Invite our thirsty soul to share
The joys of promised land.

We walk by faith and not by sight;
As Eastern sages saw the light—
Like them we understand,
As we behold the Morning Star,
Bright gleaming in the heaven afar,
Our guide to promised land.

We walk by faith and not by sight,
Christ is our way, our life and light;
None pluck us from his hand:—
O soon in glory bright he'll come,
To bring his waiting children home,
To joys of promised land.

No more by faith but by glad sight,
We'll walk in crowns and robes of light,
Bright palms within our hand:—
Our robes made white in Jesus' blood,
We'll dwell as kings and priests to God,
For aye in promised land.

MEMORIAL.

JOSEPH GREENLEAF FERNALD.

In memory of departed worth, and as a duty which I owe a dear one, I sit down to write of Joseph Greenleaf, son of Jas. H. and my eldest sister, B. S. Fernald, who died at Lewiston, Me., of typhoid fever, Nov. 12th, 1867, aged twenty-five years and three months. Having known him always, I could write at length, and in deserved praise, of his many virtues; but fulsome eulogy seems needless, since he has imbedded in the hearts of all who knew him memories which will long outlast the sound of words.

He early manifested a love for books, and having prepared himself, entered Bowdoin College in the class of 1862, where he was loved by all, and from which he graduated with merited honor. From thence he entered Bates College as Tutor, serving till the time of his death with marked satisfaction. He was not like many who acquire knowledge, unable to impart it, but had a faculty for imparting, both with pen and tongue. There was real beauty and pathos in his writings, which at once would interest the mind and touch the heart.

Some months before he died, he addressed the Sabbath School on his native hill, and some words seemed almost suggestive of his near decease. I can see him now, as with pale face and weary eyes he looked upon those parents, and was speaking thus:—

"You cannot remove from your consciousness that fondest ties will soon be broken, and brightest hopes are soon to fade. You are passing from your children and they from you. There is hardly a home in our quiet neighborhood upon which a dark shadow has not rested. It is true, the same skies are above, and the same scenes are around us; but hearts that once beat with life and love have become still and cold, and all the fond hopes that clustered around them have passed away like the dream of an hour. When the snows of winter have robed the earth; amid the budding beauties of spring; when summer's glories have beamed upon us; and amid the last perfumes of autumn's drooping flowers, we have laid loved ones down to rest; and while we have repressed the stifling sob, we have felt—'it is well with them, it is well.'"

As a friend, he was affectionate and trustworthy, and all who knew him long could but learn to love him. As a son and brother he was all that could be wished for; dutiful always, and ever kind. Parents looked to and leaned upon him for counsel and support, and to the sisters and little brother he was a guiding star. But best of all, he was a christian; through all his accountable years he lived like one, but rightly felt that morality would never save him. He grew more and more thirsty for the living water, and his soul kept panting for a breath of the higher life, till he found by full submission all needed grace.

During his sickness he seemed to have no fears of its result, and when at length he came to feel that he must die, though worn and weak in body, his eye of faith grew steady, as with clasped hands and a feeble voice he offered up an earnest prayer, commending all to God through Jesus Christ. Then giving some little messages for the loved at home, and expressing perfect resignation to the will of heaven, he sank quietly away to sleep in Jesus.

We miss and mourn him, all who knew him; but in the home circle there is a shadow and a grief darker and deeper than they ever knew before; yet their sorrow is not without hope; they feel that Time's gliding years will soon be gone, the charnel-house be rifled, and just beyond, on God's new earth, where tears are dried and hearts are glad, where sickness comes not, and death's work is done, there they may have their treasures forevermore.

He was borne to his home at West Poland, where appropriate services were held (Eld. O. B. Cheney presiding), and then laid away in our beautiful Hill-top Cemetery, where we may tread with sincere affection, and bow with moistened eyes above the place where the dear one sleeps, and whisper in our heart of hearts, Soft and peaceful to you, beloved, be this your earthly bed.

Past all pain forever, done with sickness now;
Weariness forgotten of hand, and heart, and brow;
Streaks of morn already, from the eastern skies,
Tell us watching, waiting, thou wilt soon arise.

Dearest Josie, till then—farewell.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

For the World's Crisis.

FAITH AND WORKS.

As faith without works is dead (James 2: 17), so works, or pretended works, without faith are equally so; and without any specified object or inducement, little would be accomplished. And to engage in any undertaking with no prospect of any remuneration in any way whatever, would be contrary to the very laws of our being. Did Moses of old act according to his faith? Most truly. "For he had respect unto the recompense of reward." If any employ us under promise of certain rewards, and we enter their employ, we do it with confidence, with faith in their promises. If we should doubt their word, or fulfillment of their promise, we should dishonor them by so doing, most assuredly.

Now what is declared in God's word? "But without faith it is impossible to please him." Has God required of us anything unreasonable, or without promises or prospect of reward? Far from it. Says the apostle, "Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." Now to what specified duties pointed out are some of the promises of rewards attached? Acts and deeds of benevolence, most truly, as Inspiration thus declares: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth."—Ps. 41: 1–3. Again, "If thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noonday." "Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor to thy house?" "Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward."

Shall any of us turn aside from these plainly specified duties, or doubt the promised rewards? Again, "Sell that thou hast, and give to the poor; . . . take up the cross, and follow me." What is the reward? "Inherit eternal life." "Thou shalt have treasure in heaven." Mark 10: 17–24. "Sell that ye have, and give alms." What the reward? "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Luke 12. Still further, "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise." Distinct from those that bring not forth good fruit. Luke 3: 9–11.

What does Paul say? "It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20: 35. Says Jesus, "Do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again [what follows?] and your reward shall be great." "Give [what follows?] and it shall be given unto you." Like the man who built an house, and laid the foundation on a rock. Luke 6: 35–49. Again says the apostle, "He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor [what follows]; his righteousness remaineth forever." Also, "He that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully." "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give [what is connected?]; for God loveth a cheerful giver."—2 Cor. 9: 6–9.

Are not even small acts rewarded? Says Jesus, "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." Matt. 10: 42. "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me," etc. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." What the reward to such? "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you."—Matt. 25.

Once more. "Blessed are they that do his commandments [What is their reward?], that they may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city."—Rev. 22: 14. When are the rewards given? "And behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according to his work."—Rev. 22: 12; Matt. 16: 27.

Brother, sister, these are reasonable requirements, plain duties, plainly set before us; and incomparable, inestimable rewards accompanying are set before us also. Let us be truly wise, act accordingly, and now in this last hour of time by faith and works make sure of our reward. "Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it."—1 Thess. 5: 24.

HOW TO SAVE THE POOR.

Minister to their temporal wants.

"If you've money, you're armed, and can find work enough
In every street, alley and lane;
If you've bread, cast it off, and the waters, though rough,
Will be sure to return it again."

"He that watereth, shall be watered also himself."
"There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing."

Open your heart, your purse, gain their confidence by kindness, deeds of charity; then access to the heart is open; pour in the oil and the wine of consolation, point them to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world.

'Tis a little thing
To give a cup of water; yet its draught
Of cool refreshment, drained by fevered lips,
May give a shock of pleasure to the frame,
More exquisite than when nectarian juice
Renews the life of joy in happier hours.
It is a little thing to speak a phrase
Of common comfort, which by daily use
Has almost lost its sense; yet on the ear
Of him who thought to die unmourned, 't will fall
Like choicest music."

When once their confidence is gained by temporal administrations, they listen readily, attentively to your admonitions and warnings. Job understood this blessed secret of gaining souls. He waited not for the poor and the needy to come to his door; he sought them out. "I was eyes to the blind," says he, "and feet was I to the lame. I was a father to the poor; and the cause I knew not, I searched out. The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy." This is "pure religion and undefiled." God owns it—crowns it; Christ himself set us an example; walked he not in the same steps—consulted he not the temporal wants of the poor and the down-trodden—fed he not thousands on thousands—opened he not his lips kindly and affectionately, even to those ready to perish? Thus his Messiahship was established—multitudes on multitudes hung on his lips while he spake as never man spake. Christ preached the gospel to the poor—especially to the poor. He came expressly "to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."—Isa. 56: 1.

As oft as we surround our cheerful fire and look with fond affection upon our happy, loved ones, and inquire, "What shall we render unto the Lord for all his benefits?" we seem to hear a voice saying, "Go preach my gospel to the poor, visit the sick, cheer the sorrowing;" what now? "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye do it unto me." Shall we not imitate him who went about doing good?

To tents of woe, to beds of pain,
Our cheerful feet repair;
And with the gifts our hands bestow,
Relieve the miseries there.

The blessed Savior never forgot the bodies of men. He always relieved their physical as well as their mental and spiritual wants. Do you, friend, imitate Christ in this particular? What avail the most pointed warnings and consolatory admonitions to those ready to perish for lack of food and raiment? Will the poor listen to spiritual instruction when destitute of the comforts of life—when famishing for bread and shivering with cold? Will a starving man hear you expatiate on the sweets of religion—the importance of seeking first the kingdom of God? Minister to his temporal wants, speak kindly to him, feed him, take off his rags, clothe him; instantly his soul is filled with gratitude and praise. His confidence in your sincerity is gained. Then pour in the oil and wine of redeeming love.

Thus the souls of the poor may be saved. "The poor ye have with you always; and whensoever ye will ye may do them good." "Blessed is he that considereth the poor." "He that hath pity on the poor, lendeth to the Lord." "Deal thy bread to the hungry, bring the poor that are cast out to thy house. When thou seest the naked, cover him; and hide not thyself from thine own flesh. Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily. Then shalt thou call, and the Lord will answer thee; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am." Isa. 58: 6–12.

LIFE.

"In thy favor is life."

No subject can be more intensely interesting than human existence. Pleasure, pain, hope, happiness, gain, weal or woe, depend upon life. Without this, man as an intellectual being is nothing. Hence, no point of the doctrine of human destiny can possess a more vital interest than that which relates to future life. Shall man live eternally, or shall he not?

"To be or not to be; that is the question."

In thy favor is life, says Israel's poet-seer, which is a denial of life without his favor. For if we get as much without his favor as we do with, it cannot be so great a blessing as the Psalmist seems to indicate. But if true life, which must be eternal, is a peculiar gift of God to those who share his favor, then this subject has a dread significance, and shows that a denial of life, or eternal death, is the portion of those who merit his frowns. To what life does the Psalmist refer? The life that is in Jesus Christ; for to believe on his Son is the only way to secure the favor of our heavenly Father. The life that is in Christ is eternal life. "This is the record that God has given of his Son—eternal life; and this life is in the Son; he that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." The life referred to by the Psalmist is evidently that eternal life which is a result of a union with Christ.

Who shall be favored with eternal life?

1. This life is in Jesus Christ. "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

2. Having this life in his possession, Christ can retain it or give it to whom he chooses. But he has promised it to those who hear his voice and follow him. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life." John 12: 28, 29. "Father, the hour is come: glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." John 17: 2.

3. We are in hope of eternal life, and do not actually possess it in this world. "That being justified by this grace we should be made heirs to the hope of eternal life." Titus 3: 7. If we hope for it we do not possess it. "For hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for?" Rom. 8: 24. Why the righteous hope for it is (1), because it is promised to them. "And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." 1 John 2: 25. (2) Because we are commanded to look for its bestowal as a future event. "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." Jude 21. Eternal life is a blessing of the righteous, spoken of as peculiar to the world to come. "But ye shall receive a hundredfold now in this time . . . and in the world to come eternal life." Mark 10: 30. This life is declared to be future in contradistinction to the present. "Having promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come." 1 Tim. 4: 8.

Concerning the righteous it is declared: They shall receive eternal life.—Mark 10: 30. They shall have eternal life.—Jno. 3: 15. They gather fruit unto eternal life.—Jno. 4: 36. They have the words of eternal life.—Jno. 6: 68. They keep this life unto eternal life.—Jno. 12: 25. They are ordained unto eternal life. They lay hold on eternal life.—1 Tim. 6: 12. They look for the mercy of the Lord unto eternal life.—Jude 21. They shall live forever.—Jno. 6: 51. They shall awake to everlasting life.—Dan. 12: 2. They shall inherit everlasting life.—Matt. 19: 29. They endure to everlasting life.—Jno. 6: 27. They receive Christ's command, which is everlasting life.—Jno. 12: 50. They have the end, everlasting life.—Rom. 6: 22. They of the Spirit reap life everlasting.—Gal. 6: 8. They believe to life everlasting.—1 Tim. 1: 16. They tread the narrow way that leadeth to life.—Matt. 7: 4. They shall have a crown of life.—Rev. 2: 10. They are heirs of the grace of life.—1 Pet. 3: 7. They have promise of the life which is to come.—1 Tim. 4: 8. They shall reign in life.—Rom. 5: 17. They have the light of life.—Jno. 8: 12. They shall come forth to the resurrection of life.—Jno. 5: 20. They shall enter into life. Matt. 18: 8. They take hold of the paths of life.—Prov. 2: 19. They shall be bound in the bundle of life.—1 Sam. 25: 29. Their mortality shall be swallowed up of life.—2 Cor. 5: 4.

"Eternal life" means what the words literally purport, viz., eternal existence, the definition of theologians that they mean eternal happiness to the contrary notwithstanding. The Greek word zoce, which is translated life in the New Testament one hundred thirty-four times, is never translated happiness, joy, or peace. It is translated life one hundred thirty-three times, and lifetime once. It is qualified by the adjective eternal thirty times, by everlasting fourteen, and by endless once. Its meaning may be determined from its use. Zacharias spoke of serving God "in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life." In this instance zoce must refer to present, Adamic life.

We believe, that Jehovah has said what he meant, and meant what he said, and has fortified the truth of eternal "life only through Christ" beyond successful contradiction. The sainted ones of the church of Christ have caught and echoed the words of inspiration on this subject. "Be sober as the combatant of God; the crown proposed to thee is IMMORTALITY and ETERNAL LIFE; concerning which thou art also fully persuaded," said Ignatius, a christian writer of the second century, who suffered martyrdom for his faith in Christ. And the great incentive to christian zeal, and toil, and sacrifice, has been the hope of life eternal consequent upon a resurrection from the dead. The enemies of God will not have eternal life. He that "hath not the Son hath not life." The dread gloom of eternal night hangs over their future destiny. The second death shall be their portion.

Reader, if without God and hope in the world, I bid you flee the wrath to come. Lay hold on eternal life—life that shall forever be fresh and fragrant with the vigor of immortality; life that shall wed thee eternally to thy Savior-King, who bought thee by his blood; life that shall conquer all physical ills, and shut mortality's flood-gates of death and sorrow; life with the myriad hosts of the redeemed in glory, and enjoy life itself, the stainless crown of all earth's victories, the blessing of blessings, without which all others are worse than lost. I beseech you to seek this priceless boon of a Savior's grace. Seek it by faith on the Son of God. Seek it by a subjugation of thine heart to the divine will, and seek it now. "For," says the great I Am, "I will not contend forever, neither will I always be wroth; for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls which I have made." Isa. 57: 16.

THE LAST DAYS.

Some people oft, I'm sad to say,
Speak lightly of the last great day,
And put far off Christ's advent here,
When his word tells us, "Know 'tis near."

Yet 'tis not strange, for so we read,
That for these things there must be need,
And all the signs fulfilling fast,
Give proof that he will come at last.

Men proclaim peace, and think the time
Not far away, when every clime,
And tongue, and nation under sun,
Shall be converted, every one.

But this is not as we are told
By One who says, "deceivers bold
Shall come in his most holy name,
Professing they are all the same."

For when we hear them raise the cry,
That "peace and safety" is so nigh,
"Destruction then shall suddenly
Come on them so they cannot flee."

False Christs arise, false prophets, too,
Yet soon their works will all be through;
The signs and wonders they profess,
Are nothing but deceitfulness.

Lovers of pleasure more than God,
Are seen at home and all abroad;
Men's hearts are failing them for fear,
And these all prove his coming near.

Then let us watch, and ready stand
To meet the Judge at his command,
And never sleep, but still press on,
Until the victory shall be won.

So let our lamps be burning bright,
That others, too, may see the light,
And come and join the heavenly band,
Who're traveling on to Canaan's land.

The day of God will soon appear,
The righteous, then, will have no fear;
The unprepared will, one and all,
Cry, "Rocks and mountains, on us fall."

But then their cries will be in vain,
How much their anguish or their pain;
God's day of wrath is now at hand,
And who of us can firmly stand?

SAVED.

Much has been said on the subject of being saved in the present tense. Some say we are saved now. Some say once in grace always in grace. But we read, "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." Saved from what? Saved from sin and death forever when Christ comes. But suppose the believer does not endure unto the end; what then? That will make no difference, if he is already saved. A man is a great drunkard, but is persuaded to sign the pledge, and stops drinking; that man is saved from a drunkard's grave; how long? until he breaks his pledge; that may never be, or it may be when he again meets with his old associates. A man goes to sea, falls overboard, is rescued; therefore is saved from drowning; how long? until he falls overboard again; that may never be, or it may be the next voyage. Paul did not think he was saved in the present tense, but had to be careful "that after he had preached to others he himself should be a castaway."

We are admonished to always do right, or the crown intended for us some one else will get. Many think they are saved by belonging to the church, some by paying much money, some by doing much; but by grace we shall be saved, the gift of God, not now, but when he comes. Two men run a race for a prize; the prize may be a thousand dollars, it may be a crown, or perhaps eternal life; they both may start together, and both bid fair to win; but if one stops by the way, he will lose the prize, even if he is within a few hours of it, and he must needs begin over again; for it is only those that endure unto the end that will be saved, or win the prize.

We are saved when all danger comes to an end, which can never be until Christ comes. May we all be saved then.

E. Greenwich, R. I. N. D. BABCOCK.

THE BAR OF JUSTICE.

Did you ever hear the sound of the trumpets which are blown before the judges as they come into a city to open the court? Did you ever reflect how different are the feelings which these trumpets awaken in the minds of different men? The innocent man hears them unmoved. They proclaim no terrors to him. He is not afraid. But to the guilty those trumpets are a knell of despair, they tell him of the law of justice, the day of trial and sentence, leaving nothing but punishment and disgrace. No wonder the prisoner's heart beats when he hears that trumpet's sound.

Reader, there is a day fast coming when all who are not justified by faith in Christ, shall despair in like manner. The voice of the archangel and the trump of God shall scatter to the winds the false peace which now buoys up many a soul. The day of judgment shall convince thousands of self-willed people too late, that it needs something more than a few beautiful ideas about God's love and mercy to reconcile a man to his Maker. No peace shall prove solid, substantial, and unbroken, in that awful day, but the peace which is built on justification by the blood of Christ, and comes from faith in him.

Dear Reader, settle it in your mind that there can be no peace with God unless you are justified by Christ. You must know what has become of your sins. You must have a reasonable hope that they are forgiven and put away. You must have the witness of your conscience that you are reckoned not guilty before God. Without this it is vain to talk of peace. You have nothing but the shadow and imitation of it. "There is no peace, saith my God to the wicked." Remember the bar of justice.—New Tract.

For the World's Crisis.

NICOLAITANISM.

Nicolaitan is derived from nicao, I conquer, and laos, a people. It is hateful to the Lord. Rev. 2: 15. The people were first vanquished when a distinction arose between the clergy and laity; the clergy arrogated powers in proportion as the laity felt demeaned in their own sight. The clergy are types of the flock. 1 Pet. 5: 3. The house of Stephenas addicted itself to the work of the ministry; after the persecution of Stephen, all the church, or laity, was scattered abroad, and went everywhere preaching the word. Acts 8: 1–4.

History tells us that in the early days of the church the laity used to perform the rite of baptism. In modern times a few believers assembled in a remote part of the country would think more lightly of breaking a command of the decalogue, than attempting to take the Lord's Supper without the presence of an ordained minister.

Nicolaitanism is exhibited when an ordained brother preaches to the laity in one melee with unbelievers, ignoring the fact that the laity have the Spirit of God, are taught by God himself, and know all things (1 John 2: 20, 21); that they are the prophets, the repositaries of truth. The churches would not have been crippled in their influence or corrupted by Balaamites (hireling ministers) and Nicolaitans, had they have suffered their prophets to edify them (1 Cor. 12: 28), whom God appointed second to apostles, at least in one of the services of the Lord's day.

Free speech and scriptural reproof and correction form the strongest bulwark against the shafts of infidelity. It is not necessary to know Hebrew to be a Bible critic, for the Septuagint is a better copy of the Old Testament than the present Hebrew one.

Vineland, N. J. I. LAMB.

INSTRUCTIVE INCIDENT IN MARRIED LIFE.

Some eighty years ago, a young husband living in old Newbury, wishing to impress upon the mind of his newly made bride a lesson of concert of action, confession of personal preferences, which it was the bride's custom in those days, to pledge at the bridal altar, adopted the following pleasing illustrative experiment:

On the first morning of their wedded life, he requested his wife to accompany him to the lawn in front of their dwelling; when there, he took the end of a coil of rope, which he had prepared for the purpose, and playfully throwing it over the roof of the house, desired his wife to pass around to its rear, and pull the rope over.

She, having no idea of his intentions, but knowing by the smile playing upon his face that nothing amiss could come from her acquiescence, hastened to the other side of the house, and there commenced pulling the rope to her side, but in a short time it became taut, and ceased coming to her, when she cried out:

"The rope has become taut, and will not come any more."

"Pull harder," said he.

"I am pulling as hard as I can, and it won't come."

"Pull with all your might," shouted the husband.

"I cannot pull any stronger; it must have caught somewhere on the roof," cried the wife.

"Then return to this side and help me pull it back again."

At the request she readily returned to his side, showing many signs of rising impatience at his apparently strange conduct, on the conviction that he had all the while held the rope fast in his hands.

"Now," said he, "let us both take hold and pull together." They did so, and soon the entire rope fell to their feet.

"Now, my love, you have seen how hard and ineffectual were our efforts when we pulled in opposite directions, and how pleasing and effective they are when we pull together. Let us resolve that henceforth through life we will always take hold and pull at the same end of the rope, and then we shall find our action to be as pleasing and our efforts as successful, as our wills are harmonious."

DR. TYNG ON THE CHURCH.

The following remarks were made by Dr. Tyng, at a recent missionary meeting in New York:—

"At the earlier hours of the day he sometimes walked out among the poor, and was so much affected by what he saw that he was hardly capable of worshiping in the afternoon and evening. Something must be done. Either New York must do something soon, or she must take means to defend herself. The condition of New York society is becoming more frightful, worse and worse every day. The main question is, whether the Episcopal church is to have any gospel in it or not. There seems to be a desire to destroy the church. It seems to be, not whether the next generation shall be better than this, but whether there shall be a next generation at all. We must have the Spirit of Luther, which cuts and burns, in the Episcopal church in this city, or we shall be trailing in the dust. . . . . I long ago made up my mind not to bow before any one, whether he brings the parchment of an apostle, or the mitre of a pope. If we want funds, we must milk the cow which we feed. Twenty-three years ago perhaps five or six sympathized with me; now there must be about thirty. I know that many of the brethren are very fashionable; polished and rotund, and it is as easy for them to roll one away as another, but they must take up their cross and bear it. I do not know whether I am watched by spies sent out, or by Satan, but I do know that I have the crowbar of Puseyism on one side, and the crowbar of Ritualism on the other. My worst enemies are the 'betweens.' But I shall spend the rest of my days in Christ's work, and not be one-half for him, and the other half for the flummery of the Pope."

PROSPER? NEVER.—Save in business lawful, for purposes benevolent. You ought not to prosper in an evil way. It's a mercy God does hedge up your path, frown on your labors, as he did on that of Balaam. No man ought to prosper in the devil's service. Sooner or later all such will find their ill-gotten gains a moth, eating as doth a canker! Any man that traffics in rum, tobacco, and other things that poison the community, destroy health, life, peace, reputation, and salvation, will, by-and-by, rest assured, reap his reward.—D. H. Newton.

SOCIAL KINDNESS.—How sweet are the affections of kindness. How balmy the influence of that regard which dwells around our fire-side! Distrust and doubt darken not the purity of its brightness; the cravings of interest and jealousy mar not the harmony of that scene. Paternal kindness and filial affection blossom there in all the freshness of an eternal spring. It matters not if the world is cold, if we can turn to our dear circle and ask and receive all that our heart claims.

WORTH KNOWING.—If people planting orchards would give strict orders to mark the north side of trees with red chalk before they are taken up, and then set out, to have the tree put in the ground with its north side to the north, in its natural position, a large proportion would live. Ignoring this law of nature is the reason of so many transplanted trees dying. If the north side is exposed to the south the heat of the sun is too great for that side of the tree to bear, and therefore it dries up and decays.—Ex.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

"I DARE YOU!"

"Pooh! I could do it easily, and be back here again before you could count fifty."

"May be so, but you don't dare to try it!"

"Don't dare! now, Tom, you know better."

"Well, I dare you!"

The boy's eyes flashed. In a moment he was over the boundary line, skating skilfully over the forbidden ice, while his schoolmates looked on—some with fear, and a few with shouts of applause. Clear to the other side he went, though the ice cracked and bent; then with a graceful turn he was coming toward them again, swifter, swifter, with a look of pride on his glowing face; and the praises of the other boys already sounded in his ears.

"Good for you, Win!"

"Hurrah for—"

Who? where was he? where the proud form, the smiling face, and the dark hair, uncovered in the moment of exultation? Gone! gone in one moment from their sight under the ice, and the waters rose up over the spot, as if their time of triumph had come then.

"O, what shall we do?"

"Run quick! get a rope!"

"Stand back! every one of you!" and the voice, generally so kind, frightened them now with its sternness; and they looked in silence at the teacher's white face, as he drew off his gown and crept with it to the boundary which he had marked for the boys that morning. Over that, too, so carefully, yet so quickly: and the ice cracked, cracked! And the boys could none of them see just how it was done, only that soon the dark, dripping hair of their schoolmate appeared above the broken ice; then his body slowly, slowly dragged toward them, his hand clutching tightly the teacher's dressing-gown.

The teacher did not speak; and they dared not. In the teacher's own strong arms Winthrop was carried to the house, and rubbed; and, no, he was not dead! for in a few minutes he opened his eyes, and looking at the group of anxious boyish faces gathered round, he said, "All right." How it brightened every heart there! The boys could speak now.

"Oh, Win! I haven't counted the fifty yet!" burst out Tom, excitedly, trying to laugh; but if he had not been a boy he would surely have cried instead.

"Now, let me hear all about it," said their teacher, calmly, as the color began to come back into Winthrop's cheeks.

"It is all my fault!" said Tom, humbly.

"How came you to disobey my rule, Winthrop, and go beyond the boundary?"

"Why, I hardly thought about the rule, sir; I wanted to let them see that I wasn't afraid of the ice! they dared me to do it; and when any one dares me to do a thing—" Winthrop stopped suddenly, as the recollection came over him of the cold, gurgling waters, and of these few terrible moments of suspense.

"Then you always dare to do it; is that what you mean?"

"Yes, sir," but the voice was not so full of confidence as it had been half an hour before.

"And the end of your daring this time, might have been death!"

A shudder crept over the boy's heart.

"Oh, sir! please don't! I dared him!" said Tom.

"And so you think a boy is a coward who is dared to do a thing, and doesn't do it?"

"It looks so," answered Winthrop.

"Ah, my boy, you must get rid of that idea; it is all wrong. He who refuses to do a sinful or a dangerous thing, even when people say 'I dare you,' is a true hero; and he who runs all risks to do something, just because he is 'dared,' is by far the most cowardly and foolish. Don't look so down-hearted, Winthrop; I want you to be truly heroic, and I know you can do things very bravely sometimes. For instance, if I should say you must not go skating another day during this season, you would bear the punishment without complaint, I think."

"Yes sir," replied the boy, with a touch of the old pride in his voice.

"Mayn't I bear the punishment? It was my fault."

"I haven't given any punishment yet, Tom. I have only given this lesson about true bravery for you all to learn. And now be off, every one of you, and let Winthrop rest, while I go to examine my dressing-gown; and if it is entirely ruined, I'll pass a subsciption around among you to get a new one." And the kind man smiled as he left them, but his heart was full; and he went to thank God for the safety of his pupil, and to pray that he might become truly brave and noble.

Boys, never be dared into doing what is wrong. Do not take one step aside from the safe and straight path, no matter how many voices say "I dare you." Be brave enough to say "I dare not," to every temptation. And always "Dare to be right! dare to be true!

All the world's scorning can never harm you—
Stand by your conscience, your honor, your faith,
Stand like a hero, and battle till death!"

"I DARE NOT TELL A LIE."

The soft evening breeze bore along the merry voices and musical laughter of a happy group of children, who were engaged in their innocent sports on the green velvet lawn before Beech House. It was little Heathcote St. John's birthday, and his kind parents had allowed him to invite his young friends to spend the day with him. And now the shades of evening were already descending, and Mrs. St. John had told the children they must have only one game more before coming indoors.

"Let it be cricket, then," exclaimed Allan Seymore.

"O, no, the little girls could not join in it," said good natured Arthur Deane.

"Well, let it be rounders." But no one seemed inclined to have the proposed game, and some little time elapsed, and still the party were undecided as to what they should do.

"I think, 'hide and seek,' would do very nicely; every one knows how to play at that," said Harry St. John, rather timidly.

"O, yes, 'hide and seek.'"

"Hide and seek" was taken up, and shouted by one and another. Two or three of the party immediately went to hide amongst the neighboring trees, and in the shrubbery. Then the fun began in good earnest. Charles Glynn had nearly caught Heathcote St. John. There was no chance of escape, a flower-bed lay between him and "home." Florrie saw him coming towards it. "O, Heathcote, Heathcote," she cried, "you cannot jump over that bed. And papa's Indian flower, O!"

Heathcote had made the attempt and failed; his foot slipped, and falling forward, he had almost annihilated the delicate plant, which had been such an object of care to Count St. John.

"What will papa say?" reiterated little Florrie, for the third time, as she gazed wofully at the crushed flowers that lay at her feet.

"What shall I do?" exclaimed Heathcote, as he picked himself up; "papa will be so angry; I know he valued this plant above all others."

"Well, it is nothing so much, after all, to make this fuss about," cried Allan, "come, let us finish the game."

They started off in pursuit of those who had not yet been caught, all but Heathcote, who stood still, eyeing with a very rueful countenance the mischief he had wrought. At last he heard Count St. John's voice calling them in for supper. "I had better tell papa at once," he said to himself, but as he moved forward, Count St. John had turned into the house again. The children had dispersed. Count St. John sat in his study, looking particularly grave; presently he rang the bell. "Tell master Heathcote I wish to speak to him," he said to the servant who obeyed the summons. A few minutes afterwards, there was a timid knock at the door, and then Heathcote walked in. He looked rather pale. "Heathcote, I have sent for you to ask you whether you can tell me anything about my Indian flower; I find some one has totally destroyed it." Count St. John spoke sternly, perhaps he guessed who the culprit was.

Heathcote crimsoned to the very tips of his ears. He hesitated a moment, then raising his before downcast eyes he said firmly, "I dare not tell a lie, papa; I did it. And O, I wish I had told you before, for I have been miserable ever since that unlucky accident. Please forgive me?"

"Willingly, my boy. You have spoken the truth bravely, and though I regret the loss of the plant which has cost me so much trouble to preserve, it has been the means of proving to me that I have a son in whose word I can place confidence, and of whom I may be proud. God grant, dear Heathcote, that you may always preserve your candor and truthfulness."

My little children, you will never lose anything by speaking the truth: perhaps you may remember two lines which say,—

"For he who doth one fault at first,
And lies to hide it, makes it two."

And you know it is written in God's holy word, that "Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord." If you do not wish, then, dear little one, to be excluded from that bright angel band, playing on their golden harps around the throne of God, you must learn always to speak the truth, not from fear of men, but from love to that dear Jesus who gave his life a ransom for even the very smallest child who believes in him.—The Children's Friend.

ALICE AND THE OLD NEEDLE-WOMAN.

Alice found an old needle-woman one day resting under the cooling shade of a tree outside the garden gate.

"Do you want something?" asked Alice.

"Yes, dear child," she answered: "I want a new dress."

"A pretty calico?" asked Alice.

"That will too soon fade answered the poor needle-woman.

"A black woolen?" asked Alice.

"That will too soon wear out," answered she.

"A silk?" asked Alice.

"I have nothing fit to wear with it," answered the needle-woman; and Alice thought as much.

"A plaid, a beautiful plaid?" asked the child.

"That will too soon go out of fashion," answered the needle-woman.

"Do you care much about the fashion?" asked Alice.

"I want the dress to last me a thousand years or more," said the old woman.

"O!" exclaimed Alice, drawing back, for she half thought the poor woman was crazy; "do you expect to live so long? A thousand years is a great, great while, and you are pretty old now."

"I shall live longer than that," said she.

"I will ask my mother," said the girl, much puzzled, "if she knows what dress would suit you, and perhaps she'll buy it for you."

"Your mother is not rich enough to buy it, dear child," said the old woman.

"My father is rich," said she.

"Not rich enough to buy me the dress I want," answered the old woman.

"Do you want to dress like a queen?" asked Alice.

"No; but I want to dress like a king's daughter!"

"The old needle-woman is crazy," thought Alice to herself; "she talks so queer! I don't know where you will get such a dress," said she aloud—"something that will never fade, never wear out, never go out of fashion."

"And never get soiled or spoiled," added the old woman; "wear it when or where you may, it will always keep white and shining."

"O!" was all Alice could say. Then she added, "I should like such an one, I am sure. Could a little girl have one? But a little girl would outgrow hers."

"No," said the needle-woman; "the dress would let itself out to suit you always."

The child was lost in wonder. "Will you please tell me what it is, and where I can get one?" she asked.

"It is the garment of salvation, the robe of righteousness, which Jesus Christ has wrought out for you and for me, dear child," said the old woman, tenderly. "Christ came to take away the poor rags of our sins, and to put on us his pure white robe, and make us fit to be the children of God, the great King, and live in his palace forever. Should you not like to, dear child?"

"Yes," answered the child, "I do want to be one of God's children. I always wanted to. Will he give me a heavenly dress, do you think?"—The Banner.

DO NOT MAKE EXCUSES.—Children, do not form the habit of making excuses. If you have done wrong, be willing to own it. Do not try to hide it, or throw the blame on another. A person who is quick at making excuses, is not likely to be good for anything else, or to be loved and honored. Be honest, frank, and truthful.

ONE STEP MORE.

What though before me it is dark,
Too dark for me to see?
I ask but light for one step more;
'Tis quite enough for me.

Each little humble step I take,
The gloom clears from the next;
Lo, though 'tis very dark beyond,
I never am perplexed.

And if sometimes the mist hangs close,
So close I fear to stray,
Patient I wait a little while,
And soon it clears away.

I would not see my further path,
For mercy vails it so;
My present steps might harder be
Did I the future know.

It may be that my path is rough,
Thorny, and hard, and steep;
And, knowing this, my strength might fail
Through fear and terror deep.

It may be that it winds along
A smooth and flowery way;
But seeing this, I might despise
The journey of to-day.

Perhaps my path is very short,
My journey nearly done,
And I might tremble at the thought
Of ending it so soon.

Or, if I saw a weary length
Of road that I must wend,
Fainting, I'd think, "My feeble powers
Will fail me ere the end."

And so I do not wish to see
My journey or its length,
Assured that, through my Father's love,
Each step will bring its strength.

Thus step by step I onward go,
Not looking far before;
Trusting that I shall always have
Light for just "one step more."

IS THE SOUL OF THE PENITENT THIEF NOW IN PARADISE?

BY WM. SHELDON.

If so, it must have gone there unjudged, for judgment is located (1) "in the last day;" (2) at Christ's "appearing;" (3) when the great white throne" and its occupant descends; and (4) when the seventh trumpet sounds—all of which events are yet future.

One thing is certain: inasmuch as God's arrangement does not clash with itself, either the judgment is wrongly located, or the import of Christ's promise has not been rightly understood. That the judgment is connected with Christ's "appearing" (2 Tim. 4: 1) is a clear point, and it is certain that no man can receive his reward prior to the judgment, else there is no need of a judgment, as the judgment is for the express purpose of deciding the destiny of the human family, and to carry that decision into effect: and if this work precedes the judgment, it leaves nothing to be accomplished at the judgment, and makes the judgment a worthless arrangement; and also makes the statement untrue that the "dead" are then to be "judged," as well as the living. Besides this, we are expressly informed that the "reward" comes at the judgment, and not before it: "Thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great." (Rev. 11: 18.)

The penitent thief is certainly one of the "saints" here mentioned, else Paradise would not have been promised to him at any point of time; and if he is one of the saints he is certainly included in the number who are to get their "reward" at the time the dead are to be judged; consequently it is not true that he is already enjoying his reward in Paradise; hence, the Savior's promise to him has been misunderstood. These considerations lead us to seek for the true import of the Savior's promise on the cross, and this we will do by learning (1) what he did not mean, and (2) what he did mean.

I.—What he did not mean. Christ did not mean to state that he and the dying penitent should jointly enter Paradise on the very day of the crucifixion, because:

1. This position would locate Christ's "second" coming in the past, and as early as the time of his resurrection; whereas, Paul located his "second" coming in the future a long time after Christ's resurrection: "He shall appear the second time." (Heb. 9: 28.) All agree that Christ came once and tabernacled in flesh over thirty years, and that this constituted his first coming—do they not? Yes. Now then, if at the crucifixion he left the flesh, and went back to heaven, and remained there three days, and then came back again, and tabernacled in flesh some forty days more, would not that make his second coming? Just as certainly as one and one make two. Let us count. He tabernacled in flesh over thirty years before leaving the world—did he not? Yes. Does not that make one coming? Yes. And you say he then left the world and went to heaven and remained there three days—do you not? Yes. You also claim that he then came again to this world, and tabernacled in flesh a second time—do you not? Yes. Well, was not this as really a coming of Christ as in the first case? Yes. And do not one coming, and another coming, make two comings? Yes. And is not the next coming after the first the "second?" Yes. Then was not Paul mistaken many years afterward in telling us, "He shall appear the SECOND time?"

Rather let me believe that Paul was right, and that Christ's statement has been misunderstood. Paul and Christ do not clash when rightly understood, and there can be but one "second" coming of Christ, and that is yet future; hence, Christ did not go to Paradise, and return again.

2. After Christ was raised from the dead, he told Mary in plain terms, "I am NOT yet ascended." (John 20: 17.) Can we set aside this plain statement of the Master? No. Then we have no right to put a construction on his language on the cross which would make his own words clash. It is a positive fact from Christ's own statement that he did not then "ascend," although he had previously predicted his return to heaven in the following language: "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" As late as the morning of his resurrection, three days after his remark to the dying penitent, Jesus could truthfully affirm, "I am not yet ascended." Can we respect Christ's words? Then never so interpret his promise to the thief as to make his own statements conflict.

II.—What he did mean. Christ simply meant to give a plain reply to the consistent request of the dying penitent—nothing more nor less—and that request was, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." The thief had imbibed the impression that Christ contemplated coming again to establish a kingdom; and well he might have received this idea: for in the trial of Christ, he was accused of seeking to make himself a king, and in mockery of his claim to the kingship he was crowned with a "crown of thorns;" so Pilate interrogated Jesus about this matter: "Art thou the king of the Jews?" (John 18: 33.) Jesus remarked: "My kingdom is not of this world [that is, this world of sin and death:] if my kingdom were of this world, then would my subjects fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence" (v. 36); that is, not from henceforth, or from this time forward. Pilate clearly saw by this reply that Jesus contemplated the establishment of a kingdom at some future time; so he again puts the question to Jesus in this form: "Art thou a king, then?" (v. 37.) Jesus replies, "Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth" (v. 37,) or this truth.

Here Christ confesses to Pilate (1) that his kingdom was not to be established in this world of death and sin; that his kingdom was not to commence then, and extend from that time forward: and (2) another evangelist gives this item in Christ's confession: "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven." The thief having thus learned that Christ claimed to have been born to be a king, and that he denied that his kingdom was from thenceforth, or from that time forward, and claimed that they should finally see him "coming in the clouds of heaven," enthroned on "the right hand of power," or in kingly majesty, knew Jesus' theology concerning his kingdom; and the only thing that remained to be decided in his mind was whether Christ was the true Messiah, or an impostor: and as the sun refuses to shine, and darkness covers the land, he is convinced that something more than an ordinary man is dying, and concludes that Jesus must be the true Messiah, and if so, he will come in the clouds of heaven, as he had promised, to set up his kingdom at the end of this world of sin; and with this impression on his mind, he recognizes Jesus as "Lord," and offers to him his heartfelt petition: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

The immediate reply of Jesus was, "Amen lego soi semeron met emou ese en to Paradiso." Let it be observed, that the first word in the Savior's reply is "amen," which signifies "so let it be." The word amen that we use so frequently is simply a Greek term incorporated into our language, and we well know its meaning. The translators have rendered it by the term "verily" in this text, which fails to give the full meaning of the Savior's reply. Following an ancient punctuation, a fair rendering of the text would read as follows, making the request and reply harmonious, and also agreeing with the truth that reward comes after the judgment: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, So let it be—I tell thee to-day, Thou shalt be with me in Paradise."

When? Just when he requested to be remembered: for Paradise is as really to bloom in the kingdom of the second Adam, as it did in the kingdom of the first Adam; for when earth shall be renewed, and the river of life shall flow, "on either side of the river" will be "the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God (Rev. 22: 2; 2: 7); so Paradise will bloom on earth again when Christ sets up his kingdom, and the penitent thief will then be remembered, and that, too, at the point of time he prayed to be remembered, and thenceforward will be with Christ in Paradise.

What was the request? "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.' What was the reply? "Amen"—or, "So let it be;" that is, Let it be according to thy request—and then to make the matter doubly positive, Jesus adds: "I say unto thee to-day, [despite surrounding circumstances, everything to human appearance looking as though I should never have a kingdom, yet] thou shalt be with me in Paradise," which shall bloom in my kingdom.

The modern exposition destroys the harmony between the request and the reply, and clashes with the Bible fact that reward must be given after the judgment-day comes.—Adventism.

WILL ELIJAH COME AGAIN?

For twelve hundred years a continuous line of prophets, from Moses to Malachi, had written the oracles of God, and then the voice ceased. Three hundred years must pass away before men should receive from God any fresh and direct communication of His will, and, as the harp of Old Testament prophecy grew silent, its last chord touched upon Elijah. That mysterious prophet, who alone, except Enoch, had lived without dying, is once more mentioned. And the sound, as it died away, left this as its last impression on the ear of each faithful and thoughtful Israelite, "Behold, I will send you Elijah, the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

It has been supposed by some that this prophecy has been already fulfilled in the person of John the Baptist. We must, therefore, in the first place, examine the ground on which this supposition rests.

The prophecy, as might have been expected, was one deeply engraven on the Jewish mind; and when John the Baptist appeared, and wore the same dress which had distinguished Elijah, and showed much of Elijah's spirit, there was an impression among them that it was Elijah himself who had appeared.

That impression would rather gain force by an inaccurate rumor of what the angel, who announced his birth, had said to Zacharias. The angel had really said, "And he shall go before Him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord;" which, while it referred to our text, only stated that in John the Baptist there would be a resemblance to what was there predicted, not the actual fulfillment of it; but it is not difficult to see how easily, especially as many of the Jews of that day believed in a transmigration of souls, the words might be misunderstood, and lead to a vague idea that John the Baptist might be Elijah himself returned to earth again.

Under this impression, when messengers had been sent to John, and asked him, "Art thou the Christ?" and received from him the positive assurance that he was not, they proceeded to ask him further, "Art thou Elias?" And again he answered, No. An answer which he most certainly would not have given if he had been really the subject of Malachi's prediction, to which they so evidently referred. It seems to me impossible to doubt that John not only meant to deny his being personally identical with Elijah, but meant also to deny his being that Elijah of whom Malachi had spoken, and whom the Jews were expecting.

But then there is a passage in which, at first sight, our Lord appears to attribute to John what John denies of himself, for in Matt. 11: 14, our Lord said: "All the prophets and the law prophesied until John, and, if ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come." If that text stood alone, it would, doubtless, seem most natural to interpret it as meaning that it was of John the Baptist Malachi prophesied. It would not even then be very easy to understand why his being so should depend on their receiving it, which seems as much as saying that, if they would receive it—or, perhaps, rather receive him, for it might be either one or the other—he would have been to them what it was predicted Elias should be. But the passage is not alone. On a subsequent occasion our Lord explained the matter much more fully to the disciples.

On the Mount of Transfiguration Elijah appeared again. He was then with Moses. In this event the disciples were shown an earnest of the coming glory. Peter refers to it as having been such: "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we declare unto you the coming and glory of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty; for he received from God the Father, honor and glory; when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; and this voice, which came from heaven, we heard when we were with him in the holy mount." Elijah was there, on that occasion, as an earnest of those who, at his coming in glory, will be caught up to meet him without dying, as Moses was of those who then will be raised from their graves. And the disciples were in some way taught to recognize them both; they saw Moses, and they also saw Elijah, and felt, for a moment, the blessedness of that presence.

And then it was that they began to remember the expectations they had been taught to cherish of Elijah's coming. It is not unlikely they called to mind these words of Jesus about John the Baptist, which seemed half to contradict those expectations. And when they saw Elijah himself so distinguished as to appear in glory, accompanied by none but Moses, their minds were not unnaturally perplexed, and they put the question, "Why, then, say the scribes, that Elias must first come?"

And our Lord did, in fact, answer all those inquiries, which they hardly knew how to make. They wanted to know whether the scribes were right in predicting a personal appearing of Elijah before the great and terrible day of the Lord? Whether his appearance on the mount, which they had just witnessed, were what was meant? How it was that, if so, Jesus had told them that, if they would receive it, John was Elias which was for to come? And what was the reason why John was like Elias? And why Elias had not yet come to perform all that was written of him? To all these only half-expressed inquiries, our Lord replied: "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things"—the scribes are right in so interpreting what Malachi prophesied—"But I say unto you that Elias is come already." That is, John the Baptist has come in the spirit and power of Elias, though, instead of his restoring all things, "they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed."

John the Baptist was like Elijah, because he had been, as Elijah was to be, the precursor of Christ. But he had come, and not Elijah, because the Son of man was about to suffer, not to reign. Elijah himself was to come before the great and terrible day of the Lord, but John the Baptist had come before his suffering, and had himself suffered. In short, John the Baptist came in the spirit and power of Elias, performing the same part before Christ's day of suffering that Elijah will do before his day of reigning.

On the whole, it appears that John the Baptist did represent Elijah, but was not Elijah. That what he did before the first advent, Elijah will do before the second advent. "Behold, I will send you Elijah, the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."—Prophetic Times.

THINE ONLY CHILD IS DEAD.

Written for Sister F. Beal, and sung at the funeral at Lewiston, Me., by J. A. Libby.

(Published by request.)

Thine only child is dead;
Tell Jesus of thy grief;
"Come unto me," he kindly said,
"And I will give relief."

Put back her golden hair,
Her death-set eyelids close,
And fold her little hands so fair,
In solemn, sweet repose.

Thy darling child is dead;
Come see the sleeper now,
Laid in her little casket bed,
So calmly still and low.

'Tis but a dreamless sleep
To await a better day,
Just yonder, where we cannot weep,
When death has passed away.

Then give the last fond kiss,
And look a last adieu,
Thinking, though Frankie you may miss,
She'll come again to you.

Jesus will raise your dead;
O calm your troubled breast;
"Come unto me," he kindly said,
"And I will give you rest."

CONSECRATION.

"I AM THE LORD'S."

"I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring; and they shall spring up as among the grass, as willows by the water-courses. One shall say, I AM THE LORD'S; and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord, and surname himself by the name of Israel."—Isa. 44: 3–5.

"I am the Lord's." This is the language that the prophet foretold should be uttered by Israel, under the influence of the Spirit of God, which was to be poured out like waters for the thirsty, and like floods upon the dry ground. And whenever men, whether Jews or Gentiles, receive this heavenly benediction, the Spirit poured from on high, this language becomes their own.

Has the Spirit of God been thus poured out in fulfillment of the divine promises? Can we doubt it when we read: "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified"? Can we doubt it when we read: "If I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but, if I depart, I will send him unto you"? Can we doubt it when we read of "the promise of the Father"; the endowment "with power from on high"; the promised baptism of "the Holy Ghost"; the wonders of "the day of pentecost"; the preaching of the gospel at the house of Cornelius and elsewhere, "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven"; the bestowment of "the spirit of adoption," causing the cry of Father, dear Father; the especial guidance of the apostles of the Lamb; and the universal experience of christians, which confirms the statement, that "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God"?

If, then, we live under that ministration of the Spirit, which exceeds in glory all the ministrations of law and wrath; if the Holy Spirit sent to abide with the church for ever is in our hearts to reprove, to strengthen, to comfort, and to direct; then it is proper for us to take into our own lips these precious words of joyful confidence, and say each for himself, "I am the Lord's."

Can we say this? Is it the joyous testimony of our lips? Is it the abiding confidence of our hearts? Is it the steadfast language of our lives? Can we say it without presumption, without falsehood, without hypocrisy, without vain glorying? Can we say it to the world, to the church, to ourselves, to God?

"I am the Lord's." He has made me. My being sprang from him. My life is a drop from the ocean of divine vitality. The inspiration of the Almighty giveth me understanding; in him I live and move and have my being; and every right that the Creator may have over the creature teaches me to say, "I am the Lord's."

He has redeemed me. Plunged in the sorrows, the sin, and the shame of lost and doomed humanity, destitute of merit, and unworthy of his notice, still he had thoughts of pity for me. He came into the world to save sinners. He suffered, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God. He bore our sins in his own body on the tree. He gave his life as a ransom for all. And that "all" included me, even me! The chastisement of my peace was upon him. By his stripes I am healed. Though I am the chief of sinners, yet Jesus died for me. "I am the Lord's."

Others have known of these claims of power and love and mercy upon them, and have rejected them. But I, through God's mercy, have been led to admit them all. He has so called me by his grace; he has so opened my heart to hear and attend to his word; he has so revealed his love and compassion for me; he has so borne with my sins and transgressions; he has so drawn my heart, and melted it by his Holy Spirit; he has inspired within me such penitential sorrow for sin; he has so kindly heard my broken, piteous prayer; he has so gently loosed my heavy burden; he has so sweetly said to me, "thy sins which are many are forgiven thee"; he has so made me feel his Spirit's presence, with its fruits of love and joy and peace, that I have joined myself to him in an everlasting covenant; I have fully acknowledged and freely ratified his undoubted title; I have taken him to be my God, my Savior, my friend, my all; I have consented to walk in his footsteps; I have taken for my glorying his consecrated cross; I have counted myself as dead with the death that he died; I have been buried with him by baptism, and planted in the likeness of his death; I have been raised in the faith of his resurrection; I have had his name named upon me in this solemn act; I have confessed the good confession of his kingliness, and of my subjection to him, before many witnesses; I have received the glad tidings, the hope, and the promise of his kingdom as a little child; I have waited and prayed for the time when he shall be king over all, and universal Lord; my interests and hopes and joys and treasures are all in his keeping. "I am the Lord's."

I have cast in my lot with his people. Poor and despised and down-trodden though they be, they are my people. Their sorrows are my sorrows, and their joys are my joys. Their hopes and aims, their toils and fears, are mine. The shame they bear for Christ, I covet; their reproach for him is better than the treasures of Egypt or the pleasures of sin. I turn me away from the scenes of mirth and folly to meet my Savior's friends and share my Savior's presence. I have comfort in their fervent prayers, encouragement in their words of exhortation, gladness in their songs of joy. I love their solemn weeping places more than all earth's halls of gladness; and no worldly festival can be so dear to me as that peaceful hour, "on the first day of the week, when the disciples come together to break bread." So my interests are bound up with those of the people of God. I feel their poverty; I share their wealth. I know them by a secret sympathy; I feel for them a true regard. Not because they are rich or great or wise or honored; but because they are children of my heavenly Father; they are of the orders of heavenly nobility; they are related to me by blood, the blood of Christ; they are God's anointed kings, his elected priests, and they are my chosen friends. Once it was not so. Once I shunned their company, shrank from their glances, and trembled at their words. Once I avoided them, and spoke lightly of them, and loved them not. But all this has changed, and God has wrought the change. It was no slow and gradual process. It was the sudden kindling of a new love, the sudden birth of a new and better life. The old things have passed away. All things have become new. I, too, am in Christ; and I am a new creature, changed, renewed, chastened, and made different from my former self. I love the God I once blasphemed; I praise the Savior whose name I once profaned; I love the christians I once despised; I am a different being; I cannot doubt it, or deny it; I know that I have passed from death unto life, because I "love the brethren." Surely "I am the Lord's."

I am his, for he made me; and I cannot resist that claim. I am his, for he redeemed me, and I cannot cancel that right. I am his, for I have covenanted with him and confessed his rightful ownership: surely I cannot deny it now. What, then, shall annul his title? What shall sunder the bond that unites us? Who shall separate me from the love of Christ?

I am utterly and hopelessly unworthy of his love, I know; but what then? He knew all that at first, and died for us while we were yet sinners. If his love rested upon my love, or was conditioned upon my merit, then I should never have been the Lord's. But herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us."

"He saw me ruined by the fall,
And loved me notwithstanding all."

I am no poorer or more unworthy than he took me to be at first. I am worse than I thought I was, but not worse than he knew me to be when he undertook my case. Had he thought me incurable, he would have let me alone. I should have despaired long ago; but "Is anything too hard for God?" If not, then "I am the Lord's." I did not deserve his love at first, yet he loved me. I do not deserve it now, but he loves me still. I did not begin it; I cannot prevent it. He loves me, not because I am good, but because he is good. I must still let him love me, for he will; and I must yield to his love, for it "constraineth me." How can I resist such love and such a friend?

It is true I have often wandered from his fold, and have been a lost and wayward sheep. And, in the thoughtlessness of my heart, I imagined that then I was not the Lord's. I had broken the bands, I had escaped from the fold, I had fled to the wilderness, and I should see the Shepherd's face no more. But little did I know his love. He had a hundred sheep in his fold; but he left the ninety and nine, and came to seek for me. I heard his voice amid the din arches of the forest, and I fled with shame at his approach. I listened to his call amid the wail of storms and the rush of water-floods. I saw him leaning upon his staff, as he wearily climbed the stony paths. I caught the glimpse of his countenance in the glitter of the lightning-flash, and heard his word of piteous entreaty, breaking in amid the thunder-roll of wrath. I heard him still beseeching, as I fled away, saying, "Turn ye, for why will ye die?" And when almost ready to faint and all, he still said, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest."

But I feared his rod, and dreaded his reproof, and wandered on till I was lost and helpless, chilled by the pelting storms of sorrow, and torn and tangled by the thorns and snares of sin. And then, when hope was lost, and help seemed far away; when darkness was thick, and storms were wild; when the lion roared against me as his prey, and the hissing serpent claimed me as his victim; ah, then, I saw the Good Shepherd's face again. With pierced and weary feet, with torn and bleeding hands, with tattered raiment and with thorn-crowned brow, he found my last hiding-place, and laid his hand upon me. And then there was no chiding nor chastisement. There was no bitterness in his heart, no severity in his hand. How gently he plucked my feet out of the net. How tenderly he turned aside the tangled thorns. How gently he lifted me up. And when he saw that I had wasted my strength in wandering, and had none for my return, how kindly the weary Shepherd laid me on his own shoulder and bore me back through deserts dark, and thickets wild, and over torrents and through water-floods, still soothing me and calming all my fears, still holding me that I could not fall, still binding me with bands of love, and so bringing me home with gladness, he said, "Rejoice, for I have found my sheep that was lost." And ever since he has watched me, and led me, and fed me, and kept me, and I have thought more of him and less of myself, until he is all, and I am nothing; but yet such as I am, I must be, a sheep of his fold,—"I am the Lord's."—The Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

"LOVE YOUR ENEMIES."

Our blessed Redeemer has commanded us to love our enemies, to bless them that curse us, to do good to them that hate us, and to pray for them that despitefully use and persecute us. Now it is very evident that one branch of this love is exercised when we forgive them that have trespassed against us. This duty needs to be impressed upon many who profess to love Christ. It is astonishing, indeed, that so many overlook the plain statements of Scripture, and deceive themselves with the idea of being saved, when at the same time they are cherishing hatred and malice in their hearts, and are unwilling to forgive those who may have trespassed against them. It is in vain for us to pray, unless we are willing to obey. God is not to be trifled with; he means what he says. It is not those who say Lord, Lord, that are to be accepted when Jesus comes, but those who do the will of God. When God commands us to love our enemies, he means us to do it.

Mr. Wesley, on these words of our Savior, uses the following striking language:—"'As we forgive them that trespass against us.' In these words our Savior clearly declares both on what condition and in what degree or manner we may look to be forgiven of God. All our trespasses or sins are forgiven us if we forgive and as we forgive others. This is a point of the utmost importance, and our blessed Savior is so jealous lest at any time we should let it slip out of our thoughts, that he not only inserts it in the body of his prayer, but presently after he repeats it twice over. 'If,' saith he, 'ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.' God forgives as we forgive others. So that if any malice or bitterness, if any taint of unkindness or anger remain; if we do not clearly, fully, and from the heart forgive all men their trespasses, we so far cut short the forgiveness of our own; God cannot clearly and fully forgive us. In the meantime while we do not from our hearts forgive our neighbor his trespasses, what manner of prayer are we offering whenever we utter these words? We are indeed setting God at defiance; we are daring him to his worst. 'Forgive our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us.' That is, in plain terms, Do not thou forgive us at all; we desire no favor at thy hand. We pray that thou wilt keep our sins in remembrance, and that thy wrath may abide upon us. But can you seriously offer such a prayer to God? Who dares to do it? O, tempt him no longer. Now, even now, by his grace forgive as ye would be forgiven. Now have compassion on thy fellow-servant, as God had compassion on thee."

Let us not be hearers of the word, but doers. Soon the great day of God's wrath will be here, and who shall be able to stand? None can stand then but those who have pure hearts and clean hands. O that God may help me to watch and pray, and keep myself in a waiting position, so that when Jesus comes I may hear him say to me, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." J. W. THOMAS.

OUR HOPE.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."—1 Pet. 1: 3–5.

We are begotten unto this lively (or) living hope by the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. Hear Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 23, "But every man in his own order; Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. . . For the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (the living) shall be changed" 1 Cor. 15: 52. "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (or go before) them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 14, 17. "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth (at my second coming) and believeth in me, shall never die." John 11: 25, 26. "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." Rev. 2: 11.

We are not only to live, but we are to have something to make life desirable. Peter tells us that we are to have an inheritance that is to be incorruptible, undefiled, and will not fade away. Bible for this. "And if we be Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3: 29. What promise? "For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." Gen. 13: 15. "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blest." Gen. 22: 18. "By faith Abraham when he was called to go out into a place which he should afterward receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went. . . . For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Heb. 11: 8, 10.

Did Abraham ever find the city, or obtain the promised possession? "These all died in faith, not having received the promises." Heb. 11: 13. When will the city appear? "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Rev. 21: 1, 2.

Shall we all be there? "Nevertheless, we according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (or the righteous dwelleth), 2 Pet. 3: 13. "Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exhalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off thou shalt see it." Ps. 37: 34. "Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and his disciples came unto him, saying, declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field. He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world (or age), and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of the world (ages.) The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire, and there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Matt. 13: 36, 42.

Notice here the field is the world, the reapers are the angels, who are to gather out of Christ's kingdom all things that offend, as the tares are gathered and burned. "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. 4: 1.

Entire possession will be given to the children of God, for, says Christ, "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5: 5. "And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7: 27.

Truly ours is a blessed hope. It is soul-cheering to the toil-worn pilgrim here, while treading, oft with weary feet, the rugged steeps of life's pathway. How sweet to think that bye and bye we shall, if faithful, live forever with Jesus on the renewed earth, that John saw, where God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21: 4. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. 15: 26. Christ has died, "that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Heb. 2: 14, Glory to God! Jesus has gotten the keys of death and hell (hades or the grave), and risen triumphant, and is now our advocate with the Father. But soon

"He will finish all his pleading,
And come again."

For "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin [a sin-offering], unto salvation."—Heb. 9: 28.

Dear reader, brother and sister, may you and I be ready to hail him with joy.

S. TENNEY.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, July 1, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. *

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion. *

THE IRON HILL CAMPMEETING.

The campmeeting at Iron Hill, Iowa, was held in a pleasant woods forming a part of a very heavy timbered prairie extending some twenty miles. The forest is composed mostly of large elms and sugar maples. This great timber prairie is interspersed by rich farm lots, occupied by enterprising, common-sense, but uneducated men, many of whom possess superior natural ability. Until within a few months, many of them were infidels, who had no confidence in the Bible nor the popular religion of these last days. Bro. Moses Chandler went among them and preached the plain truths of the Bible, showing them that man is wholly mortal in this life; that the wicked will be destroyed; that Jesus is coming personally to reign on the earth in glory, when the saints will take "the kingdom under the whole heaven." The result was, that many of those infidels were converted, and a flourishing church established, composed of earnest men and women, who are not of the class that draw back to perdition. They are now "rooted and grounded" in the blessed hope. We enjoyed their society. Christianity has taken deep hold of their affections. Their's is no mere surface work for a few days, but forever. Bro. Chandler thinks of moving among them. He is highly esteemed for his faithful labors.

Bro. P. S. W. Deyo was at this meeting with his large tent. He is a faithful, earnest and successful laborer in the Lord's vineyard. Brn. Buck and Gibson were also with us, who are true men of God. Our meetings continued to increase in interest till the Lord's day, which was one of special importance to this people. At 9 o'clock we met for a love-feast, and had a real good one. One hundred and five spoke, and gave cheering testimonies. At an early hour the people began to come in from the surrounding country, and at the hour for preaching the large tent was full, and many were unable to get inside. We had good order and attention during the entire meeting, and the truth found a hearty welcome in many honest hearts. The people in the west have ears to hear, and good sense to distinguish between fables and the word of the Lord. It is pleasant to talk to such people. The harvest is ripe but the laborers are few. Men who have the missionary spirit will find plenty to do in this western field. The few faithful men who are here are doing a noble work. They are truly laborers. There are now in the state many substantial brethren, who make christianity a daily business, and are living epistles known and read of all men. The labors of Bro. Deyo and others have been greatly blest in Iowa.

Quite a number were converted during the meeting, and fourteen were baptized by Bro. Chandler. Sabbath evening we had the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, when some seventy-five sat down to commemorate the sufferings of Jesus. At the close of the sacrament, some fifteen joined the church. Others were almost persuaded to become followers of Christ. They now see the simplicity of the truth of the Bible as never before, and are surprised to see how they have been deceived by the popular theology of these last days. Thank the Lord that his truth is spreading in all directions. The people have been fed long enough on husks, and are decided to have no more to do with them. In all the churches the tide is turning in favor of the truth among the true disciples of the Lord. We have never found them so willing to hear as now. They are fast breaking loose from the theological fetters by which they have been so long bound. They begin to see a necessity in the case. They are about starved where they are, and feel that they can not live much longer in their "Libby prison." Those who are preaching the immortality of the soul, and its consequent eternal misery of the finally impenitent, are fast losing their hold upon the minds of their hearers. Rather than believe such a monstrous doctrine they turn to Universalism or Spiritualism. The time was when people believed what the minister said without asking for proof, but that day is nearly passed. The danger is now, that they do like the Italians, who have been so long trodden down and gagged by the clergy, reject every thing and embrace infidelity. Indeed this is what we may expect on the part of the masses. The theological waters are tremendously troubled at the present time. Those who once thought they had a reason for their hope, now find they have no Bible to sustain what they had believed.

THE KU-KLUX-KLAN.

The Ku-Klux-Klan is a secret organization in the South for the purpose of carrying out the principles that caused the Southern rebellion. Its members have already performed some daring and bloody deeds. They are a terror to the negro, and an enemy to all the friends of the colored people. It is said this organization has been a strong power for evil. When they wish to remove some one out of their way, they sometimes send to such a threatening message. The following was sent to Judge Hunter, of Memphis, Tenn.

(Skulls, daggers, pistols.)

"K-K. K.

"The Dread Golgothan Den of the Dragon, Shrouded Council of Mortals.

"In Hoc Signum. The Grand Cyclops speaks.

"Tyrant, knave, fool, tremble! Ten thousand pistols point toward and await you! Ten thousand daggers point toward you! Thou art a stink in Memphis' nostrils.

"Beware! Beware! Beware!

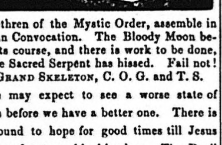
"Tempt not further the patience of the Holy Brotherhood. You owe your life to the forbearance of God and the Klan.

"By order of the Great-Grand Cyclops."

It will be seen that this demoniacal body claim to be associated with God. We may well inquire, as did the martyrs, "How long" must this state of things continue? A colored school-house at Nashville, Tenn., was burned down last spring by the Ku-Klux-Klan. The house cost over a thousand dollars. A few days before the house was burned, the teacher was notified that, on pain of death, he must leave the school.

A gentleman, who was formerly a resident of Greenfield, but who has for several years lived in Columbia, S. C., sends to his father one of the many notices posted up on the walls of that city, calling together the members of that mystic order, which is becoming the terror of the poor freedmen of the South. A fac simile of the placard we give below:

IN HOC SIGNIO.



Brethren of the Mystic Order, assemble in Solemn Convocation. The Bloody Moon begins its course, and there is work to be done, for the Sacred Serpent has hissed. Fail not!

GRAND SKELETON, C. O. G. and T. S.

We may expect to see a worse state of things before we have a better one. There is no ground to hope for good times till Jesus comes and sets up his kingdom. The Devil is doing his best to break up society, and to destroy all confidence in Christ and the christian religion. This is the time for the true friends of Jesus to be bold for their Lord. There is a wide field now for true courage. Cowards will fare hard at last. Let us be brave for the right, if ten thousand daggers are pointed at our hearts.

THE SANGERFEST.

By Sangerfest is meant the German festival, which was held in Chicago, closing with a great picnic, Sabbath, June 21st, when some twenty thousand were present. The Chicago Tribune says it was the greatest festival ever held in the United States. It continued nearly a week. The Sabbath was their great feast day. They formed a long procession and marched through the streets of Chicago with music and banners, while the citizens waved their handkerchiefs and cheered them on their way to Wright's grove, where they had a great variety of amusements, and much beer drinking and song. Had those who landed on Plymouth Rock in 1620 been told that in less than two hundred and fifty years the Sabbath would become the great holiday for thousands of people in our principal cities; when large processions might be seen marching with merry music and streaming banners to a mammoth picnic, where all sorts of amusements, beer drinking, wit and song would be indulged in to the utmost liberty, and be applauded the next morning in the leading daily paper in a city containing between two and three thousand inhabitants; would they have believed such a declaration?

One of their choice speakers, after noticing some things that were opposed to the right kind of progress, according to his estimation, said, as reported in the Chicago Tribune without any expression of dissent from the editor:

"But there is yet another enemy. It is he who keeps aloof from us, who remains on the outside of the fence, and, viewing our festivities from the distance, prays with sincerity and from the bottom of his heart that we may all go to the devil. The very thought of this should raise a cloud and obscure our bright sun, as it now shines clearly from the heavens. It is the power of bigotry of the church. We, as Germans, must not submit to the dictates of this Puritanic bigotry. We will leave heaven to the angels, and hell to the devil, and take care of the world ourselves. Sunday amusement is the only recreation left to the workingman. They shall not take away the bloom from the cheeks of our maidens by incarcerating them in closed rooms during the warm sunshine of Sunday. No, art and song shall beautify them, and cure the natural ailments of the body. Neither shall they abridge our right to enjoy those terrible things—dare I name them—beer and wine. We need no policemen to correct our morals."

Truly, this is a progressive age. No doubt, Satan is highly delighted with such progress, and is much pleased with the public press that will speak well of such Sabbath performances as have just been witnessed at Chicago.

WESTERN NOTES.

We parted with our readers at the Iron Hill campmeeting, in Iowa, June 14th. The next morning (15th) we had a parting circle, bade each other good bye, with a firm purpose to meet in the kingdom of God. We all felt glad that we had met in the tented grove. Every one seemed to be delighted with the meeting.

Bro. Black took us to his pleasant home, and from thence to Dubuque, a distance of some twenty-eight miles. When we arrived there to commence our proposed discussion with Mr. Sweeney, from Winchester, Ill., we learned that he had decided not to be present. The discussion was advertised in the Dubuque papers to begin that evening; when the people came to hear, the debate was found to be all on one side. The reason why Mr. Sweeney did not appear was said to be because his friends thought it was not best. Instead of the discussion, the Disciple church allowed us to occupy their meeting-house, when we endeavored to turn the failure to good account by presenting some of the points that would have come up during the debate, and then invited his friends, or any others present, to ask such questions as they pleased; but none ventured any inquiries. The first evening we spoke on the creation and death of man, showing that the Bible teaches that he is entirely mortal. The second evening we took up the meaning of the word soul as used in the Scriptures. We urged questions, but none were offered. As the weather was very warm, we held meetings the next two evenings on the public square, which is pleasantly shaded. We had a very candid hearing from an attentive and intelligent audience, in which were some of the first citizens of Dubuque. It was pleasant to talk to people who had ears to hear. We were sorry we could not stay longer, as it was evident there was a fine chance for a good harvest, if the labors could be continued.

Dubuque is a city containing some twenty thousand inhabitants, many of whom are noted for their enterprising spirit. Much labor is spent on the lead mines in the vicinity, where much valuable ore has been found. A portion of the city is on a high bluff, affording some very pleasant situations, overlooking the "Father of Waters," and the interesting scenery to be witnessed in all directions. The Illinois Central R. R. crosses the river at this place from Deonleith. They are now building a bridge across the river for the railroad. Dubuque is a smart business place, and is called the "Key City." We hope to have the privilege of visiting it again, and saying more about our blessed hope. "Pure and undefiled religion" is evidently not very common in the "Key City." Satan has the general control, as in most other places. Thank the Lord his time is short, but his last work is an earnest one.

We found a good home with Bro. and Sr. Cook, who did all they could to make our stay pleasant. Several others are becoming very much interested in the gospel of the kingdom who are yet members of the different churches. It was decided to establish a prayer-meeting, to be held on Thursday evenings, at Bro. Lyman Munger's, corner of Bluff and 9th streets. We found Bro. and Sr. Munger to be hearty lovers of the truth and true friends of Jesus. They are members of the Baptist church, and are now well settled in the doctrine we love so well. They are not ashamed to be identified with those who are sometimes called "infidels," because they believe "the dead know not any thing."

THE NEW HARTFORD CAMPMEETING.

Friday, June 19th, we left Dubuque for the campmeeting at New Hartford, Iowa, one hundred and ten miles west of D. On our way there, we passed through some of the finest farming districts we ever saw. It was a feast to the eyes of one who had been brought up umong the rocks and mountains of New England. We saw thousands of acres without a stone or a tree. It seems odd to a Connecticut boy to see new land without trees or stones, all ready for the plough. The surface is that of the "rolling prairie," which, to our eyes, is much more pleasant and inviting than the flat prairie. On some of the principal elevations one can have a very extensive view of some of the finest farming landscapes in the world. Indeed, we do no not see how any thing could surpass what we there witnessed. When a farmer locates his home, he next sets out trees for a shade, and to ward off the winds of winter. These clusters of trees may be seen on the prairie hill tops, surrounding the pleasant homes of the wealthy farmers; while outside are the vast fields of wheat and corn, which now look very promising. Many have set out several thousand trees, making quite a woods. They have a law which provides that those who will set out five acres of trees shall have six hundred dollars worth of property exempted from taxes. This is producing very pleasant results.

The farming is nearly all done by horse power. They plant and hoe, reap and mow, thrash and sow, all by machinery. Their corn and wheat fields contain from fifteen to sixty acres, which are managed as easily as one to four acres in New England.

After being delighted for eight hours with the sight of the rich farms of Iowa, we arrived at New Hartford, and received a hearty greeting from Brn. Deyo, Ensign, and others. Bro. S. B. Ensign came from New Hartford, Ct., some fourteen years ago, being one of the first settlers in that part of Iowa, and named it after his native town. He is delighted with the country, as every one else appears to be, who has a home there. The camp-ground was about half a mile from the depot in a pleasant grove. Bro. Deyo had up his large tent, and others had erected their board shanties, giving quite a campmeeting look these days before its advertised commencement. We had our first meeting Friday evening, when the tent was well filled, by those who appeared anxious to hear. Saturday we had three meetings. The Sabbath was a lovely day, and a large audience assembled, characterised for good order and attention. The truth has taken strong hold in Iowa. In many places those who are waiting and watching for the coming of the Son of man exercise the leading religious influence. This is the case, we learn, at New Hartford.

Our Brn. there are about building a meeting house. We think the campmeeting will be the means of adding others to the church who shall be saved. We felt sorry that it was not our privilege to remain and enjoy the meeting through the week, beginning June 22nd, but we were obliged to leave on that day (Monday), for Dubuque. Brn. Deyo, Chandler, Kenney, Gibson, Buck, and others were present to assist in declaring the word of life. They are true men, doing a good work, whose labors are very much blest by the Lord.

We are satisfied that more can be accomplished in the West with a given amount of labor, than in the East. The field is great, the call earnest, and we hope some will feel it duty to go and lend a helping hand. Who will go?

ORDINATION. Bro. D. Mathewson, of Sandy Hill, N. Y., was ordained to the work of the ministry on the evening of June 16th, at Springfield, Mass. Ordaining prayer by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, right hand of fellowship by Eld. J. Hemenway, charge by Eld. R. E. Ladd.

ISN'T IT TRUE?

We think but few, who use it, are aware how much injury they are receiving from chewing, smoking, or snuffing tobacco. Neither are they aware how offensive it is to those who do not use it; for if they were, we feel sure they would quit it at once to please their friends, even if there was no other reason; but when we consider its injurious effects upon the physical, intellectual and moral constitution of man, there are reasons for breaking this bad habit which should lead every one to bid it an eternal farewell.

In one of our exchanges an able writer, who makes no profession of religion, when contrasting the moral effects "of liquor or beer drinking and the use of tobacco," says, "the latter at least is the equal in its immoral tendency to any other bad habit. Millions are the unconscious criminals, and millions the unconscious, innocent sufferers. Thousands are, day by day, wearing their lives and health away, as well as that of those to whom they are the most intimately related."

We are most fully satisfied that this is true. We are glad to find the attention of our Brn. and Srs. is being called to this snbject, and that many have already broken off from the bad habit, and now feel much better than when they used it. Let others follow their example.

THE MONEY STANDARD.

There have been several intimations that Napoleon III. is intending to make an effort to establish a uniform standard of weights, measures and coins in all parts of the world. Of course he will wish to have his accepted as the standard. This is a very important and significant move on his part. We will watch for his success.

In the Chicago Tribune of June 22nd, we find it stated that there is a "proposition pending before Congress to give the assent of the United States to a coinage of international value, of which the French franc is to be the unit."

☞ In the "Report" of Conn. conference, in Crisis of May 20th, the Secretary would correct for Bro. Potter the following: Instead of "fifty" being converted, as the Secretary reports, that number embraced the Advent faith, most of them being professors.

NEW TRACT.

"Faith illustrated by personal experience and incidental narrations. By M. D. Wellcome." "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen."

This is an interesting tract of some thirty pages. Let it have a wide circulation. Ad- the author, Yarmouth, Me. Also for sale at this office. Price, single copy, eight cents postpaid; twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred. *

THE MILLENNIUM.

This is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. It is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second coming of Christ. For sale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage. Ten copies for $1.00; fifty copies, $4.00.

The Young Pilgrim for July 1st.

The Young Pilgrim for July 1st is out. It is a good number, full of good reading, full of Jesus, and of words of wisdom and salvation. It will please its young readers, and do them good. The following are some of its contents:—

The Two Cities—The Cloud City and the City of Gold; Do I not need Jesus?—an interesting story of Robert, the Sunday School boy; Near to Jesus,—showing John and his teacher knew that each other were living close to Jesus; Come to Jesus now; The right way to begin to be good; Three bad things which we ought to shun,—bad thoughts, bad words, and bad deeds; Christian Courage,—the story of Chrysostom before the Roman Emperor (with a picture); The more beautiful land; Different kinds of givers; A letter from Bennie, the colored orphan boy; Discoveries in Jerusalem; The Band of Hope boy's speech (with a picture); Shun bad company; A column of sweet testimonies in the Young Pilgrim's Love-Feast; A column for the Wee Ones,—Little Ella's talk with Mamma about being saved, and the kingdom of heaven; Bible Questions on Christ's second coming, etc., etc.

Now is a good time to subscribe for The Young Pilgrim. Subscriptions can commence with the July numbers. Over 1800 new subscribers have been received since the 1st of January. Let us keep the ball rolling. For terms see last page. W. B. H.

ROCHESTER.

Still the good work goes on here. Meetings every night, save Saturday. Tent meeting begins June 25th, to continue one month or more. We are getting earnest in this matter. People begin to think eternal life is worth something, when they learn that it is "themselves" that shall live. Members of the different churches are coming in more and more to enjoy our old fashioned Methodist meetings, as they call them. I have invitations from several churches out of the city to occupy their churches whenever I can. We have several preachers among us just ready to graduate, with their sermons all written in the heart, restive to go forth as the fields are ripening for the harvest. O Lord! give them Abraham's faith with the Abrahamic promise, and success is sure. H. PRATT.

NEW HAMPSHIRE QUAR. CONF.

The following report of the business session of our third quarterly conference, held at Sutton, N. H., was forwarded to me by Bro. C. H. Fletcher, Secretary pro tem.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec.

The third quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire was held at Sutton, May 28th, 29th, and 30th. Met for business Saturday, at half past eight o'clock A. M., the President, Elder J. Couch, in the chair. Meeting opened with prayer by Wm. W. Sutherland. The Secretary being absent, Bro. C. H. Fletcher was chosen Sec. pro tem. Members present—J. Couch, D. F. Leavitt, J. Knowles, W. W. Sutherland, B. P. Manning, J. Kimball, F. Nelson, C. H. Fletcher. Conference listened to the report of the committee who were appointed to investigate and settle certain troubles existing in the church at Manchester, N. H. By vote the report was accepted.

Voted, That action in relation to the case in question be postponed until the next annual session of conference in relation to church order and discipline. Elds. J. Couch and C. H. Fletcher were chosen as that committee.

Voted, To adjourn without date.

C. H. Fletcher, Sec'y pro tem.

P. S. There was preaching during the hours of worship by Brn. J. Couch, J. Knowles, D. F. Leavitt, and C. H. Sweet. Sunday P. M. Bro. Frank Nelson of Sutton, N. H., was set apart to the work of the gospel ministry by the imposition of hands and prayer, and is commended to the faithful in Christ wherever his lot may be cast. Bro. Couch and others officiated in the ordination service. After the P. M. service a large company sat down and partook of the Lord's Supper.

This conference will long be remembered by the church and friends in Sutton. The divine presence of the Master was there, and many were blest. A. W. S.

QUAR. CONFERENCE REPORT.

The fourth quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference convened at Whitefield, June 12th and 14th inclusive. A business session of the conference was called by the President, Sat., June 13th, at 9 o'clock A. M. Meeting opened with prayer by Bro. Chas. Piper. The following members were present at the opening of the meeting: John Couch, Chas. Piper, E. Moulton, and A. W. Sibley. On motioo, the Secretary read the report of the second quarterly session, held at Manchester, N. H., which was adopted.

On motion of A. W. Sibley, Bro. Nathan Wheeler, formerly of Cabot, now of Whitefield, became a member of the conference. The minutes of the third quarterly session held at Sutton were not received in season to be brought before the conference. The following resolution was unanimously passed:

Resolved, That the Secretary be empowered to write an appeal to the brethren in New Hampshire in relation to holding protracted meetings and making a missionary effort in the State. Adjourned without date.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec'y.

P. S. This meeting was characterized by a deep devotional feeling from its commencement, and it increased in interest until its close. We think it was productive of great good both to the people in Whitefield and those that came from a distance.

The Methodists kindly offered us their house on Lord's day, it being more commodious for large congregations than the Advent church, which we gratefully accepted. A. W. S.

☞ As Paul shook off the viper, feeling no harm, so will all true servants of God be able to shake off the vipers of slander that may sometimes fasten upon them, and stand before God and the world with an unimpeachable moral character; while a base character, however nice its coverings, will in time receive its deserved exposure and infamy.

BIDDEFORD CONFERENCE.

Our conference commenced on the evening of the 17th ult., in the chapel of the Second Advent society in Biddeford, as appointed. This is a working, sacrificing, consequently a living, growing church. Our first was a prayer and conference meeting, spirited and good; the Lord's blessing rested upon us, and continued with us during the week. Several of the ministers were present. Brn. York, Goud, W. P. Mitchell, Peter Libby, and I. C. Wellcome, within the limits of the conference, were in attendance at different stages of the meeting, and Brn. T. Rhines of Augusta, and Jas. Young of Lynn, Mass., who aided in preaching the word.

As we had no special business brought before the conference for action, our time was all spent in preaching and in social meetings. The sweet, heavenly, uniting Spirit of the Lord was truly manifest in our meeting, and made it a precious season of communion with each other. Brethren and sisters came from Portland, Casco, Poland, Limington, Hollis, Scarboro, Kennebunk, and Gorham, and enjoyed one more precious privilege of hearing and speaking of the blessed hope of Jesus' soon coming. Six happy converts were baptized Sunday, and the Lord's Supper shared by a large number of believers who expect to meet soon in the kingdom of God.

THE SICK HEALED.

It is the children of God only who expect favors at his hand, and it is recorded for their encouragement that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick"; also, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do; that the Father may be glorified in the Son."

During our conference, held in Bristol, Sister Owen of New Britain caught a severe cold, causing a sore throat and cough, rendering her unable to attend the meetings. A few of God's children bowed before him in prayer, asking in Jesus' name that if it would be for his glory, that Sister Owen might be healed. Before we offered prayer, Sister O. could hardly speak loud, and she looked like a person that had been long sick and suffered a great deal. Father heard our prayer, offered in the name of his Son, and Sr. Owen said, "Praise the Lord! it's gone."

Then returning thanks to our Father, we arose from our knees, and found the soreness gone from her throat, the cough ceased, and we all sang—

"What a friend we have in Jesus,
All our sins and grief to bear,
What a privilege to carry
Every thing to God in prayer.
O what peace we often forfeit,
O what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Every thing to God in prayer."

Glory to God forever! none belongs to us. Now, brethren and sisters scattered abroad, do not be discouraged, but hold on to the promise, for God will hear the prayer of faith.

The living witnesses to the above are Bro. and Sr. Geo. L. White, of Bristol, Ct., Sr. Bingham Taylor, of New Britain, Ct., and the writer, all of whom expect very soon to enter the kingdom, where no one will say, "I am sick." Amen. L. F. MOORE.

For the World's Crisis.

"COME, LORD JESUS."

How eager is this utterance when our loved ones sink and waves of sorrow roll over us, and the Redeemer is the only helper we know.

I stand by the coffin of a beloved brother. Thirty-nine years he has rejoiced in life, during six of which he has bravely struggled with disease. Now his active brain, overwrought with planning deeds of kindness and usefulness, is at rest. His kind eyes open not. His lips, which were wont to speak words of wisdom and truth, now move not. The voices of his wife and little boys are unheard by him; and the wild flowers which his Sunday School have brought do not delight him. I know it will be so till the resurrection. Others who loved life as he did are locked in their graves, and cannot come forth till He who holds the keys comes. Long the saints have yearned for their dead as the thousand-fold cords have been broken. Must the time still be long? Must many more hearts sob and groan and be rent?

The joy of eternity must needs be great to recompense for this night of sorrow. And the joy is sure and near. The time will not be long, my brother Henry, before these sealed lips can joyfully repeat their dying utterance, "Life is a boon."

"We are going, we are going,
Such the music we have heard,
Like the echo of the woodland,
Or the carol of a bird.
With the rosy light of morning
On the calm and fragrant air,
Still it murmurs, softly murmurs,
There will be no parting there."

SONS OF GOD.

BRO. GRANT:—In your reply to Bro. Osman Spicer's question—"Who were the sons of God (Gen. 6:2), in contradistinction from the daughters of men"? you say, "There is some evidence to show that they were 'the angels that kept not their first estate,' but you are not fully satisfied as to who are meant by the sons of God," etc. As I cannot see how earth's sons of dust origin could amalgamate with angelic beings as Byron explains it in his "Cain a mystery," permit me briefly to tell that brother how I understand it.

The sons of God were simply the descendants of Adam through Seth, successor of Abel. "And Adam knew his wife again, and she bore a son and called his name Seth" (or, to call themselves by the name of the Lord,—margin). For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed, instead of Abel, whom Cain slew. Thus in Luke 3d, in the genealogy of our Savior, we trace this seed back before the flood to Seth, the son of Adam, which was the son of God; the other families, including Cain's, outside of that line from Noah to Seth were called, by contradistinction, sons and daughters of men, though of the same origin, and no doubt the Lord prohibited their intermarrying; but they disobeyed; and as they all lived to a great age, and the earth then being in her youth and vigor, not filled with disease as now, they naturally became gigantic in stature, as they could not grow after the flood had torn up and so generally wrecked the planet.

God always commanded his peculiar people to live separate from the world. Ancient Israel was forbidden to take wives from the idolatrous nations around them. So in this dispensation, while it is true that all are the sons and daughters of men, yet we hear the apostle saying, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father to you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Hear the beloved disciple; "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." And again, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." Again, "In this the children of God are manifest and the children of the devil," or of this world.

Thus Jesus became the "Son of man," as well as Son of God, to bring through him many of the sons of men (now by nature children of wrath) to God. Such receive the spirit of adoption and can say, Abba, or "Our Father"; are born again, or begotten again to a lively hope, etc.

When we have the evidence that persons have really become the children of God, are not bastards but sons, it is quite as wrong to marry them and yoke them up with the children of men, of this world, as it was for ancient Israel to unite with the children of Moab or any of the idolatrous nations, though they may be as beautiful and enticing as were the daughters of Cain and other families outside of the regular line of the seed before the flood. THE RETURN OF THE JEWS.

BRO. GRANT:—The following extract does not indicate an emigration of Jews to Palestine. For the last twenty-five years or more there have been those here and there who have clamored loudly that the Jews as a nation would return to their native land and organize themselves into a kingdom previous to the advent of the Messiah, and thus many have looked for a movement of that people in that direction; while every now and then we have heard from the Jewish Rabbis that they have no desire to return to that land, because they can get a better living here. W. C. STONE.

"At the recent laying of the corner stone of a Jewish Temple at Cincinnati, the Rabbi Lilienthal delivered a discourse denying that Israelites of the present age dream any longer about a restoration to Palestine and a Messiah crowned with a diadem of earthly power and glory. 'America,' he said, 'is our Palestine; here is our Zion and Jerusalem; Washington and the signers of the glorious Declaration of Independence, of universal human right, liberty, and happiness, are our Messiah; and the time when their doctrines will be recognized and carried into effect all over the world, is the time so hopefully foretold by our great prophets. When men will live together united in brotherly love, peace, justice, and benevolence, then the Messiah has come indeed, and the Spirit of the Lord will have been revealed to all his creatures.' This is the same Rabbi who preached some time ago in a Christian church."—Boston Transcript, 27th June.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. B. McKee.

BRO. GRANT:—At this place there are a few names of us who appreciate and believe the doctrine as advocated through the columns of your excellent paper. We have read copies of your paper, and we find that it echoes the blessed hope of the immediate appearing and kingdom of our Lord. We are a little band who battle for the truth as it is in Jesus; and the odds are strong against us among the scoffing and the unbelieving; but it causes us to rejoice that there is such a noble sheet as yours devoted to the truth. We feel that we have a strong advocate, a "witness" in your paper, that those who free themselves from the trammels of prejudice are unable to refute or gainsay; a witness that spreads joy and gladness among those who are daring to be in the right with two or three, and one that dispels the thick clouds that shroud in gloom and mystery God's holy will to man.

Let us, whenever occasion affords an opportunity, warn our fellow beings of the speedy coming of Him whom they are now refusing to permit to reign over them; for at his coming every knee shall bow to him. Brethren and sisters, let us not be idle while so many of God's dear creatures are slumbering and sleeping, unconscious that they are in danger of being overtaken as by a thief in the night.

Is it not a glorious thought that he will come again to them who look with longing eyes for his coming; but there is no promise of salvation to those who are living and not looking for him. A little while longer, and he will come; for "he that shall come will come and will not tarry." A little while to bear the toil, endure the pain of being laughed to scorn, and then the glory that shall follow. Then let us lift up our heads, for our redemption draweth nigh. We shall soon receive the prize if we run with patience the race that is set before us to the end. Your brother in the Lord, JOHN B. MCKEE.
Mechanicsburg, Ill.

From Bro. G. A. Streeter.

BRO. GRANT:—The grove meeting at Charlton was a good one. This fine grove is as pleasant as any we ever saw. Bro. L. Boutell was there with his "good religion," which was well mixed in with our doctrines. He did most of the preaching. But few around there came out, as it was a driving time with farmers. They thought they would attend to farms first, then go to meeting on Sunday; but it rained then, and they were disappointed, as many will be at the last day. O that people would see the importance of obeying now. Now is all the time that God has given to man. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all things else will be added."

The way is prepared for more labor, if time lasts. Three were baptized. Bro. D. O. Hopkins was with us the last two days, and helped in the meetings. Much good seed was sown, and may it find lodgment in many hearts. Thy Bro. in the truth,
GEO. A. STREETER.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. J. T. Briggs, Bridgewater, Vt., writes: "For several months I have been unable to labor for the support of my family. It seems to be my lot, with many others, to suffer affliction; but, thank God, these light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

"To the brothers and sisters in B. and vicinity who have administered to my temporal needs, I would say, may the Lord bless and save you from the evils of these last days, and give you everlasting life in his kingdom. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'

"I have been a reader of the Crisis for some time; and since I have been unable to attend where God's dear children meet, it has been a great comfort to me."

Bro. Isaac White, East Andover, N. H., writes:—"Bro. Grant;—You know that in olden times there was a cry made, 'Come over and help us.' I feel like making that cry now. Here are precious souls out of Christ, perishing for the bread of life, and no one to administer it to them. Will some good faithful servant of our soon coming Lord come and declare the truth before the unbelieving? What is done must be done quickly! Pray for us."

Bro. G. W. Howard, Stowe, writes:—"The truth is but little known here and but little regarded where it has been preached; but all things that now exist will soon be changed. Jesus is near. O glorious hope! Soon will that day dawn. Jesus is coming. I long for that day, and by the grace of God will endure to the end. Brethren, be faithful; gird on the whole armor; fight manfully the good fight of faith; look for, long for, and love the appearing of Jesus. This present year may reveal the Son of man. We know he is near."

Sr. N. M. Thomas, Fairhaven, Mass., writes:—"It becomes us as a christian people, living so near that grand and awful event—the coming of our blessed Savior—to be very careful how we improve the gifts which God has bestowed upon us; and these, if rightly used, will prove to us the joys of an eternal home. We are all apt to think that individually we can do nothing; but let us improve our gifts, be they ever so small, remembering that our Father has called us into his vineyard to work; for only the faithful laborers will receive everlasting life."

Sr. M. F. Athorn, South Elliott, Me., writes, March 23d:—"The Lord has blessed us wonderfully under the persevering and much esteemed labors of Bro. Brown. In the morning he has sowed the seed, in the evening he has withheld not his hand, but has sent it broadcast through this community. And now we see the labor has not been in vain in the Lord. Since Jan. 26th over thirty have been brought from nature's darkness into the liberty of the children of God. Praise God for the spirit of adoption."

THE KINGDOM AND REIGN OF CHRIST.

TESTIMONY OF BAPTIST DIVINES.

In their Confession of Faith, presented to Charles II., A. D. 1660, and signed by forty-one elders and deacons, they say:—

"We believe that there will be an order in the resurrection. Christ is the first fruits, and then next, or after, they that are Christ's at his coming; then, or afterward, cometh the end. Concerning the kingdom and reign of our Lord Jesus Christ, as we do believe that, at the time appointed of the Father, he shall come again in power and great glory; and that at or after his coming the second time, he will not only raise the dead, and restore the world, but will also take to himself his kingdom, and will, according to the Scriptures, reign on the throne of his Father David, on Mount Zion, in Jerusalem, forever.

"We believe that the kingdom of our Lord will be a universal kingdom, and that in this kingdom the Lord Jesus Christ himself will be alone, visible, supreme Lord and King of the whole earth.

"We believe that as this kingdom will be universal, so it will be also an everlasting kingdom, that shall have no end, nor cannot be shaken; in which kingdom the saints and faithful in Christ Jesus shall receive the end of their faith, even the salvation of their souls; where the Lord is they shall be also.

"We believe that the New Jerusalem that shall come down from God out of heaven, when the tabernacle of God shall be with men, and he will dwell among them, will be the metropolitan city of this kingdom, and will be the glorious place of residence of both Christ and his saints forever, and will be so situated as that the kingly palace will be on Mount Zion, the holy hill of David, where his throne was."—Crosby's History of the Baptists.

Dr. Cumming.—The report has been going the round of the papers that this well-known preacher has materially changed his views as to the times in which we are living, and now regards the close of this dispensation as perhaps millions of years in the future. But a letter from him, published in the London Daily Telegraph, contradicts this as a forgery and a falsehood, and asserts that he firmly adheres to what has been the tenor of his teachings all along.—Prophetic Times.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

Paris, June 23. La Liberte publishes a report that Menotti Garibaldi is raising a body of volunteers to make another attack on Rome.

At a public banquet in Civita Vecchia Gen. Dumont, Commander of the French forces in the Pontifical States, in a speech declared that France would never abandon the Holy Father.

Belgrade, June 23. Milan IV., the new Prince of Servia, has arrived in this city from Paris. He is accompanied by Councilor Ristish and by his tutor. The Prince is received with the greatest enthusiasm by all classes of people. He was met at the gates of the city by the principal officers of the Principality and conducted to the cathedral amid acclamations of the multitude who lined the streets. At the conclusion of the grand and imposing ceremonies at the church the Prince was escorted to the palace, where he is now installed. Alexander Kara Georgevitch indignantly repels certain insinuations which have been circulating against him, and denies that he had any connection with or knowledge of the plot for the assassination of the late Prince Michael.

Berlin, June 23. It is reported that the American Minister has signified his intention of being present in Worms at the celebration of the reformation and unveiling of the statue of Luther.

Rome, June 23. A Consistory was held yesterday, at which many new Bishops were appointed. The Holy Father delivered two separate allocutions in the Consistory—one concerning a Papal bull, calling a General Council of the Roman Catholic Church, and the other on the present state of religion in the Empire of Austria.

London, June 24. Sunday next has been appointed as a day of Thanksgiving throughout Great Britian for the success of the Abyssinian expedition.

London, June 24. The Pope declares that in allocution on the state of religion in Austria, the Concordat should have been regarded by Austria as perpetual in effect, and he warns all persons who approve of the laws recently passed by the Reichsrach concerning the press, religious toleration, civil marriages and public education to beware of the pains and penalties attached to the violations of the sacred rights of the Church. On the occasion of the delivery of this allocution, the Pope announced that he had granted a general pardon and amnesty to those who invaded the State's church last year, with a few specified exceptions.

Vienna, June 24. The Reichsrath has adjourned until the first day of November. Before the adjournment the Prime Minister, Baron Von Beust, assured the members that threats of the Bishops would not hinder the rigid enforcement by the Government of the law in regard to the confessional.

Worms, June 24. Extensive preparations are being made in this city for the forthcoming celebration of the Reformation and the ceremonies attending the unveiling of the statue of Martin Luther. The principal streets, squares and historic places are to be decorated with triumphal arches. All Protestant denominations will unite in the celebration. Crowds of visitors from every part of Germany are pouring into the city and a great number of foreigners, the majority of whom are Americans, arrive by every train. The Roman exiles at Perugia have sent their congratulations to the managers of the festival.

Worms, June 25. The statue of Martin Luther was inaugurated to-day in the presence of a vast concourse of people from all parts of Europe and America. The King of Prussia and the Crown Prince witnessed the scene. When the statue was unveiled salvos of artillery were fired, and as soon as the applause of the people had subsided a hymn was sung by several thousand voices with immense effect.

London, June 26. Prince Alfred has arrived in England and is now at Windsor.

Lisbon, June 26. A general amnesty has been declared in favor of those persons who participated in the political riots and disturbances last winter.

DOMESTIC.

New York, June 23. The Brooklyn Union says the seventeen year locusts have within the past few days made their appearance, the trees in the woods at White Post, about a mile west of Jamaica, being literally covered with them, and more are coming out of the ground. Advices from the east end of the island state there are millions of them in the vicinity of Patchougue and Farmingdale. The noise made by these insects is perfectly deafening, and can be heard for the distance of half a mile, and resembles very much the noise made by a mowing machine when at work. They devour everything green that comes in their way, and great fear is entertained that the growing crops will be destroyed by them.

New York, June 24. Later advices from the Upper Missouri river state that the Indians were very hostile. They had killed several wood choppers and burned all the wood on the banks of Yellow Stone river, from its mouth to Fort Benton. At the mouth of Milk river, the steamer Octavia, on her passage, received three wood choppers. The Indians had attacked their party and killed three of their number. Several Indians were killed.

At the mouth of the Surarias river a party of warlike Sioux were met with a large lot of fine horses. They said that they intended to steal all the horses in the country, kill all the wood choppers and burn all the wood piles, and thus keep all boats away.

New York, June 24. Haytien advices via Havana state that Salnave had ordered an exchange of prisoners at Cape Haytien, as he wishes to prevent the population from revolting. He threatens to bombard the city rather than let the insurgents get possession, and he threatens the same thing if any foreigners are caught introducing warlike material or stores, and he has so notified foreign consuls. It is stated that his army consisted of only 17 men and 300 Cyprians. Salnave insults all foreigners but Americans, and an English bearer of dispatches was maltreated by him and afterwards put in prison.

General Faubat attacked Fort Alexander for four days, and 40 of his men were killed or wounded. Among the latter was General Narcisse.

Salnave refuses all parley, and is determined not to relinquish the Presidency.

Detroit, June 25. Rev. Dr. Duffield died this afternoon, aged seventy-six years. While addressing the Christian Convention last night he was prevented from concluding his remarks by what was supposed to be but a temporary indisposition, but the attack proved fatal.

New York, June 26. The funeral of Heber Kimball was attended at Salt Lake yesterday by several thousand persons. The Tabernacles and other buildings were draped in mourning.

New York, June 27. Port au Prince advices state that the Insurgents, now besieging that capital, are not disposed to renew their attack on the fortifications.

The peasants on the plains of Culdesac are all armed, and have proclaimed in favor of President Salnave.

The telegraphic advices from Mexico City dated June 15, state that Juarez remained firm in his refusal to change his Cabinet. Romero has been ordered home from Washington. He has informed the English bondholders that their negotiations with Maximilian have annulled all obligations on the part of Mexico.

There is no cordiality between the American Legation and President Juarez, owing to the protection of Europeans in the American Consulate.

Havana, June 26. A battle had taken place between the Mexican National forces and the revolutionists under Arisolano. Reviera, Commander of the Government forces, was lassoed and killed during the engagement, but the Juarists claim the victory. The band of revolutionists, commanded by Guillottis, has gained a success over the forces sent out against them in Guanajuato. The revolutionary movement at Serra Gordo was increasing—the leaders had offered the forces to General Escobedo.

The official journal of Galisco sees in the condemnation of the Governor of that State by the National Congress an attack upon State sovereignty which threatens the existence of republican institutions. A revolution was expected to break out in that State in consequence of this treatment.

New York, June 29. A Bowling Green, Ky. special says that Nathan Damson, a returned Union soldier, was murdered near there on Saturday by the Ku Klux Klan. He was living quietly at his home, unconscious of danger. The assassins went to his house, called him to the door and fired a volley at him, killing him instantly, and dangerously, if not mortally wounding his wife, who ran to his assistance.

The assassins are the terror of this entire county. The life of no one who is suspected of Unionism is safe. Not a day passes but some deed of horror is perpetrated by them.

☞ Morris Jacob Raphall, the eminent Rabbi, preacher of the great synagogue at New York, and the author of various learned works much prized by the people of his nation, died at New York on Tuesday, in the eightieth year of his age. He was a native of Stockholm in Sweden, and came to the United States in 1849.

☞ Daood Pacha, a Catholic Armenian, has been placed in the Turkish Cabinet.

Items.

☞ It is estimated that $13,000 persons are reached every year by the hand of private or official charity in New York.

☞ Misery and famine are raging in the Castillian provinces of Spain, and many poor families are driven to the most cruel privations, such as living on roots, lizards and other reptiles. All the farmers have dismissed their servants and are killing their cattle in order to save the expense of keeping them.

☞ Mrs. Eunice Warner, formerly of Great Barrington, Mass., became a mother at 13 years, a grandmother at 27, a great-grandmother at 40, a great-great grandmother at 56, a great-great-great grandmother at 74 years, after which she lived several years.

☞ A new idea in the way of street railways has been introduced into Paris. There is but one rail, and the carriage has three wheels, two of which roll upon the ground, the third upon the rail. It is said to work well.

☞ Western papers say that trees twenty feet high and two feet in diameter grow on the prairies in ten years' time.

☞ The anniversary of the death of Count Cavour was celebrated at Turin on the 6th inst. with great solemnity.

☞ Full details of the riot between blacks and whites at Houston, Texas, on the 15th, are given in the Houston papers. They show that there was the most intense excitement, and but for the exertions of cool-headed and right minded citizens there would have been a fearful conflict and serious loss of life.

☞ Of the 124,091 children between the ages of five and twenty reported in Minnesota, the Sunday School Association of that State claims 63,000 Sunday School scholars.

☞ On June 12 the statue to the memory of the late Mr. Cobden was lifted to its pedestal on the site granted by the Vestry of St. Pancras, at the entrance to Camden-town. It stands nearly nine feet in hight, upon a pedestal of some fifteen or sixteen feet, and has been cut out of a solid block of fine Sicilian marble of seven tons.

☞ Large numbers of Paraguayan women are now fighting in the ranks against the allied armies.

☞ The Prince Michael, whose death was reported by the cable, was divorced from his wife for the same reason that Napoleon repudiated the Empress Josephine.

☞ Thunder Springs, in Upson county, Ga., is a great curiosity. It is located in the wildest part of the mountains. It is about five feet in diameter, and so deep that no sounding has ever reached the bottom. Such is the force with which the water rises that a human body cannot sink, but is buoyed up in a standing position.

☞ Gardening for ladies: Make up your beds early in the morning; sew buttons on your husband's shirts; do not rake up any grievances; protect the young and tender branches of your family; plant a smile of good temper in your face, and carefully root out all angry feelings—and expect a good crop of happiness.

☞ The Navajoe Indians in New Mexico allow women to speak and vote in their councils on equal terms with the men.

☞ The Holy Father, desiring on the occasion of the first communion of the Prince Imperial of France, to bestow a special mark of benevolence upon his august godson, sent to him a precious reliquary surmounted by an antique cameo of rare beauty accompanied by a touching autograph letter.

☞ A Rutland, Vt., man says that a wash made of one part of common soft soap and ten parts of water will kill the worms that trouble currant and gooseberry bushes.

☞ New Haven gentleman the other day found within the pulp of an orange he was eating, a second perfect orange—one of nature's freaks.

☞ The Rev. Mr. Punshon, being requested to address the Methodist Conference at one of their recent sittings, said: Speech is silver, silence is golden, says the proverb. I do not happen to have any small change about me this morning. Will you accept the gold?

☞ Cardinal D'Andrea before dying employed his last hours composing a bitter letter such as Cardinal never before penned, denouncing the Court of Rome, its policy and system. He also predicted that the Pope would follow him to the grave in a short time.

☞ The reports of the crop prospects in Ireland this season are quite cheering.

☞ It is said that when Bismark learned that France had sent several skillful engineers to study the fortresses of the Rhine, that he at once dispatched the drawings of these strongholds to the French Government.

☞ The present graduating class at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct., numbers twenty-three. It started with thirty members.

☞ Two young ladies from Worcester and one from Webster were lately made "Sisters of Mercy" at Manchester, N. H.

☞ Ninety-three inches of snow fell in Maine during the past winter.

☞ The crops throughout the whole of Kansas are reported to be the best ever known in the State, the corn and wheat crops being particularly fine. The farmers are in good spirits, and expect to complete their wheat harvest by the end of the present week. It is thought that the crop will average thirty bushels to the acre throughout the State.

☞ Protestant places of worship are increasing in all parts of France. In 1825 there were but two in Paris; now there are fifty-three.

☞ The Chinese have a saying that an unlucky word dropped from the tongue cannot be brought back by a coach and six horses.

☞ There is no garden on earth where there is not to be found forbidden fruit to test our virtues, the serpent to beguile, and the tree of life to encourage.

☞ He is the best scholar who hath learned to love well.

☞ The way to have your secrets kept is to keep them yourself.

Haymaking.—As the season for making hay is approaching, we publish the following discreet advice to farmers, from the Ohio Farmer.

"Don't dry your hay too much. Hay may be dried till it is as worthless as straw. As a good coffee-maker would say, 'Don't burn your coffee, but brown it;' so we say, 'Don't dry your hay, but cure it.' Our good old mothers, who relied upon herb-tea instead of 'pothecary medicine,' gathered their herbs when in blossom, and cured them in the shad. This is the philosophy of making good hay. Cut in the blossom, and cure in the shade. The sugar of the plant, when it is in bloom, is in the stalk, ready to form the seeds. If the plant is cut earlier, the sugar is not there; if later, the sugar has become converted to woody matter. Hay should be well wilted in the sun, but cured in the cock. Better to be a little too green than too dry. If, on putting it into the barn, there is danger of 'beating in the mow,' put on some salt. Cattle will like it none the less."

Oldest Trees in the World. The cypress of Somma in Lombardy, Italy, is perhaps the oldest tree on record. It was known to be in existence in the time of Julius Cæsar, 42 years before Christ, and is, therefore, more than 1900 years old. It is 106 feet in height, and 20 feet in circumference at one foot from the ground. Napoleon, when laying down the plan for his great road over the Simplon, a port on one of the Alps, diverged from a straight line to avoid injuring this tree. The honor of superior antiquity, however, is claimed by some in behalf of the immense and venerable tree in Calaveras county, California, which is supposed, from the number of concentric circles in the trunk, to be 2565 years old.

Sea Birds.—The question is often asked, where do sea birds obtain fresh water to slake their thirst? But we have never seen it satisfactorily answered till a few days ago. An old skipper with whom we were conversing on the subject, said that he had frequently seen these birds at sea, far from any land that could furnish them with water, hovering round and under a storm cloud, chattering like ducks in a hot day at a pond, and drinking in the drops of rain as they fell. They will smell a rain squall a hundred miles, or even further off, and scud for it with almost inconceivable swiftness. How long sea birds can exist without water is only a matter of conjecture; but probably their powers of enduring thirst are increased by habit, and possibly they can go without it for many days, if not for several weeks.

Work.—Work never killed or hurt any one who knew how to go at it. See what order there is in nature—what sublimity and ease! How still, yet how rapid the growth of the plant. How peacefully the stars of midnight seem encamped, yet before morning whole armies of these wonderful balls of earth have been carried out of our sight. So much is achieved because all is done in order, at the right time, intently, deliberately, yet without hesitation, friction, or indecision.

Volunteers Wanted!!

Wanted on the Springfield Camp-ground, eight or ten brethren who will give their labors towards fitting up the ground, and getting things in readiness for the meeting on the 24th of August. The committee have been to great expense in fitting up the buildings, etc., and are coming short of funds to complete the work. Therefore we call for help, and some who cannot give money, can give their time and labor, which is as good as money for the purpose. We want quite a number of men who love to work, on the ground by the tenth of Aug., to remain and work until the meeting. Send in your names to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., as soon as possible, that we may know in season how many we have. Provision will be made to board and sleep on the ground. In this way you can have your board through the meeting, and help us much in the week. Who will come?

Per order of Building Committee,
J. Hemenway.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting will commence Monday, July 27th, and continue over the following Sunday. Ample arrangements will be made to accommodate all with board and lodging (they bringing their bedding.) Bro. E. Bellows will be on the ground with his large new tent, which will seat nearly one thousand persons.

Now, brethren and sisters from abroad, and the regions round about, come to this gospel feast, for we are anticipating the blessing of the Lord with his pilgrims, as in years past. Bro. Geo. T. Adams will probably secure a reduction of fare on the Old Colony and Cape Cod railroad for those who come through Boston. For the committee,

Henry V. Davis.

Mass. Quar. Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be holden with the church in Savoy, commencing July 1st, holding over Sunday. In behalf of the church, I cordially invite all to come, and come prepared to labor for God and his truth. Our work is almost done. Let us gird ourselves for the last hour of conflict, and be prepared to stand when the Master shall appear.

Our chapel will be dedicated in connection with this meeting July 4th, at two o'clock P. M. Arrangements have been made to entertain all. Those coming by railroad will stop at South Adams, where there will be a team in readiness to convey passengers to the meeting at twelve o'clock M., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. All will see the necessity of taking the early trains, in order to connect with our team arrangements, which will leave the depot at noon. Those coming from Boston will arrive in season by taking the first train, and change cars at Pittsfield.

In behalf of the church, E. McCulloch.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting commence at Wednesday Hill, Lee., N. H., on land of Bro. Leonard Wiggins, (near where the barn meeting has been held for the last two years), on Saturday, July 4th, 1868, and hold over the Sunday following, and as much longer as may be thought proper. We have engaged the new tent in Bro. D. M. Leavitt's charge. We hope there will be a general gathering of our brethren and sisters. The blessed work has begun.

It is expected during this meeting that the ordinance of baptism will be attended to. Come, you who have been staggering at this command, and go forward with the young converts and be baptized.

Those going from Mass. will leave the cars at Newmarket Depot, and thence by conveyance to the ground in Lee, about three and a half miles. Those coming from Great Falls and Dover, will leave the cars at Durham Depot, thence to the ground, two and a half miles. Those coming to remain through the meeting must bring some bedding; but the brethren and sisters in the place will do all they can, no doubt, for their hearts are open. For the brethren, Geo. H. Churchill.

Fourth of July Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Exeter, Me., on the fourth of July, and continue over the Sabbath, in the old meeting-house, which is now being repaired. We give a hearty invitation to brethren who live in other places to attend this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of the Lord, ready to work for the Master. We some expect that a young brother from Philadelphia will be with us. We would be glad to meet other servants of the Lord who have the word of God to preach to the people. There will be homes enough for all who wish to attend. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting. Let us see who loves the cause of God more than pleasure. The Lord is at hand. Awake, awake, put on thy beautiful garments, O Zion! Allen Damon.

Fourth of July Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a meeting in Hopkinton, N. H., in the grove where the meeting was held a year ago, Saturday, July 4th. Eld. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present, and brethren far and near are invited to attend. Pray God for his blessing on the meeting. The grove is about nine miles from Concord, two miles directly south of Hopkinton village. For the brethren,

Jos. H. Tewksbury.

Grove Meeting.

A grove meeting will be held in Kingston, N. H., July 4th and 5th (Saturday and Sunday.) Elds. Pearson, Cunningham and others, are expected to be present. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of adjacent towns to be with us. The meeting will be held in the accustomed place, near Bro. Gale's. W. B. Kinney.

"Antioch Tent"

Deerfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., July 8th to 13th. Eld. J. V. Himes and others will help.

Dearborn, Wayne Co., Mich., July 15th to 22d. Eld. W. L. Himes and others will help.

Notice for Dauson Centre and Owano will be given in time.

Preparations Needed. A pole twenty-eight feet long and three and a half inches through at the small end. Thirty-four hard wood stakes, three feet and three inches. Lumber and stakes to seat about five hundred persons. Four kerosene lamps. Some one to help guard the tent.

J. M. Snook.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in Savoy, Mass., to commence Wednesday, July 1st, and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see many of the lovers of Jesus and his coming at this meeting. Come, leave your work, brethren, and come to this meeting all ready to work in harmony with Christ. E. Owen, Secretary.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. Smith.

The Maine Tract Fund.

Wm. H. Mitchell, R. R. York, S. K. Partridge, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. Libby, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,

No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

ANNA E. SMITH, Superintendent and Manager.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. Boutell.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Narmore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

For the World's Crisis.

HYMN.

Let every mortal tongue awake,
And loud the Savior's praises speak;
Proclaim the news of God's free grace,
And boldly run the christian race.

Deny thyself, take up thy cross,
And purge thy soul from sin and dross;
Stand up for Christ, the truth declare,
And then the crown of life you'll wear.

When Satan tempts thee by the way,
Then hold thy shield, and watch and pray;
His darts, though swift, will harmless fall,
If you obey the Savior's call.

By fervent prayer from hour to hour,
His wiles you'll foil, defeat his power,
And drive the tempter from your path,
Though he may rage and vent his wrath.

His time is short, but still devours
As through the earth he loudly roars,
But knoweth well that man's great woes,
Himself and Death, are conquered foes.

For Jesus bruised the serpent's head,
When he arose from 'mong the dead;
And will destroy in lake of fire
This arch old foe and first great liar.

Then courage take, dear saints of God,
Fear not his wiles, nor earth's cold sod;
For Jesus soon will come to reign,
When we shall dwell in Eden's plain.

Peru, Ind. H. H. HALL.

THE SPIRITUAL BODY.

Here we keep to the simple method of the Holy Spirit speaking through the pen of Paul. By so doing we avoid that doubtfulness and vagueness which overshadows many a christian heart, leading it to ask with the unreasoning impatience of some in Paul's day, "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?"

To say that there will be no connection between the natural buried body and the spiritual heavenly body of the christian, is to deny the resurrection of Jesus; is to deny that there was any connection between the body which was laid in the tomb of Joseph and the "glorious" body which Christ now has. "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Christ risen." "Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." The teaching is, that in the resurrection of Jesus, "they that are Christ's" have both the assurance and type of their own resurrection. And since the resurrection of Christ consisted unquestionably in this, that the body which was laid in the sepulchre came forth from the sepulchre, so will the resurrection of his followers include the coming forth from the grave of their buried bodies. Be it specially noted that it is "this corruptible" body, (not the incorruptible spirit) that must "put on incorruption." It is "this mortal" that must "put on immortality." It is what is sown in weakness and dishonor that must be raised in glory and power.

But beside those who openly denied the resurrection, there were those in Corinth who hesitated to receive the doctrine because it was such a strange thing to believe; so wonderful, so mysterious, so incomprehensible. They could not understand how such a thing could be. They said that there was nothing like it in the world. And so, instead of receiving the fact on the testimony of Christ and the fact of Christ's resurrection on the testimony of the apostles, they worried themselves and others by foolish and unreasonable questionings about the method of the fact. "How are the dead raised up? With what body do they come? What is the form, structure, appearance of the spiritual body, and how is it evolved from the natural body?"

The answer is: We do see something like it, see it continually and all around us. Everywhere we see that death is the antecedent, condition and preparative to a higher life. "That thou sowest is not quickened except it die." "Except it die;" that is, in no other way can the thought of God concerning the future of that seed be realized and understood. You must drop your seed into the ground. In like manner, death is the ordained condition of the bodily life of the christian; so that instead of being staggered at the death of believers, we ought rather to be enlightened, informed and cheered by it. Instead of perplexity, we should derive from it argument and hope for our own resurrection and continued existence. And not only for our continued existence, but existence in a better and wider sphere.

For, what is it that you sow and what comes of your sowing? You sow, not the plant itself, but only the seed. That is what you do. But now, when you have done that, what does God do? He gives to that sown seed a body. You sow the tulip-bulb. God gives the tulip. You sow the acorn. God gives, not other acorns like it, but the oak. You sow, not "that body that shall be," but "bare, naked grain," and then "God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him and to every seed its own body." The seed is not, in the higher view, for other seeds, but for the "body," the plant, the flower, the tree—not for the fruit save as that fruit may serve to produce other trees. Such creatures of want are we, so pressed are we by bodily needs, that we have come to regard wheat, for example, solely for the kernel which is least attractive in point of comeliness. The wheat stalk ministers to our love of grace and symmetry, while the "bare grain" serves only an animal and perishable nature. It is to gratify and cultivate our æsthetic susceptibilities that God sets the lily in an array of beauty which exceeds the glory of Solomon.

"A body as it hath pleased him." You can know the pleasure of God respecting the shape, size, appearance of any plant only as you bury the seed. Here is an entirely new seed; a seed that no one has ever seen before. You ask, "With what body will it come?" And if nobody can tell you, you say, "I do not believe it will come at all." But how is that question to be answered? Only in one way, namely, by burying the seed. And you would justly be accounted a "fool" if you quarreled about that or looked for an answer in any other way. Instead of asking any such question, you would sow the seed, and after sowing it you would wait the appointed period of its forth-springing. Only then would you or could you have an answer to that question. It is a question which, in the nature of things, can be answered only by experience. Now, with regard to the spiritual body of the believer, we lack experience and must be without it until the resurrection. That is God's time for the forthcoming of the buried bodies of his saints.

In full faith of the coming of that blessed change and of "the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ," we have buried our departed christian friends. In the same precious faith would we die and be buried. The place where our loved ones lie, and where we shall lie by their side is more to us than a mere charnel-house; more, even, than a field of precious but empty memorials. It holds the precious dust of those dear children of God, whose bodies having once been consecrated temples of the Holy Spirit, raised and fashioned like unto the glorious body of Jesus, shall shine thenceforth with this undimmed and eternal transfiguration in the "kingdom of the Father."—The Advance.

For the World's Crisis.

A WORD!

To the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Connecticut.

So far as I am able to learn, there has been no invitation extended to our conference to hold its third quarterly session with any church. This is partly owing to the old fact that what belongs to all, indefinitely, belongs to no one in particular; and that some who would readily invite the conference, and have abundant means to sustain it, have not supposed there was a demand of the kind made, or that they could have it if they requested.

It is also manifest that some suppose that they and the generality of the brethren will go to Springfield to campmeeting, and the occasion may be a favorable one to attend to the small matter of the Conn. State Conference.

It was supposed by some that the season would be unpropitious to hold a meeting of the kind with a farming population; hence a city or large town was thought to be the better choice. New Britain was mentioned, but the church at New Britain has declined, recommending the conference to hold its meeting at Springfield camp-ground. It will not take long, and the people will be there! Well, the people will enjoy the CAMPMEETING, and we will hasten through the duties of the conference just as we naturally would at the Campmeeting. The benefit to the Advent cause and people of the State will be next to nothing.

Our conference is still in its infancy. It needs favorable circumstances. It must grow with the people. It is of the people, both as to its ministerial and lay position. It will be benefited as a body and flourish as it shall benefit the people. Both will improve or decline together.

To have the Advent conference off in another State, and at a campmeeting, when we should make a meeting of interest, truth and power for several days, is, to me, almost absurd. The Conn. State Conference is to us, as a people, of more importance than a dozen campmeetings at Springfield. That will go on anyhow, and people will attend it from everywhere; but we want to work for a specific object—the promotion of the cause in Conn. I feel that we should work, and this is the object, not merely to go to a great meeting to enjoy ourselves. If I had a tent, or if we could get up a meeting out of doors, we would appoint for a meeting within our own limits. But as it is, we see no other way, at present, but to leave the matter, saying that we will hold the meeting at the campground at Springfield (the day to be appointed), unless sooner called at a more suitable place, of which due notice will be given.

Allow me here to urge the appointment of delegates in season,—no matter how soon! Have it done, whether the conference shall be held at one place or another, and at Springfield just after the 24th of August, or previously. Be sure that you are all ready, and remember that you will find it vastly more inconvenient to go to Springfield, even at the campmeeting, than for ministers and delegates to attend the meeting within our own borders. There is plenty of room for us at home, and I have no doubt of an invitation.

LETTER FROM JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA.

BRO. GRANT:—I left Rochester June 5th, and arrived in New York the next morning at eight o'clock. I purchased a ticket of the Charleston Steamship Company for Jacksonville. They expected to connect with the "Dictator" at Charleston, but the time of sailing was changed the day before we arrived; therefore I had to wait two days in Charleston for the sailing of another line of steamboats that run from Charleston to Picolata on the St. John's river. By this arrangement I had an opportunity of looking around that notorious, dilapidated place. It looks as though it was on the same road as other cursed cities, like Babylon, Tyre, etc. By this disappointment I had the privilege of coming from Charleston by the way of Savannah, or the inland route, which gave me an opportunity of seeing the almost numberless sea islands where the Sea Island cotton is raised, and the oyster beds, and such places of note as Beaufort, Port Royal, Hilton Head, and others, where the war raged; and the stacks of chimneys stand to tell the passers by that the accounts of the many battles and awful destruction, which they may have read about in the past, were not a myth.

I arrived here Saturday, the 13th, in time to fill my appointment on the Sabbath. The church had prepared a place for meeting, and all were glad to have the blessed privilege of hearing again on those truths which had brought them out and separated them from others as a peculiar people. They had kept up three meetings weekly since I had been gone, yet they felt the need of instruction. As in all other places, so here, without it some, especially the younger ones, get cold and wayward. But I preached three times on the Sabbath, and it was a heavenly season. The church was strengthened, and took fresh courage.

The churches here supposed, as we had left and gone home last spring, that the little Advent church would be scattered; and as all of the spirituality there was in this place was among them, that it would be a good time to make a move. So they started meetings, and took much pains to invite in the Advent people to help them. Some went, but it was so different, so stale and lifeless, they could not stand it. They had neglected "the gospel of the kingdom," so the Lord would not bless their labors; but when they heard I was coming back so soon, they were surprised.

How glad I am to be here in this lovely climate again. My health is so much better, and I can endure so much more to preach the everlasting gospel. It is a glorious calling. O for grace and wisdom to guide me in this blessed work. I expect to see great results in this State among all classes from the preaching of this last call of mercy to a doomed world. My faith is strong in the Lord. It is like fire shut up in my bones. Thank the Lord for the witness of the Spirit. I am more and more satisfied that the course Bro. Wilson and myself adopted in presenting this truth to the whites first, is in accordance with the command of Jesus to the disciples, go first to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And be assured the others are not without excuse, for they have been bountifully supplied with tracts and invited to come and hear, and some have done so, and commenced agitating the matter among their own people. Just after I arrived here I met one of the Freedmen, who accosted me:

"Well, Mr. Smith, you have come back again. I glad to see you."

I asked him if he came to meeting when I was here before.

He said "Yes," and he now could read his Bible and understand it, and he had tried very hard to make his brethren see it too. But they opposed him very much. "But," said he, "some have become civilized enough to believe some part of it."

So I find it just what a colored Baptist preacher told me when I was here before, that he had been to hear me with others, and had been very much interested, had received a great deal of light, and they had been discussing the different subjects in their church for two weeks; but he lived and preached over a hundred miles from here, and was about to return home. I gave him a package of tracts, a hymn book, and one of our "covenants," and a sample Crisis. He said he would send and subscribe for the Crisis. The judgment can only reveal the amount of real good that has been done and is being done here and in Lake City, by preaching and circulating tracts, which are read and then sent to different parts of the country.

I leave for Lake City to-morrow, from whence you will hear from me again. Yours in hope, P. A. SMITH.

June 17th.

P. S. Vegetation is three months earlier here than north. Corn is almost ready to harvest; tomatoes, cucumbers, water melons, cabbages four feet across the top of the head from one outside leaf to the other, and berries of different kinds, are in abundance. Irish potatoes have matured and most gone. Figs, peaches, oranges, lemons, and such like, will come next. O what a country! If we had the northern enterprise and wealth here, this would be nearer to Paradise than any place on earth. The evenings and mornings are pleasant and comfortable; the middle of the day is the time to rest from labor. My address will be Lake City, until the middle of September. P. A. S.

WISCONSIN CONFERENCE.

The annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Wisconsin for 1868 was held in connection with the State campmeeting, at Fairfield, Wis., beginning June 1st. Peter W. Hough was elected President, and Wm. Sheldon Secretary of the conference. A business meeting was appointed, consisting of O. S. Knapp, G. G. Godfrey, and Wm. Sheldon, after which the conference proceeded to examine the character of its ministers. No charges preferred against any.

We then listened to a report from ministers and churches, consisting of a mixture of gloom and sunshine. Some ministers had been indolent, and others active, but none more so than Father Hough, whose labors have been blessed. Some churches are flourishing, and others famishing for want of ministerial labor of the right sort.

The report of our Evangelist showed a deficiency in funds. O. S. Knapp, G. W. Barnes, and O. Ryder, were appointed as a financial committee, to whom this and other financial matters might be referred, and O. S. Knapp was appointed Treasurer.

The following brethren were received into the conference, viz., Eld. A. A. Wilbur, and Brn. Philo Hitchcock, T. W. Richards, David Downer, B. Judson, and F. J. Groat—making six new ministers. Also one new church of thirty-six members was received, raised up by Eld. Hough.

A committee of three, consisting of Wm. Sheldon, N. A. Hitchcock, and G. Thomson, were appointed to visit certain ministers not reported in person or by letter.

Wm. Sheldon was chosen by vote of the conference to appoint the quarterly meetings for the coming season.

Voted, To continue the old campmeeting committee another season if time lasts.

During the meeting over fifty entered the service of the Lord, many of them starting in the young people's prayer meeting, held by Eld. Godfrey. Twenty-one were baptized; a hundred and seventy-eight testimonies were given in at the love-feast Sunday morning; one hundred and seventy-two sat down to the Lord's table Sunday night. Most of the preaching was by Eld. Grant. The preaching and the meeting in the main was good.

HACKENSACK, N. J.

BRO. GRANT:—Our quarterly meeting at Hackensack, N. J., on the 14th, was one of interest. About thirty of us went from New York, white and colored. The weather was very fine, and truly we felt the Lord did smile upon us. Our love-feast, which was the first thing in the morning, was indeed a refreshing time; such love and union as is manifested by these dear children is something more than outside show; not in word and tongue, but in deed and in truth. Commenced by breaking of bread one with another; and no one will break with another if there is aught between them, until the difficulty is settled. Would that we could see all that consistent christian feeling manifested among all our white churches, that we see among the colored people.

After the breaking of bread there were testimonies from nearly all the Lord's children who were present, which were very interesting and right to the point. It would have done your heart good to have heard them. Meeting continued about three hours.

At half-past ten o'clock assembled again; listened to a good discourse from Bro. H. L. Hastings. At two o'clock repaired to the water-side, where Bro. H. spoke again for a short time, after which he led nineteen of the Lord's colored children down into the water, and buried them with Christ in baptism. A prettier sight I never witnessed. As he led them out of the water, their faces were lit up with the Holy Spirit, and they gave God the glory. The enemy of all righteousness was busy as usual; he was aware that his craft was in danger, and he was foaming with rage; but the children all looked to the Lord, and victory turned on Zion's side, and they went on their way rejoicing.

At half-past six o'clock Bro. Hastings spoke on the Common, to as many of the white people as were disposed to gather and listen, while most of us went to the little chapel, spent a short time in singing and praying, and listening to the reading of the Scriptures by Sr. Smith, after which Brn. Hastings and Boynton came and laid hands on all the candidates. This was a solemn and interesting part of the ordinance, which being over we all communed around the table of the Lord, which is always a blessed place to the true lover of Jesus, reminding him of the broken body and spilled blood of our Savior, to purchase redemption for us, and pointing forward to the time when the marriage supper of the Lamb will be celebrated, and Jesus will gird himself and serve his people. O! blessed day; we hail thine approach with joy.

After the supper our dear Sister Boynton addressed a few words to the little flock in Hackensack, over whom she has had charge as missionary and school-teacher for a few months past, as she was about to leave them, on account of failing health. Her labors among them have been productive of much good, and they are very strongly attached to her, and could hardly bear the thought of her leaving them, and no doubt their earnest prayers will go up to the throne of grace that her health may be restored that she may return to them once more.

Thus ended the day at Hackensack; a day that will be long remembered by many. Such seasons are blessed; but how much more blessed when all the saints, from every age and clime, will be gathered home, never more to part, out of the reach of the enemy's power. O Lord, hasten the day! M. E. DOW.

June 19th.

"COULDST THOU NOT WATCH ONE HOUR!"

The night is dark: behold the shade was deeper
In the old Garden of Gethsemane,
When that calm voice awoke the weary sleeper,
"Couldst thou not watch one hour alone with me?"

Oh! thou so weary of thy self-denials,
And so impatient of thy little cross,
Is it so hard to bear thy daily trials,
To count all earthly things a gainful loss?

What if thou always suffer tribulation,
And if thy christian warfare never cease?
The gaining of the quiet habitation
Shall gather thee to everlasting peace.

But here we all must suffer—walking lonely
The path that Jesus once himself hath gone;
Watch thou in patience through this hour only,
This one dark hour before the eternal dawn.

The captive's car may pause upon the galley,
The soldier sleep beneath his plumed crest,
And peace may fold his wing on hill and valley,
But thou, O christian! must not take thy rest.

Thou must walk on, however man upbraid thee,
With Him who trod the wine-press all alone;
Thou wilt not find one human hand to aid thee,
One human soul to comprehend thine own.

Heed not the images forever thronging
From out the foregone life thou lovest no more;
Faint-hearted mariner, still art thou longing
For the dim line of the receding shore?

Wilt thou find rest of soul in thy returning
To the old path thou hast so vainly trod;
Hast thou forgotten all thy weary yearning
To walk among the children of thy God?

Faithful and steadfast in their consecration,
Living by that high faith to thee so dim,
Declaring before God their dedication,
So far from thee because so near to him.

Canst thou forget thy christian superscription,
"Behold we count them happy which endure?"
What treasure wouldst thou in the land Egyptian
Repass the stormy water to secure?

Poor wandering soul, I know that thou art seeking
Some easier way, as all have sought before,
To silence the reproachful inward speaking,
Some landward path unto an island shore.

The cross is heavy in thy human measure,
The way too narrow for thy inward pride;
Thou canst not lay thine intellectual treasure
At the low footstool of the Crucified.

Oh! that thy faithless soul one hour only
Would comprehend the christian's perfect life:
Despised with Jesus, sorrowful and lonely,
Yet calmly looking upward in its strife.

For poverty and self-renunciation
Their Father yieldeth back a thousand fold!
In the calm stillness of regeneration
Cometh a joy they never knew of old.

In meek obedience to the heavenly Father,
The weary soul alone can find its peace;
Seeking no aid from any human creature,
Looking to God alone for his release.

And he will come in his own time and power,
To set his earnest-hearted children free;
Watch only through this dark and painful hour,
And the bright morning yet will break for thee.

THE WAR PROSPECT IN EUROP .

Paris is again startled by rumors of an impending war; so, at least, says Le Nord, the Russian organ in Paris, which is generally well informed whenever Russian interests are at stake. The announcement of this paper that war is to break out even before the close of next autumn is certainly as serious as it is unexpected, For many months the political atmosphere in Europe has been uncommonly serene. There was a reorganization of the standing armies in Austria and France, but it has all along been accompanied by so emphatic assurances of peaceful intentions that the belief in a long continuance has evidently gained strength. It may be that the announcement of Le Nord is one of those sensational reports which so frequently turn up on a sudden to disquiet for a few days the money market, and then as suddenly disappear. At all events, the semi-official and usually cautious character of Le Nord will give to the above report a greater significance than is usually attributed to war rumors.

Whenever a war of large dimensions shall break out in Europe, it must arise from one of the two central, still involved questions—the German or the Eastern. The former, for some time, has been almost altogether lost sight of. Prussia has declared that she intends to exercise not the least pressure upon any of the Southern States, and that if Bavaria and Wurtemberg refuse to enter into a closer union with Northern Germany, Prussia will be entirely satisfied with the present arrangement. Apparently the official declarations of Prussia have given entire satisfaction in Paris, and ever since the end of the Luxemburg complication the official papers of both governments have been overflowing with assurances of mutual love and esteem. It is true this state of affairs may suddenly be changed; for the views of two governments on the solution of the German question widely differ. France has never yet renounced its opinion that Prussia has no right to overstep the line of the Maine, and that France has an international right to prevent such a movement. Prussia, on the other hand, while disclaiming any wish to coerce a South German State into a closer union, insists very strongly that the consolidation of Germany is an affair purely German, in which no foreign power has a right to meddle; and that when Prussia can arrange an agreement with any of the South German States, she will do so without any regard to what foreigners may say or think about it. This case may arise at any time. The Grand Duke of Baden is an ardent partisan of union, and the majority of the Diet and of the popular voters agree with him. He smooths the way for the consummation of the Union as rapidly as he can. Whenever he may deem it fit to make a formal application for joining the North German Confederation, there would be a new complication between France and Germany. France is now a much more formidable opponent of Prussia than she was a year ago. The new military organizations have been carried thro', her army in point of numbers being equal to that of the North German Confederation, and a recent dispatch states that the whole French infantry is now supplied with the Chassepot rifle, which Marshal Niel persists in declaring superior to any rifle in use in European armies. But, notwithstanding this military improvement, we believe that France still shrinks from a war with Germany. The proceedings of the Zollverein Parliament, which have just closed, have again proved that even the bitterest enemies of Prussia among the South Germans are ready to fight side by side with her against any foreign foe. The military force of Northern and Southern Germany combined is still superior to that of France, and neither Italy nor Austria, nor any other State, can be relied upon as a trustworthy ally.

We are, therefore, of the opinion that if war clouds should again gather on the horizon of Europe, the Eastern and not the German question is probably the cause. In the Eastern question Russia is still virtually arrayed against Turkey, Austria, France, and England, the alliance of which States would probably be joined by Italy. It required, last year, a very emphatic remonstrance on the part of the Allies to prevent Russia from carrying out her threats against Turkey. Russia yielded for a moment, but that there has not been any notable change in her plans and policy is universally known. Russia does not conceal her continued eagerness to seize the first opportunity for achieving the independence of the Christian provinces of Turkey. Apparently inactive in Europe, she has recently been all the more demonstrative in Asia. After a rest of nearly two years in Central Asia, she has suddenly resumed her march toward the frontier of British India. Once there, she is a formidable foe of Great Britian, and, by fomenting an Indian insurrection, she may reasonably hope to prevent the English Government from rendering any effective aid to Turkey. She has recently obtained supreme influence at the Persian Court, and is goading that Government on to a war against Turkey. Her movements both in Central Asia and in Persia are causing the utmost uneasiness both in Paris and London. The Persians appear to be ready to invade Turkey, as soon as the order is given in St. Petersburg.

It is evident that the successes of the Russians in Asia have greatly changed both the aspect and prospect of the Eastern question. Turkey is now completely encircled by Russia, and it is difficult to see how she could defend herself against a simultaneous rising of the Christian population in Europe and an invasion of the Persians in Asia. Generally, we attribute very little importance to vague reports of an approaching war in Europe; but whether the news of Le Nord is true or untrue, we regard it as unquestionable that the plot in the East thickens, and that a great war for settling the long dispute will at last become unavoidable.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE SANDWICH ISLAND ERUPTION.

A Visit to the Crater of Kilauea—The Tidal Wave.

Mr. Hildebrand, who has paid a visit to the great crater of Kilauea, Sandwich Islands, thus describes its appearance:—

The ground around the crater, particularly on the eastern and western sides, is rent by a great number of fissures, one near the Puna road more than twelve feet wide, and very deep; others of lesser size run parallel to and cross the Kau road, so as to render travel on it very dangerous. The lookout house is detached from the main land by a very deep crevasse, and stands now on an isolated, overhanging rock, which, at the next severe concussion, must tumble into the pit below. Many small fissures are hidden by grass and bushes, forming so many traps for the unwary. The Volcano House, however, has not suffered, nor is the ground surrounding it broken in the least. From the walls of Kilauea large masses of rock have been detached and thrown down. On the west and northeast side, where the fire had been most active before the great earthquake of April 2, the falling masses probably have been at once melted by the lava, and carried off in its stream, for the walls there remain perpendicular as they were before, but that this part of the wall has lost portions of its mass is shown too evidently by the deep crevices along the western edge just spoken of, and the partial detachment in many places of large prisms of rock. But it is on the east and northeast wall particularly that the character of the crater has undergone a change. Along the descent on the second ledge, masses of rock, many more than one hundred tons in weight, obstruct the path and form abutments to the stone pillars—small buttress hills, similar to those observed in front of the high basaltic wall in Koolau, Oahu. So, also, in the deep crater itself, the eastern wall has lost much of its perpendicular dip, and has become shelving, in part. The crater itself was entirely devoid of liquid lava; no incandescence anywhere; pitchy darkness hovered over the abyss the first night, because, during the second night of our stay, between twelve and one A. M., detonations were heard again, and light reappeared for a short time in the South Lake; white vapors of steam issued from the floor in a hundred places, but of those stifling, sulphurous, and acid gases formerly so overpowering in the neighborhood of the lakes and ovens, only the faintest trace was perceived here and there. The heat was no where so great that we could not keep our footing for a minute or more, although in many places it would forbid the touch of the bare hand. The great South Lake is transformed into a vast pit, more than five hundred feet deep, the solid eastern wall projecting far over the hollow below, while the remaining sides are falling off with a sharp inclination, and consist of a confused mass of lava. More than two-thirdsof the old floor of Kilauea has caved in and sunk from one hundred to three hundred feet below the level of the remaining floor. The depression embraces the whole western half and infringes in a semicircular line on a considerable portion of the other half. It is greatest in the northern, and rather gradual and gentle in the southern portion. Entering upon the depressed floor from the southern lake, it was some time before we became fully aware of its existence. It was only on our return from the northwest corner, where it is deepest, that there presented itself through the mist in which we were enveloped, a high wall of three hundred feet of grotesque and fantastic outlines. At first we were quite bewildered, fancying that we beheld the great outer wall of the crater. On nearer approach we soon satisfied ourselves that this singular wall represented the line of demarcation of a great depression in the floor of the crater—a fact that surprised us the more, as a bird's eye view from above had altogether failed to apprize us of its existence.

Mr. Jornander writes as follows regarding the tidal wave:

"At Punaluu, at the moment of the shock, it seemed as if an immense quantity of lava had been discharged into the sea some distance from the shore, for almost instantly a terrible commotion arose, the water boiling and tossing furiously. Shortly afterward a tremendous wave was sweeping up on the shore, and when it receded there was nothing left of Punaluu. Every house, the big stone church, even the cocoanut trees—all but two—were washed away. The number of lives lost is not yet ascertained. All who were out fishing at the time perished, and many of those ashore. A big chasm opened running from the sea up into the mountain, down which, it is said, lava, mud, trees, ferns and rocks were rushing out into the sea.

I have just been told an incident that occurred at Ninole during the inundation of that place. At the time of the shock on Thursday, a man named Holoua and his wife ran out of the house and started for the hills above; but remembering the money he had in the house, the man left his wife and returned to bring it away. Just as he had entered the house the sea broke on the shore, and enveloped the building, first washed it several yards inland, and then, as the wave receded, swept it off to sea with him in it. Being a powerful man, and one of the most expert swimmers in that region, he succeeded in wrenching off a board or rafter, and with this as a surf board, he boldly struck out for the shore and landed safely with the return wave. When we consider the prodigious hight of the breaker on which he rode to the shore (fifty, perhaps sixty feet,) the feat seems almost incredible, were it not that he is now alive to attest it, as well as the people on the hill side who saw him."

ANIMAL FOOD.

It may be asked, Why is it that Health Reformers discard the use of animal food? Is it because the Bible strictly and plainly forbids its use? No. Neither is it for the reason that it does not contain nutriment, or may not for awhile sustain life; but that, while it has elements of nutrition, it also contains materials that are directly injurious to the system.

It is a well-known fact, that all domesticated animals are diseased; especially is this the case with those which are subjected to the usual modes of fattening; and it certainly needs no argument to prove that diseased meats are totally unfit for food, and are prolific sources of disease in those who eat them. The common fattening process itself is that of diseasing the animal. By depriving it of its natural liberty and subjecting it to the breathing of impure air, and frequently keeping it from a sufficient amount of light, the different organs of the body become over-taxed and thereby diseased. Nearly every animal that is slaughtered is found to have a diseased liver and as the office of this organ is to eliminate from all parts of the system, effete and poisonous materials, in order to keep the body in a healthy condition, any one can readily see that when this organ becomes diseased, the animal fails of that purification that it needs, and a large portion of poisonous impurities is left lodged in the system, and in consequence thereof other parts of the body become diseased also.

Another reason why we discard animal food is, because it is more stimulating and less nutritious than food from the vegetable kingdom, and makes the vital machine run too fast, thus causing an unnecessary expenditure of power, and thereby abbreviating human existence.

It produces fretfulness, uneasiness of mind with depression of spirits, and derangement of the whole nervous system. It also excites the propensities, and more or less benumbs the moral sensibilities, and its excessive use is one of the fruitful causes of the large amount of licentiousness that prevails throughout our land at the present day.

We firmly believe that the nature of these flesh meats, with the manner in which they are prepared and eaten, with all their hurtful condiments and seasonings, by over-exciting the appetites and baser qualities of man's nature, and weakening his judgment and moral faculties, is one of the principal causes of all the crime that is committed in this country.

But, says one, I believe that animal food is the most healthful for me, for it makes me feel stronger than vegetable food does. True, it does many times make those who use it feel stronger, without imparting to the system near the amount of strength and power of endurance that food does that is derived from the vegetable kingdom.

In view of corroborating the above, and for additional evidence, we quote the following from Prof. Graham's Lectures on the Science of Human Life:

"Flesh-meat is more stimulating in proportion to the quantity of nourishment which it affords to the human body than pure vegetable aliment is, and all processes of assimilation and nutrition in the use of the former, are more rapid and attended with greater expenditure of vital power and waste of organized substance than in the use of the latter. It is therefore a physiological truth of great importance, that while animal food, or flesh meat passes through the stomach in a shorter time than most kinds of vegetable aliment, and therefore has been supposed to be more easily digested, yet it actually draws upon that organ, and upon the sources of inervation, for a greater sum of vital energy, and consequently causes a greater abatement of the sensorial power of the brain and nervous system during the process of digestion, and leaves the stomach much more exhausted from the performance of its function, than vegetable food does. And hence, they who subsist principally on animal food or flesh meat, always feel more stupid and dull during gastric digestion, and feel a much greater degree of exhaustion in the epigastric region, when the food has passed from the stomach into the intestinal canal, and suffer much more distress from hunger when deprived of their accustomed meals, than they do who subsist entirely on a pure vegetable aliment.

"Though according to chemical analysis, therefore, a pound of good wheat bread absolutely contains but fifty per cent. more of nutritious matter than a pound of flesh meat, yet the physiological difference between the two kinds of aliment is much greater than is indicated by the results of chemical analysis. For the flesh meat being more stimulating than the bread, in proportion to the quantity of nourishment which it actually affords to the human body, not only exhausts the stomach more in the process of gastric digestion, but works the whole organic machinery of life with more rapidity and intensity, and therefore causes a proportionably greater waste of the substance of the organs in a given time, and consequently increases the demand of the system for fresh supplies of aliment. Hence, as extensive experiment has fully proved, two pounds of good wheaten bread will actually sustain a man accustomed to such a diet, longer and better than eight pounds of the best flesh meat.

"The Russian and Greek laborers, and those of many other countries, will work from twelve to sixteen hours a day, with great power and activity and cheerfulness, and subsist on about one pound of coarse bread, with a small bunch of garlics, figs, raisins, apples, or some other fruit containing little nourishment. While, according to Ross Cox, who spent several years beyond the Rocky Mountains, as an agent of the American Northwestern Fur Company, the Canadian boatmen and others in the Company's service, receive according to stipulation, and regularly consume (when they have no other food) eight pounds of clear flesh a day for each man; and ten pounds if it contains any bone; and these men, if their rations of food are cut short for two or three days, are exhausted and unstrung. 'The Patagonians,' says the Rev. Mr. Armes, who spent three months among them as a missionary, 'subsist almost entirely upon the guanaco, which they take in the chase. They will often, in their indolence, suffer their provisions to run very low, and for two or three days, subsist on very little; and then, when urged by hunger, they will mount their horses, and go out in pursuit of fresh supplies. And when they return with their game, it is a very common thing for a single Patagonian to consume from fifteen to twenty pounds of flesh in the course of a day. Indeed, I have frequently seen a single man, after two or three days severe abstemiousness, consume, at one meal, in the course of three hours, the half of a guanaco, which would weigh from fifteen to twenty pounds. This flesh was generally eaten very slightly cooked.' The accounts which have been given of the voraciousness of the Esquimaux and other flesh eating tribes, in the northern regions of Europe, Asia, America, and of the enormous quantities which they consume in a day, and at a single meal, are almost incredible, yet they have been repeatedly corroborated by the best authority. On the other hand again, millions of the inhabitants of India and China subsist on a few ounces of rice a day for each individual; and where they are in other respects temperate and correct in their habits, they are well nourished and athletic and active."—Health Reformer.

CHILDREN.

Children are much more susceptible than grown-up people to all noxious influences; they are affected by the same things, but much more quickly and seriously, namely: by want of fresh air, of proper warmth, want of cleanliness in house, clothes, bedding, or body, by startling noises, improper food, or want of punctuality; by dullness and by want of light, by too much or too little covering in bed, or when up, by want of the spirit of management generally in those in charge of them. One can, therefore, only press the importance, as being yet greater in the case of children, greatest in the case of sick children, of attending to these things. That which, however, above all is known to injure children seriously is foul air, and the most seriously at night. Keeping rooms where they sleep tight shut up is destruction. And, if the child's breathing be disordered by disease, a few hours only of foul air may endanger its life, even where no inconvenience is felt by grown-up persons in the same room.—Florence Nightingale.

IDLENESS.—There is no greater enemy to body and soul than idleness, unless it is that public sentiment which compels to idleness. Thousands and tens of thousands have fallen victims to it. The woman who will not labor, rich or honored though she be, bends her head to the inevitable curse of heaven. This curse works in failing health, fading beauty, broken temper, and weary days. Let her never fancy that, being neither wife nor mother, she is exempt from the law. She can not balance that decree of God by the foolish customs of society or the weak objections of kindred. Disease, depression, moral idiocy or inertia follow an idle life. He who never rests has made woman in his image, and health, beauty, force, and influence follow in the steps of labor alone.—Dall.

A QUIET LIFE.—For my part, seeing the victims to fast life daily falling around me, I have willingly abandoned the apparent advantages of such a life, and preferred less popularity, less gains, the enjoyment of a sound body, the blessings of a quiet, domestic life, and a more restricted, but not less enjoyable circle of society. I am now approaching my seventy-fifth year. I can not, indeed, say, vigorous as I am, that I have reached this age without the assistance of doctors, for I have had the constant attendance of those four famous ones—Temperance, Exercise, Good Air, and Good Hours.—Wm. Howitt.

"JOY COMETH IN THE MORNING."

Joy cometh in the morning, though evil triumphs long,
And earth still groans in sadness, burdened with sin and wrong;
Joy cometh, for He cometh whose right it is to reign,
The blighting curse he'll banish, and bid earth smile again.

Joy cometh in the morning to the weary, suffering ones,
As they with songs of gladness shall lay life's burdens down;
The pain, the tears, the darkness, the shadows all are past,
The pilgrimage is ended, the rest is gained at last.

Joy cometh in the morning, when long sundered friends shall meet,
Secure from death and sorrow in the promised home they'll greet;
No fear of separation shall cast a shadow there,
Their blessings are eternal, and crowns of life they wear.

Joy cometh in the morning to the silent ones who sleep,
Forgotten in the churchyards while the storms around them sweep;
Green graves and tombs of marble shall open at His word,
And they will rise triumphant to meet their coming Lord.

Joy cometh in the morning; let every heart awake,
And wait with hope unchanging for the promised day to break;
Soon over hill and valley will the joyful tidings sound,—
"Messiah reigns in glory, on Zion's hill enthroned."

LAZARUS AND THE RICH MAN.

BY WM. SHELDON.

Is the soul of Lazarus now in glory, and the soul of the rich man in the hell of punishment? Certainly not, if heaven and hell are included in the reward due saint and sinner, for reward is the result of judgment, and must therefore come after the judgment, and the judgment is not in the past.

Inspiration having decided the question that Christ shall "judge the quick and the dead at his appearing," and also that when the "time of the dead that they shall be judged" shall arrive, then comes the time that God "should give reward unto his servants the prophets, and to the saints" (Rev. 11: 18,) there is no escape from the conclusions (1) that our reward is after the arrival of the judgment, instead of being prior to that point; and (2) that the judgment is connected with Christ's "appearing:" hence, it follows that there will be no judgment until Christ shall appear, and no reward till the judgment arrives.

In the face of this God-given truth, an effort is made to deduce an opposite theory, from the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, recorded in Luke 16, as though God's word would teach one doctrine in one place, and a conflicting one in another. But we wish to show, in a few words, that God's word is in harmony with itself on this subject, and the unfounded inferences, and unwarranted assumptions of men, have produced all the confusion and lack of harmony on this question. Let us look at it:

1. We are told that the rich man went to the hell of punishment at death. I deny it: but the rich man went to hades (here incorrectly rendered hell,) which never means a hell of punishment, but is simply the depository of the dead, good and bad, till the judgment day: and John brings to view the same fact, and shows us that they are to be judged after coming out of hades (here again wrongly rendered hell:) "and death and hades delivered up the dead that were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works." (Rev. 20: 13.) So hades is finally to deliver up the dead to be "judged," which harmonizes with Peters claim that God will "reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." (2 Pet. 2: 9.) Thus it is evident that though they are in hades till the judgment, they are not being punished: and this case of the rich man, which we shall show to be a parable, is the only one in the entire Bible adduced to conflict with this fact; and when shown to be a parable, it will no longer be viewed as an exception, as a parable never means what it says, but is always one thing to represent another.

Paul informs us that the saints are to come from hades at the sound of the last trump, shouting: "O death, where is thy sting? O hades, where is thy victory?" (1 Cor. 15: 55.) Thus the saints will come from hades at the resurrection; but surely they will not come from a world of torment, or a hell of punishment, yet they will come from the very realm that the rich man is said to have gone to—hades. When the hell of punishment for the wicked is mentioned, another term is employed—gehenna; and the wicked are never said to go to that hell till the judgment-day.

2. Lazarus was said to be carried, not to heaven, but to Abraham's bosom." Now if this is a literal case, and not a parable, then the rich man simply went to hades, instead of going to the future hell of punishment, and Lazarus merely went to "Abraham's bosom" instead of going to heaven. But as the position is assumed, without proof, and contrary to facts, that hades means hell, and "Abraham's bosom" means heaven, and that with this amendment to the subject, it is a literality, and not a parable we will look at it in this light for a moment. The rich man and Abraham see each other, and talk together: so if the one is in heaven, and the other is in hell, it follows that hell must be very near heaven—within sight and hearing—located either just under heaven, or on a level with heaven, one side or the other, or just above it. With either location, it would involve the idea of going up to hell, instead of down to hell; and if it were just below heaven, every saint would have to fly through the fire to get from earth to heaven, or sail round the outer edges; so that in leaving earth for either hell or heaven, we must take the same road a part of the distance, even if we do come to forks in the road, for the sake of getting around the big fire just under heaven, within speaking distance, say within a stones throw—the incessant shrieks of anguish from numberless millions within hearing of heaven—every shriek, every cry, every groan is within hearing, and sinners within sight!

If it is not under heaven, but just one side of it, then hell is as high up as heaven. Who ever dreamed of going up to hell? But there is a literal gulf, is there, between heaven and hell, so they cannot pass from one place to the other? Well, that difficulty might be obviated, as there is a road from earth to both localities and it would be an easy matter to take the back track to earth, and start out on the other road; so if a literal gulf is meant, Abraham made a very poor excuse.

It can't be located above heaven, as that would make hell the highest "up," and give sinners a road through heaven up to hell. But if this is a literal case, with the proposed amendment, there is no escape from the shocking conclusion that heaven and hell are really within sight and hearing of each other—hell being either on one side of heaven, or immediately under it, with its ever rising fumes of brimstone—a sweet posy for those theologians who must claim that this is a literal case, and a literal hell, in opposition to all facts, and contrary to the great fact that reward comes after the judgment.

Who will accept it as a literal case now, with all of these results? Not one. Then it certainly is a parable, and parables always bring up one thing to represent another; it may present something real, or suppose a case that never had an existence, as in Jotham's parable: "The trees went forth on a time to enoint a king," etc. Now let those who urge this parable as an objection against our views prove what it represents, or it avails them nothing; not assume a meaning for it, but prove what it represents, or hold their peace.

Let no one lose sight of the fact that a parable never means what it says, but is simply one thing to represent another. Wheat never meant wheat, in a parable, but was used to represent something else; tares never meant tares in a parable, but were used to represent something else: so, in this parable, a rich man does not mean a rich man, a Lazarus does not mean a Lazarus, a hell does not mean a hell, a gulf does not mean a gulf, but these are all used to represent something else. Doubtless Jesus took the Jews' perverted theory of hades instead of the true Bible view of hades, not for the purpose of sanctioning their view, but for the purpose of representing a truth, by using one of their own stock of supposed facts to illustrate a great moral change. Thus he takes a supposed fact of the Jewish order, to set forth the change which he desired to present to their minds.

The Savior, in giving his parables, always made use of figures that the people were familiar with. In giving a parable to the Jews, he would not employ figures that they could not understand, as such figures would fail to illustrate the fact with which he wished to impress their minds. The Pharisees, to whom this parable was addressed, had embraced an unscriptural idea concerning hades (here rendered hell,) regarding it as a "subterranean region" in the bowels of the earth, and believing in "rewards and punishments under the earth," of a temporary nature—one part of this "subterranean" hades was for the righteous, called "Abraham's bosom," and angels escorted the good to this place; while the other department contained a lake of fire, and the wicked were driven near this lake, and suffered from the heat of the flames; between these two departments was a "gulf" which was impassable, yet the two regions were within sight and hearing of each other.

This is a condensed statement of Josephus' account of their views of hades. And this is evidently the ground-work of the Savior's parable: that is, to illustrate a certain truth, he employed these figures, with which they were familiar—"hades," "Abraham's bosom," the "gulf," and the "flames"—not for the purpose of sanctioning their theory, for he elsewhere cautions us both against the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees, the one class having gone to one extreme, and the other class to the other extreme.

While in captivity, a part of the Jews imbibed the speculative notions of the heathen concerning life after death, and coined up this view of hades as the locality of that future existence; but another portion of the Jews refused to imbibe these heathen views; so after their return from captivity, the class who imbibed these heathen notions, and mixed them up with the truth of the Bible, were called Pharisees, having a corrupted faith; but the other class not only repudiated this element of heathenism (life in death,) and insisted that man is totally dead, but in their over-anxiety to get as far as possible (life in death,) they blindly rushed to the opposite extreme, and claimed that man was not only totally dead, but also eternally dead—no resurrection. Now the Savior neither endorses the corrupted views of the Pharisees, nor the extreme notion of the Sadducees; but specially cautions us against the doctrine of both classes. (Matt. 16: 6.)

So Christ in selecting figures from the theology of the Pharisees, out of which to frame a parable for their special benefit, must not be understood as endorsing their views; because (1) to endorse their theory would be to endorse what he had cautioned us against; and (2) it would conflict with the popular claim that Abraham's bosom represents heaven above, where Christ is, instead of a subterraneous region in the bowels of the earth. It would be as fatal to modern theology to insist that Christ endorsed the Pharisees' view of "hades" and "Abraham's bosom," as to our view; so we are all agreed that Christ did not endorse their view, for if he did, that would blot out the popular application of such statements as these—"Depart and be with Christ"—"Absent from the body, and present with the Lord"—"To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise" in "the third heaven" for Christ is not in the bowels of the earth, nor is the "third heaven" there.

Yet it remains a fact, that although Christ did not endorse the Pharisees' view that Abraham's bosom is in the bowels of the earth, and that the departed dead, both good and bad, dwell in such an underground world, he did select figures from this received view to illustrate a certain truth—he did speak of a rich man as going to the Pharisees' hades, he did speak of a beggar as going to the other department, called Abraham's bosom; he did speak of the Pharisees' impassable gulf; he did speak of the torment of the rich man, and the comfort of the beggar—all to simply illustrate a certain truth; not to adopt their theology, alike averse to Scripture, and modern theology.

What truth did Jesus wish to illustrate by this parable? This we can find out by reading the connection, and learning what called forth the statement. Jesus had been addressing the Pharisees—a prominent branch of the nominal church of God, of whom God had said, "I am married unto you"—and in this address he charges them with the crime of breaking their marriage covenant, and being wedded to mammon, and shows them that the marriage contract of the law is about to expire, and a new arrangement to take its place, in other words, that this Jewish law church to whom the Lord was married was about to "become dead to the law," and the gospel contract about to take its place, which would give place to "every man that presseth into it"—that is, to Gentiles as well as Jews.

In chapter 16: 13 he begins by saying: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things; and they derided him. And he said unto them, Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly esteemed among men [mammon] is abomination in the sight of God. The law and prophets were [preached] until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it [or presseth for it.] And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail. Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery." This language immediately precedes the story or parable of the rich man and Lazarus. Christ makes the following points:

1. If they served mammon they broke their covenant relation to God; but their covetousness led them to serve mammon.

2. They had thus committed "adultery" in leaving God, and being wedded to mammon.

3. The law had been preached till John, then a new ministry began; and "every man" could then be permitted to press into the kingdom, Gentiles as well as Jews; and the old law economy began to die then, and fully expired at the cross; the old covenant church virtually died then, and the new covenant church then arose; "ye also are become dead to the law, by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead." (Rom. 7: 4.)

Then to illustrate the death of the old covenant church, and the reception of the new covenant church, he speaks the following parable: "There was a certain rich man [representing the old covenant church] which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day [possessed of wealth and enjoyment.] And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, who was laid at his gate full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table; moreover the dogs came and licked his sores [representing the spiritual poverty and helplessness of the Gentile race."] The foregoing represents the condition of the two parties prior to the change in their condition, which is here represented by death, and a removal to a different region. "And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was buried, and in hades he lifted up his eyes, being in torments."

The following facts are set forth:

1. A change takes place in the history of the Gentile race, represented by death; though once destitute of spiritual food and raiment, and covered with moral pollution, the gospel angels conduct them to the faith of Abraham, and by faith they become his children.

2. A change likewise overtakes the rich Jewish church, represented by death, and it is plunged into a state of temporal chastisement, or torment. The great gulf of unbelief will allow no alleviation or remedy to be administered. By hearing Moses and the prophets, which proclaim Christ, they might have warded off this torment; from different branches of the fleshly family of Israel, in different localities, but the different branches of this family, in other regions, were as unbelieving as the main branch at Jerusalem, which first felt the fire of temporal judgment; even a resurrection of dead ones failed to convince them. Here are the main features of the parable in a condensed form. Thus the old church, once exalted, apostatized, and is now being chastised, and has been for one thousand and eight hundred years. The new covenant church receives into the Abrahamic faith the once polluted Gentile, and rejects the Jewish claim of blood relationship, which says, "We have Abraham to our father." The gulf of unbelief is impassable. Those of every polluted tribe of Gentiles are comforted in Christ; while the mere blood relative of Abraham, who rejects Jesus as the true Messiah, is tormented. The five brethren, or different branches of the Jewish family, fared no better than the main branch of this fraternity (the rich man) at Jerusalem.—Adventism.

For the World's Crisis.

"I WILL COME TO YOU."

Come, oh come, thou bright effulgence
Of the Father's boundless love,—
God with man, in grace refulgent,
Lo, we wait thee from above.

Lo, the whole creation groaneth,
Travaileth in pain for thee;
Looketh, longeth, prayeth, moaneth,
From its curse to be set free.

Earth is moved from its centre;
Nations tossed, perplexed, distressed,
Waiting for thy train to enter,
Oh, thou glorious, brightest, best!

We who long and love to see thee,
Stand with loins begirt about;
Eye and ear attend to hear thee,
And the archangel's mighty shout.

Come, oh come, "Desire of Nations,"
Come and give thy people rest;
Come, for lo, the whole creation
Waiteth for thee to be blest.

CONSECRATION.

"I AM THE LORD'S."

(Concluded.)

I have sometimes given up all hope. I have violated my vows and broken my promises to the Lord; they are good for nothing, and it is not worth my while to make any more. But when I have done all, and have thought, surely now I have left the Lord, and he has given me up, still he has refused to let me go. He has said, I am thy Maker, and I could not deny it. He has said, I am thy Redeemer, and I knew it was true. He has told me of the price he paid for me on Calvary, the agony, the blood, the dying groans; and I have nothing wherewith to cancel such a claim. He has told me of the wormwood and the gall he drank, and of the bitterness of my anguish when he found me lying in my sins and in my blood, and looked upon me, and said to me, "Live!" He has told me how he forgave my sins, and washed me in his blood; how he gave me his spirit, and guided me by his counsel, and preserved me by his grace. He has told me how I was begotten by his word, and born anew to him as a little child, and how his heart has yearned, like a father's, over me ever since. He has told me how he sought me perishing in the wilderness, and brought me back to the fold. And he has said: "Shall all this love and sorrow be in vain? How can I give thee up?" And so, when at last my heart has melted, and I have turned my feet homeward, while yet a great way off he has met me and embraced me, and loved me, and brought me home rejoicing, as if he had no fault to find, and nothing even to forgive.

And so we have gone on I have forgotten him, but he has remembered me. I have wandered, and he has brought me back. I have let go my hold upon him, but he still holds fast to me. I have sinned, and he has forgiven it all. I have been wayawrd, and he has laid upon me the chastening rod. I have been rebellious, and the strokes came heavier still. I have been penitent and submissive, and he has given me the kiss of peace, and all my sorrow was past.

Surely I am more than a servant, or he would have long ago dismissed me, and would have borne my faults no more. I am not a stranger; for, if so, I should have been banished rather than chastised. I must be a son, and a son beloved; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every one that he receiveth. I cannot disbelieve it; I cannot deny it; "I am the Lord's."

Here, Lord, I am. I give up the ceaseless strife. "I am the Lord's." I can doubt the fact no more. The Lord claims me; he holds me fast; he will not let me go; he maintains his right against the law, which he has satisfied; against death, which he has abolished; against the grave which he has burst asunder; against Satan, whose power he has broken. They all clamor against me; but he defies their claims. He does not give me up: I hope he never will. None can pluck me out of his hand: I am safe. When I am strong, I hold him fast and when I am weak and helpless, I let go, and then he holds me! I grasp, and clasp, and cling, till my weak hands give way, and I sink despairing down; but yet I do not fall, for underneath me "are the everlasting arms." And so I rest secure, "for I am the Lord's."

I can labor for others now, since Christ has done every thing for me. My debt is paid, forgiven; my sins are pardoned, my burden is gone. I need not seek to be the Lord's: "I am the Lord's." I need not toil that I may be saved; I am saved: he hath saved me.

I need not wander seeking rest: I have found that to my soul. I need not try to persuade God to love me; for he loves me now, with an everlasting love. "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." And I have committed myself and all I have to him. I know I am weak, and frail, and sinful, and unworthy; but I do not despair. Christ has not got through with me yet. The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me. I am confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in me will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. The trying of my faith shall yet be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ. And, after I have suffered a while, he will establish, strengthen, and settle me.

"I am the Lord's." I must then walk as he walked. I must follow in all his footsteps. I am not my own: I am bought with a price. God is working in me to will and to do of his own good pleasure: I must then work out my own salvation with fear and trembling. I am a branch of the true vine: I must bear much fruit. I have found abiding rest of soul: I must call the weary, and show them where it may be found. And my whole life must "adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things." I am saved by grace through faith. Not of works, lest any man should boast. And this grace of God that bringeth salvation, teaches us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearance of "our Savior Jesus Christ." "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." "We shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." Then shall the long struggle be past. He who is now able to keep us from falling shall then "present us before the presence of his glory, faultless, and with exceeding joy." He shall "establish our hearts, unblameable in holiness before God, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his holy ones." Thus shall the very God of peace sanctify us wholly; and our whole spirit and soul and body shall be preserved, "blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Faithful is he that calleth us, who also will do it."

In this blessed hope, I rejoice. In this full assurance of faith, I go forward. How can I doubt or fear, or faint or falter, or turn back? My Master's eye is upon me. His love constraineth me. If one died for all, then were all dead. And if he died for us, it was that henceforth we might not live unto ourselves, but to Christ, who died and rose again for us! To all temptations, enticements, and worldly allurements; to all doubts and fears and sad forebodings; to all shrinkings of flesh, and rebellions of spirit; I have one answer, may it always be a sufficient one: "I am the Lord's."

In proportion as my heart roots itself in the blessed consciousness that I am the Lord's, I am at rest. When weary and heavy laden I came and proved that Christ spake truly when he said: "I will give you rest." And now, while I take Christ's yoke upon me, and learn of Him, the meek and lowly-hearted one, I still prove his faithfulness, for I find rest to my soul in wearing a yoke that is easy, and bearing a burden which is light.

A growing consciousness of God's love to me, can but increase my love for him. And this love becomes a matter of knowledge. "For this is the love of God that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." Where love is there is no labor, for love makes labor a delight. Commandments once grievous are a joy; crosses once heavy are now light; restraints once irksome are now but the gentle guidings of my heavenly Father's hand; troubles are blessings in disguise, and with this confidence all is joy and peace in believing, through the power of the Holy Ghost. The fears and dark anxieties of other days depart. "There is no fear in love; for perfect love casteth out fear, because fear hath torment." The waves may toss and fret, but the rock never moves; and God hath taken my feet out of a horrible pit, and the miry clay, and set them upon a rock. Troubles may come, but "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God," to them who are the called according to his purpose. The eighth chapter of Romans begins with "No condemnation," and it ends with "No separation." No condemnation in Christ—no separation from Christ. Neither persecution nor tribulation; famine nor nakedness: neither the sword of wrath nor the legions of darkness; neither the lapse of time, nor the distant stretch of space; neither life nor death, nor any other creature, can separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. So long as we abide where there is "no condemnation," so long there is no danger of separation. If God be for us who can be against us? And when "We have known and believed the love that God hath to us," we can say with the apostle, "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment."

Terrible as shall be that awful day to a guilty world, it shall be to the saint a day of peace and joy. As it is appointed unto man once to die, so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and as after death there is appointed the judgment, so Christ shall then appear the second time without sin, for the salvation of his people. For them there is no wrath or condemnation. Jesus hath delivered them from the wrath to come. Their sins are open before hand, going to judgment. They are pardoned. They shall not come into judgment, but have passed out of the death into the life. Their portion shall be in the resurrection of life, among the blessed and the holy. The resurrection unto judgment is for others, the evil doers,—not for those who are the Lord's. They are safe. Called with the many who have heard the gospel call, chosen with the few that heed the gracious invitation, faithful in the few things here, they shall prove the blessedness of those whom the Lord foreknows, and predestinates and calls, and justifies, and glorifies. They shall be blameless in that awful day, for who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? Shall God that justifieth, who has already pardoned all? Who is he that condemneth? Shall Christ who died, yea, rather who is risen again, and who now maketh intercession for me before the throne? Surely we have nothing to fear from him; and nothing can separate us from his love.

"No condemnation now I dread;
Jesus and all in him is mine:
Alive in Christ, my living head,
And clothed in righteousness divine,
Bold I approach the eternal throne,
And claim the crown, through Christ my own."

In this confidence the church of Christ in that day shall exclaim: "Lo! this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us,—this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." They will have no fears nor doubts, and their glory will be secure, for there is a crown laid up for all those that "love his appearing."

In this hope I turn from idols "to serve the living God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." I comfort my heart with the Savior's words: "If I go away I will come again." I grow joyful as did the disciples, when men in white raiment said, "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

And if the true and faithful witness testifies "Surely I come quickly," my heart responds in the words of the beloved John: "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus!" For since I am the Lord's, my treasure and my heart are laid up with him in the heavens, and all my hopes and joys and interests are in him there. So long as he is "expecting, till his enemies be made his footstool," so long must I expect the glorious day. So long as "the earnest expectation of the Creation waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God," so long must I expect and wait for the same. So long as "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now," so long must we "which have the first fruits of the Spirit, groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Then shall the long strife and war be past. The flesh shall no longer lust against the Spirit, nor shall fleshly desires war against the soul. Then shall we be wholly the Lord's. The body made like Christ's glorious body, the soul perfected in all its powers, the spirit forever sanctified, and the whole man made like the Lord for evermore.

Then shall the renewed heart find the regenerated body adapted to every holy use, and the new man shall find his home and rest in the new Jerusalem that cometh down from God out of heaven, and in the new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. Then shall the whole earth be filled with the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. All things shall be subdued unto Christ; death, the last enemy, shall be destroyed, and God shall be all and in all. That book of inspiration that begins with the story of the creation of a new and sinless world, closes with a vision of a world renewed and redeemed, and glorified forevermore. And when, with the sanctified myriads of the redeemed, we lift up the anthems of thanksgiving, and the songs of everlasting joy, we may say with a strength of assurance, a fullness of meaning, and a sense of eternal privilege till then unknown, "I am the Lord's."

Reader,—a parting word. By every principle of right and justice and gratitude, you belong to God. Can you refuse to ratify claims so just as his? Can you refuse to say, "I am the Lord's?"

Are you a christian? Do you not dare then to avow the fact? Can you decline to do it? Can you talk and act and live as if you are not the Lord's? Can you refuse to own the Lord that bought you? May God help you to know and feel and say, from the depths of a trusting heart, "I am the Lord's!"

Are you a wanderer from the fold of Christ? Know then that the Good Shepherd still seeketh thee in the wilderness. Oh, listen to his gracious call. He loves you still, he claims you still, he calls you still. Heed then his calls, and return to him, saying, "Truly I am the Lord's, I will wander from him no more."

Are you a sinner, far from God and rest and peace and joy? Still the Lord loves you. And you may be his, and his forever. He offers pardon; take it! He offers life; receive it! Come to Jesus, saying,—

"Just as I am! thy love, unknown,
Has broken every barrier down;
Now to be thine, yea, thine alone,
O Lamb of God, I come!"

Coming thus, you shall in no wise be cast out. And then, throughout the glad experiences of present grace, and also of coming glory, you may say,—"I AM THE LORD'S."—The Christian.

"WHICH THINGS THE ANGELS DESIRE TO LOOK INTO."

1 Pet. 1: 12.

"Angels who excel in strength," "hearkening to the voice of his word," in deep contemplation stoop to examine these all interesting things. These heaven-born ones having access to "the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," are yet desiring "to look into" these "things"; indeed, a wondrous expanse, the charming fullness from whence flow "the waters of the sanctuary." Grace above praise, glory beyond vision; the sweetness of that, the majesty of this, so ardently anticipated and graphically displayed by "the prophets," who "inquired and searched diligently" respecting "the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow." Searching also the "time" when "mercy and truth" shall meet together, "righteousness and peace" shall kiss "each other"; when "the time came that the saints" should possess "the kingdom."

Yes, angels would fain "look into" these things, and the time of their accomplishment, while man, "willingly ignorant," is ever disposed to look away. Absorbed by the nothings of earth, "the sufferings of Christ and the glory" to "follow" are treated as beneath notice, as matters of neglect and rejection; desiring "not the knowledge of" His "ways," but true to his original, hides in the shades of the carnal mind from his Maker, whose works and glory are, in his dreaming, less attractive than his own.

Promises, gifts, displays of love, are turned from with a sigh, or frown, the atonement slighted,—yet life and immortality often in expectancy; poor woe-choosing man, with whom light is darkness, and good evil, beauty deformity, and sin a rejoicing, desiring "to look into" all things earthly, yet ignoring the excellency of matters in which they are preeminently concerned, yea, forgetting them "as a tale that is told." This glance at the great defection shows at once the duty of believers, who "in season and out of season" should present and enforce the life-giving truths of the gospel and coming knigdom.

How earnestly diligent should we be in spreading quickening truth by pen, tongue, tracts, and our personal walk before the Lord; remembering specially that he loves to endorse such efforts.

JUDGE NOT.

"Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged. And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?"

To judge another is a transgression of our Savior's own words, while preaching on the Mount. That all sin and come short of the glory of God, none can dispute. All err, but it is not—or should not be—our business to point out others' failings; let us be our own rather than another's critic; cast the beam from our own eye, then help our brother take the mote from his eye.

If another does a wrong thing, judge him not, for we know not the motive which prompted the act, nor the christian virtue which may lie in the heart; though it may not at all times come to the surface. This is not a world where rectitude is much practised; the innocent ofttimes suffer for the crimes of the guilty, while they go unpunished; shall we, like it, be harsh, unkind, show injustice to our fellow beings, by hastily forming unjust opinions of them? We cannot help forming an opinion of every one, but let it be slow, generously intermixed with charity.

Though law may be given for nearly every act of life, yet we are incompetent to at once sit as Judge Advocate of every act of others, being ourselves fallible creatures, possessed of human natures. And were we to prove ourselves innocent by casting stones at the guilty one, each would withdraw our complaint and stand alone for ourselves before the rightful Judge.

The cause of Christ has been greatly injured by censorious and unjust judgment. Servants of Christ have had to spend hours of weeping and agonizing prayer for wisdom to direct the right method of bringing peace and quiet where variance existed, a misunderstanding, the result of judgment illtimed and unwarranted. Many a one is made sad by others misconstruing a simple act. Can we not bear a little with others, when Christ bears so much from us? Can we not be patient, let long-suffering characterize our dispositions, till the fruit of the tree shall sufficiently mature to discover unto us if it is bitter or sweet?

Be not impatient, for Christ has given us a rule by which we may know if our friend, brother, neighbor, be worthy of christian fellowship. In his Sermon he says, "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? A good tree can not bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." Again, in Luke he says, "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

So let us be patient, bear and forbear, till the fruit is perfected; then may we know who are children of the light, and who of darkness. We have the authority of Christ to make the tree as is the fruit thereof. "Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt." If when fruit has been tasted, and it prove corrupt, unpalatable, the tree can not be good; for Christ says, "As the branch can not bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me."

What, then, shall we, because one professes christianity,—perhaps to be a minister of the gospel, excuse every and many evils, till they go to that extent that they not only disgrace themselves, but throw cold water on the light of the church, till its light becomes so dim it is but a stumbling-block to the world? No. "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." LIZZIE TAYLOR.

MUSIC.

Music is the poetry of sound. It embraces harmony, concord and melody. It moves with the succession of the same or similar sounds, and moves on velvet wings, waved so gently and gracefully, that naught but onward motion is known or felt. Oh, the rapturous charm of music! What power it has to soften, melt, enchain, in its spirit-chords of subduing harmony! Truly there is power in music, an almost omnipotent power. It will tyrannize over the soul; it will force it to bow down and worship; it will wring adoration from it, and compel the heart to yield its treasures of love. Every emotion from the most reverent devotion to the wildest gushes of frolicsome joy, it holds subject to its imperative will. Music being the voice of love, how appropriate a vehicle is it to bear up to the great home of everlasting love the incense of human affections! Sing unto the Lord because he is love. Sing to him, because he loves the songs of devout hearts. Sing unto him, because a sacred song melts the heart in love to Him. Sing unto him, because "the highest type of the infinite, and enlarges the horizon of our thoughts and aspirations." Sing unto him, because music is the link which binds all hearts in one, and all with God.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion. *

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

The great national campmeeting, to be held on the new ground, at Springfield, Mass., may be expected to be the largest gathering of those who are looking for the speedy coming of Christ, ever held in the world. The committee will do their best to accommodate all who come. We expect it will be truly a National Campmeeting. We also hope it will be as good as great. Let us begin to offer up prayer to the Lord that everything connected with it may be done to his glory.

It cannot be long before the saints will be gathered "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation," to "the marriage supper of the Lamb." We trust that our coming meeting at Springfield will be instrumental in fitting many for the glorious event now but a short distance in the future. We expect to see the best exhibition of true christian love, forbearance, long-suffering, kindness, meekness and patience ever witnessed on such an occasion. All who wish to be ready to meet the Bridegroom King must love one another. Let us banish for ever all feelings that are not in harmony with the spirit of Christ. The enemies of the cross of Christ are uniting their forces against King Immanuel; and shall not his friends unite to meet the common foe, instead of spending their strength against each other? Let us be wise, and help build each other up in the most holy faith. This is the time to cultivate brotherly love, and we shall expect the most happy results from our NATIONAL MEETING.

Let all who can begin to arrange their business to be present at the beginning, and remain to its close. Those who are present the first Sabbath, Aug. 23, will probably find it the most delightful of the whole meeting Try to be present, and spend the eight days with us. It will be like the annual feast of tabernacles held by the ancient Jews. The Lord has most signally owned and blessed these great gatherings in former years, and we feel sure he will not leave us just as we are about to enter the everlasting kingdom. We long to greet the saints once more in the tented grove, and hear their songs of praise to the Most High. Come if you can.

CONFERENCE, TENT AND CAMP-MEETINGS.

We are satisfied that the time has come when united efforts at conference, tent, or campmeetings, will result in great good. Satan is accomplishing large results by united efforts. He knows the effect of combined power. "Union is strength; "United we stand, divided we fall," are true sayings. The people of the world, in all civilized nations, are forming great confederations, and having mass meetings for the purpose of increasing and consolidating their power. It was the prayer of Jesus that his children might be one; then of course it will be the policy of Satan to prevent it by sowing discord among brethren, and by dividing them up into little factions, that may be unable to do battle against his combined forces. There is a power in large gatherings to move the public mind that cannot be exerted by the efforts of a few.

During the warm season of the year, people do not like to go and sit in hot rooms; but would be delighted to go into the tented grove, and enjoy the shade of the forest trees. The large meetings should be held at least once a week; and where it is practicable two or three or more. It is the protracted effort from which we may expect the rich harvest. It takes nearly a week, in a new place, to get the first sinner to yield; then a few days will accomplish more than months of scattered labor.

Efforts should be made to establish meetings in new places. There is an increased interest to hear the reasons of our hope. The call is earnest, and constant. Let every church do what it can to send the glad tidings into the regions beyond. Get up a conference, tent, or campmeeting in some pleasant grove, if it is only for one Sunday; then try it again. We think much more good can be done in this way, with a given amount of labor, than in any other. The great religious movements in the world, from the Savior's time to the present, have been produced largely by such meetings as these of which we have been speaking. Thousands were taught by the Savior in the shady grove, by the sea side, or on the mountain. Let us follow his example.

OUR WESTERN VISIT.

Thus far (June 23d) our western visit has been very pleasant and filled with happy remembrances of good meetings and agreeable associations with those who love our dear Lord and his coming. We would like to stay longer if circumstances would permit. We enjoy the society of these frank, open-hearted, generous, commen-sense persons. Their hospitality shows no stingy streaks, that are so common in older towns. They seem like the old patriarchs, according to the description in the Bible. They are ready to keep the stranger all night, and treat him with christian care and kindness, as Lot did the angels.

We returned from the New Hartford campmeeting to Dubuque, June 22nd, and spoke again on the Public Square, where we had a very intelligent and attentive audience. We find the desire is rapidly increasing in the city to hear on the all-important truths that are to us so deeply interesting. We think a good church might be easily gathered there as the result of a few weeks faithful labor.

This morning, at eight o'clock, we took passage on the Northern Bell, en route up the Mississippi to La Crosse, a distance of one hundred and forty-one miles. We again enjoyed a feast of beautiful scenery, exhibited on the banks of the noble river. We are seeing to-day what we passed in the night on our down trip. We feel thankful that we have been permitted to see what we have seen, without leaving the work of the Lord to go in pursuit of such pleasure. We have found from sad experience, years ago, that whenever we sought pleasure as an object, by stepping aside from the path of duty, we have diminished our heavenly peace instead of adding to it. The fact is, true happiness can be had in no other way but in the service of the Lord, doing our whole duty, without regard to the consequences. He who seeks pleasure as a mere end of his efforts, will never know what it is to be contented and happy. Self-denial to please the Lord is rewarded in this life with a peace that passeth all understanding. We have found no other way to obtain this great blessing. A little self-denial affords a large amount of comfort; while a little foolish self-gratification turns our joy to remorse, and fills us with bitterness of spirit. Let us be wise, and live to the glory of God.

CAMPMEETING AT BURNS, WIS.

We have just closed a very pleasant and profitable campmeeting at Burns, fifteen miles from La Crosse, Wis. It commenced Wednesday, June 24th, and continued over the Sabbath. The meeting was in a delightful grove, composed of wide-spreading oaks. When we arrived on the ground, to our surprise, we learned that Bro. I. Damman was present. We found him in good spirits, as usual, and earnest in the work of the Lord. It seemed as though we were in New England again.

Bro. Peter Hough has been preaching in this section for some two years, and his faithful labors have been very much blessed, and several real working churches have been raised up, to praise the Lord for sending Bro. Hough into these towns to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom. He is one who is always busy in the vineyard of the Lord. With him the christian religion is a living reality, accompanying him in all his ways. He does not wear it as a cloak, but it is all through him. The churches in the vicinity decided to give him the means to come to our great National campmeeting at Springfield. They have also decided at this meeting to build a chapel in Burns. All seemed in favor of it, and entered into the work heartily. A member of another remarked, "They will do it, for they are all agreed."

This campmeeting has produced a most excellent effect upon the people who attended. They seemed satisfied that they were enjoying a meeting where they could see those who really enjoyed the christian religion. Every thing went on harmonious throughout the entire meeting. We never witnessed better order upon a camp ground. We did not have a watch a single night. When the hour arrived to retire, we lay down as fearless of harm as we would at home. We think we have never attended another campmeeting that was so delightfully pleasant from beginning to end as the one at Burns. The weather was all we could ask,—beautiful days and a bright moon at night. It was truly a feast of fat things from the Lord. Such seasons are rare in this wicked world. We had much sweet singing, and most excellent prayer and conference meetings, in which every minute was improved. Tears of joy flowed down many cheeks, while the hearts of the saints swelled with love for God. It was no mere hypocritical pretense; but a genuine reality, which convinced all beholders that christian religion consists of something more than creeds and mere formal ceremonies.

We formed some happy acquaintances at that meeting, and expect to meet those kind friends again in the coming kingdom. They did all they could to add to our comfort during the meeting, and caused our cup of joy to run over, in consequence of what we felt, saw, and heard. We all wished we could spend the whole summer there. We enjoyed it better every day we remained on the ground. Quite a number were converted during the meeting.

Sabbath, the last day of the feast, was one of special interest. Immediately after breakfast the ordinance of baptism was administered to seven happy souls, by Bro. Hough. Others are waiting for the next opportunity to obey the important command of our Savior. We had a large and very attentive audience during the day. It was a pleasure to talk to people who were so anxious to hear. Some of the ministers of other denominations omitted a part of their regular services and attended our meetings, inviting their congregations to go also. Our interview with them was pleasant. We did not see any indications of bitter sectarianism, that is often witnessed in other places. The truth has gained many friends in this section.

The order during the day was excellent. Every one seemed pleased with their surroundings, and disposed to treat us in a very kind manner. The gathering was large, but nearly all listened with fixed attention to the evidences that show we are almost to the end of the prophetic history of this world. They appeared satisfied that we were not following cunningly devised fables, when we declared unto them that Jesus is coming soon.

A large number gave good evidence that the Spirit of God was striving with them. At the close of the evening service quite a number came forward, requesting the prayers of christians that they might become the true followers of Christ. We have rarely witnessed deeper feeling in an audience than at that time. It was truly a Bethel, and was to us as the gates of paradise. Those present will not soon forget that scene. Next followed a heavenly communion season, when we gathered around the table under the oaks, while the moon was shining upon us through their branches, lending a sweet charm to the scene. As we partook of the emblems of our Savior's body and blood, we conversed freely of his great love for us, and the rich blessings with which we were favored, and the bright and sure evidence that we shall soon see him, and be made like him.

It was hard parting from the hallowed spot, but in order to meet our next engagement, we were obliged to hasten away by private conveyance to La Crosse, a distance of eighteen miles, where we arrived about 2½ o'clock, just in season to take the steamer Davenport for Dubuque. We got into our berth at 3 o'clock, just in season in the morning, and enjoyed our rest for three hours, when we arose to behold the beautiful scenery on the banks of the Mississippi. Although the day was very warm, we had a cool refreshing breeze, which, with the enchanting views around us, made our voyage extremely delightful. We were filled with gratitude to our heavenly Father for allowing us to enjoy such a privilege. We arrived at Dubuque at about 5 P. M., and received a hearty welcome at Bro. Munger's, where we met some other friends of Jesus, with whom we spent the evening very profitably, and with much comfort. We learn the people in D. are very anxious to hear more about the blessed hope. At early dawn we departed for New Rutland, Ill., to attend a discussion with Mr. Theodore Brooks, a noted debater of the Cambellite denomination.

THE ANCIENT OF DAYS.

Who is the Ancient of Days? When in Washington, D. C., a very intelligent lady arose in our meeting and asked some questions; among others, "Who was the Ancient of Days?" We replied we thought he was our heavenly Father. To this she objected. We then asked her to give us some information on the subject. She said the Ancient of Days was Adam. Says Daniel, "I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set and the books were opened... I saw in the night visions, and, behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him."—Dan. 7: 9, 10, 13.

We reminded the lady that Daniel was giving prophecy, and wished to know if he lived before Adam? We got no answer. We very much doubted whether "ten thousand times ten thousand stood before" Adam, and that the other events ascribed to the Ancient of Days took place in Adam's time.

It will be observed that the "Ancient of Days" is as literally a person as "the Son of man" who came to him. How could they bring the Son of man "near before him," unless he was a personal being? How could "the Ancient of Days" "sit," if he existed only as a principle, as taught by the demons, or is "without body or parts" as taught in popular church creeds? We think it is high time that theology had an overhauling, and made to harmonize with the Bible. People have believed fables long enough.

We believe the Bible most plainly teaches that our heavenly Father is a person, and that Jesus is literally with him as a person, and will soon come as literally as he came the first time, and then ascended to his Father. This view gives harmony in the Scriptures, and gives us a real Father in heaven to whom we can pray in the name of Jesus.

THE CAUSE IN CHELSEA, MASS.

The "little flock" in Chelsea, Mass., are still holding on, and contending "for the faith once delivered to the saints." We have been blessed with the labors of Bro. John G. Hook for the past few days. Good has been done. Saints have been revived and quickened, and sinners have been led to Jesus the sinner's friend. Yesterday, July 5th, Bro. Hook led eleven happy souls into the water and there buried them with Christ by baptism. It was a heavenly scene to see intelligent young men and women, and two middle-aged, who were willing to come out from the world and be crucified and buried and arise to walk in newness of life. Some of them had just started, and others embraced this first opportunity to be baptized. One of them was a U. S. soldier, who had now enlisted to fight under the blood-stained banner of the King of kings.

In the evening Bro. H. gave the right hand of fellowship to nine who united with the church. We then came around the Lord's table, to "show forth the Lord's death until he come." It was a good day in the Lord, and one not soon to be forgotten.

Thus the little flock increase in numbers, and may they also increase in the christian graces. As there are so many ministers living in Chelsea, they will have to keep humble and meek, and watch and pray, lest jealousies and envies arise, whereby many may be defiled. Brethren, pray for us. In behalf of the church, A. P. MOORE, Clerk.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE OF NEW YORK STATE.

The above named conference met at Rochester, June 27th, 1868, and adopted the following

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This conference shall be known as the Advent Christian Conference of New York State.

ART. II. The object of this conference shall be to promote scriptural piety, christian union and co-operation in the spread of light and truth, and especially on the prophetic scriptures, which relate to the soon coming kingdom of Christ.

ART. III. The members of this conference shall be composed of ministers of the gospel co-operating with the Advent Christian body in this State and adjacent territory. Also of delegates who may be chosen by churches to which they belong, and who shall be required to bring a certificate showing they are duly elected to represent said churches, at the conference, and who shall have equal rights with the ministers in the deliberations, and voting in electing officers or transacting business needful for the good of the cause. Any church covenanted together and co-operating with us in the advancement of the cause of Christ, with not less than three male members, shall be entitled to one delegate; and a church of fifty members shall be entitled to two delegates, and an extra delegate for every fifty additional members.

ART. IV. The officers of this conference shall be a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, and a committee of three, who together shall constitute a board of managers, who shall be chosen annually, and hold office until a new election.

ART. V. The duty of the Board shall be to look after the general interests of the cause; appoint and oversee camp, tent, and general meetings, held under the supervision of the conference; also to attend to any business between the sessions of the conference that may involve the interests of the cause.

ART. VI. The conference shall meet annually, and also hold three quarterly meetings in the conference year; the time and place to be arranged by the conference or the Board.

ART. VII. This conference shall constitute a Tract Society, the object of which shall be to distribute tracts, free or otherwise, within the bounds of the conference. The Board of Managers of the conference shall also constitute a Board of Managers for the Tract Society.

ART. VIII. The ministers of this conference shall be provided with a certificate signed by the President and Secretary, which shall be forfeited by any act of misdemeanor which the conference shall deem sufficient to require such an act.

ART. IX. This constitution may be altered or amended at any annual meeting, by a vote of two-thirds of the members present, all amendments to be submitted in writing.

The conference elected the following brethren a Board of Trustees, and authorized them to organize themselves into a legal body, so as to be recognized by the laws of the State of New York: D. Cogswell of Dansville, B. C. Simonds of Darien, Stephen Frinck of Victory; N. T. Withington of Springwater, John S. Beman of Honeoye, J. Naramore and J. R. Cooper of Rochester.

At a subsequent meeting of the Trustees, D. Cogswell was chosen chairman, J. Naramore Treasurer, and J. R. Cooper Secretary. The necessary papers were prepared, signed, acknowledged, and recorded in Monroe County Clerk's office, and also in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany, constituting this conference a legal body entitled to hold property, etc., and transact all necessary business for the good of the cause in a legal manner.

The following regulations were adopted by the Board of Trustees:—

ART. I. The Trustees shall be subject to a call to meet for transaction of business by the Chairman and Secretary, at any time, by due notice.

ART. II. The Treasurer is instructed to hand over to the Secretary such funds as he may need for the transaction of business.

ART. III. The officers of the Board shall not receive remuneration for services, but shall receive from the fund, through the Treasurer, a sufficient sum to defray expenses in attending all meetings to which they are summoned for the transaction of business.*

J. R. COOPER, Sec.

*It is hoped, now we are legally organized, that the friends of the cause, in this State particularly, will aid us all they can. We need to issue tracts, to send our tent meetings into all parts of the State, and for other purposes, and we expect our Treasurer will hear from all those who love Jesus and his cause.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

Report of our receipts and expenditures for the six months ending June 30th, 1868.

Received by mail, $470.70. From Philadelphians and callers at the Home, $458.83. For preaching, $22.00; sale of bedsteads,—eight for $28.00, one for $4.00, and one for $2.75; medicines from dispensary, $5.40; bottles and demijohns from do., $3.80; medical book, $3.00; electrical machine, $21.65; twelve common bedspreads, much worn, $4.20; hatchet, 50 cts.; dinner-pot and pitcher, $1.00; one bedstead at $3.00; an old clock, $1.00; matting, $1.50; pitcher, 30 cts.; firkin, 40 cts.; small tub, 80 cts.; dinner pot (large), $1.00; box, 10 cts.; dish-pan (large), 50 cts.; spider, 25 cts. Total amount of our receipts from all sources, $1034.68. Included in this sum is all that I have received for my personal use,—not far from $50, and the sum of $3.50 from the sale of a few of my books.

Expenditures as follows: For food for the Home, $575.95; medical department, $15.31; stationery, stamps, and postage, $7.31; steam packet, freight, and express bills, $43.01; pay of the cook, and repairs, $74.31; gas bills, $54.01 (this sum was paid for the quarters ending Dec. '67 and March '68); coal bill, $16.09; buckets and brooms, $3.13; traveling expenses, hall rent, donations to assistants, etc., $122.48; funeral expenses of orphan child, $13.75; donations to the poor around us, $18.00; general expenses, which include the purchases of pins, needles, thread, matches, soda, soap, starch, shoes, stockings, etc., $75.37; personal expenditures, $15.21; making the total amount of expenditures $1033.93, leaving a balance in the treasury of 75 cts.

During these six months we received eighteen barrels of clothing, many of them also containing groceries, such as dried fruit, meal, beans, etc. Also six boxes and ten bundles of clothing, etc. We received two and a half barrels of potatoes, a barrel of cabbages, three firkins of fish, one firkin of maple sugar, and thirty parcels of provisions, oysters, etc. We also received from Bro. Hastings about fifteen hundred copies of "The Christian," and more than $50 worth of tracts, all of which have been distributed.

We have given medicines to twenty families, furnished clothing, hats, shoes, etc., to more than one hundred men, women, and children; twenty-five quilts and comfortables to the worthy poor; gave little Minnie her little crib, mattress, sheets, pillow, and quilts.

Two barrels have been packed for the Memphis Mission. They contain such a variety it would be too much of a task upon the reader's patience to give an inventory. We have a barrel of good hats for girls, and a barrel of books, for Bro. Hastings' southern missions. We shall send a box of books and a lot of other articles to Sister Smith's mission in New York.

Sisters Reeves, Helginson and Bussier have each received a nice quilt and comfortable, and Sister Robertson a nice quilt. Sr. R. has also received from the mission a good feather bed, a large and a small tub, a small dinner pot, and sundry articles of clothing. Sr. H. has also received a large husk mattress (hair lined), a narrow iron bedstead, husk mattress and spread for do., a large tub, and a baking pan. Sr. B. has also received a pair of excellent linen sheets, and has other things in store for her. Sr. Valle has also received a nice quilt. These have been my co-laborers, who have worked for the cause without salaries, and who, though amongst the poor of this world, have often given all their little stock of funds to the cause. I believe that no true child of God will have aught to say against these and further donations to these faithful and self-denying sisters. The entire sum of money given to them all, for the six months, did not exceed $30.00; yet they never complained, but worked just as heartily as if they had received ten times that amount. Great will be their reward in the coming kingdom.

Our crockery has nearly disappeared. A year and a half has seen it pretty much broken up. The little folks, in learning to wash, wipe, and put away the dishes, would meet with accidents, and thus cups, saucers, plates and bowls disappeared one by one, till finally we substituted tin cups and plates, in order to save what few we had left. Our crockery was of the cheapest kind.

Sister Robertson, our last matron, left two weeks ago, to take the matronship of the "Midnight Mission" in this city. Sr. Valle will leave by and by for the Memphis Mission. In three weeks more our Home will close. I desire to make further donations to the assistants, and shall do so as the Lord may open the way. Our family numbers but eleven now, and in two weeks it will be reduced to eight, and then we shall soon be scattered. The Lord has graciously provided for our needs; we have always been kept free from debt. This month (July) we shall look for our gas bill, and bill for hall rent, which we believe we shall through the Lord be able to pay. At the time of closing up, I shall send a report of our affairs from now until that period. Continue to pray for your affectionate brother in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

Phila., Pa.

P. S. Received of Cornelia Starks, $1.00; a friend in New Bedford, $5.00; Mary Lovering, $2.00 (for personal use); Sister Green, $5.00; S. Harper, $2.00 (for personal use). Many thanks. May the God of heaven bless. These sums are included in the report above.

THE ADVENT CHURCH,

CORNER OF THIRD AND WASHINGTON STREETS, PHILADELPHIA.

The brethren who worship at this place having felt the necessity of order in the house of God, requested me to address them on the subject of gospel organization, on Sunday, June 14th, with which request I complied. The meeting was a good one; the Lord seemed to be with us, and we appointed the next Lord's day for the organization of a church. On that day, after a brief discourse and earnest prayer, we proceeded to assume the due form and order of a church of believers, worshiping the Lord Jesus Christ, and meeting in his name, by taking the names of such persons, male and female, who believe in the immediate personal coming of Christ, as wished to unite in church fellowship, and by electing the proper officers.

They agreed to adopt a simple covenant, binding themselves to walk according to the gospel; to have a watch-care over each other, and to take the word of God as their rule of faith.

The officers of the church are—Bro. Little, Elder; Bro. Fernandes, Deacon; Bro. Lockhart, Secretary; Bro. Clegg, Treasurer; Bro. Campbell was chosen Pastor. There is a society in connection with this church, through which some of the friends act efficiently with the body.

It might be well to observe that this church though small has seen the special need of order and the ordinances of the house of God. Now they believe the Lord, the great Head of the church, will bless them and send them the gifts that may be needed, and a good harvest of souls who shall praise God in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

I can not be there much, but shall feel interested for them, and hope those who can labor in word and doctrine, who may be called to come near, will, as the Lord shall direct, break to them the bread of life.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

ROCHESTER.

BRO. GRANT:—We have started the big tent, and design running it through July. The interest still continues. Three were baptized last Sabbath, and other three since I reported. Two worthy young men were ordained to the ministry of the gospel last Sabbath, and other two will soon take the same position.

O for strength and wisdom to stand on this watch-tower of God, amid the surrounding perils, to his acceptance. H. PRATT.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE SAINTS SCATTERED ABROAD.

"But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth."
"This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish."
"For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work."
"But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy.—JAMES 3: 14-17.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—Many of us are this year expecting the long looked for King from heaven. Have we on the whole armor, by which we can withstand the wiles of the enemy, or are we careless and indifferent, allowing the deceitfulness of the world to choke out the seed that has been sown in our hearts?

The adversary is trying every art to allure us from the strait and narrow way, knowing that he hath but a short time. Are we making religion the first business of our life, or are we allowing envy and pride to creep in our midst, and by so doing falling from our first love? Let us bear in mind that we must stand or fall for ourselves. It will never do to stumble over the imperfections of others. We should realize that we are all prone to wander, and we are more apt to see others' faults than our own; therefore we should bear with each other, knowing that patience worketh godliness. Above all things let us first cast the beam out of our own eye, then we can see clearly to pull the mote out of our brother's eye.

What if we do suffer persecution? Let us remember that our Savior was persecuted and crucified, that we through his death and sufferings might gain eternal life. Is an eternal life, free from pain and sorrow, of so little consequence that we are unwilling to make so small a sacrifice? Is it pleasanter to give way to the temptations of the devil, and have our hearts rankling with hate and revenge, and in the end suffer eternal death, than to enjoy the love of God in our hearts, and when Jesus comes reap life everlasting?

O, my brothers and sisters, let us be wise, and choose that good part that can never be taken from us. Let us show forth our faith by our works, and do every duty that God has enjoined upon us; and if we have but one talent improve that, and not bury it up because others have more than we. Do not let us be envious, but remember that we are all one in Christ Jesus. "By this know all men that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." But on the other hand, if we give way to vain janglings, and suffer a spirit of hate to take possession of our hearts, we are not the disciples of Jesus. We are servants to whom we yield ourselves servants to obey. We cannot serve two masters; for we shall hate one or the other. We may have been baptized, and our names may stand on the church book, and we have a name to live in the world; but all this will avail us nothing if we have not the love of God in our hearts. If we have the spirit of Christ within we shall love each other; and more than that, we shall love our enemies too.

Let us be sure we have oil in our vessels, and that our lamps are trimmed and burning, lest, while we are looking after the lamps of others, our own may go out and we be left to grope in darkness. R. LANNING.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

ELDER J. L. HOPKINS, of the Church of God in San Francisco, Cal., to all to whom these Presents shall come, sends Greeting:

Whereas, many of our friends in the States of California and Oregon, as well as some in the Atlantic States, may not be aware of the suspension of our periodical, "The World's Crisis and Times of Restitution." The last number issued and mailed to subscribers and exchanges was July 1866, No 2, Volume V.

When I commenced the above Publication I had an interest in two houses and lands in San Francisco. I gave "The World's Crisis and Times of Restitution" free of charge at my office, and mailed it free of charge to the poor of the Lord's people, and different denominations that wished for it, and to nearly all their preachers throughout California, Oregon, and Washington Territory. I always had a large free list and but few paying subscribers; even some that promised to pay have not yet done so. I continued publishing as long as my interest in houses and money lasted; and now I can sing the old Methodist Hymn—

"No foot of land do I possess.
No cottage in this wilderness,
A poor wayfaring man;
I lodge awhile in tents below,
And gladly wander to and fro,
Till I my Canaan gain."

In connection with our periodical, proclaiming in trumpet tones the end of this dispensation and the "good news" of the coming kingdom, I have labored incessantly as street preacher, generally speaking three times every Sunday, until about twelve months ago, when I was silenced by the police Judge.

After this I commenced a series of lectures in our little Antipas Hall, a place of rendezvous for the few faithful witnesses against the apostasy in this modern Babylon, where Satan dwells.

After our lectures closed, I was obliged to retire from public speaking in consequence of the diseased state of my lungs, liver, kidneys, and general loss of health, brought on by too much street preaching every Sunday.

During the past eight or nine months, when not confined to bed, I have constantly visited the steamboats leaving for the up-river towns, and the ocean steamers for Oregon, British Columbia, Panama, Nicaragua, etc., also the principal hotels of the city—as we have a large floating population. By this means I have been getting out my last publication, "Spiritualism Unmasked," by Miles Grant, three thousand edition, and the pamphlet before that, "Ghostology," by Wm. Sheldon, one thousand edition. These two works have given Orthodoxy and Spiritualism hard knocks, and prepared the people for further investigations of the truth.

Now that my health is improving, thank God, I am getting ready for the summer campaign, in preparing to issue a series of twenty new publications, of sixteen to thirty-two pages each, octavo, at 25 cts. per number, or $5 for the whole series. . . . .

After the publication of these works, I purpose to issue a series on prophetical subjects, such as, "The Destiny of the United States;" "The Fall of Great Britian;" "Ireland's Future;" "The coming Crisis on Rome;" "A Guide to the Prophecies of Daniel," with woodcut, "Curious Discoveries Relative to Palestine," and some half-dozen others.

The twenty publications I purpose getting out will go to show that the faith of Christendom is unscriptural and anti-christian, and will have the tendency to clear away the mist and fog that has settled down on the minds of the people for the past twelve centuries, and bring them to a knowledge of the christian teachings of the primitive church, which are now nearly lost, its principles, practices, usages, etc.

Now, to accomplish this good work, I propose to issue a large edition of the first number, "God only hath immortality," and send it by mail and other conveyance to every preacher, priest, rabbi, and clerical divine of all sects and denominations in California, Oregon, Washington Territory, Vancouver Island, British Columbia, Sandwich Islands, Japan and China, and invite their attention to the forthcoming numbers.

These publications will be a regular declaration of war on the modern theological world, Papal and Protestant.

Having stated what I intended to do, I now propose forming a Publishing Association to aid me in publishing this first work, and send it on its mission of love to both sides of the Pacific Ocean. As I have no money or property now, I give an opportunity to the lovers of truth to aid their Master's cause here on the Pacific Coast. My time and talents are wholly given up to the work of the Lord; and my great aim is to spread the truth, believing that the great day of the Lord is at hand, when I shall receive my reward.

Who now will help us on our way
The good news to proclaim,
Furnish the means, and take their pay
When Jesus comes to reign?

The friends of truth can take any amount of stock in this enterprise; rich and poor all can take an interest and aid the poor proclaimer of the kingdom's gospel, nearly single-handed and alone, here on the far western boundary of these dis-United States. A dollar, five or ten, one hundred or a thousand, can be well employed; the more shares taken the greater the number to which it will be sent.

Respond willingly to our call, and let the word go forth like autumn leaves scattering everywhere. I also solicit subscriptions for the whole series or any of them; but aid us all you can in your donation to the first work. We want to try and arrest the attention (if possible) of a lost world; the faster the funds come in, the quicker the pamphlets will be issued. Now, friends, rally for the spread of the truth! the times are ominous, and this may be the only opportunity you will have, of aiding in the attempt to awake the clergy from their intoxicated condition, from the wine-cup of the mother of harlots here on the Pacific Coast, and inform them that "God only hath immortality," and prepare them for further investigation, showing that the immortality of the soul, and the necessary departure from the sense of Scripture which this belief requires, is the basis of all sectarianism, and of all creeds;—my object being to bring back such into the unity of "the faith once delivered to the saints."

I also want some aid towards the Printing Fund, having had to hire use of type to get out the last publication. The shares in it are $1 each, for which a neatly printed certificate of stock for the number of shares subscribed, is sent to each stockholder. I also need a printing press, and if I had five or six hundred dollars, I could use it in this way to great advantage.

All letters addressed, Elder J. L. Hopkins, 1806 Stockton Street, San Francisco, Cal., will be duly acknowledged.

SPRINGWATER MEETING.

Our grove meeting at Springwater, June 20th and 21st, was a very blessed one, and we hope all will remember the time of our next meeting, in the same grove, in August next. Let all our brethren and sisters be in the grove promptly at one o'clock P. M., Saturday, Aug. 15th, and may Jesus be there in our midst.

Our annual conference, just closed at Rochester, was a great success. Bless the Lord, it was good to be there yesterday, which was the great and last day of that feast. We enjoyed many happy greetings, besides the holy joy of the hour. Two promising young men were formally consecrated to the work of the ministry. C. F. Sweet.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Tewksbury.

Bro. Grant:—I live within nine miles of Concord, N. H., where ever since 1843 the coming of the Lord and kindred doctrines have been preached; but strange as it may appear, no one to my knowledge has ever preached these doctrines in this town until about two years since; when in consequence of the sickness of my dear father (who has since died) I came here to live. Since that time Brn. C. C. Ramsey and Geo. C. Brown, of Boston, Sr. E. S. Jennings, and Brn. Ford and Walker from Concord, together with myself, have tried in our humble way to preach the gospel of the kingdom as we believe it is taught in the Scriptures of truth.

As might be imagined, we have met with some opposition, though we are happy to say that some few from the popular churches are willing, and anxious even, to hear; and two sisters from the Cong. church in town have been baptized, and are rejoicing that they ever saw the light. Others are willing to hear and read and search the Scriptures daily to see whether these things are so.

I sometimes feel humbled as I look back and recount the mercies of God to me individually. I trust I found Jesus to be precious when only twelve years of age; united with the Baptist church in this town at fifteen; soon after moved my relation to a Baptist church in Mass., where I lived till 1860. About this time, while a member of the Bap. church (having never heard an Advent man preach, that I recollect), a little tract fell into my hands teaching that man is wholly mortal. I read, and my eyes were opened. I saw the truth. I believed it. Then came the question, Shall I hide my light under a bushel, or shall I let it shine? Jesus tells me to let it shine. I have tried to do it. But, alas! I find that even professors of religion in our day, like those when the blessed Lord and Master was on earth, love darkness rather than light; and I sometimes fear it is for the same reason as when he was upon earth—"because their deeds are evil."

As a result of believing and advocating these blessed truths, myself and wife were excluded from the fellowship of the Baptist church, for believing and teaching erroneous and dangerous doctrines.

Soon after this we removed to Concord, N. H., where we found many dear brethren and sisters who sympathized with us in our views, with whom we met and prayed and held sweet counsel till our removal to this town, as I said, about two years since. We think we have learned to appreciate some precious promises of Jesus which were once a dead letter to us: "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil for the Son of man's sake."—Luke 6: 22. May the Lord help us so to live that we may not be persecuted for our faults, but for Jesus' sake.

Being the only one in town, within my knowledge, who is willing to come out from the world enough to leave his politics behind, I have become a speckled bird. Men of the world say, "Believe just what you please, but do not act like a fool." Glory to God, I feel I am willing to become a fool for Christ's sake. "For the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." Brethren and sisters in the Lord, I feel to lift up my head and rejoice, when I see the signs thickening that the Master said should take place just prior to his appearing. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Help us all to be ready. Brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may run and be glorified. Henry Tewksbury.

Hopkinton, N. H.

From Sr. B. F. Farnam.

Bro. Grant:—The "Crisis" accords more with our views than any other paper with which we are acquainted. Although I do not remember the time when I did not believe in the second personal coming of Christ to reign on the earth, yet I had not learned to look for him until since '43; since that time I have felt a deep interest in obtaining all the light I could on the time of his coming, but have never so longed for his immediate appearance as of late. I feel many times as if I could not wait. When any thing comes up that seems to show it may be deferred, my heart almost sinks within me. I long to see the kingdoms of this world given to Christ, and Satan's power destroyed; for what a fearful power he exerts.

There are but few in this place of like precious faith; but, thank God, there are some. The Presbyterian minister came out a year ago and preached a number of discourses, showing that Christ was coming to set up his kingdom and reign literally on the earth. This winter he said in the desk that he was convinced that it was the doctrine to be preached at this time, and took for his text, "Behold He cometh with clouds." He thinks he may come at any time. He is a good brother, and presents the truth as fast as he gets the light.

The Lord is pouring out his Spirit, and sinners are being converted in many places in this western country. But how many like Galilee "care for none of these things"; and iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. Truly we live in perilous times. We are in jeopardy every hour. Unless we cling closely to our Savior, and have our life hid with him in God, we shall come short of the kingdom at last. I have been a sojourner in this vale of tears over sixty-two years, and this year seems to be more eventful than any of the preceding ones. Trying to be Christ's, I hope to meet all the faithful in the kingdom.

Hillsdale, Mich. B. F. Farnam.

From Bro. Israel Damman.

To the saints scattered abroad, greeting: I find the same to do in the western states that I have done in the eastern; nothing but to preach the word of God, and live it out. I have the privilege at this time to be with Bro. Miles Grant, at the Burns campmeeting, an old fellow laborer in the gospel. We find warm-hearted friends here in the west. There is much to be done everywhere. As evils increase, so must our faithfulness. Union of effort is required. Lord, give us grace, is our cry daily. Brethren, pray for us. Love to all the saints. My P. O. address will be Sparta, Wis., for the month of July. Brethren, let me hear from you.

Israel Damman.

Burns, Wis., June 25th, 1868.

FRIENDS AND ENEMIES.

It was the saying of Socrates, that every man in this life had need of a faithful friend, and a bitter enemy; the one to advise him, the other to make him look about him. In dealing with a friend, a man is often deceived; but if he have to do with an enemy, then he is wary of his proceedings, and placeth his words discreetly. Hence it is, that much good cometh by enemies, and a good use may be made of them. They are workmen that fit us and square us for God's building; they are the rods that beat off the dust; and the scullions that scour off the rust from our souls. Were it not for enemies, how could we exercise those excellent graces of love and charity, of patience and brotherly kindness? Had it not been for enemies where had been the crown of martyrdom? Yet further, enemies are the fire that purgeth, the water that cleanseth the dross and filthiness of our hearts. Much every way is the good that cometh by enemies, if we make a right use of them.

Obituaries.

Burnham. Died at the residence of her father' May 28th, 1868, Sr. Marian Burnham, of Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., aged twenty-eight years.

Fifteen years of her life were spent in the service of her Savior, whom she loved. She had quite a history as an invalid, enduring her sorrows by sickness with fortitude and patience, and died, as she lived, hoping for salvation solely through the grace of God in Jesus Christ our Lord. We expect to see her again at the "first resurrection." The writer attended her funeral. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 22. C. F. Sweet.

Eastman. Died in East Canaan, N. H., June 28th, Allie Samuel, infant son of Bro. J. B. and Sr. Mary Eastman, aged four months and fifteen days.

"There my little ones, I know,
Round me shall be clinging;
There the loved of long ago
With me shall be singing."

THE SEWERS OF PARIS.

I shall not attempt any description of the objects of interest and splendor in Paris—the Tuileries, Louvre, Hotel de Cluny, Halles, Notre Dame, Madeleine, Champs Elysees Bois, de Boulougne, Versailles, St. Cloud, St. Germain, etc. etc., because another correspondent is describing to you the beauties in and around Paris, with a facility and grace of diction which renders any repetition needless, if not presumptuous. One or two things he may not describe; and among them portions of subterranean Paris, which in some respects are as wonderful as the city above. By invitation of an American gentleman residing here, we went down to examine the sewers. Let no one shrug his shoulders at the idea and disturb his imagination with thoughts of rats and foulness, for he would encounter no such things. We descended through a trap-door in the sidewalk, at the southwest corner of the church of the Madeleine, by a stone staircase, perhaps twenty feet long, and found ourselves in a great arched chamber, like a railroad tunnel, quite as large as would be required for an ordinary train of cars, and built of masonry in the neatest and most substantial manner. In the centre of this tunnel is a canal about six feet deep, and nearly filled with water, which has a flowing current of two or three miles an hour. This canal is walled with nearly perpendicular sides of stone, leaving a tow-path, if you choose so to call it, about three feet wide on either side. Of course the water is in the trench, or canal, leaving the walks dry; and the tunnel above clear and open space, lighted with gas or with lamps. At the foot of the staircase was a handsome gondola, capable of carrying twenty-five or thirty persons, and into this as many ladies entered and were drawn from the Madeleine to beneath the Place de la Concorde, by a tandem of twelve men uniformed in white blouses, dark pantaloons and blue caps. At this point the party took a train of five railroad cars, which had just arrived there with a party from a different direction. The rails are laid upon the top and edges of the walls of the canal; a fact which shows with what accuracy the masonry is laid. The cars are of oak, fitted with handsome and comfortable cane seats with backs, and a nicely polished brass fender surrounds each car, and an equally polished carcel lamp at each corner lights it. Each car will carry comfortably ten or twelve persons, and has a tongue or pole before and behind, shaped like a swan's neck, with a bar passed through the end and long enough to extend over the foot-path on either side of the rails. Four young men, swift of foot, propel each car, and when all was ready and the word was given, off they started at full speed and we were drawn through the tunnel as fast as legs could carry us, while the carriages were rumbling audibly in the streets over our heads. The whole distance is districted and labeled, so that all the while we knew which street we were under and the locality. By and by we wish to take a different direction from that we have been travelling, and the cars are placed upon a turn-table, and off they speed again, until we finally emerge at a point away down upon the Seine, two miles or more from our starting point.

The amount of labor expended in constructing these sewers is amazing; especially when it is stated that their length already exceeds three hundred miles. They are not all so large as the one described and cannot all be traversed. The air in them is not more disagreeable than that in a common railroad tunnel, as there are many ventilating places and passages for the escape of the multitude of men who live and labor in the sewers, in case of accident or a sudden rise of the water from violent rains or other causes. Besides this, only the surface water is allowed to flow into the sewers; economy having provided other means of saving whatever is fertilizing in the waste of a great city like this. The reason why any portion of the "sewers" of a city should be thus elaborately constructed may probably be found again in the military projects which enter into everything connected with Paris. And these sewers, with their wide paths and railroads, would be quite as appropriately termed "military ways," by which large bodies of troops could be secretly and speedily passed from one part of the city to another in case of need.—Cor. Journal.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

Paris, June 30. During the debate in the Corps Legislatif, the speakers of the opposition complained of the profuse expenditures in consequence of maintaining the French expeditionary corps in Italy, which was declared to be unnecessary, for the Italian Government was willing and able to check any attempt to disturb the present state of peace or to compromise her foreign relations.

Rome, June 30. A bull has been issued by the Pope, summoning a General Council of the Church to meet in the Vatican on the 8th day of December, 1869. The bull prescribes that all persons required to attend the council must appear either in person or by proxy.

Berlin, June 30. Bavaria has ratified the treaty with the United States for the protection of naturalized citizens.

Lisbon, June 30. The South American mail steamer has arrived from Rio Janeiro with dates to the 9th inst. Advices from Paraguayan sources state that the war was languishing, the Allies having made no hostile movement since their repulses in Gran Chaco. It was reported in Paraguay that the Congress of the Argentine Confederation would impeach Gen. Mitre for making an alliance with Brazil. The peace party in the Confederacy was in the ascendancy, and the election of Urquiz was considered certain.

Copenhagen, June 29. The delay in completing the transfer of the island of St. Thomas to the United States is represented to be accidental. The King has intimated that Santa Cruz will also be disposed of to the United States as soon as the claims of France, in connection with that Island, are settled.

Constantinople, July 3. Prince Napoleon dined to-day with the Sultan. The Viceroy of Egypt and all the Ambassadors of the foreign powers were present.

Hong Kong, May 23, via London July 3. Reports from the north state that the rebels have met with recent successes, and that Pekin is seriously menaced.

DOMESTIC.

New York, June 30. The Chippewa Chief, "Hole in the Day," was shot Saturday by three pillaging Indians at his residence.

New York, July 1. A Washington special says that Secretary Seward has nearly completed negotiations for the purchase of Greenland and Iceland from the Danish Government.

New York, July 1. The four Catholic Archbishops of the United States have united in a protest against the raising of a battalion for the Pope, believing the Papal authorities have been misled in the matter by an unworthy person, but urge the contribution of money for the use of the Pope.

New York, July 2. A special from North Adams to the Troy Times yesterday says that at the east end of the Hoosac tunnel three men were killed yesterday by the premature explosion of a blast.

ABOUT THE CHURCHES.

On Monday evenings of each week the great audience room of the Old Dutch Church North is thrown open for a "Service of Song." About five hundred people come together to sing sacred music. The Society find room, organist, leader, music books, and pay all expenses. Mr. Lauphin, who originated the Daily Fulton Prayer Meeting, originated this also. He intends to have a room up town for a daily evening prayer meeting.

Rev. Mr. Mingens, the City Missionary, has got the permit of the Mayor to hold meetings on Sunday for street preaching. Large crowds attend on each afternoon, and among the regular attendants are great numbers of the people of Israel.

The Catholics, so disturbed by the success of mission schools among the children of the lowly, and the success of the work in bringing vagrant and neglected little ones from the streets to school, to church and to good homes in the country, have created a Society to protect Catholic children from this inroad of Protestant schools. A large edifice is to be erected for a Refuge, and the corner-stone will be laid with imposing ceremonies on the 4th of July.

An attempt was made to bring all the Baptist churches in this city into one association. The New York Association, which holds about eight of the churches, agreed to the union. But the Hudson River South, after a smart discussion last week, put off the union another year.

A meeting to promote a union between the Old School and the New in the Presbyterian Church, was held on Sunday night, with a crowded house. The churches are not a unit on the matter of union, but the great majority are for it. Those churches that are not for Union sympathised with the South during the war, don't relish a union with loyal men, and would rather connect with the Church.

The Lay question in the Methodist Church is not yet a fixed fact. The matter of changing the organic law of the church so as to allow laymen to become a part of the Government has been referred back to the people, and to be very democratic and allow the church to say whether or no it wants the change. All the members are to vote, male and female. If the vote is aye that will not make the change. But the case must come up before the Local Conference, and from thence to the General Conference. So the change under any circumstances cannot take place under four years.—Correspondence of Journal.

Separation of the Siamese Twins.—The Tribune announces what it calls an interesting fact—namely: the determination of the Siamese twins—Chang and Eng—to submit to a surgical operation to divide the vitalized ligament which binds the two together, and which has united them for about sixty years. They are now settled in North Carolina on a farm, and one of them is the father of nine children. The reason for their determination, at this late day, to call in the art of surgery to produce an entire physical separation, is, that having reached such an advanced age (fifty-nine years) they are fearful that one may become the subject of disease, which may prove fatal to both. The interesting question arises, What are the probabilities of a successful operation being performed? This is no new inquiry, for soon after their first appearance in London and Paris it excited the minds of the foremost intellects in the surgical world. If we remember rightly, the "Twins" were exhibited before the Academy of Physicians and Surgeons in Paris at that time for the purpose of ascertaining their opinion in regard to the probabilities of a successful operation. The disagreement in regard thereto probably led to the project. The science of surgery has so rapidly advanced that to-day successful results can be promised when there was so much doubt a score or two of years ago. The twins contemplate visiting Paris for the purpose of having the operation performed.—Journal.

Items.

☞ A rope-walk in Trenton, N. J., has just turned out the longest wire rope ever made in one piece. It is 3700 feet in length; its diameter is over 2¼ inches, and its weight 20 tons.

☞ Rev. Morrill Allen of Pembroke is now ninety-three years of age, perfectly hale and erect, and retains all his mental and bodily faculties. He does his gardening with his own hands, besides superintending the work of his large farm. He occasionally, also, occupies his pulpit and preaches with vigor and effect.

☞ The monument to be erected over the grave of Lieut. General Scott, at West Point, is remarkable for its dignity and simplicity. It consists of a granite base, seven feet long, three wide, and one foot two inches thick. Upon this rests a single block of Italian marble. This block is six feet long, two feet wide, and two and a half feet high. It is a mere plain surface, except the inscription, which is in square, plain cut-raised letters in part, and the remainder in plain Roman. There is not an ornament about it; not even a molding, to break the severe simplicity and solidity of the massive stone.

☞ The railway over Mount Cenis was opened to the public on the 15th of June, and the journey from Susa to St. Michel was performed with perfect regularity and success. For the present there are to be two trains daily each way. The journey over the mountain, which, by the most rapid mode of conveyance, has hitherto occupied ten hours, can now be accomplished in half that time.

☞ A French vivandiere named Jeanne Hanchel, who went through all the battles of the republic, the empire and the revolution, died lately in Paris. She was 88 years old.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Volunteers Wanted!!

Wanted on the Springfield Camp-ground, eight or ten brethren who will give their labors towards fitting up the ground, and getting things in readiness for the meeting on the 24th of August. The committee have been to great expense in fitting up the buildings, etc., and are coming short of funds to complete the work. Therefore we call for help, and some who cannot give money, can give their time and labor, which is as good as money for the purpose. We want quite a number of men who love to work, on the ground by the tenth of Aug., to remain and work until the meeting. Send in your names to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., as soon as possible, that we may know in season how many we have. Provision will be made to board and sleep on the ground. In this way you can have your board through the meeting, and help us much in the week. Who will come?

Per order of Building Committee,
J. Hemenway.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting will commence Monday, July 27th, and continue over the following Sunday. Ample arrangements will be made to accommodate all with board and lodging (they bringing their bedding.) Bro. E. Bellows will be on the ground with his large new tent, which will seat nearly one thousand persons.

Now, brethren and sisters from abroad, and the regions round about, come to this gospel feast, for we are anticipating the blessing of the Lord with his pilgrims, as in years past. Bro. Geo. T. Adams will probably secure a reduction of fare on the Old Colony and Cape Cod railroad for those who come through Boston. For the committee,

Henry V. Davis.

Notice to the Churches.

As writing to the churches subjects a preaching brother to inconvenience, and sometimes causes delay in making appointments, and otherwise sometimes makes confusion, we have concluded to request such churches as desire our labors, to address us at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass., stating the time when our labors are desired; and any places desiring preaching, whether new fields or old ones, even though the encouragements may be few, if we can be notified, shall be supplied to the best of our ability. We shall keep our appointments published, so that by reference to the paper our engagements can be known, and our proximity to any particular place. We desire to visit places as the way opens, and have no choice except to have our appointments as convenient to each other as may be possible.

L. C. & M. McKinstry.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting on the old ground in Springwater, Aug. 14th, 15th, and 16th. Services at the school-house Friday evening, at half past seven o'clock, and in the grove on Saturday, at one P. M., and on Sunday at nine A. M. Come one and all. For the brethren, C. F. Sweet.

Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched for our next meeting at Gray Corner, Me., Wednesday, July 8th, to continue over the following Sunday. Friends coming will have to provide for themselves, as the place is entirely new to us. J. A. Libby.

"Antioch Tent"

Dearborn, Wayne Co., Mich., July 15th to 22d. Eld. W. L. Himes and others will help.

Notice for Dawson Centre and Owano will be given in time.

Preparations Needed. A pole twenty-eight feet long and three and a half inches through at the small end. Thirty-four hard wood stakes, three feet and three inches. Lumber and stakes to seat about five hundred persons. Four kerosene lamps. Some one to help guard the tent.

J. M. Snook.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. Smith.

The Maine Tract Fund.

Wm. H. Mitchell, R. R. York, S. K. Partridge, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. Libby, West Poland, Maine.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,
No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.
Anna E. Smith, Superintendent and Manager.

Meetings.
Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 3 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Narramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ Correspondents should know that we cannot discontinue or send their orders, unless they give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in plain letters.

☞ Mary A. Thorne—You want your paper changed, but we cannot tell what State you want it changed to, or where from. Let us know.

☞ A. Mosher—You are paid to 27th Jan. next.

☞ G. W. Green—It is to be published in a tract.

☞ E. Owen—We sent your tracts by M. U. Express to Bro. Ladd's office.

SPEED AWAY.

(Air found in the "Nightingale.")

Speed away, speed away,
On thine errand of light,
The news of the kingdom
Being almost in sight.
It quickens our hope,
And we ardently pray—
O come, blessed Savior,
No longer delay.
O, roll quickly onward
Ye slow hours of day.
CHORUS.—Speed away, speed away, speed away.

Speed away, speed away,
Ye heralds of light;
Go forth in His power,
And strength of his might.
O tell the glad tidings
To all his dear saints,
That Jesus is coming
To end their complaints.
O, pray for his kingdom,
And make no delay.

Speed away, speed away,
Old time, on thy course;
While we are rejoicing,
The promise rehearse;
For great are the blessings
Which we shall receive
Of glory and honor,
If we but believe.
Speed ye on, then, thou sun,
Stay not on the plain.

Speed away then, ye saints,
Speed ye on in your flight,
And think not to rest on
The dark plains of night.
But press for yon glory
That's shining for thee,
Where Christ is inviting
His saints to be free.
Speed away, do not tarry,
There's death if ye stay,
Speed away, speed away, speed away.

Portland, Me. WILLIAM C. CLARK.

For the World's Crisis.

SIGNIFIOANT.

BRO. GRANT:—I would call the attention of the readers of the Crisis to an article in the N. Y. Tribune, headed, "The War Prospect in Europe."* This article was called forth by reason of an announcement made in "Le Nord," the Russian organ in Paris, that war is to break out even before the close of next autumn." In the opinion of the writer of the article in the Tribune, the "Eastern question" will be the cause of the war; and facts in the political horizon justify this conclusion. The present attitude of Russia and Persia towards Turkey is very menacing, and a conflict must soon come. I believe this conflict will be in close proximity to the coming of Christ, and will cause the "midnight cry"—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh"; when it will be too late for any to obtain "oil," or get ready for the judgment; this work must be done (if at all) before the cry is made. Read carefully the parable of the ten virgins in Matt. 25.

The standing up of Michael, or one like God (Dan. 12: 1), takes place immediately, when the power denominated the "king of the north," in the closing verses of the eleventh of Daniel, comes to his end and none to "help him." The words, "none shall help him," are very significant, as in the great war between Russia and Turkey in '53 and '54, England, France and Sardinia combined assisted Turkey in frustrating the designs of Russia. But they will not be able to effectually deliver Turkey in the present case; the words of God will be fulfilled,—"None shall help him."

That the Turkish power is the one denominated "the king of the north," appears to my mind beyond question. It has been so regarded by eminent expositors of the Scriptures since the days of the Reformation; and there is no other power that fills the picture of the prophecy but the Turkish; besides, it is the last power that will occupy the Holy Land previous to the coming of Christ. In the Holy Land it is yet to plant the "tabernacles of his palace" (or tent of his camp), after having gone forth with "great fury, to destroy and utterly to make away many."

Seeing that we have the very best of reasons for expecting Christ to come on the tenth day of the seventh month of this present year, according to the Jubilee arrangement, and the setting up of "the abomination that maketh desolate" in A. D. 533, consequently ending the 1335 years of Dan. 12: 12 in this present year—1868; we are shut up to the conclusion that there will be, ere long, a sudden movement on the part of Russia and Persia, combined with the revolutionary element connected with the Christian population of Turkey, that will carry all before it, and force the Turks out of Europe into the Holy Land, where their power will be broken previous to the false prophet being cast into the lake of fire burning with brimstone. Rev. 19: 20.

It is asserted in a pamphlet lately published in St. Petersburg that there is in existence a Bulgarian revolutionary committee, of two years' standing, completely devoted to Russia, powerful enough to raise all Bulgaria in insurrection at twenty-four hours' notice. This, with the fact that an insurrection already exists in Bosnia and Servia, and the assassination of Prince Michael of Servia; the Cretan war still raging; the Persians ready to invade Turkey as soon as the order is given in St. Petersburg; Greece antagonistic to Turkey, and in sympathy with the Cretans; all these facts combined must involve Turkey in a sea of troubles in which she must soon be swamped. Besides, these enemies almost entirely encircle her geographically.

If these things combined are not ominous of the future when the prophecy is so explicit, what evidence can the Lord give us to awaken within us faith and confidence? I fear many of the servants of Christ are recreant to their trust and duty in holding back the light, fearful, full of spurious caution that the judgment trump will scatter to the four winds; this must be so if we are right in the time argument for the Lord's coming this present year; and it has not yet been invalidated in a single point.

By the help of God I mean to speak out my convictions as to what is truth touching the time of the Lord's coming, regardless of my reputation, which was sacrificed on the altar of the Lord twenty-five years ago. I do not mean to be rash in this matter, neither do I mean to be stupid. It is a lamentable fact, and significant of evil, that but few of our Advent churches wish the "time argument" preached to them. Some prominent Advent preachers are afraid that the works already published on the time, will hereafter be a lot of useless lumber.

The great danger consists in withholding the light. We had better be aroused by ten alarms of fire, with nine of them false, than to have the tenth consume us with our families in the flames. The devil would have us believe that all the danger consists in—What if it does n't come? when the reverse is true—What if it does come? The duty of God's servants is to give the light that God, in his providence and word gives them, without regard to consequences. I have repeatedly been called a fool, and said to be ruining myself, in reference to worldly possessions, because I regarded the word of God paramount to every thing else; but I have not yet regretted the steps I have thus far taken in following Christ, who was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich. Well might Moses esteem the reproach of Christ greater riches than all the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of reward.

When God by his Spirit and word converted me into the truth of his speedy coming and the judgment, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood, although a member of good standing in the Baptist church in Brookline, Mass. The truth of God was more dear to me than father or mother, houses or land, brothers and sisters, and (if I mistake not) of life itself. For I have not thus far suffered any of these things to prevent me from witnessing to small and great the speedy coming of the judgment and kingdom of God.

And now as the evidence increases and brightens, which makes it evident that the King is about to come, it is no time to falter, or suffer the world to invade us, and we become entangled by "the cares of this life, so that day come upon us unawares." "For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell upon the face of the whole earth."—Luke 21: 35. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of the light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night, nor of darkness."—2 Thess. 5: 4, 5.

The church of Christ should groan for his coming, as being burdened, while "waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." Now we see the "purchased possession" marred by sin, under the blighting influence of the curse, groaning under its load, waiting its redemption. How can we help sympathizing with groaning creation, if we have "the first fruits of the Spirit," and with our suffering Redeemer, who has purchased it by his own blood? Shall we not desire the day to be hastened, that the works of the devil may be destroyed, and that Christ may "see the travail of his soul and be satisfied," and his own prayer be answered?—"Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me, where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world."—John 17: 14.

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen. L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

DIFFIDENCE.

Looking over the columns of one of our local papers the other day, my eye rested upon the obituary of a schoolmate. Many excellent traits of character were mentioned as belonging to her, but yet she was spoken of as a diffident christian. Naturally timid and reserved, a stranger might misjudge her; but her intimate friends appreciated, loved, and admired her.

In this one point, at least, I can understand her character and feelings by my own experience. Often when my heart is full, I have not confidence and courage to speak freely, but the feeling of diffidence comes over me and bears down upon me with such force that I cannot express my feelings as I would. But trusting in the Lord, and praying for his help, I am resolved to bear my cross, and do my duty.

In the little poem of the "Changed Cross" are several verses so well suited to my case, and doubtless to many others also, that I will transcribe them here.

"At length I raised to Him my saddened heart,
He knew its sorrows, bade its doubts depart.
'Be not afraid,' he said, 'but trust in me,
My perfect love shall now be shown to thee.'

And then with lightened eyes and willing feet,
Again I turned, my earthly cross to meet,
With forward footsteps, turning not aside,
For fear some hidden evil might betide;

And there in the prepared, appointed way,
Listening to hear and ready to obey,
A cross I quickly found of plainest form,
With only words of love inscribed thereon.

With thankfulness I raised it from the rest,
And joyfully acknowledged it the best,—
The only one of all the many there
That I could feel was good for me to bear."

Webster, Mass. SUSAN S. CHAMBERLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

"BE YE HOLY."

Are the people who profess to love and serve God, as a general thing wholly consecrated to his service? They certainly ought to be. "Be ye holy, for I am holy," saith the Lord, and if we would have the "mind of Christ," we must strive to be like him.

The majority of professing christians seem to be satisfied with being justified, and look upon holiness as something to which they cannot attain; and why is it? Simply because of unbelief. When they read in God's word that the "spirit of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin," and that the power of God is able to keep us from all unrighteousness; that through faith we are enabled to walk in all the ways of God blameless until his appearing, they are very apt to think that does not mean me; and if asked why they are not wholly consecrated to the Lord, they begin like the guests that were bidden to the feast, to make excuses, and say we have so much to try us and tempt us, we could not live a life of entire consecration if we undertook it. But be assured, that is just what you want to keep you from sinning in all these trials.

It will not do for us to sit down and fold our hands, and say because we have been baptized and joined a church, there is nothing more for us to do. It will not do for us to adorn these poor frail bodies with all the foolish finery of these last days, and then say we are looking for the coming of Christ; because if we do, people will wonder why we do not live and dress according to our profession. God intended for his people to be a peculiar people, "zealous of good works," not given to the adornment of our bodies, to light and trifling conversation, gossiping about the affairs of our neighbors and friends, and thus wasting precious time which ought to be spent in doing good.

Paul, in writing to his brethren, commanded them to "grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth"; and if we try to do this, we shall have no time to spend in foolish jesting, and trying to outdo our neighbor in appearances. And, christian brother or sister, if you have much of this world's goods; if you have time and talents, and have not consecrated them all to your Lord, from whom you receive "every good thing," hasten to do so. We believe the Lord is soon coming, and that we all are to give an account of our stewardship. Let it not be said of us ye have "heaped up treasures to yourselves for the last days." But may we be "rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for yourselves a good foundation against the time to come, that you may lay hold of eternal life."

TENT MEETING IN YORKSHIRE.

Editor World's Crisis:—

The meeting is closed, the canvas is down, the seats are vacated, the gate is shut, the servants of God are gone, and the trees, that stood sentinel over the tent and the host that sat under its shadow, are waving over the bare and trodden turf. The spot just now populous is empty, and the air that was vocal is still. But the meeting will live in memory until the day of judgment, nor in memory only either, but in precious fruits. Souls have been gathered, backsliders reclaimed, and saints comforted, quickened, and edified. Nay, more; the truth of God has sounded out in the ears of vast assemblies, truth pertinent to the time, while the sublime and mighty reality of the returning Son of man, a glory poised and imminent, awaits the decisive signal from the Ancient of days.

The sessions of this meeting have been an era in the history of this region. How solemn the occasion, how precious the opportunity, how grand and awful the issues! It is not easy to exaggerate in such a momentous period as this. We can say, comprehensively at least, though thousands are lost in the great day, God has been glorified here.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the able and faithful brethren, Wendell and Fenn, who, with the aid of Brn. Cotton, Newell, and Blain, boldly and effectually held forth the word of life. In spite of opposition, the truth has won blessed trophies. Twenty-two were baptized, and probably a dozen more will soon follow.

We have formed a band of the followers of Christ, which we expect will very soon reach half a hundred in number, and God is able to give us many more. We have faith in the triumph of truth and salvation, in spite of Satan and wicked men incensed. Jesus is coming, and we have a definite expectation. The prize is eternal life and glory in a literal kingdom, and that near at hand. We have no sympathy for the fables of men.

May God help us to keep at good arm's length all the sophisms of vain philosophy, the lies of tradition, the conceits of pride, the errors and illusions of a popular and perverted theology. And oh, what a post of honor to defend the truth! Far beyond the highest reach of human ambition or earthly glory is the prize Jesus has promised to the happy number that keep His word.

And to me, as an unworthy helper in the cause, and standard bearer for the band in Yorkshire, no royal diadem has one moment's attraction in comparison with the ineffable riches of that reward which our Lord has promised in Luke 12: 42-44. Lord, it is enough. To God be all the glory. God bless the brethren with the tent. C. COLEGROVE.

THE SPIRIT OF MAN—WHAT IS IT?

We come to notice the word roo-agh, where it is rendered spirit, and to show, as we think we can, plainly and incontrovertibly, that the word is never used to represent an intelligent, immortal entity in man. The primary meaning of roo-agh, is wind, air, breath, and is used sometimes to signify what is supposed to be electricity in the air, or in other words may be termed the vitalizing principle in the atmosphere which, taken into the lungs, imparts to the blood its life-sustaining power, by which the nervous system is being replenished with the vitality that comes from God, "for in him we live and move and have our being." Truly "God is the God of the spirits of all flesh," in that he hath imparted to every living creature a portion of his spirit; the atmosphere is supplied with this life-giving element, by which all animal and vegetable life is sustained, without which all vegetables and animals would speedily die and waste away.

A FEW EXAMPLES.

Roo-agh occurs for the first time in Genesis 1: 2. "And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the (roo-agh) spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." In this text the word roo-agh is used to represent that spirit influence by which God makes manifest his creative energy and power. This invisible spirit agency, or influence, moved upon the face of the waters in the morn of creation, and as the result, order, arrangement, light and beauty, appeared in the place of confusion and darkness.

The second example we notice, is found in Gen. 41: 38. "And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such an one as this, a man in whom the (roo-agh) Spirit of God is?" In this text, roo-agh signifies the "Holy Spirit" of God, which enabled Joseph, the person referred to, to perform wonders in Egypt, whereby Pharaoh and his court were astonished. God was with Joseph, speaking and working through him by his Spirit.

Again, take another example, in Gen. 6: 3. "And the Lord said, My (roo-agh) Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh; yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." This passage has reference to the antediluvians, with whom the Spirit of God would not always strive. The Spirit here spoken of is undoubtedly the Holy Spirit, by which the world was warned of the coming flood, through Noah, for one hundred and twenty years. We now pass to those examples where (ROO-AGH) SPIRIT MEANS A DISPOSITION OF MIND.

Eccl. 7: 8, 9. "The patient in (roo-agh) spirit is better than the proud in (roo-agh) spirit." "Be not hasty in thy (roo-agh) spirit to be angry." Again, Gen. 26: 35. "Which were a grief of (roo-agh) mind with Isaac and Rebekah." Ex. 6: 9. "Moses spake so unto the children of Israel; but they hearkened not unto Moses for anguish of (roo-agh) spirit and for cruel bondage." 1 Sam. 1: 15. "Hannah answered and said, . . . I am a woman of sorrowful (roo-agh) spirit." Comment on the above examples is unnecessary. The meaning of the word spirit in all this class of Scripture passages is too obvious, it would seem, for any one to mistake its meaning. Still, mankind have become so accustomed to take the word spirit as meaning an immortal soul entity in man, that the plainest passages in the book of God are liable to be understood as teaching something entirely foreign and contrary to the obvious meaning of its language. If the reader desires to see further examples, where the word means a disposition of mind, we refer him to the following:—Gen. 41: 8; Dan. 2: 1-3; Dan. 4: 19; 1 Kings 21: 5; 2 Chron. 21: 16; 2 Chron. 39: 22; Prov. 31: 23; Isa. 29: 10.

We now proceed to notice a few examples where the word (roo-agh) spirit is used to represent

THE BREATH OF LIFE.

Isa. 11: 4. "With the (roo-agh) breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked." Job 37: 10. "By the (roo-agh) breath of God, frost is given." Eccl. 3: 19. "Yea, they [both man and beast] have all one (roo-agh) spirit or breath." Isa. 33: 11. "Ye shall bring forth stubble; your breath as fire shall devour you." Jer. 10: 14. "His molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them." Roo-agh is rendered breath twenty-eight times. We could give further examples of its use, but it is unnecessary, as we have, on a previous page, given a number of passages where it is rendered breath.

We therefore pass to notice a passage often adduced and urged against our views as an objection. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the (roo-agh) spirit unto God who gave it." Eccl. 12: 7. This text is thought by many to be a complete refutation of what is vulgarly termed "soul-sleeping," or, in other words, what we term the unconscious state of the dead. When we attempt to show that dead men are dead, and "know not anything," as Solomon declares, an objector at once brings forward this text to prove—what? That man has a spirit? This is not denied. What, then, is the text brought forward for? To prove that when man dies his spirit returns to God who gave it? This point is not disputed. We admit that the text proves: 1. That man has a spirit. 2. That when man dies, his spirit returns to God who gave it. These two points we have no disposition to dispute, for we believe them as heartily as any one. But when it is claimed that the text teaches that man is in possession of an immortal spirit, that leaves the body at death and remains in a state of consciousness as an immortal spirit-being, we are at once constrained to enter our protest against it, for the text teaches no such thing. Solomon does not contradict himself by saying, in Eccl. 9: 5, that "the dead know not anything," and in Eccl. 12: 7, that men never die by virtue of having an immortal spirit, which, on the dissolution of the body, moves away to heaven like an angel, to know more than all the living. No, indeed; the wise man no where teaches that there is in man an immortal spirit.

What, then, are we to understand by the phrase, "the spirit returns to God who gave it"? We answer, simply the breath or spirit of life which God gave man at his creation. The word spirit, in the foregoing text, comes from the Hebrew word roo-agh, which we have shown on previous pages is common to both man and beast. This breath or spirit, when man dies, goes back into the hands of God who gave it. The same word (roo-agh) occurs in Ps. 104: 29. "Thou takest away their (roo-agh) breath, or spirit; they die, and return to their dust." The same word roo-agh also occurs in Ps. 146: 4. "His (roo-agh) breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, and in that very day his thoughts perish." When God takes away from man his (spirit) breath, he returns to dust, and in that very day his thoughts perish. God gave man originally the breath of life; this we can read in the record of creation, but no where on the pages of Holy Writ can we read that God ever gave to man an immortal spirit, nor can we read any where in God's book that such a spirit leaves man at death. We, therefore, claim that the doctrine that affirms that there is in man an immortal spirit which moves moves away at death to heaven or hell, is groundless, and without one particle of proof to sustain it.

In this connection we will notice another passage which is so often quoted to prove that there is in man something that cannot die. It is in Zech. 12: 1. "The burden of the Word of the Lord for Israel which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the (roo-agh) spirit of man within him." We see nothing in this passage to prove that man has an immortal spirit. The text simply affirms God to be the creator of heaven and earth and the (roo-agh) breath of life within man. In Amos 4: 13, we read, "For, lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the (roo-agh) wind, the Lord, the God of hosts is his name." The Lord God who laid the foundations of the earth, formed the mountains and unrolled the starry heavens, also created the (roo-agh) wind, breath of life, by which all living creatures live. This breath—spirit of life is within man, but when taken away he dies, returns to dust, and in that very day his thoughts perish. Ps. 146: 4. In Num. 16: 22, we read, "And they fell upon their faces and said, O God, the God of the (roo-agh) spirits of all flesh." All living creatures have a portion of this (roo-agh) spirit of God. This breath of life is common to all the animal creation. God giveth it to them, therefore he is truly the God of the spirits or breath of all flesh. "There is a (roo-agh) spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Job 32: 8. This text is sometimes presented as being opposed to our views. But it really proves nothing more than what is conceded and believed, viz., that there is in man a spirit. There are various kinds of spirit or spirits. There is the spirit of envy, of pride, of meekness, of patience; then there is what Paul terms the spirit of the world, which worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience. Now, quoting a text showing that there is a spirit in man, does not prove the point called in question at all. Produce the text that says there is in man an undying spirit, and we will forthwith yield the point, and all controversy concerning the subject will cease. Again, Job 27: 3 says, "The (roo-agh) spirit of God is in my nostrils." Surely Job does not intend to have us understand that there is an immortal, intelligent spirit-being in his nostrils. What then does he mean by this language? Simply that the breath of life was in his nostrils, and nothing more; when man dies, this breath or spirit returns to God who gave it. This spirit is not the thinking, intelligent, responsible man, divested of a mortal body, which it has left behind to moulder in the tomb. By no means. Such a notion is all assumption without any authority. If God's word taught such a doctrine, we would of course be willing to believe it; but as it does not, we reject it as absurd. God made man of the dust of the ground, and when man dies he returns to dust again, there to remain until the resurrection of the dead. When Jesus comes the second time, he will raise up his people from the state of death. He does not bring their "immortal souls" or "deathless spirits" down from heaven, but he comes to gather his saints unto himself, that they may, conjointly with him, inherit the kingdom, and share its honor and glory. The plain word of God is better than the fables of men. Let us believe his word, though the heavens fall. . . .

Though we have searched the Old Testament through, yet in no instance can we find one single example where the word is used to represent an immortal spirit entity in man. Surely if Moses and the prophets, who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," did not teach that man is immortal, or that he is conscious between death and the resurrection, where shall we go to find it? If it be a fact, that every man is in possession of an undying spirit, is it not strange that Moses and the prophets do not so express themselves? Why are they silent upon a subject of so much importance? Can the advocates of "immortal-soulism" give us a reason why the Old Testament writers have not in some way, either directly or indirectly, taught what is so popularly believed in this day, viz., that the spirit of man is immortal? We are willing to admit that many honest and well-meaning people believe that they have within them an immortal spirit, and earnestly contend for what they sincerely believe to be true. But we are, nevertheless, constrained to lift up our voice against what we cannot help regarding as an error destructive of the faith once delivered to the saints. The word of God in its simplicity is better than a fable, be it ever so popular; while the approbation of our heavenly Father is more to be desired than the applause of men. We, therefore, take our stand upon the side of truth, leaving the result with Him "who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the heart."—Herald of the Kingdom.

RITUALISM.

The wife of a poor drunken sot
Sat down in grief to mourn her lot,
Contrasting her once happy life
With present fate—a drunkard's wife!
'T was late at night, and as she mourned,
He, who had once been kind, returned,
And, staggering by the table's side,
Ordered it spread and well supplied.
She answered calmly, but with tears,
"Alas! I realise my fears;
Our ruin is almost complete,
No means, no friends, no food to eat!"
"Bring bread," he roared impatiently.
"There's not a crumb to bring," said she.
"If you've no bread," he said, "bring meat."
She answered, "There is nought to eat."
"Then bring," he cried, "knife, fork, and plate,
That eating I may imitate;
I'll use my very best endeavors
To put myself through the manœuvres."
She brought the plate, and knife, and fork,
And he at carving went to work,
And, by his skill in imitation,
Devoured an unsubstantial nation!
Did such manœuvering do him good,
And give the strength of real food?
Must we not judge, by reason's rule,
That Rum had made the man a fool?

Friend Ritualist, I pray draw near,
And let me whisper in thy ear:
This story of the sot is given
To warn thee of deceitful leaven.
Hast thou not read of Patmos wonders,
Visions of vials, seals and thunders;
And learned the mystery of the Harlot,
Drunken with blood, and robed in scarlet?
By this prophetic scene we trace
A fallen church,—fallen from grace,
Blaspheming heaven with her manœuvres
Of fleshly forms,—mere cobweb covers.
God is a Spirit, and he seeks
Not pious shams, nor priestly freaks;
But men of truth and truthful deeds,
That follow where his Spirit leads.
Friend, shun vain antics, or go home,
Straight back to thy old mother Rome;
Her magic is more ancient, greater;
Be not a third-rate imitator.
Rome laughs at thy poor imitation,
Thy specious plea for reformation;
And well she may, for Reason's rule
Permits her to pronounce thee—fool!

Oh, Christian Church! awake, arise,
And tear the bandage from thine eyes;
From man let all thy children cease,
And tread the path of Righteousness.
The day draws near—the day of trouble—
That shall consume hay, wood and stubble.
Oh day of fire! who shall abide
When human actions shall be tried?
Lord, circumcise each trembling heart,
Make us from folly to depart,
Bring us to stand before thy face
Redeemed, restored, by sovereign grace.

Newark, N. J. JOHN LYLE.

NOTE. The Catholic World for July, 1868, in an article entitled, "Condition and Prospects of Catholics in England," makes the following remarks,—"The Ritualist parsons are busy fraying the way for Roman missionaries. Their altars are draped in colors according to the season, acolytes bend before them and serve, water is mixed with their sacramental wine, lights are burning at their communions, the Host is elevated, their robes are gorgeously embroidered, and dense clouds of incense mount before their shrines, as if they were dedicated to the God of unity under the patronage of Catholic saints. Many of their flock are deluded by this empty pomp, but many also are led by it to the true springs of faith, and the observance of a better ceremonial."

GOOD MEN SETTING A BAD EXAMPLE.

A brother writes of a good preacher who is kind and liberal, and preaches for nothing, and supports himself. He does this because he has a secular business that gives him a a support outside of the church. But all preachers can't do this. And so when poor and dependent ministers preach to the churches that have had the gosple free—they neglect to pay them. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." And if some have indulged the churches in a habit of doing nothing, by taking nothing from them, it is no reason why they should not give a just support to the ministry who give themselves to this very thing, and must have a support or leave the field.

It has long been our opinion that if a preacher will not take anything for his own labor from the fact that he is supported otherwise, he ought to take from the churches what is just and right and put it into the missionary fund. This would be a blessing to the churches. For we never knew a church to prosper in all good things that worshiped God with that which "cost them nothing." Churches that have done the most good, and shed a light and lustre on the world, have been the liberal, sacrificing class. They have denied themselves of many things that they could do without for the sake of helping the cause of Christ.

Let all those ministers among us who are able to support themselves do so, if they wish. But at the same time tell the churches to pay them for the missionary cause what they give to the dependent minister who supplies them; otherwise, they will do a bad thing, to bring up the churches in covetousness.

When a poor minister follows these men, they are likely to return to their families empty. Will the more favored brethren look at this matter in its right light? Who among them will put these offerings into the treasury of the Lord?—Voice of the West.

LITTLE KATIE.*

Ah! Katie, darling, can it be
That we no more thy form shall see?
And are we left so soon to mourn?
So quickly were you from us torn,
We hardly realise thy death,
So suddenly are we bereft.
'T was hard to see thy parents weep
Above the couch where thou didst sleep.
Ah! Katie, on thy sunny brow
Stern death has set its signet now;
Thy lonely parents ne'er shall greet
The welcome patting of thy feet,
Nor hear the prattling of thy voice
That oft has made their hearts rejoice,
Nor sigh with sympathetic pain
Above thy weary couch again.
The sad home circle, draped with woe,
Would cause a stranger's tears to flow.
But such is life; we weep with those Whose cup of sorrow overflows,
And blend with theirs the scalding tear,
And prove our sympathy sincere.
Kind friends and neighbors gather there
To soothe a father in despair,
To cheer a mother's lonely breast,
The pastor says, with solemn air,
To both the old and young, "prepare
To meet thy God; for none can tell
For whom will toll forth next the bell."
Alas! we soon shall pass away;
Prepare ye, then, without delay;
Soon Christ will come on earth to reign,
And those now dead will live again.

THE GIANT SELFISHNESS.

The giant Selfishness is an ugly-looking creature. If he could be caught in a bodily shape, and carried to the photographer's to have his likeness taken, I am sure that, when you came to look at his picture, you would think it about the ugliest that you had ever seen.

How many eyes have you? Two. How many ears? Two. How many hands? Two. And how many feet! Two. Yes; God has given us each two eyes, two ears, two hands and two feet, as if it were to remind us that we are to see and hear, and work and walk for others, as well as for ourselves. But how many mouths have you? One. Yes; for we have to eat for ourselves only, and not for others. But the giant Selfishness never sees, or hears, or does anything for any one but himself. If we had a correct likeness of him, we should see a huge one-eyed, one-eared, one-armed monster, with his other eye, and ear, and arm shrivelled and dried up like a mummy's, for want of use. The business of this giant is to take people prisoners, and drag them to his castle. If they stay there long, they begin to grow just like him, one-sided looking creatures. I do not mean to say that this change takes place in their bodies, but it does in their souls. They think and care for none but themselves. This giant is trying all the time to bind his chains on people, and make them prisoners. He likes to do this while they are young.

But if he does not appear in a bodily form, how may we know when he is trying to fasten his chains on us, and make us prisoners? Let me tell you. If you find that you are getting to think more of yourself than of others, then be sure that the giant is near to you. If you see a boy or girl enter a room and go and take the best seat in it, when older persons are present; if you see them pick out for themselves the largest piece of cake, or the biggest and nicest apple, when they are passed around, you may be sure that the giant Selfishness is at work on them. He is fastening his chains upon them, and, if they do not take care, he will soon have them prisoners.

Now we must all fight this giant. But how are we to do this? Not by standing off at a distance and throwing stones at him. This will not do. No; this must be a close, hand-to-hand fight. We must fight this giant by self denial.

There were two little boys named James and William. One day, as they were starting for school, their father gave them each a penny to spend for themselves. The little boys were very much pleased with this.

"What will you buy, William?" said James.

"I don't know yet," William replied.

"Mother is sick," said James; "I'll buy her an orange. I think it will taste good to her."

"You may do so, if you please, James," said William; "but I am going to buy something for myself, and I mean to do it. If mother wants an orange, she can send for it."

"I know that," said James; "but then it would make me feel so happy to see her eating on orange that I had bought for her with my own money. She is always doing something for us."

"Do as you please," said William; "but I intend to buy some candy."

Presently they came to a confectioner's shop. William laid out his penny in sweet candy. James bought a nice orange, and when they reached home he went into his mother's room and said, "See, mother, what a nice orange I have brought you."

"It is, indeed, a fine one, my son, and it will taste very good to me. I have been wanting an orange all the morning. Where did you get it?"

"Father gave me a penny this morning, and I bought an orange with it."

"You are very good, my dear boy, to think of your sick mother. You have denied yourself that you might get an orange for me." Then she threw her arms around his neck and kissed him.

Now, here you see how the giant Selfishness made an attack on these two boys. James drove him off bravely, by the exercise of self-denial. William refused to exercise self-denial, and so the giant got a piece of his chain around him. We shall find this giant making attacks upon us all the time. We can only fight him off by self-denial.—Dr. Newton.

AOT YOUR LOVE, BOY.

"Willie," said Mrs. Mills to her little boy, "I wish you to do an errand for me. "Won't you put on your hat and go quickly, for I am in haste?"

"O mother," whined Willie, "I want to finish this boat; can't Harry go? I've brought in some wood, and—and"—"Now, mother," responded Harry, "I don't want to go, I've been to the pasture with the cow this morning, and that's a great deal more than Willie's done."

A look of pain passed over the gentle face of Mrs. Mills, at these fretful excuses of her boys, but they were too absorbed in their selfishness to notice it. "I am very sorry," said she, "that my little boys are so unwilling to help their mother."

This mild reproof aroused the boys somewhat, for they both had loving hearts, and knew very well what was right; so Willie listened a little to his conscience, and said, "Well, I'll go;" and Harry, rather ashamed of the part he had acted, added, "I can go, I suppose, if Willie don't want to." "You may go, Willie," said his mother. So he laid aside his boat, and prepared to obey his mother, but it was not done in that glad, willing manner, that boys should always have when waiting upon or doing any thing for their mother.

And now I wonder what my little friends will say about this kind of obedience. Some of you I fancy, will say that it is a very poor sort. Others will perhaps think, if they don't like to say it aloud—"O, dear, you make a great ado about such a little thing as that—Willie minded his mother." But I can't make it seem a little thing for any boy or girl to wilfully or carelessly give their mother one pang of sorrow. Willie did the errand, to be sure, but in what kind of a spirit did he do it? And I am sorry to say that it had become quite a habit, both with him and Harry, to always have some trivial excuse ready when asked to do any thing, so that it became very unpleasant to ask any favor of them. And even though they performed the request, do you think it gave the same pleasure that it would if they had done it in a cheerful manner? O, no, indeed, it did not, for they so plainly showed that it was not for love they did it. And how many times that mother will do things herself, rather than see those cloudy looks she knows would come.

O, boys, love your mothers, and not only love them in your careless way, but show your love by being tender and attentive towards her. Watch for chances to lighten her cares, and when she speaks to you, stop your talk or play, and listen to what she says. If you only knew in how great a degree you are responsible for her happiness or sorrow, you would be very careful how you caused her pain, but always try to give her joy, and so save yourselves a thousand pangs in after life, and also reap a rich reward every day from your approving consciences, as well as your mother's loving smile. Try it, boys, and see if it is n't so.—Zion's Herald.

NAUGHTY FINGERS.

"Mamma," said Kitty, after she was undressed, "this finger and this thumb have been naughty."

"What have they done?" asked mamma.

"They took some raisins from your cupboard," said the little girl.

"Did they do it of their own accord? Did nobody tell them to do it?" asked mamma.

Kitty look down. "I did not hear anybody tell them," she said softly.

"Did they eat the raisins?" asked mamma.

"They put them in my mouth," answered Kitty.

"Were you not to blame for taking them? asked mamma; "your fingers had no right to them, you know."

"They gave them to me," said the little girl.

"But the Bible says, 'If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off.' Must we cut any part of this little hand off?" asked mamma.

"What is offend?" asked the child.

"Making you do wrong," said mamma.

"But it was only one finger and thumb," said Kitty.

"They are two little thieves, then; for they took what did not belong to them. They can not be trusted; we must shut them up," said mamma.

Kitty looked very sorry, while her mother found some black cloth and wound it round, first the finger, then the thumb. Her hand felt very clumsy. She went to bed, and rose in the morning with them still shut up.

"Shall I take this ugly black cloth off now?" she asked, on going to be washed.

"Oh, no," said mamma, "We have no proof that they are sorry yet; therefore it is not safe to trust them; they may go directly into the cupboard again."

"I am sure they are very sorry," said Kitty, in a pitiful tone.

"But they have not said so," said mamma.

Kitty went down to breakfast with the ugly black rags on. How she took her spoon, I cannot tell. I do not think she ate much, for she looked unhappy.

By and by, the little girl came to her mamma, with tears rolling down her sorrowful face.

"Mamma, she sobbed, "it was I made my fingers naughty, I, naughty I. I'm to blame."

"Oh, then," said mamma, "let us set the poor captives free;" and off came the black rags directly. Mamma took the little fat hand in hers and said, "These fingers are pinching fingers, or stealing or striking fingers, just as little Kitty says. They are her little servants, which God gave her to be usefully employed."

"And they shall be, mamma," cried the child. They are not to blame; it is only I, naughty I. I am so sorry."

Mamma took Kitty aside, and knelt down; and mamma prayed God to forgive this little child for taking what did not belong to her, and then wickedly trying to throw the blame somewhere else. Kitty put up her hand for mamma to kiss, and she tried to be a good little mistress to her poor little fingers after that.—Montreal Witness.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

"Uncle Joseph, Uncle Joseph, please tell us what makes every one like you so well?"

This was asked by some half-dozen bright-eyed, eager-looking little fellows, who clustered around a white-haired old man, with a very pleasant face. Indeed, Father Time had left his marks there deep and strong; but it was a very true and clear letter of praise, that those who ran might read.

Uncle Joseph answered, "Why, boys, what has come over you to ask me such a question as that?"

One little boy answered, "Well, uncle, I'll tell you. We were talking with father about you, and I asked him what made everybody like you so well; and he told us to come to you; he thought you would tell us the secret. Now please do."

Then the old man said:—

"Well, boys, this is the secret,—I have always tried to do by others, as I would wish others to do by me. This is a good rule, and very easy to understand, and those who practise it cannot be very far out of the way."

TREASURE.

What I spent, that I had; what I kept, that I lost; what I gave, that I have.—Old Epitaph.

Every coin of earthly treasure
We have lavished upon earth,
For the simple worldly pleasure,
May be reckoned nothing worth;
Though the purchase were but small;
It has perished with the using:
We have had it—that is all!

All the gold we leave behind us,
When we turn to dust again,
(Though our avarice may blind us,)
We have gathered quite in vain;
Since we neither can direct it,
By the winds of fortune tossed,
Nor in other worlds expect it;
What we hoarded—we have lost.

But each merciful oblation,
(Seed of pity wisely sown,)
Which we gave in self-negation,
We may safely call our own.
Thus of treasure freely given,
For the future we may hoard,
For the angels keep in heaven
What is lent unto the Lord.

THE MESSAGE.

Where are we living? Evidently in the time of the end, when knowledge is being increased. The great message about the Lord's coming must be substantially true and in time. Those servants who preach the "great message," cannot be supposed to have learned all at first. As we progress, the light shines brighter and brighter, even to the perfect day. The words of our Lord and of all inspiration are pure words and full of meaning; they are worth all they say. Paul quoting from the prophet (see Hebrews) says,—"For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry" (though it may seem to us to tarry.) Again, 10: 37, and 12: 17, 18, and onward. "For ye are not come to the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest. . . . But ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem," etc.

Next comes the breaking up of kingdoms, and all else that can be named, the ushering in of the kingdom of God. "This shaking signifieth the removing of the things that are shaken, as of things which are made; that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." Just at this juncture we have the inheritance in form, not yet in fact. "Wherefore we receiving a KINGDOM which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear, for our God [out of Christ] is a consuming fire." Paul is evidently speaking of the shaking of the nations, and the establishment of the kingdom of God. The "shaking" is not to be overlooked. Saith the prophet (Hag. 2), "I will shake the heavens and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land, and I will [this is the summing up] shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come." All the prophets say nearly the same thing upon this subject.

Jesus says, "When you see this [with other things all in harmony], know that the kingdom of God is nigh, even at the door." No doubt! The shaking is not to be mistaken; the signs are to be heeded. "When ye see all these things come to pass, then know. You can rest every thing upon this evidence,—know that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." In Rev. 11, under the sounding of the seventh trumpet, there are great voices heard, saying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord," when the tabernacle of God shall be with men.

We are no doubt living at the close of the time of the end, when God will give reward to his servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to all that fear his name, small and great, and will destroy them that destroy the earth. The conflict of the nations is a matter of consideration at this time. It is God's purpose to deal with the nations as foretold by the inspired writers. Has he not been dealing with them in a particular manner during "the time of the end"? Let us not look for a fulfillment of those things that have already taken place. Let us not be deceived, for we are commanded to "know" when the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. I believe we are occupying that time, and are commanded by the Savior to take heed to ourselves, lest at any time our hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon us unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth (the saints are not counted as dwellers on the earth.) That day will not come as a thief on those who are found watching. "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." [illegible] "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." "Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come." The dispensational truth of our age is the speedy coming of our Lord and the establishment of God's everlasting kingdom. It is true there have been set times for the Lord to come, and those who believed in time arguments have been disappointed; but this failure to arrive at the definite point of time when our Lord will come, does not in the least affect the great truth or message of Christ's soon coming. These different disappointments only go to show the words of our Savior to be correct—"Ye know not when the time is." "Ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh." But one thing we can "know,"—when the "kingdom of God is nigh at hand," as we have before noticed.

I believe those who set a definite time for the end, and make these things a test, have yet to profit by the lessons of experience and the events of time. It is right to investigate the subject of definite time, and if any body wishes, they have a right and it is proper to believe in an arrangement of definite time; but it is not right to make a test of these things; neither do I believe it is right to be too positive upon a subject of such uncertainty. The Scriptures limit these things; and if we will consult the words of Inspiration more closely, we shall find no trouble upon this subject, if we give heed thereto.

Some persons are very fond of speculation and new notions. We want the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, upon the subject in question. There is enough to feed and bless humanity in those things that we can understand. By this we may know that we "have passed from death unto life," if we "love the brethren." It is well to "know" some things; but some points must rest on belief, and must remain so till the close of time.

The great message of the coming of the Bridegroom is not a popular doctrine now, neither has God's truth ever been popular. This is no objection. It matters not whether the rulers believe or not; it is nevertheless truth, and precious. The great message of the soon coming of the Lord and the establishment of his kingdom is testing this generation, as much so as the voice of one crying in the wilderness tested the generation that lived at the time of John the Baptist; and their fate was sealed according as they received or rejected that message.

So it is at this day. The message is,—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." All who are found watching for and loving the appearing of our Lord, will receive a crown of life at that day. It does matter when Jesus comes. The good servant will be found giving meat (present truth) in due season. Blessed is that servant that shall be found so doing when the Master comes. On the other hand, we have the "evil servants," who will be found smiting, and saying in their hearts, "My Lord delayeth his coming"; whose dreadful end is recorded in Matt. 24.

There is a vast importance attached to the great message in question, and it will decide the characters of all christendom when the Lord comes. Awake ye, awake! and go forth to meet your Lord. "For behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give unto every man according as his work shall be."—Rev.

The desired hour is at hand—the judgment of the great day. Soon the Master of the house will have risen up and shut to the door; then the harvest will be passed and the summer ended. Then the wicked will exclaim—"We are not saved." Hold fast, brother, that thou hast, that no man take thy crown. Haste! sinner, haste to the outstretched arms of a merciful Savior, before it shall be forever too late.

SHALL WE BE DISAPPOINTED?

Many are ready to say, "Undoubtedly, all who expect our Lord to return at any definite time will be disappointed." But pray, let it be asked, how do they come by this information? Will not the time of the Master's return be in harmony with previous arrangements? Will it not be in exact accordance with the divine plan long since matured? And as long as anything has been revealed to the church in regard to this, does it refer to that time, and to those circumstances when he will come, or to some time when he will not come? Or if it refer to the correct time, is the evidence of such a nature that the church shall necessarily misunderstand it?

When the times and seasons were given, did not God clearly foresee just what facilities the church would have for understanding them? And if he foresaw that his people would not be able to understand the time when near the end, but would be brought into confusion, and doubt, and disappointment, why was anything said about it? True, without great care and study, they might make mistakes in this as in other things taught in the Bible, and it is now easy to see why we have made mistakes, but this is no reason why the true time (and the Bible reveals no other) should not be understood.

It may be said, "The evidences are designed simply to show us that we are drawing near the coming of the Lord, that the church may awake and be found in an expectant state. I have no doubt a portion of the evidence is of that nature, and let us take good heed to it; but that a part of the evidence, and to my mind much the clearest and strongest, is of a nature to instruct us as to its definite nearness, and that is, the prophetic periods, which I believe are now correctly [illegible] such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." But pray, let it be asked again, with what propriety, and by what authority is that text urged against those who love the appearing of Christ, and are expecting his return according to the clearest indications of prophecy? Observe, Jesus does not say he will not come when many are expecting him, but he says he will come when a class (I am afraid a large class) need to be admonished to get ready, and who are thinking he will not come. This, it is clear, is the legitimate application of the text; otherwise, his telling a corrupt church, or an unbelieving world, he would come when they did not expect him, would be just equal to his telling his people who were ready and waiting for his return according to their understanding of the time, that, however correct they might be, if they expected him, he would not come; as though his coming must necessarily occur when nobody expected him; and in that case, and according to the use made of the text, we must wait for the Lord, thinking he will not come, for our thinking he will come, is certain proof he will not come, and when every body thinks he will not come is precisely the time when he shall appear. For, say they, "in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."

There are other texts to which I cannot refer now, frequently repeated, and which I think need a little further consideration. I am much afraid that Satan will prove too artful for some who have been instructed in the things of the kingdom. Let us, dear brethren and sisters, strive to hold ourselves in readiness and induce all we can to get ready, for the day of triumph to the church is just at hand.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.—No. 1.

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."—DANIEL 2: 44.

I will attempt to show that the prophecy is to receive its fulfillment in the future; but before I do so, as it is claimed the church is the kingdom referred to here, and that it was set up on the day of Pentecost, I will endeavor to show that the church is not the kingdom of God.

I. The saints are now in the church of God. In Acts 9: 13, Saul is represented as having done much evil to the saints; and the saints here referred to were none others than the followers of Christ,—those who were in the church of God.

In 1 Cor. 14: 33, we have the following language: "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints." This testimony settles the fact that the saints are now in the church. Dan. 7: 27;—"The kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." The kingdom, then, is to be given to the saints,—to those who are in the church. If, therefore, the saints are in the church, and the kingdom is to be given to the saints, the church is not the kingdom.

II. The saints, those legally in the church of God, are heirs of the kingdom. James 2: 5. "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" Instead of being in the kingdom, as some vainly argue, according to James the saints are only heirs. But when will they receive the inheritance—the kingdom? Matt. 25: 31–34;—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them, one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on his left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

When the Savior comes again, the saints will inherit the kingdom. If, then, the saints are now heirs of the kingdom, and they are to receive it at the second coming of Christ, the church is not the kingdom.

III. The phrase "flesh and blood" is an idiom, expressive of the present corruptible state of the human race. The idea is expressed with us by the phrase "mortal man." Permit me here to produce a few examples of its use.

(1.) Matt. 16: 17;—"Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood [mortal man] hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven."

(2.) Gal. 1: 15, 16;—"But when it pleased God . . . . . to reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood" (mortal man). In these examples, it will be seen the phrase is expressive of mortality.

That mortal men and women are in the church, no one who believes the Bible will deny. Indeed, in this respect the body of the church is composed of flesh and blood—of mortal men and women. 1 Cor. 15: 50;—"Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God." This language is plain and positive. Man can not inherit the kingdom of God while in a state of mortality. If, now, the body of the church is composed of "flesh and blood," and "flesh and blood" can not inherit the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

IV. Covetousness is a besetting sin. Men love money. Wealth makes a man respectable; and in all important enterprises it is desirable to have the influence of the rich. In politics, odd-fellowship, masonry, etc., etc., the rich man is gladly entertained. It is so in churches. Let a rich man apply for admittance, [illegible] in the church he wields an influence. Indeed his influence is so potent that it is to be feared many preachers shun their duty, lest they lose a part of their bread and butter. Matt. 19: 23, 24;—"Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, that a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

If, therefore, it is easy for a rich man to get into the church, and it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

V. It requires little sacrifice to enter the church. In many places it is considered fashionable to be a church member; and the church members and the world are so nearly alike, that, so far as actions are concerned, you can scarcely distinguish the one from the other. Church fairs, church festivals, etc., etc., attest the truth of this assertion. The professed church and the world mingle together, and where is there any persecution or tribulation? If one suffers tribulation, it is not merely because he enters the church, but because he leads a godly life. The Christian will pass through tribulation; but one may enter the church without it. Acts 14: 22;—"We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God."

If, now, men enter the church without passing through tribulation, and it is through much tribulation that we are to enter the kingdom, the church is not the kingdom.

VI. Let us look at Acts 14: 21, 22, again; "And when they [Paul and Barnabas] had preached the gospel to that city, and had taught many, they returned again to Lystra, and Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." From this language, I gather the following points:

1. The confirmation of the disciples.

2. An exhortation to continue in the faith. Of course, they were in the church, or they would not have been exhorted to continue in the faith.

3. We learn that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

If, therefore, those disciples were already in the church, and they were told that they must through much tribulation enter the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

The church was instituted that sinners may come to Christ and live. It was not instituted for those who are without sin. Jesus Christ "came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."—Mark 2: 17. "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Tim. 1: 15.

When men have sinned against God, they may reform, and come into the church. It is thus they are to fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life. But children, who have never transgressed the law of God, have no need of repentance, nor of entering the church. They are without sin, and remain innocent until they take themselves out of the favor of God by actual transgression. The church is the medium through which they then return to God. Hence little children are not in the church. Mark 10: 14;—"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

Now, if little children are not in the church, and there are to be little children in the kingdom of God, certainly the church is not the kingdom.

VIII. The Greek word ekkleesia, church, occurs in the New Testament about a hundred and fifteen times; and it is not once translated kingdom. Greenfield defines the word as follows: "Any public assembly, a congregation; a christian assembly, a church." He does not even hint that it signifies a kingdom. The Greek word basileia, kingdom, occurs in the New Testament about a hundred and sixty times; and it is not once translated church. Greenfield defines basileia thus: "A kingdom, realm, i. e., the region or country governed by a king; kingly power, authority, dominion, reign; royal dignity, the title and honor of a king." These are the primary definitions of these terms; and it is easily seen that they do not mean the same thing.

If the church were the kingdom of God, the Greek words ekkleesia and basileia would be used interchangeably; but they are not once thus used. Therefore the church is not the kingdom of God.

Memphis, Ind. G. W. GREEN.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTING THE LIGHT SHINE.

It is the duty of every follower of Christ to let the light shine. These are days of unparalleled light—that knowledge of God's word which dissipates the gross ignorance of the past—that knowledge which points out unerringly our nearness to the day of God's wrath. It is the duty of all to let their light shine, because Christ commands it. His requirements are all reasonable, and commend themselves to every considerate mind.

There are various ways for letting the light shine. All are not possessed of the same means. Some can take the field and sound the message of warning and of salvation throughout the land; others not possessed of this ability and power, can perform their duty by warning their neighbors and acquaintances, speaking words of comfort to the afflicted, and strengthening the feeble ones. Thus in whatever condition Christ's followers may be placed they can all do something. It is not necessary to be discouraged because we are not able to do as much as others, or do not succeed quite as well. Nor does the Lord want [illegible] all the Lord wants of us. Those possessed of superior ability for spreading the light, ought to have a great deal of charity for those who, though not so highly favored, are doing the best they can, and in the end will have just as great a reward.

The demand of these times is for truth, for something that will awake the sleeping world to a realizing sense of the awful scenes just before them. The Judge stands at the door, and the reapers will soon gather the already ripe harvest. The world seems to be in total darkness in regard to this fact. But the divine declaration is: "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." Those who are not in darkness ought to be alive, awake, earnest in leading others out of darkness into the glorious light and liberty of the sons of God. Our publications are an effectual means of doing this. The books and tracts in the field ought to be widely circulated; our newspapers, which are conducted with so much ability, ought to be put in the hands of all classes; thus the light would be spread, darkness give way, and many hearts be made to rejoice in the salvation of God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. All can take part in this work; no one need be excused; and thus all can obey the command, "Go work in my vineyard."

It is very evident to all candid minds that we have but a short time to work, and He that is to come will come, and will not tarry. When the heavens shall break away and the King shall come forth, how many will be found wholly in darkness, unprepared, and how many will be found speechless before him for unperformed duties! Oh, may the Lord awake us up in this matter, and help each one to be faithful in letting his light shine.

Our missionary society is a very effectual means of spreading the light, and needs the aid and sympathy of all of Father's children. Ye favored ones of the Lord in this world, let not the light cease to shine in the regions beyond for the lack of means. Help! help before it will be eternally too late. The day of the Lord is at hand, and it hasteth greatly. Oh, welcome day! Weary saints long, sigh, and pray for it. If you are faithful in all things, we can pray in the spirit of the lonely exile on Patmos, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen.

WM. H. SPENCER.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT.—EXAGGERATIONS OF SCRIPTURE.

An eloquent preacher of evangelical connections was recently discoursing on the woes of the lost, painting in glowing colors the miseries of those who die impenitent, when suddenly he came to this "most lame and impotent conclusion:" "Whether," said he, "all this woe will be critically eternal, I dare not say."

The circumstance suggested to us one way in which great damage is often done to the awful truth of future punishment. The argument so rife, now, against the eternity of future punishment, is just this: hell is so horrible, that it can't be eternal. To make the argument good, the opponents of the doctrine surpass the Bible by a long distance in depicting the horrors of hell, transferring our thoughts from the sublime grandeur of the court of infinite justice to a thousand petty tortures unworthy of the name of punishment; and then we are asked if all this will be everlasting.

This might be expected of avowed opponents; but the friends of the doctrine are not always free from the same error. We shall never forget a certain address to a Sabbath school, which the kind hearted and zealous speaker began thus: "Children, there will be degrees of suffering in hell; but all will suffer just as much as they can possibly bear." He reiterated the statement with the greatest emphasis of manner, but did not state where he could find its equivalent in the Bible. He then went on to be more particular in illustrating the pains of the lost by such imagery as he thought children could understand; but throughout he was "wise above what was written," and succeeded only in degrading the awful to the horrible.

Such petty exaggerations extend even to the eternity of punishment. Who has not heard such hypotheses as this: "Suppose an angel should come to this earth once in a million years, and take away a grain of sand each time: when he shall have taken away, at this rate, the last particle of our globe, eternity will have only begun?" After an illustration of this kind, the reader or hearer will sometimes be informed that this conveys but the faintest conception of eternal duration, which is true; and what, then, is the use of it? Satan makes efficient use of it in confusing the imagination, and making the trembling soul fear that there must be something wrong about such an incomprehensible length of punishment. What would be thought of one, who, in the interest of morals, should go among the vicious, illustrating to them, after the style we have indicated, what is meant by imprisonment for life? Would justice or law or morality gain anything thereby?

The truth is, that there is a majesty, an awful sublimity, as well as a wise sobriety, in the scriptural representations of future punishment, which man never tries to mend without marring them. Almost all these representations are manifestly figurative. All are indefinite as to the nature of the suffering. It is enough for us to know that the soul, which cannot be paid for by a world, may be lost; that the finally impenitent go into "everlasting fire," "everlasting destruction," everlasting punishment." That the punishment will be eternal end is as plain as words can make it; but the particulars of the punishment God has not revealed. Is it not, then, strange that man in- [illegible] throne, and that God is? Here on earth they have called him to account for what he has revealed, and more especially for what he has not revealed; and how strange it will seem to find all this reversed, and to feel for once that it ought to be reversed!

We are not disposed to pass lightly over the subject of hell on the ground that modern ears are too delicate to hear about it: but we say, Heed the Scriptures; make no attempts to improve upon them; and, whenever a rebellious heart turns to the imagination, saying, "Oh? paint me such a hell that I can't believe in it," then remember that God will not bend his justice to flatter human imaginations, and that wisdom and piety unite in saying that our God will do according to his word, and will do right forever.—Christian Banner and Tract Journal.

BIBLE TESTS.

How can that church, or professor of religion, who continues to violate these sacred admonitions, ever expect to be admitted into the everlasting kingdom?

1. "But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers." "Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ." "If any man among you seemeth to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart; that man's religion is vain." "Let it not be named among you, as becometh saints." "Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting." "But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation." Read 1 Pet. 4: 11; Ps. 35: 28; 37: 30; 14: 3; 2 Tim. 2: 16; Titus 2: 1, 2, 6, 8; 1 Pet. 3: 2; 4: 7; 5: 8; 1 Cor. 3: 17, 18; Luke 9: 23; 10: 28; 2 Cor. 6: 17; 1 John 5: 4.

Does not the present day witness many who profess to be followers of Christ, who pay no regard to these admonitions? Now where will they be found in the day of judgment, unless they repent?

2. "While they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear"; "whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold; . . . but let it be the hidden man of the heart, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price." "For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves." "In like manner, also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shame-facedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; . . . but which becometh women professing godliness; with good works." Read 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; James 2: 2–5; 1 John 2: 15, 16; 1 Cor. 7: 31.

Are there not many professors at the present day who utterly ignore or set aside these admonitions? Now, Bro. and Sr., in the face of these admonitions, if you will violate or encourage the violation of these sacred admonitions, then what excuse will you have to offer in the day of judgment?

3. "But I say unto you, Swear not at all." "But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation." "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal." "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets." "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." "And every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand." James 5: 12; Matt. chaps. 5, 6, 7.

Are there not many professors at the present day who take oaths before a court or magistrate, and who do not take heed to all the teachings in Christ's Sermon on the Mount? If this be true, then where will they be found when the rain descends, the floods come, and the winds blow?

4. "And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." "But God said unto him, Thou fool." "Sell whatsoever thou hast and give to the poor." "Sell that ye have, and give alms." "And having food and raiment, let us be therewith content." "But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." "For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some have coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." "But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." "No covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." "So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." [illegible] coveting or laying up earthly treasures, and who do not "feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the sick, or assist the stranger; who, as Christ said, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." Now where will they find their portion?

"Be not conformed to this world." "Love not the world, nor the things that are in the world," . . . . . "revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries." "Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you." "But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer." "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord." "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." "In the last days . . . . men shall be lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." 2 Cor. 6: 14–18: Rom. 13: 12.

Are there not many professors now who belong to secret societies or political organizations, who accept of worldly offices, who attend concerts, exhibitions, public suppers, and pleasure gatherings of whatever name, or resort to various games of amusement or tableaux and ball rooms, under the vain plea of innocent amusements, healthful diversion, or needful exercise? Where will these be found when Christ shall come in judgment, to be a swift witness?

6. And he said to them all, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." Therefore if any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you." "Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake." "If any man will love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." "Watch, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." 2 Cor. 6: 17; Luke 9: 23; 2 Tim. 3: 12; John 17: 14–16; Heb. 11: 24–26; 12: 3, 4; 13: 13, 14, 20, 21; 2 Pet. 3: 11, 12, 18.

Do not many at the present day, who have espoused the cause of Christ, who profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, in their works deny him? And against all these admonitions, do they not strive to gain the applause of the world? to win popular favor? to exalt themselves in the eyes of the world, or gain its good opinion?

Do they not join hands with the world in its political affairs, or in seeking its riches as well as its honors and pleasures and all that the world esteems great and good? And in all these things do they not also shun the cross, and avoid self-denial, as well as persecutions, and love the things of the world, going on in the current of the world, bearing no fruit? And in their fashionable, costly attire, splendid equipages, and expensive, gorgeous churches, do they exemplify the spirit of the gospel of Jesus? or do they not rather fill out the picture of abominations and corruptions which should characterize the last days? And while thus overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and the cares of this life, will not the day of the Lord overtake them as a thief? And while they do not deny themselves of ungodliness and worldly lusts, will not that day come upon them as a snare? And while they do not look for these things which shall come to pass, will they be found without spot, and blamelses? Now where shall these be found when Christ shall come in judgment and render to every man according to his works?

Dear brethren and friends, we are still on mercie's side of the judgment; but soon, very soon we shall be on the other side, and if we are now faitoful over a few things, we shall then be made ruler over many.

Marion, N. Y. S. L. MANLEY.

MUSIC.—Who has not felt the power of music, especially the music of the human voice? It is like the angel-whisperings of kind words in the hour of trouble. Who can be angry when the voice of love speaks in song? Who hears the harsh voice of selfishness and brutalizing passion when music gathers up her pearly love-notes to salute the ear with a song of paradise? Sing to the wicked man, sing to the disconsolate, sing to the sufferer, sing to the old, and sing to children, for music will inspire them all. When we think how much the world wants awakening, we can think of no power better calculated to do it than that which dwells in the mysterious melodies of music.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, July 15, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion.

SPRINGFIELD N. A. CAMP-GROUND.

The brethren and sisters who desire to obtain lots in either the first or second circle on the new camp-ground, will please send in their names to the Chairman of the Building Committee, Bro. Hiram Munger, Chicopee Falls, Mass., by August 1st; after which the Committee will proceed to secure for the various applicants a lot, until the whole number shall be exhausted.

There are a plenty of good lots on either of the four streets of the camp-ground, and after August 15th, the first who may come will be served by the Committee, who will be on the ground to attend to matters. Those who may write the Committee, requesting an answer, will please enclose a stamp.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Our western visit has been very pleasant. We have been most highly delighted with the country scenery, the rich soil, the enterprise of the people, and their kind and generous hearts. We would gladly have remained longer and attended other meetings as desired, but duty called us elsewhere. We have some thoughts of visiting the west again after the National Campmeeting at Springfield. During our western travels we found quite a number whom we had known in New England. It was pleasant to enjoy their hearty greetings. They all speak highly of the west, and do not wish to return to live again in the east.

Monday, July 6th, in company with Bro. Himes, we departed from De Kalb for Chicago, where we preached that evening in the German Baptist meeting house, and had an interesting time. Bro. Snyders, the pastor, is a fine man, much beloved by his Brn. in Christ, and has commenced preaching to them the immediate personal coming of Jesus, the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked. Some few of his Brn. have turned against him, while the others are rejoicing with him in the light. We met a most hearty welcome from him, his wife, and his Brn. in the Lord, with an earnest request to come again. He is a warm friend of Bro. C. C. Ramsey, who is doing a noble work in Chicago. His faithful labors have been very much blessed by the Lord, and he feels encouraged to press the battle against the strongholds of Satan in that wicked city. Would that there were a hundred such men as Bro. Ramsey, who could enter at once into the western field. We had a happy time with him.

On our way to Chicago we became acquainted with Bro. R. Smith, of Rochelle, Ill. He has been a Lutheran minister some twenty-five years, but for the last two years has thrown off all sectarian shackles, and is now emphatically the Lord's free man. He is a very devoted and earnest laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. We have rarely seen his equal. His company and counsel were a blessing to us, which, we trust, will last forever. The Lord has opened his eyes most fully to see the evils of sectarianism as exhibited in the various denominations. His great effort is to pull down all sectarian walls, and get all true christians to unite in one church to wait for Jesus from heaven. We felt assured the Lord had called him to the work. At the stations, while the cars were standing still, he would preach short, pithy sermons to the passengers, which produced a salutary effect. He was kind and earnest, causing us to feel that he meant what he said, and that he said it because he thought Jesus wished him to speak. At the close of his short sermons we sung some of our sweet songs of Zion. It seemed quite like a meeting, and was heart-cheering to the friends of Jesus. We are rejoiced to learn that the Lord is raising up other earnest men, who are going forth like John the Baptist, to get people prepared to meet the Son of man at his coming. It is time that all sectarian walls were demolished which separate the true children of the Lord. They should be ONE, as Christ and the Father are one. Dear Brn., let us do all we can to assist in this great work. It will please Jesus. We wish every one could have heard Bro. Smith's stirring remarks on this subject.

A paper has been started to show the importance of christian union. It is called The Church. It is published at Polo, Ill. "Subscription price, the widow's mite." The first two or three numbers are issued. We hope many will send a large mite and take the paper. It is now published monthly. We are delighted with the spirit of it, and purpose to give our readers some extracts from its columns. We think it is a movement in the right direction.

When at Chicago, Monday, July 6th, we went into the daily noon prayer-meeting with Bro. Himes, and Bro. Smith, of whom we have been speaking. The meeting was under the control of Mr. Moody, who is quite noted for his efforts to wake up a religious interest. We were glad to find so many in that wicked city who could spend time to attend a prayer-meeting. We thought we saw room for improvement, and presume they will be led on to higher ground and into a larger field of usefulness. Some severe remarks were made by the conductor of the meeting against the popular religion now exhibited in the various denominations. It is well that the eyes of the people are being opened. They now see that there may be a wide difference between professing religion and its possession. It is also evident that many sectarian bodies are almost destitute of the life of godliness. The form alone remains. The power is gone. We believe with Bro. Smith and others, that the time has come when those who do truly love Jesus, and are willing to obey him in all things, should unite together in the great work of trying to save men. Such should be separated no longer by a mere difference of opinion on some doctrinal point. When they throw away their creeds which have been one great cause of the divisions among the children of the Lord, and "take the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice, church order and discipline;" consecrating all to the Lord, they will soon see the beautiful harmony in the Scriptures, with which many are already so delighted. Brn. and sisters, let us take higher ground in this great work.

CHURCH MUSIC AND CHURCHES.

The following is a letter from New York to the Cincinnati Commercial, and as it gives a graphic and truthful account of the worship at our fashionable city churches, we give it a place in our columns, and heartily commend it to our readers as another evidence of the fearful departure of modern self-styled religion from the simple faith and practise of primitive times.

I was inveigled into attending a fashionable church, last Sunday, on the promise held out that I would hear some of the most heavenly music ever vouchsafed to human ears. So far as pleasing the senses went, I was certainly gratified. The organ of said fashionable church is a superb instrument, and the same may be said of the tenor, and bass, and indeed every voice hired for the occasion.

This is the style of thing in New York, and the churches vie with each other in getting up first-class orchestral accompaniments to what they are pleased to call divine worship. In one aristocratic circle of the Lord's elect, a negro minstrel leads the choir, and in all of them hired voices—if not from the opera, at least from professional sources—praise God in machine music.

I don't profess to be so pious as to be shocked beyond recovery at this sort of thing. The poor girl from the opera, or the harmonious nigger from the minstrels, may have much heart, and true prayer in her or his soul, when pouring out the praise the sweet voice makes acceptable, but I am disgusted at the spirit which procures the music as an entertainment, and a boast, rather than an effort to offer thanks to the Lord in the sweetest gift granted the human family.

While one sweet, clear voice went soaring up, like a bird, in music stolen from the Catholic church and the opera, I felt that a round of applause, with a subdued cry of "bravo," and encore," would be appropriate. This is the spirit that pervades the congregation. All sense of religion was lost in admiration of the singer, and a mean pride of being equal, if not superior, in the way of music, to any other church in New York. Not long since a congregation of a fashionable church "up town," was startled by a new voice, that thrilled the souls of all with clear tones and perfect execution. "Who was she," passed from mouth to mouth, as the congregation poured out. A few knowing ones could answer that the sweet-voiced tenor was from the Olympic, and could be seen, very much of her, any night, in the "Black Crook." Well, the poor girl who makes a precarious living by an exhibition of her legs, may be as pure as any of said congregation, and, therefore, possessed of the same right to lift her voice in praise, especially as that voice is a sweet one, and one of God's best gifts. But then, it is not in accordance with the received ideas to which you and I have been educated.

This sort of church music is but part of the ostentation that makes up two thirds of the religion here. It is not very extensive—only one-tenth of the population claim to be religious, and if we count out the Catholics, Universalists and the Hebrews, the number is still less. And these three named are counted out by the Young Men's Christian Association, for I notice in the advertisements, put up in prominent places, directing strangers to places of worship in New York, these three are not honored with a place. Probably this is right enough: as one of the strangers in New York I make no complaint. If the Y. M. C. Association had omitted the advertisement altogether I would not complain. But, as I was saying, but a small part of New York make profession of religion, and those who do make only profession. . . . .

Religion here is ostentatious, and it is a cheap sort of ostentation. It does not break out in huge cathedrals and minsters as the blind faith of the dark ages did in Europe, when delicate spires rose, cloud-capped, to be worshiped by art through all coming time. It expends its religious fervor in paint and putty. The churches are small and insignificant, but the upholstery is immense. We have here the Church of the Sainted Zebra, and the Church of the Holy Grapevine. They are wonderful in their way—their way being the upholstery.

How close we cast our little vanities to the river of death, I thought, while gazing at a congregation dressed as carefully and gaily as if gotten up for an opera. The preacher, one of the five hundred, would have been as much at home in the barber-shop as in the pulpit. He might lack faith, he certainly lacked sense, but he was eminently respectable. St. Peter might shake hands with him and not lose caste—St. Peter might, with entire security, introduce the parson to the other eleven. I rather think the parson would require an introduction. And my ugly thoughts grew grotesque. Suppose, speaking of introductions, that the meek and lowly Savior, who once trod our earth, bare-footed and sore, the friend of the poor and down-trodden, who took no heed of what they should wear, should enter and seek a seat in this temple erected to his glory. How quickly that keen-eyed sexton would seize on and lead him out.

The best sermon I ever heard was preached by that long-bearded, bald-headed, crazy preacher who used to, when I was a boy, preach in the streets of Cincinnatti. I was going to the post-office one bitter cold morning in winter, when I saw Daddy Rice on a store-box, getting up divine service to an old man, two boys, a negro girl, several pigs and a cow. After singing a hymn and offering a prayer, he read a passage from the New Testament, and then, after a long pause, said: "My b'loved brethren, you think that if our Savior were to return to earth, you would be glad to see him; that you would invite him to your houses, and introduce him to good society. You would throw open your finest churches, and the Lord would preach from marble pulpits to velvet-cushioned pews. My b'loved, you are mistaken. Were Christ to return he would have to preach on the corners, and sleep in the market-houses as I do. You would not know him, and he would not know you. You would require an introduction, and when introduced, in all human probability, he would tell you to go to hell and be damned for your vanity, mere vanity, and worldly seeking."

This last was so like profanity, and so grotesquely out of place, that I laughed. "Youth," cried the indignant street-preacher," do you know where you're goin' to?"

"Yes, sir," I replied; "I am going to the post-office.

"No, sir, you are on the way to the gallows. Any one who would laugh in the presence of His servant a shakin' in the cold"—I did not wait for more.

If the music was paid for, the preacher was conventional. I never heard a more powerful discourse on the sweetness of holiness and the sinfulness of sin; and it must have pleased every one, for no one's conscience could have been touched. So far as phraseology went, it was just such an exhortation as a Hebrew rabbi might have given to a congregation of Moses and sons, eighteen hundred years ago, in Jerusalem. I thought of what M. C. Conway once said to me on a like occasion: "Well, if these merchants are not Jews in their dealings, they are certainly Hebrews in their prayers."—Amer. Christian Review.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT THE SPIRITS TEACH

RESPECTING THE ORIGIN OF MAN.

The Educator, a large volume purporting to be "a series of revealments from organized association in the spirit life," says "God is one Grand Central Electrical Focus; the Grand Centre from whence all electricity emanates."

"Man is really an invisible being; he lives, thinks, moves, sees, feels, but no merely human eye ever yet saw a man. He is as truly invisible as God himself."

The Bible declares that God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

Again, we read that when "God sets his heart upon man, and gathers to himself his spirit and his breath, man shall turn again to dust. Job 34: 14. Says Solomon, "All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." This is in accordance with the divine decree given unto Adam: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, until thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken, dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3: 19.

Yet in direct contradiction of the Bible, these spirits come to educate us in the doctrine of man's invisibility. "No human eye ever yet saw a man!! The Genasoric record, they say, is an "ancient allegory," a "fable." p. 167.

The "Educator" gives us the history of man's creation thus: "Man was not instantaneously or miraculously formed. He did not reach this earth by miracle, but in accordance with unchanging law. By what law was man here introduced? There must be an especially favorable spot for the beginning of generation or formation. That spot is the north. There is the seat of attraction corresponding to the organ called the navel; there are peculiar magnetisms, especially vital electricity, and the finer fluids; there are electric currents and the umbilical cord. Formation or generation began at that point and spread out by closely connected links or fibres like the cord referred to, until a central, or as it is termed, a more tropical climate was reached, and thus as the child by warmth is nourished and protected, man comes first into being.

"It may be called metaphorically an 'Eden,' or a 'garden' of tropical flowers. There fruits spontaneously and generously grow, and the climate, so bland, so soothing and harmonious, may be said to have cradled the child until it ripened more fully into being. By this simple process, then, man reached this earth. All things in nature being male and female, by the same process a second would appear."—Educator, p. 573. And why not a third and a fourth, and so on ad infinitum?

Here we are taught by spirits the "simple process" (?) by which man reached this earth, but the distance he had to come we are not told. He was generated at the North pole, that cold, icy region, where the electric-current abounds and dances in bright and changeful hues on the horizon, and it was by means of nice closely connected links or fibres that the umbilical cord was stretched beyond India rubber elasticity, till it reached this earth, near the equator, where there was a tropical climate, bland, soothing, and fruits spontaneously growing. Here the child is nourished until it attains to invisible manhood; and by this same simple process woman comes also! This is all the work of Nature, not Divinity. Why, then, does not Nature work by the "same process" still, and all invisible manhood have the same method of introduction to earth?—Extract from "Spiritualism Condemned," etc., (a new tract in press), by M. D. Wellcome.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE BRN. OF NEW YORK STATE.

You will see in the Crisis of July 8th a report of our State Conference, informing you that the conference has assumed a legal position. I wish to offer a few thoughts, giving the reasons for such a step.

We are an acknowledged people and a people of God, with a mighty work to perform; and there is no such thing as accomplishing it without means, and to concentrate needful funds, some person or persons must become responsible for its safety. For instance, there are men among us who wish to apply their means to the furtherance of the gospel, and are desirous of making a will to this effect; but without we are occupying a legal position, there is no way by which property could lawfully be placed in our hands, and we become responsible for it. As a conference we are now so organized as to be responsible, and amenable to law for any funds that may be placed in our hands for the purpose of scattering tracts, or publishing tracts, pamphlets, or books, or sending tents or men into new fields, and so let the light of the glorious gospel shine in its simplicity and beauty, where now intense darkness seems to prevail.

God is with us of a truth, and he is not the author of confusion, but of order. Ye stewards of the living God, take heed to this act, and send in your surplus means, that the engine of truth may be fired and steamed afresh, and thus be enabled to drive its thundering train around the hills, and through the valleys of the old empire state, with a quickened pace; and soon her mighty train shall swing into the everlasting city of our King, and you who have been faithful over a few things will be made rulers over many things.

Lay up for yourselves a treasure in heaven by sending much or little, as the Lord has prospered you, to Bro. J. Naramore, Rochester, who is a responsible man of God, and is elected treasurer of the board of trustees for the ensuing year. The means placed in his hands are to be disbursed according to the direction of the board of trustees and officers of the conference, who, being tried men and faithful, you may rest assured that no money shall be squandered.

Please preserve the report of the conference as published in the Crisis, and you will have the necessary information for action in appointing delegates, etc. W. A FENN.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Elder George A. Streeter, whom many of you know from having heard him preach, is in need of a horse to carry him and the gospel, as he has been doing, in the highways and hedges. Having been with him and knowing his needs, I take this way of apprising the brethren who are able and willing to help him out of this difficulty. Let any who have the needful send their free contributions forthwith to Bro. James Hemenway, Athol depot, Mass., who will credit the same in the Crisis. Come, send your tens, fives, twos, ones, or less. Blessings will follow.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.—The meetings held at the Advent Chapel, on Common street, are deeply interesting. Fifteen persons united with the church last Sunday, and others will be admitted next month. There has been quite a number of conversions of late. This church has been greatly blessed during the past year, and we are glad to learn it is very prosperous at the present time. Our readers who love a lively and spirited meeting, should visit this church. Prayer meetings every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, at 7½ o'clock. Sabbath School, from 12 to 1 o'clock.—Lawrence paper.

CORRECTION.—In the "Business Report" of the New Hampshire Quarterly Conference, published July 1st, the third paragraph should read as follows:—

Voted, That action in relation to the case in question be postponed until the next annual session of Conference. Voted, That a committee of two be appointed to draft resolutions to be presented at the next annual session of Conference, in relation to church order and discipline.

MORE MONEY FOR BRO. CARR.—Mary A. Handy, 50 cts. Friends in Natick, Mass., $3.00. S. Wagg, 60 cts. G. H. Bundy, 50 cts. P. Green, $1.00. The horse is bought and in the service. Who else wishes to help pay for him? The cost of the horse is $150, beside the amount allowed for the injured one, which is disposed of.

HOOSAC TUNNEL.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just come from our quarterly conference in Savoy. It was an interesting meeting, well attended, considering the busy time. I left Sunday evening with Bro. Tower; went with him to his home in Florida, Mass., on the Green Mountains,—a very pleasant place when you get there, overlooking the hills below.

Monday morning he took me in his carriage down the steep hills, till we reached the entrance of the Hoosac Tunnel. Here I found Charles Patterson and wife, she being of our faith, where I was welcomed, and well cared for. He very kindly volunteered to pilot me into the tunnel. After dinner we made preparations, putting on rubber boots, thick coat and cap, also taking a lantern well trimmed; and by the time the fixings were all adjusted, you would begin to experience peculiar sensations. Now we started for the entrance into the tunnel; had gone but a little way before we had to light up and with the addition of a candle, such as they all use at their work, we felt our way into that dark cavern.

I took the lantern in one hand and hold of my guide with the other, and fearfully went on with "a lamp to our feet," seeing no living creature, only as we occasionally came across the workmen as they were scattered by the way. It grows darker as you leave the mouth, till nothing is visible but the little specks of light in the distance, made by the candles of the workmen stuck up in the rocks by the wayside. Thus we kept on in this dark way for three quarters of an hour, through solid rock before they made their way by blasting and removing the stone. They have two iron pipes running into the tunnel, one to ventilate, the other carries one by which means they pump in condensed air, which drives the drills; these are laid in the bottom of the tunnel. Some of the way we walked in the water two inches or more deep. Cars are continually running in and out, removing the stone, and bringing such things as they need to accomplish their purpose. The cars are drawn by mules; they can work in the dark. The men have their work allotted them in gangs, all at work by the light of candles. You cannot see till you get right upon them; then you will see twenty-five, more or less, all at work by as many candles. They are not troubled with light or heat, for it is very cool, almost uncomfortably so for the visitor, unless he keeps walking. The distance through the mountain is four miles; they are at work on both sides, to meet in the centre, if they ever tunnel it through.

It truly is a great work, and if time continues long enough they will persevere and get it through. They are putting down a shaft, or are making a breathing place midway over the tunnel. They have gone down seven hundred feet, and will have to go eleven hundred or more before reaching the tunnel. This is the place where that fatal accident happened some time since, where thirteen men perished while at work, by taking fire at the top, cutting off all communication to them. Their bodies have never been recovered. I took a look at the place, feeling sad at the recital of the fearful scene. There was blasting in the tunnel between us and the mouth as we came out, and I assure you I felt greatly relieved when I was safely out of the dismal place.

I left that night for Shelburne Falls, next day home, thanking the Lord for keeping me amid all the perils. Thine, L. BOUTELL.

DISCUSSION AT NEW RUTLAND.

The discussion at New Rutland, Ill., between Bro. Grant and Mr. Brooks of the Disciple church, closed Friday evening, July 3d. The questions discussed were, 1st. "Do the Holy Scriptures teach that the whole man remains unconscious in the grave until the resurrection?" 2nd. "Do the Holy Scriptures teach the extinction of the life and conscious existence of the wicked after the judgment?"

Bro. Grant had proposed the second question so as to give Mr. Brooks the affirmative; and, as no objection was made, it was supposed on our part that every preliminary was settled, but it seemed that Mr. Brooks reserved a loop-hole to crawl out and thus break up the discussion, unless Bro. Grant came to his terms, which Bro. Grant, being the challenged party, refused to do.

The chairman ruled in favor of Mr. Brooks, that the discussion on the first question should not go on until the second question was settled. This was so absurd a decision, that on motion, by vote of the audience, his decision was overwhelmingly defeated, and after an hour had been wasted in a vain effort to stave off the whole matter or ride over Bro. Grant, the discussion went on. But oh, how it went on! More blackguardism, invective, and personal abuse flowed from the lips of Mr. Brooks than I ever heard from any man before. He exhausted the vocabulary in search of epithets, and then manufactured more to suit himself.

The following may serve as a sample of his language, not used once, or twice, but repeatedly through the whole discussion: "Talisman from the lowest hell-pit"; "The last spawning of the bottomless pit"; "Offspring of crime"; "Outrageous buccaneer on the sea of crime and carnality"; "Theologastrian and novice; "Peddling pills from Boston"; "Ungodly men teaching annihilation." These, and scores of others, were put forth in the most insulting and abusive style. As the chairman did not see fit to prevent it, Bro. Grant had to endure it for three days. One can gain no conception of the manner of abuse and misrepresentation by simply reading it. With cheek pressed out with tobacco, and the perspiration streaming down his face, he stood over Bro. Grant, as close to him as he could get, and poured out his slime for the purpose of conquering the truth of God. It was to me a forcible illustration of the saying, "Thou shalt not surely die."

But the truth triumphed, as it always will. As a result of the discussion, several have already decided for the truth as proclaimed by the Adventists. Bro. Grant's kind, pleasant, christian course won for him the respect of the people, and we trust, if possible, he will visit this place again at no distant period, and give the people a chance to hear more of the truth, separate from the "foul leprosy" of the language of Brooks.

The Campbellites attempted to gain eclat at the close by a demonstration of wreaths and posies, but the outsiders made fun of it. The cause of truth as represented by the Adventists is much strengthened by the discussion; while I have heard of several who have resolved to leave the Campbellites in disgust. I do not wonder at it. How a people calling themselves christians can feel justified in upholding a man like T. Brooks, of Pontiac, as a minister of the gospel, is a mystery to all honest-hearted christians. If Bro. Grant had taken such a course as he did, the truth never could have lifted its head here again. But being on the popular side, the chairman allowed Mr. Brooks to act as he pleased, and some of his followers attempted to excuse him on the plea that it was his temperament. Well, thank God, we shall be freed from such tempers and temperaments in the kingdom of God. F. BURR.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

According to previous notice, our Eastern Maine Conference met at the Free House in Lincolnville, on Thursday, June 18th, at two o'clock P. M. Meetings were held at Young's school-house and Rackliff's school-house on Friday; at nine o'clock social meeting, and at two preaching. Friday evening meetings were held at the school-houses. Saturday morning several were baptized. Services held at the meeting-house during the day and evening. Sunday morning several were baptized; services at the meeting-house during the day and evening.

Preachers present were—Brn. Simeon Hall of Bucksport, and F. A. Baker of Levant. The Spirit of the Lord was manifest throughout the meeting. At four o'clock the Sacrament was administered to scores of young converts.

I feel glad to report that God has visited us in mercy; that through the labors of Bro. S. Hall scores of our friends, neighbors and children are understandingly converted, and the blessed work is progressing, and spreading into new places. Although it is the most hurrying season of the year, the interest holds good. Meetings are held about every afternoon, as well as on the Sabbath. The revival is mostly among middle-aged men and their wives, with some few cases under twenty years of age. Some cases between seventy and eighty-five years. The highways and hedges are being called to fill the table at "supper time." MOSES YOUNG, Clerk.

TENT MEETING AT "WEDNESDAY HILL."

(Extract from a private Letter.)

DEAR BRO. M.:—I presume you would like to know how we got along with our tent meeting at "Old Wednesday Hill." We can truly say that the Lord blessed us amazingly. We pitched the tent Friday, and opened the exercises by a social prayer meeting in the evening. There were several brethren from Lawrence, Dover, Great Falls, Rochester, Strafford, Barrington, and surrounding towns, to help swell the anthem of praise, and truly the Lord blessed us with a refreshing season.

Saturday the people commenced gathering. . . . Bro. Ross spoke in the afternoon with power to a large congregation. Afterward we went to the river, where Brn. Ross and Smith baptized fifteen happy souls in the likeness of Christ's burial and resurrection. Also a Bro. Cummings baptized three more, making eighteen in all. An aged sister was baptized, eighty-two years old. It was blessed to see the old and young going into the water together. In the evening we had another love feast, and truly it was a feast of fat things. Such a powerful meeting we have not witnessed under the old tent since we started out.

Sunday morning, love feast. All talked freely and in order, and God's blessing settled in power on the believing children. At 10.30 A. M. Bro. D. M. Leavitt spoke from Jude 1: 3. There was a great interest in this meeting, and all felt it was good to be there. In the afternoon Bro. Pinkham, from Dover, gave us a most excellent discourse. There were present, Brn. Ross, Smith, Pinkham, McKinstry, Knowles, Mooney, McDaniels, White and Manning. In the evening love feast, when all were refreshed by the exhortations and prayers of many. . . . Your Bro. in Christ, ISAAC H. HODGDON.

FAITH IN THE GOSPEL.

This is the primary medium of communication between the Lord and his fallen creatures. [Saxon, God's-pell, God's word, good saying.] The Lord says, as it were,—Simply confide in me, and all will be right; for, having laid all your sins upon One "mighty to save," I can be "a just God and a Savior" too; and "I will," through your confidence, "put my Spirit within you," and sanctify your affections to myself. What is gospel faith but believing that Christ atoned for all my sins (when he atoned for all sin), that they are not imputed to me, having been covered by the Savior so long before my birth, that eternal life has been given me (1 John 5), and that as the arrangements are God's own precious will, he assuredly would crown my hopes, does look on me compassionately, will, does give me his Spirit, and will keep me by his "power unto salvation" now "ready to be revealed." This confidence is the heavenly cement that unites us to the Lord, and keeps us there. Through this let us labor for the perishing; here is a double blessing—for the winner and the won, as written, "The Lord working with them," etc. He whose sweetness is beyond compare, whose beauty ever reigns supreme, yet wills that we should share. C. GREENE.

THE PORPOISE.

The porpoise is a salt water fish about six feet in length, and called by many the "sea hog." They usually go in schools in the water, and it is said if one of their number gets hit by a boat, or gets a wound from an enemy, the whole school turns upon the poor unfortunate one and umercifully devours it.

There are a great many professors of religion who resemble the porpoise in this respect. Let any good brother or especially any sister get a wound from the enemy, and it seems as though the whole school turns upon them, and nothing seems too bad for them to say about the poor unfortunate one. Their faults are magnified by the "evil imaginations" of evil-minded persons, whose hearts lack that purity necessary to see God. So one tells another, and the evil spreads like fire on a western prairie, and the report magnifies as it spreads, even as a snow-ball increases in size by rolling, until finally, though the wound was but slight at first, the poor unfortunate brother or sister is either driven to despair, or to seek a refuge in some body of christians where there are not so many who act like the porpoise.

How unlike this is the course of the soldiers of this country. Let them go into a fierce contest with the enemy, and if one of their number is so unfortunate as to get wounded by the enemy, or by his fellow soldiers, the whole company does not turn upon the poor wounded soldier, and put an end to his existence, and cast him away, or even bring him before the military court, to see whether the wound is just or unjust, inflicted by friend or foe. It is enough for them to know that a comrade is wounded, and then every effort is put forth to SAVE him, rather than to kill. The wound is dressed, if possible, the wounded part restored. The good surgeon is he who saves the most wounded limbs and arms without amputation, and not the one who for every slight wound severs them from the body.

Would to God that some professors of religion would manifest as much of the "milk of human kindness," even as the soldiers of our country, to say nothing of the love of Him who gave his life for his enemies. O how he sought to bind up the broken-hearted, and to sympathize with such as needed sympathy. May we "go and do likewise."

REPORT

OF THE NEW YORK STATE ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

Held at Rochester, June 25th to 28th.

The meeting opened with a stirring sermon by Eld. J. K. Bellows of N. Y. City, from 1 Thess. 2: 11, 12, on Thursday evening, June 25th. Friday morning, Conference met for social meeting, and all felt it good to be there. One young man arose and requested the prayers of christians, and expressed a desire to become a better man. In the afternoon Eld. M. R. Miles preached from John 21, concerning the Lord's conversation with Peter; which sermon was followed by remarks from several of the preaching brethren. In the evening preaching by Eld. C. F. Sweet, from Luke 18: 1.

Saturday morning met for prayer and conference. The meeting was very interesting. Afternoon, preaching by the writer, from 1 John 4: 9. Evening, preaching by Eld. Jonas Wendell, from Joel 3: 14.

Sunday morning conference assembled at nine o'clock for love-feast, which was truly a heavenly sitting. About eighty dear saints testified to the goodness of God, and the Spirit ran from heart to heart in mighty power. The time was limited, and about one hundred and fifty dear saints arose on their feet and signified their desire to testify for the Lord. After conference, Bro. Warren J. Hobbs preached his ordination sermon from 2 Pet. 2: 16, after which discourse Brn. Warren J. Hobbs and John H. Dennis were ordained, Bro. H. Pratt making the ordination prayer, Wm. A. Fenn giving the charge, and C. F. Sweet giving the right hand of fellowship.

The ordinance of baptism was then administered by Eld. Henry Pratt; three more were buried with Christ in baptism.

Sunday afternoon, preaching by Eld. Wm. A. Fenn, from Rev. 2: 7, after which the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered to about three hundred of the Lord's dear children. All felt it good to be there. Evening, preaching by Eld. H. Pratt, from Gal. 3: 15–17.

BUSINESS MEETING.

Conference met at the Advent Christian Hall, Saturday morning, at eight o'clock, and was called to order by the Secretary; prayer was offered by Eld. D. Cogswell of Dansville. Eld. B. P. Stevens elected temporary chairman. Officers were then elected for the ensuing year, viz.: For President, Eld. Jonas Wendell; Vice President, Eld. D. Cogswell; Secretary, J. R. Cooper; Treasurer, J. Naramore; Committee, H. Pratt, B. C. Simonds, M. R. Miles.

On motion, the conference resolved to obtain a charter from the State, that they might be enabled to hold tent and other property.

Voted, That the President appoint a committee of three, associated with himself, to draft a new constitution, and report at four o'clock. Adjourned until that time.

Re-assembled at four o'clock. Committee on constitutions reported; report adopted with some amendments. The following were then elected trustees: J. Naramore, N. T. Withington, S. Fink, B. C. Simonds, J. R. Cooper, J. S. Beman, D. Cogswell. Business meeting adjourned sine die.

Preaching brethren present: H. Pratt, W. A. Fenn, C. F. Sweet, J. Wendell, D. Cogswell, B. P. Stevens, J. K. Bellows, H. H. Brown, C. H. Williams, W. J. Hobbs, J. H. Dennis, M. R. Miles, J. Blain, A. C. Newell, E. Cotton, W. Marlatt, and Sister E. S. Jennings. WILSON MARLATT, Sec.

PRAYER.

Christians sometimes offer heathen or Jewish prayers. The lifelessness of devotion may often be attributable to the want of a candid recognition of Christ as the medium of access to the throne of grace. Prayer, in the divine plan of things, has but one avenue. "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." Whosoever slights Christ in devotion, "climbeth up some other way."

I have watched with deep interest, on many occasions, at our conference and social prayer meetings, the language used in prayer. Many utter long prayers, and at the close ask all in the name of Christ. This is more or less a stereotyped form. Others pray without ever mentioning the name of Jesus at all. At our last annual conference, held here a few days since, I particularly noticed that some of our ministerial brethren made earnest prayers, but really without once mentioning the name of Christ. Now this is not done with any intention of slighting the name of the great Shepherd, but is the force of habit; and I presume individuals who offer up such prayers, if informed of the fact, would scarcely believe it themselves.

We may call ourselves christians, and yet may every day approach God as a converted heathen would who had never heard of Christ. Not till Christ is revealed does prayer settle itself as an undoubted fact; and then it is as a privilege only, and a device of mediatorial government. Jesus said to his disciples, "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name; ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."

Rev. Dr. Sawtell, in speaking of the prayers of that man of faith, Geo. Muller, of Bristol, Eng., says: "He uses great simplicity in language, while humbleness, meekness, gentleness, and fervency of spirit are so manifest, that he recalls to your mind a very dear child, who, having had much forgiven, and whose tender father, before whom it stands, is so rich, so benevolent, so forgiving, that it asks and attains great blessings, while the deep sense of its own unworthiness keeps the child's heart very tender and humble. But the most noticeable feature in his prayers is the asking of everything in the name, through the merits, and for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ. I do not mean the fact itself is peculiar, but the great stress he lays upon the honor due to Christ—Christ's precious blood; Christ our Teacher and great atoning High Priest; Christ the Resurrection and the Life; Christ the exalted, glorified One; Christ our Mediator, Intercessor and Advocate. To honor and glorify Christ, and magnify his name above every name, seems to be the all-pervading theme which fills his heart and moves his tongue."

The truth is, that we never feel Christ to be a reality, until we feel him to be a necessity. Therefore, God makes us feel that necessity. He tries us here, and he tries us there. He chastises on this side, and he chastises on that side. He probes us by the disclosure of one sin, and another, and a third, which have lain rankling in our deceived hearts. He shakes to pieces the whole framework of our plans of life, by which we have been struggling to build together the service of God and the service of self; till, at last, he makes us feel that Christ is all that is left us.

When we discover that, and go to Christ conscious of our beggary in respect of everything else,—wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked,—we go not expecting much, perhaps not asking much. But God is generous and will give us more than we have dared believe. He gives us joy, liberty, and victory. He gives us a sense of self-conquest, and of union with himself in an eternal friendship, and will at last give us eternal life if we are faithful to the end.

Rochester, July, 1868. J. R. COOPER.

DARK SHADOWS.

"What strange contrasts this earth of ours presents. Noonday and midnight are not more opposite than the scenes that are constantly passing before our eyes.

Health and sickness lie down in the same apartment; joy and grief look out of the same window; and hope and despair dwell under the same roof. The cry of the infant, and the groan of the dying, rise together from the same dwelling; the funeral procession treads close on the heels of the bridal party, and the tones of the lute and viol have scarcely died away before the requiem for the dead comes swelling after."

BRO. GRANT:—This fit description of earth's varying scenes has been brought forcibly to mind of late in consequence of the death of my much loved sister, H. M. Oyer, one of your subscribers and helpers in deed and in truth, though not a correspondent of your paper, who came to her end by a stroke of paralysis, after lying speechless nearly one week, May 19th, in Greenville, Mich., being about fifty years a pilgrim in this world of mortality. Hearing of her condition, we hastened to her home in hopes of seeing her once more, but the enemy had done his work, and the earth had closed over that once fair form. And now in regard to our dead we can say, "our grief, our sorrow brings them not back; death keeps his sullen trust; and as the grave hides them from our sight, takes them from our embrace, a dark, dark night around us falls, and we would fain find refuge from this heart eclipse. Yet we strive the unavailing tear to check, as we remember that He who is the resurrection and the life shall spoil the power of death, and bring our loved again from the land of the enemy, to die no more.

While our hearts in bitter anguish bow beneath its cruel mandate, and the tear of wounded nature flows, we would commit our ways to Him whose mighty arm calmed the raging sea; knowing it is quite as potent now to calm and comfort us through the severest trials that nature can endure. And while to us his ways are past finding out, we know that 'He doeth all things well,' that all his providences are just and right, and in humble submission we would bow to his will, and wait for the promises to be fulfilled. Wait through all the dreary time till comes the resurrection day. The victims of its power shall then be released, 'for all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and come forth."

May the Lord bless the lonely husband and little daughter. MARY A. SEYMOUR.

Correspondence.

From Sr. P. M. Eaton.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—Separated as we are by distance's barrier, but few comparatively who read each other's letters in our widely circulated paper will ever meet in the present life. For one, I should not venture to write a line, were it not that my privileges for blessing those I wish are so limited, and my heart so full.

The dear Savior in his reproof to the slothful receiver of one talent, says, "Thou oughtest to have put my money to the 'exchangers,' and then at my coming I should have received my own with usury." This is our bidding today. Shall I obey, or refuse and neglect till the Master come, and I with no good excuse return him no gain?

Certainly the Crisis is an "exchanger," an extensive exchanger. I thank thee, my Father in heaven, that the pathway is plain. Dear christians around, bring your offerings to a treasury that dispenses freely its stores; bless and be blessed in return; freely ye receive, freely give; rejoice with the happy; weep with the afflicted; tenderly soothe the bruised and wounded ones; "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." O, blessed mission theirs who follow Jesus!

The Prince of the house of David no more walks Judea's vales; no more his footsteps seek out earth's afflicted sons and daughters; his hand no more breaks bread; he takes little children in his loving arms no more. All these offices of love he left with his chosen to fulfill. Sweet work! holy and good, noble and true.

Bless the Lord, oh my soul, for the great company now laboring not only in Judea but among every nation, kindred and people. Alleluia! salvation and glory and dominion be unto Him who died to redeem. I bless thee, my Savior, for every happy heart, every happy home; reign, thou, till thy foes become thy footstool, till the last enemy be overcome, till the Lord proclaim, "There shall be no more sorrow nor sighing, nor any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

I often have asked myself when reviewing past lessons in life, "Why is it thus? Why have so many bitter cups been pressed to my lips? precious and faithful the answering words of the Holy Bible, "That ye may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith ye yourselves are comforted of God."

Jesus, our Redeemer, "endured the cross for the joy set before him." He overcome death's anguish, and is our companion in pain; the angel of his presence gives us strength and love and joy. We must fulfill his last words of instruction, to feed his lambs, to visit and minister to every child of want and sorrow within our reach. Sweet will be our rest when the labor of life is done. Sweet the voice that will welcome us home. Your sister in the spirit of Jesus,

Warner, N. H. P. M. EATON.

TREATMENT OF SUNSTROKE.—In view of the great many deaths from sunstroke during the heated term, and the risks which may be run during the balance of the summer, the following extract of an article from the Philadelphia Ledger may prove useful:

"In every instance where one is found fainting in the street on a hot day, the first thing is to remove the person to as cool and shady a place as can be found, and, if possible, to where a draft of air is blowing at the time. By-standers and mere curious idlers should be kept from crowding around. The next is to send in all directions for a doctor or a skilled apothecary. But as it frequently happens that neither a doctor nor an apothecary can be had in time, those who take charge of the sufferer should know how to act, for they may save his life. For their information, the following treatment is suggested: They should understand that there are two morbid conditions resulting from excessive heat. These differ somewhat in their symptoms, and require a somewhat different treatment. The first of these occur during hot weather, after undue exertion on the part of the person thus affected. The man is faint, perhaps unable to move, though he can generally be roused; he has a feeble pulse and a cool and moist skin. Here is simply a loss of nervous power, and relief is promptly afforded by removing him to a cool, shady place, applying cold water or ice to the head, and administering iced brandy and water, or other stimulant. In the other and more fatal form of this affection, a different set of symptoms show themselves. Here the patient suddenly falls to the ground, completely unconscious, his skin is pungently hot and dry, his breathing hurried, convulsions are not uncommon, and, if proper treatment be not promptly resorted to, death soon takes place. In this case, also, the patient should be promptly removed to a cool spot, perfectly private, so that the crowd may be kept off without fail. His clothing should be stripped off and his whole body should be rubbed with ice from head to foot, and pieces of ice should be kept under the armpits. This should be steadily persevered with until the patient is restored, or until a doctor arrives, or until it is plain that the case is beyond recovery. This treatment has been found to be so eminently successful by one of our best physicians, that he feels justified in saying, from his own knowledge and observation, that if applied promptly, recovery is almost certain."

Obituaries.

GALUSHA. Died in Lewiston, Me., July 2d, 1868, of measles and congestion of the lungs, Sr. Hannah M., daughter of A. and D. Galusha, aged nineteen years and nine months.

She was buried in Richmond, where her parents live. This is the second child that has been brought home to those parents dead, a son having died in the army a few years ago of the same disease (measles.) May the grace of God sustain them in this hour of affliction. Sister Hannah gave her heart to the Lord some five or six years ago. She was good and lovely, and we believe she sleeps in Jesus, and will have part in the first resurrection. H. D. REED.

BURROWS. Died in Lebanon, Me., May 29th, 1868, Des. Joseph Burrows, aged ninety years and three months.

This dear brother and father has been a professed christian over seventy years, and a Deacon of the F. W. Baptist church over fifty years. He lived his religion at all times, and did much good in the world. But he has finished his course. He kept the faith. He died very happy, shaking hands with friends, and bidding them farewell. He has left a second wife and four children to mourn. May the Lord bless them, and bring them up with him, when the last trump shall sound to call the dead to life again. L. A. LANG.

COLVIN. Died in Woodhull, July 2nd, 1868, Sister Mary Colvin, after a lingering illness of nearly two years.

Sr. Colvin was converted when about fourteen years of age, became a member of the M. E. church about nine years ago, but embraced the "blessed hope" of life in Christ one year ago last October, and has lived since a consistent christian life in the hope of soon seeing Jesus. Words of comfort by the writer. WILSON MARLATT.

CUNNINGHAM. Died at Newton Falls, June 9th, 1868, the infant son of L. T. and Abbie Cunningham, aged six months.

Sleep, little Joseph, sweetly sleep
Down in the silent earth,
Thy little form is laid away
Till Christ shall call it forth.

Words of comfort were spoken to the bereaved friends by the writer upon the subject of the resurrection. S. W. THURBER.

MERRILL. Died in Richmond, Me., June 2nd, 1868, John Merrill, aged fifty-two years.

His disease was an extremely painful one, and his sufferings very great; but he bore them patiently. He leaves a wife and two boys. May the Lord protect and guide them. H. D. REED.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

PARIS, July 7. In the Corps Legislatif to-day, Marshall Neil made an eloquent defence of the army and the military power of the nation. He declared that in 1867 France would have been unable to cope with her neighbors, but now her power was such that none of them could compete with her.

BELGRADE, 6th. C. Nemalovic, brother-in-law of Prince Kava Georgewitch, has been executed for participation in the recent conspiracy.

VIENNA, July 9. Prime Minister Von Beust has written a sharp note in reply to a recent allocution on the state of religion in Austria. He says that the intermeddling with the domestic legislation of Austria is a violation of the independence and dignity of the Empire.

PESTH, July 9. Dispatches from Belgrade state that Prince Kava Georgewitch has been placed under surveillance of the police and his private secretary has been arrested.

BERLIN, July 12. At the trial of the reaping machines of the world, which took place yesterday, the English reapers were decided to be superior to those of America, and took the international prize.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 11. Ismael Pasha, Viceroy of Egypt, has married a daughter of Abdel Mejis, the Turkish Minister.

Prince Napoleon has gone to Athens.

☞ The Egyptians, according to recent letters from that country, are fairly eaten up by taxes, which are imposed by every possible refinement of excise. The village Sheiks, whose constituents do not pay, are put in prison. The Government is pressing all the men into labor on the railroads. From Luxor, with a total male population of one thousand, the government took three hundred and ten men, which was about all the able-bodied adults in the place.

☞ Queen Victoria's "breakfasts" are from half-past 4 to half-past 7 P. M.

☞ Medical men predict a sudden death for Count Bismarck.

DOMESTIC.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 9. A thunder storm occurred at Woonsocket, a few miles north of this city, this afternoon, attended by a remarkably severe fall of hail stones doing much damage. One market gardener estimates his loss at $1000.

At Hamlet Mill all but 30 out of 300 lights of glass in the roof were broken. The torrents of rain carried away one dam. The damage from hail was confined to a limited tract, perhaps three square miles.

WASHINGTON, July 9. The President to-day received congratulatory messages from George Vener and citizens of Santa Fe, New Mexico, on the completion of the first telegraph line in that Territory.

NEW YORK, July 10. A Sioux City dispatch says that a peace treaty has been made with the Sioux Indians, which ends the Indian troubles on the plains and closes the labors of the Peace Commission.

"UNEASY LIES THE HEAD THAT WEARS A CROWN."—The following statistics regarding the assassination and attempts at assassination of kings and rulers appear in a French newspaper:

1856—May 28. Reymond Fuentes was on the point of firing upon the Queen of Spain, when his hand was seized by a policeman.

1856—December 8. A soldier stabbed with a bayonet King Ferdinand of Naples.

1857—August 7. Bartoletti, Gibaldi and Grillo, who went to Paris for the purpose of killing the Emperor Napoleon, were condemned.

1858—January 14. Orsini, Rudio, Pieri and others threw hand grenades under the carriage of the Emperor Napoleon as he was entering the Opera House.

1861—July 14. Oscar Becker, a student, fired two shots at the King of Prussia without effect.

1862—December 18. Aristide Drusios fired upon Queen Amelia of Greece, at Athens, without causing any injury.

1863—December 24. Grecro and Traburro were arrested for having formed a conspiracy to kill the Emperor Napoleon.

1865—April 14. Abraham Lincoln killed by Wilkes Booth.

1866—April 7. An attempt was made upon the life of the Emperor of Russia at St. Petersburg by Kavarasov.

1867. Another attempt was made upon the Emperor of Russia while on a visit to Paris.

1868—June 10. The Prince Michael of Servia was killed by the brothers Radivarowitch.

A SOCIABLE CANARY.—A very pretty incident is related of a canary bird by a Georgia paper. The door of the bird's cage was occasionally left open that he might enjoy the freedom of the room. One day he happened to light upon the mantel shelf whereupon was a mirror. Here was a new discovery of the most profound interest. He gazed long and curiously at himself, and came to the conclusion that he had found a mate. Going back to his cage he selected a seed from its box, and brought it in its bill as an offering to the stranger. In vain the canary exerted himself to make his new-found friend partake, and becoming weary of that tried another tack. Stepping back a few inches from the glass he poured forth his sweetest notes, pausing now and then for a reply. None came, and moody and disgusted he flew back to his perch, hanging his head in shame and silence for the rest of the day; and although the door was repeatedly left open he refused to come out again.

Items.

☞ The sums paid for cable messages by the English Press for a year amount to a total of $7000, against $70,000 paid by the American Press. The London papers only give the briefest telegraphic items, and never publish the long cable dispatches on public affairs that are common with the leading journals of this country.

☞ Antonousa Rastanopoulo is the name of the Cretan girl who is fighting in the revolution. She is nineteen years old, cannot read, smokes cigarettes, is rather pretty, and has five hundred men under her command.

☞ The war pressure has been so great in Brazil that the Emperor and the Empress have contributed a quarter of their income to help the public purse, and the other members of the Imperial family one fifth of theirs.

☞ Jeff. Davis, when released, as he anticipates he will be, from his trial difficulties, intends to reside permanently in Europe. It is not proper that he should reside in a country which he attempted to destroy.

☞ Napoleon is historic in his associations. His sleeping apartment at Fontainebleau is that once occupied by his great uncle. In his bed have slept Louis Phillippe, Charles X., Louis XVIII., and Napoleon I. His study is furnished with articles used by the first Napoleon, and he writes at the desk on which that Emperor signed his abdication.

☞ If those exposed to the sun would place a wet handkerchief or cloth of any kind in their hats, they would avoid severe headache caused by solar heat, or sunstroke.

We hear of thermometers bursting from the expansion of the mercury beyond their power to contain it.

BROTHER MILD'S VISITORS.

Brother Mild is a preacher and lives in town. He is always glad to have his friends visit him; but at the same time he wishes it understood that he does not keep a hotel for the special convenience of all that happen to have business in town. Brother Mild—without the knowledge or consent of his wife—permits me to chronicle three visits recently paid him, believing that many will sympathize with him.

Visit No 1. On Monday Bro. A. came to town on business; to be a little more precise, he came to sell a load of wheat and purchase some groceries for his family. Bro. A. lives near Gripfast Corners and owns a large farm there. He has many horses, and the cattle on —several hills—are his. Bro. Mild once held a meeting at Gripfast, and Bro. A. munificently presented him with a veritable greenback; value one hundred—cents. Bro. A. disposed of his wheat at two dollars and thirty cents a bushel, completed his purchases and concluded to call on Bro Mild, which he did at a quarter before twelve o'clock. Now Mrs. Mild had intended to have a "cold bite" for dinner, and the cold biscuit, butter and meat had been placed on the table awaiting the coming of the children from school. The cold dinner is set off and warm biscuit is made out of some excellent flour, made from a previously brought load of wheat, grown by a good Bro. A., and for which Bro. Mild paid ten dollars a hundred. The little girl is sent to the store to purchase some tea at two dollars a pound, and Bro. A. makes a good dinner, and, with many urgent invitations to come to Gripfast and hold a meeting, Bro. A. departs, evidently well satisfied with himself and all the world.

Visit No. 2. On Tuesday Sister B. came to town, accompanied by her two buxom daughters and a small boy to drive the horses. Sister B. lives near the Pinchem school-house, where brother Mild once held a meeting, keeps twenty cows and many chickens. She came to town to purchase some finery for her daughters, and brought butter and eggs to pay for it. The party found their way into Bro. Mild's parlor a little after eleven o'clock, and found that gentleman engaged in reading Baxter. Bro. Mild laid aside his book and Mrs. Mild retired to the kitchen to prepare dinner for so many, and some eggs were needed to make a cake. A consumptive pocket-book was produced (Bro. Mild's salary is six hundred a year) and a little girl was dispatched to the store to get some of the same butter and eggs brought in by good Sister B., paying forty cents a pound for the butter, and twenty cents a dozen for the eggs. After dinner Sister B. insisted that Bro. Mild should again visit the Pinchem school-house and took her departure, leaving Mrs. Mild a little tired and jaded to be sure, but then, wasn't she glad to have her friends visit her?

Visit No. 3. On Wednesday Bro. C. came to town and his team stopped in front of Bro. Mild's house at half-past eight in the morning. His arrival was announced by the shouts of the children scrambling for the big red apples he was deliberately tossing into the yard. Mysterious looking packages, sacks and covered baskets were transferred from the wagon to the kitchen, and there was a suspicious moisture in Mrs. Mild's eye when she clasped his big brown hand and urged him to "come round to dinner." Glorious Bro. C., may God bless him forever!—Christian Standard.

☞ Man is like a watch; if evening and morning he is not wound up with prayer and circumspection, he is unprofitable and false, or serves to mislead.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Volunteers Wanted!!

Wanted on the Springfield Camp-ground, eight or ten brethren who will give their labors towards fitting up the ground, and getting things in readiness for the meeting on the 24th of August. The committee have been to great expense in fitting up the buildings, etc., and are coming short of funds to complete the work. Therefore we call for help, and some who cannot give money, can give their time and labor, which is as good as money for the purpose. We want quite a number of men who love to work, on the ground by the tenth of Aug., to remain and work until the meeting. Send in your names to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., as soon as possible, that we may know in season how many we have. Provision will be made to board and sleep on the ground. In this way you can have your board through the meeting, and help us much in the week. Who will come?

Per order of Building Committee,
J. HEMENWAY.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting will commence Monday, July 27th, and continue over the following Sunday. Ample arrangements will be made to accommodate all with board and lodging (they bringing their bedding.) Bro. E. Bellows will be on the ground with his large new tent, which will seat nearly one thousand persons.

Now, brethren and sisters from abroad, and the regions round about, come to this gospel feast, for we are anticipating the blessing of the Lord with his pilgrims, as in years past. Bro. Geo. T. Adams will probably secure a reduction of fare on the Old Colony and Cape Cod railroad for those who come through Boston. For the committee,

HENRY V. DAVIS.

Notice to the Churches.

As writing to the churches subjects a preaching brother to inconvenience, and sometimes causes delay in making appointments, and otherwise sometimes makes confusion, we have concluded to request such churches as desire our labors, to address us at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass., stating the time when our labors are desired; and any places desiring preaching, whether new fields or old ones, even though the encouragements may be few, if we can be notified, shall be supplied to the best of our ability. We shall keep our appointments published, so that by reference to the paper our engagements can be known, and our proximity to any particular place. We desire to visit places as the way opens, and have no choice except to have our appointments as convenient to each other as may be possible.

L. C. & M. MCKINSTRY.

Notice.

Any church desiring the next Quarterly Conference with them, will please let it be known to the Secretary. It will be due in October. I would also say to those who pledged money to the Advent Mass. Conference for the support of quarterly conferences and protracted meetings in new and needy places, your money is wanted, and you will please send it to Bro. R. E. Ladd, the Treasurer, Springfield, Mass. Also, others who have the needful send in funds to introduce and enlighten the people on the coming and kingdom of our Lord. Three protracted meetings with good results have been held. Others are wanted. L. BOUTELL.

Notice.

As a question of importance has come up in relation to the Alton Bay Campmeeting, it makes it necessary that the Campmeeting Committee should meet. Accordingly we appoint July 21st, 10 o'clock A. M., for said meeting, to be held in Exeter, N. H., at the chapel. A full attendance of the committee is requested. J. G. SMITH, Chairman of Com.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting on the old ground in Springwater, Aug. 14th, 15th, and 16th. Services at the school-house Friday evening, at half past seven o'clock, and in the grove on Saturday, at one P. M., and on Sunday at nine A. M. Come one and all. For the brethren, C. F. SWEET.

Missouri Christian Conference.

The Missouri Advent Christian Conference will hold its third quarterly meeting at the Pilgrim Church, corner of 5th and Biddle streets, commencing Saturday, July 26th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Per order of the Board, HIRAM BEADLE, Sec.

Notice.

The New Christian Union Church at Butlerville, Wilbraham, will be dedicated on Wednesday, July 22d, at two o'clock P. M.

New York State Mission Tent.

Meetings will be held in this tent, at Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y., commencing Wednesday evening July 22d. Brethren and sisters are cordially invited to come and labor with us.

J. WENDELL.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting in Jonesville, Wis., commencing August 20th, to hold several days.

WM. SHELDON.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. SMITH.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ CORRESPONDENTS SHOULD KNOW THAT WE CANNOT DISCONTINUE OR SEND THEIR ORDERS, UNLESS THEY GIVE US THE POST OFFICE AND STATE IN PLAIN LETTERS.

For the World's Crisis.

A THOUSAND YEARS.

AIR.—Song of the Thousand Years."

Lift up your eyes, believing christian,
Fling to the winds all needless fears,
For soon, as told by ancient prophets,
Jesus shall reign a thousand years.

CHORUS.—A thousand years, then, on forever,
'Tis the great day so long foretold,
'Tis the glad morn of His appearing
The prophets saw in times of old.

What if the clouds of darkness lower
To try your faith till he appears?
The "signs" proclaim the day is nearing,
When he shall reign a thousand years.

"Trumpets" have blown, "seals" have been broken,
Kingdoms have fallen, as told by seers;
Soon Christ shall come in clouds of heaven,
On earth to reign a thousand years.

Tell the whole world these blessed tidings,
Tell them till every nation hears;
Tell men that soon the seventh trumpet
Will usher in the thousand years.

See, all our foes are in commotion,
Little we heed the scoffer's sneers;
Soon he will come, our conquering Savior,
Come, and he'll reign a thousand years.

Scoffers, your day is fast approaching,
Soon you will weep with bitter tears;
You cannot stop the Savior's coming,
Coming to reign a thousand years.

Oh! waiting ones, look for the morning
Of that great day foretold by seers,
The "day of God"; Jehovah reckons
Each of his days a thousand years.

Six of earth's days will soon be numbered,
Ring out their knell through all the spheres;
They end the "week" and bring the "Sabbath,"
The day of rest, a thousand years.

For the World's Crisis.

DISCUSSION AT MONTPELIER, O.

Having been present at a discussion held at Montpelier, Ohio, between Eld. A. N. Seymour of Reading, Mich., and Elder David Holmes of the United Brethren Conference, I thought a report of the same might not be uninteresting to the readers of the Crisis.

Two months before the meeting for debate, the parties agreed to discuss the following resolution, viz.:—

Resolved, "That the doctrines of the immortality of the soul, the consciousness of the dead, going to heaven and hell at death, and endless hell torture, constitute no part of the revelation of God."

On the 22nd inst. the parties met to make the final arrangements, when Mr. Holmes refused to discuss the resolution as agreed upon. He thought the expression, "endless hell torture" a little too strong, and declared himself an unbeliever in the doctrine of going to heaven or hell at death; saying there was no scripture to prove it. After a long conference the following resolutions were agreed upon:—(1) Resolved, "That the Scriptures teach the mortality of the entire man, and the unconsciousness of the dead between death and the resurrection." (2) Resolved, "That the Scriptures teach that the finally impenitent will have a cessation of conscious existence by the second death."

The discussion was held in the U. B. church, and was largely attended by a deeply interested community. The debate on the first resolution began at 2 P. M., June 22nd, 1868, and lasted three days and a half. The debate on the second resolution lasted only one day, as Mr. Holmes had to leave town the next day for conference.

Mr. Holmes, agreeably to the practice of his school, relied more on Grecian mythology, Pagan philosophy, heathen tradition, and the writings of the Luther Lee school of theology, than on the testimony of Scripture. He avowed himself a believer in the intermediate state of the dead, as one of consciousness in hades. He quoted from and literally followed Josephus' discourse to the Greeks concerning hades. This position he maintained for two days, when he was routed therefrom by Mr. Seymour's comments on and deductions from Acts 7: 55–59; Eccl. 12: 7; 3: 21, and Lk. 23: 46. "If," said Mr. Seymour, "the immaterial, immortal souls of dead people have a conscious existence in hades—'a hole in the ground,'—why did Solomon write about the spirit of man that goeth upward, and why did he teach that at death the dust (i. e., the earthy man) should return to the earth as it was, while the spirit should return unto God who gave it? If paradise were situated in a subterraneous region, Paul must have made a mistake when he located it in the third heaven."

Mr. Holmes perceiving the dilemma in which he had unwittingly placed himself, allowed that Josephus might have been mistaken in regard to the place of abode of disembodied human spirits, and thought that the place where they were kept was either in hades, tartarus, or heaven; he did not know which. His exposition of a passage of Scripture which he claimed as positive proof of his position, will best illustrate the course of argument. The passage which he thus confidently brought forward was 1 Pet. 3: 4. He claimed that the "hidden man" and the "meek and quiet spirit" were the immortal, immaterial soul or spirit, and that as the apostle taught that it was not corruptible, it must be incorruptible, therefore immortal. Some of his citations of authors were not a little amusing. For instance, he affirmed that "Plato was a Greek author," and that "John Wesley was the author of the hymn 'A charge to keep I have,'" etc.

During the discussion he asked Mr. Seymour four questions, which were fully answered. The questions were, 1. Can matter think? 2. Had Christ a pre-existence? 3. Did he have, previous to his incarnation, a bodily form? 4. Are the terms death and the grave synonymous?

Mr. Seymour in turn asked his opponent sixteen questions pertinent to the discussion, not one of which was answered. The following is a summary of Mr. Seymour's argument in support of the first resolution:

1. Man was made a material being. In support of this position he adduced the following testimony, viz., Gen. 2: 7,—"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." 1 Cor. 15: 47,—"The first man is of the earth, earthy." Gen. 3: 19; 28: 27; Eccl. 3: 20.

2. This material or earthy man became a "living soul" by the Lord God breathing into his nostrils the breath of lives. Gen. 2: 7; 1 Cor. 15: 45.

3. The term "living soul" is not peculiar to man, but is alike applied to man and the lower animals. Gen. 1: 30; 2: 19.

4. These "living souls" were liable to die, consequently they were mortal. Gen. 7: 22, 23; Ezek. 18: 4, 20; Acts 3: 23; Ps. 104: 29; Rev. 16: 3.

5. The Scriptures expressly declare that man is mortal. Job 4: 17; 2 Chron. 14: 11 (margin); Rom. 1: 23.

6. The Apocrypha declares that man is mortal, and thus corroborates the testimony of the Bible. 2 Esdras 7: 15; 43: 49; Wisdom 2: 22–24; 9: 14; 15: 16, 17; Eccl. 17: 27, 28, 30; 19: 19. Enosh, "mortal man," and anosheum, "mortal men," occur a hundred and twenty-one times in the Hebrew Scriptures.

7. The words "mortal," "mortality," and "mortally," occur ten times in the Bible, and are applied to man. Job 4: 17; Rom. 1: 23; 6: 12; 8: 11; 1 Cor. 15: 53, 54; 2 Cor. 4: 11; Deuteronomy 19: 11; 2 Cor. 5: 4; 2 Chron. 14: 11. Although these terms plainly declaring that man is mortal are thus repeatedly mentioned in the Holy Scriptures, neither the word "immortal" nor any other word of like import is ever applied to man or any part of man.

8. Adam by his transgression became subject to death, therefore absolutely mortal. Gen. 2: 17; 3: 19; 5: 5; 3: 22, 24.

9. Adam's mortality became the legacy of the human race. Rom. 5: 12; 1 Cor. 15: 22, 26.

10. The dead are unconscious. Eccl. 9: 5, 10; Ps. 115: 17; 146: 4; Isa. 38: 16–19.

11. At the resurrection they are raised to consciousness. John 5: 28, 29; 1 Thess. 4: 13–18; Dan. 12: 2; Rev. 20: 12; Acts 24: 15.

On the second resolution, Mr. Seymour claimed, and Mr. Holmes admitted, that retribution was to be on the earth. This admission was fatal to any eternal torment position that could be taken, and Mr. Holmes' defeat was, if possible, more decisive on the second resolution, than on the first.

Mr. Seymour exposed the glaring absurdities of the doctrine of eternal torments, and made a keen and searching analysis of the "orthodox" theory, which he thought no man could entertain who had correct ideas of the attributes of God. It would be a fruitless undertaking for any preacher to talk eternal misery to the people of Montpelier. The unbounded love, mercy, and goodness of God were, he said, attributes that came into direct conflict with the popular theory of future punishment. When we represent God as a merciless being, we dishonor him, and outrage every sense of right and justice. "His mercy endureth forever."

It is sometimes thought that theological discussions are not profitable. I cannot agree to this as a rule. If conducted properly, they can hardly result otherwise than in good. In some places it is almost the only way that the attention of the people can be sufficiently aroused to investigate for themselves. A noble victory was won in Montpelier last week, and the serpent's lie never seemed more hideous than it did when the beautiful mask of serpent colors had been torn off, leaving it in all its naked deformity, "a thing of dread and horror."

Truth has no firmer, truer, more devoted friend and defender, and error no more uncompromising foe, than he who, at Montpelier last week, advanced the banners of truth over the strongholds of orthodoxy and spiritualism combined.

HOW TO DISPOSE OF CARE.

"There is such a thing as care. Who does not know it by experience? Who has not felt it at his heart? How heavily it presses there, and it pierces too. It is a burden, and it also has a sting. Nothing is more unfriendly to happiness than care. It is hard being happy with a load on the heart. The objects of care are almost innumerable. What shall I eat? what shall I drink? and wherewithal shall I be clothed? are only a few of its anxious interrogations, and they are among the least important of them. These concern ourselves, but care often forgets self in its solicitude for others. Parents, and especially mothers, know what I mean by this. But I need not attempt to explain a word that expresses what we all feel.

"There is a care both for ourselves and others which God himself has cast upon us, and of which it were sinful to attempt to make any other disposition than he has made of it. But over and above this there is a large amount of solicitude and anxiety which we lay upon ourselves, and which is unnecessary, useless, injurious. This is the care that is unfavorable to happiness. The other is friendly to it. It is very desirable to get rid of it, since it does us harm and does no one any good. Nothing is more hostile to the successful care of the heart than the pressure and poignancy of the care of which I speak. 'Careful and troubled about many things,' we intermit or overlook the care of the 'one thing needful.' But what shall we do with it? how shall we get rid of it, since to bear it is so painful to our feelings and often so ruinous to our better interests? Divide it with others we may to some little extent. There is such a thing as sympathy. There is such an operation as unburdening of the mind to a fellow creature. And I will not deny that there is some relief in it. Yet the very etymology of the word sympathy evinces that it is no remedy. It is after all a suffering together. A great deal of what constitutes sympathy is grief that we can but grieve,—sorrow that we cannot succor. Mixing tears does indeed diminish their bitterness, but weeping with those that weep does not wipe away their tears. They weep on, and the only difference is that we weep with them, and our tears may be said to dilute theirs. There is a better way of disposing of care than to cast it upon our fellow creatures. Indeed, what fellow creatures can we find who have not enough of their own to bear without receiving an additional burden from us? what friend has not himself surplus care to dispose of?

"There are some who cast off care without reference to what becomes of it. They sing,

'Begone, dull care.'

These are the reckless. Care may go at their bidding; but the worst of it is, it is sure to return again, and it comes back a heavier burden, duller than ever. This is not the way to dispose of care.

"Yet there is a way whereby all excess of anxiety may be effectually removed, and the heart be left with all its tender affection, and yet with no more solicitude than the blessed in the world to come might feel without diminution of happiness. It is to cast care on God. That is the true and only effectual way to dispose of care. He can take the burden, however huge and heavy. You do not doubt that, but you ask, Will he? may I cast it on him? I, such a one as I, cast my cares, the whole multitude and burden of them on such a being as God? I know the government of the mighty universe and the providence which extends to the minute equally as to the magnificent, reaching low as to the fall of the sparrow and the numbering of the hairs of the head, does not distract or burden him. I know he can take a larger charge and not feel it; but will he? will such greatness stoop to such littleness? such holiness come down to such vileness? Yes, it will, for condescension is one characteristic of greatness; 'and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin.'

"But why do I reason? Does not the Holy Ghost say by David, 'Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee'? and by Peter, 'Casting all your care upon him'? and by Paul, 'Be careful for nothing'? and does not Immanuel himself say, 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest'? No longer ask if you may but use your privilege. Here is your authority. The Lord says you may do it. Nay, more, he commands you to do it. It is your duty as well as your privilege.

"So far is it from being presumption to cast your care on God, it is a sin not to do it. This is the way to dispose of care, and it is no matter how much there is of it, God will take it all. It is no burden to him. Many have made this disposition of their cares, and all testify how willingly he took and bore them; and if at times they took back the burden, yet willingly he received it again when again it was cast upon him.

"There is a reason given by Peter for casting care on God that is inexpressibly touching. He says, 'Casting all your care on him,' and then follows no flourish of rhetoric, no parade of reasons, but this—O how happily selected, I would say, but that he wrote by inspiration which does everything felicitously—'for he careth for you.' Why should you care for yourself since God cares for you? Ah! here is a topic, not for the meditation of an hour merely, but of an eternity. He careth for you. Can it be? O why should he? What a thought to carry through this vale of tears and to go down with us into the deeper valley of death, that God cares for me. He concerns himself about me. Let the scholar look at the original; the English is good enough, but the Greek is still more interesting. God has me on his heart. Some poor saints think nobody cares for them. But God does. Is not that enough? He who regards the cry of the ravens, and gives all the fowls of heaven their food, and decks the lilies of the field, doth much more care for you. He concerns himself for his creatures; will he not much more for his children? Are ye not of much more value whom no less price could redeem than the blood of his Son? Let this suffice you. I know nothing that goes so soon and surely to my heart as the sight of a poor, sobbing, and sorrowful-looking child, an orphan, or worse than parentless, whom no one seems to care for. But if I weep at such a sight, it dries up my tears to think that there is, after all, One who cares for the poor child, even He who said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven.'

"O come, let us cast our care on God. Let us go to Jesus for rest. In him we shall find sympathy such as man can feel, with support such as only God can afford. There we shall meet with such pity as at first weeps with the sufferer, and then wipes away his tears. Surely He who bare our sins will not refuse our cares. Surely 'he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows.'"—Selected.

Let us look to Christ for unfailing comfort. In him there is consolation. Though he has been at the right hand of God in the mansions of glory on high for over eighteen hundred years, yet he still possesses the same heart of tenderness he had when he said to weeping Mary of old, "Thy sins are forgiven thee; go in peace and sin no more." O, how sweet is the thought that Jesus is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

Though we may change, He changeth not. He ever liveth, and he can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. He is the brother born for adversity. He is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. He can comfort his people. He knows what sorrow is, for he was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Soon he will come again, and then he will wipe away all tears. Let us cast our care on him now, and then he will care for us in that great day.

KIND WORDS.

Much has been said and written upon kind words, but the half has not been told. Pen cannot describe nor tongue express their full depth. There is a magic in kind and gentle words, which those who seldom use them or feel their power little know. A few kind words have often been the means of saving those who, an account of manifold trials and severe temptations, were upon the point of deserting their heavenly Master's service. Kind words have also been instrumental in saving the young man from a drunkard's grave, who, while in a fit of despondency has put the wine cup to his lips, hoping thereby to drown his sorrows and troubles in intoxication. But how very often have harsh words been the means of driving them on still further in the course which they have reluctantly taken. Instead of gently pointing out the great evil they are doing themselves, the cold shoulder is turned to them, and they are cast out as drunkards with the exclamation, "We will have no more to do with you." O, would that all could realize the vast importance of kind words in this respect. If they did we would see less of that great evil, intemperance, among the young men of our day.

Let us always speak kindly. It is much easier to utter kind than harsh words. Husband, speak kindly to the weary wife, whose life is burdened with many cares; it will lighten the load and smooth the pathway through life. Wife, speak kindly to the husband when he returns from his daily toil with clouded brow; you know not the cares and vexations of the day. Make home the spot where he can forget the outward world, and bask in the hallowed influence of domestic affection. Children, speak kindly to your aged parents, whose limbs are bowed beneath the weight of many winters, and on whose brows are traced the lines of the cares and sorrows of many years. Be kind to the little ones. Chide them gently. You know not the agony of an unkind word felt by one of such tender years.

Speak words of hope and kindness to your erring sister; it will do no harm, but may perchance bring the wayward heart to thoughts of repentance, while unkind words only tend to harden the heart. Speak kindly to your sinful brother, even though he may have fallen low into the depths of sin and iniquity; you know not the snares and temptations which beset his pathway, and how a word fitly spoken may sink deeply into his heart and bring forth fruit meet for repentance.

Finally, speak kindly to all; the high, the low, the rich, the poor, wherever, whenever, or under whatever circumstances we meet them. It matters not how harsh their words may be to us, let us always stand ready to return a kind answer. We shall enjoy ourselves much better, others will delight to be in our society, God will bless us, and we shall stand acquitted before his judgment bar at last.

THE GLORIOUS PROSPECT.

Oh! the thought is soul-enlivening,
Joyful thought that soon I'll be
Free from toil, and pain, and sighing,
Welcomed home, and Jesus see.
In that home, with angels dwelling,
I will praise him, and adore;
With hosannas, loudly swelling,
Praise the Lord forevermore.

If I would that home inherit,
I must seek to overcome;
Purchased by a Savior's merit,
Thankful be to God's dear Son:
Only through the precious Savior
Is my hope of heaven secure,
I will pray and still endeavor
That my life shall all be pure.

Of that pure and living fountain,
Soon, if faithful, I shall taste;
And that high and holy mountain
I will seek with utmost haste:
There where living water flowing,
In the New Jerusalem,—
There's the place where I am going,
Trusting in the Savior's name.

Blessed Savior! O come quickly,
Thou in whom I put my trust;
Then may I obtain the victory,
And be numbered with the just:
'Tis for thee I long have waited,
Thou wilt come, and that to save;
To the meek and lowly-minded
Life eternal thou wilt give.

Brimfield, Mass. GEO. E. LEE.

POSITIVENESS.

A dear friend, who has just passed through the movement on the '67 time, writes:

"It is a mercy in God I have survived the toil, labor, exposure, privation, and mental anxiety. And now let me say, it seems to me that I can hardly be brought to impose such confidence again in definite time. My position is watch!! Pray! keep in a state of preparation! for these are moments, at least to me, of awful suspense."

It seems to us that if we obey the Lord's commandment, to "occupy till I come," in its true spirit, we shall, even while holding the strongest faith in definite time, act consistently in our spiritual and temporal affairs. We never saw the necessity of leaving business, or of becoming excited so as to unfit ourselves for the every-day duties of life. The best way to live, and be the best prepared to meet Christ, is to be faithful in all the relations of life. Be diligent in business, and in spirit fervent, serving the Lord. In this way we can be better prepared than we can in leaving business, and living an excited, or idle life.

Let us all pursue our lawful callings with wisdom and faithfulness, and live at the same time in sweet communion with God, and so be ready at any moment for the knock of the Master, and so to open to him immediately.—Voice.

SUGGESTIONS ABOUT PREACHING.

The following excellent thoughts on the best method of reaching the people with the gospel, are worthy of a careful reading.—ED.

"The end of preaching is to reclaim the hearts of men to God, and nothing but love can find out the mysterious avenue which leads to the heart. We are always eloquent when we wish to save one whom we love; we are always listened to when we are loved. But when a hearer is not moved by love, instead of listening to the truth, he ransacks his mind for something wherewith to repel it; and in so doing human depravity is seldom at fault.

"If then you do not feel a fervent love and profound pity for humanity—if in beholding its miseries and errors you do not experience the throbbings, the holy thrillings of charity—be assured that the gift of christian eloquence has been denied you, you will not win souls, neither will you ever gain influence over them, and you will acquire that most excellent of earthly sovereignties—sovereignty over the heart."

It is refreshing, in these days when reasoning is rampant and the acridity of controversy is souring the hearts of so many preachers, and alienating the hearts of so many of their hearers, to hear this appeal for the Christly manner of preaching the gospel. And that the Abbe is right, no successor of the divine preacher of righteousness will for a moment doubt. Every man or woman who has had any experience in trying to "preach the gospel to every creature" is profoundly, immovably convinced that love is the secret of influence over the people. With it you can do anything with them. Controversy may entertain them, but it will also bewilder them; reasoning may affect them, but it will affect only their heads, which are carried about by every wind of doctrine. Only love can change the heart, and alter the life, and make the obdurate and heady impenitent a devout disciple of our Lord.

The author of this volume is quite right in declaring that, "to be able to reason is human, and one who is a man, and nothing more, may possess that ability as well as you, perhaps in a higher degree. But to love, to devote one's self, to sacrifice self, is something unearthly, divine, possessing a magic power. Self-devotion, moreover, is the only argument against which human malevolence can find no answer."

Here is no superficial or sentimental definition of the love that moves men and changes hearts. It is a most evangelic, apostolic, John-like, Christ-like, cross-like definition. Ho, every one that thirsteth for the true secret of success in the pulpit, come and drink deep at this superlatively christian virtue of love—self-devotion, self-sacrifice, self-renunciation, self-crucifixion. Here is Christ's method of winning us; here is our method of winning others.

"Saint Francois de Sales," we are told, "converted 70,000 Protestants by the sweetness of his charity, and not one by argument." Know, O Protestant preacher, that no Catholics can be converted by any other method. Arguments can be answered; there is no answer to a loving treatment. The most illiterate even have the stock answers to your arguments by heart, but the most alert polemic is silenced by a life of self-devotion. The life wins where the lips fail. The lips of the preacher may come far short of persuasion; but who can resist a persuasive life, a life constant in charity and immolated perpetually on the altar of love?" "An apostle is fervent charity personified." Augustine said: "Love first, and then you may do what you choose." Our author adds: "Love first, and then you may say what you please; for affectionate speech fortifies the mind, removes obstacles, disposes to self-sacrifice, makes the unwilling willing, and elevates the character as well as the mind."

This Christly, sacrificial love of the people will lead to an interest in them and their concerns, and the interest will deepen the love. Either is the cause and the effect of the other.

Here is an illustrative paragraph, which a Protestant preacher may make note of with profit: "A priest enters a workshop, say of gunsmiths. On perceiving the cassock those blackened figures immediately become blacker still. They purposely turn their backs, in order to give him no inducement to address them; and should he do so, the reply is generally a curt, 'Yes, sir,' uttered in as dry and morose a tone as possible. He walks through the establishment, and meets everywhere with a similar reception. Meanwhile, one of the workmen whispers something to the foreman, which the priest fancies may be a suggestion for his immediate expulsion; but he is speedily reassured. What passed is transmitted from one group to another, and suddenly the countenances and hearts of all undergo a change. Instead of turning their backs, the workmen now move sideways, as if to invite colloquy, as the visitor moves along, and before he utters a word they all stand ready, cap in hand, to welcome his address. The men become at once polite, amiable, charming, Frenchmen in the best meaning of the word. The whispered sentence was the sacramental saying of the poor: 'This priest is kind to the unfortunate; he loves the people; he is not a proud man.'"

This all-constraining love of the people will find, by instinct and experience, the proper ways and means of addressing them. This suggests "Tact and Kindliness," which is the admirable heading of one of our author's chapters. . . . For example, this method of address when a severe truth is to be urged: "You will permit me to declare the truth unto you, for you love the truth. The people have never been hostile to it. You yourselves would not be satisfied with half-truths; you desire something better. Therefore I deem it my duty to tell you the whole truth with the freedom of an apostle, but at the same time, with all christian charity." This is love-tact, or "tact and kindliness."

Tact never elaborates a heresy to an audience to whom its very name was before unknown; and never meets an objection by "circumlocution or hesitation," but "in language as prompt, striking, and decisive as that of the objection."

Tact and kindliness will make the sermon (1) popular; (2) plain; (3) short.

"Popular speech consists not so much in the expressions used as in the thoughts and sentiments conveyed thereby." "The people have a certain aggregate of ideas and thoughts, and their own way of apprehending and appreciating things. All this should be studied, for it constitutes the hold-fast of humanity."

Plain language wins the people. Ornamentation and erudition may make them come and stare for a time, but they weary of snobbery after awhile, and rush in crowds to hear the preacher who speaks to them in their own tongue and in their own modes of thought. "The pulpit resounds with such words as these: rationalism, philosophism, Protestantism, materialism, pantheism, socialism (and we will add, Catholicism,) and it will be lucky if all this does not get mixed up with fetishism, anthropomorphism, Vishnuism, Buddhism, Kantism, and Hegelism. No wonder a woman of fashion exclaimed, The Lord deliver us from these preachers of isms."

"Plain speech should be coupled with plain thought."

"Exhibit religion as good and lovely; then true, then divine, then as obligatory."

Good things well said are the fruit of tact and kindliness. The injunction, "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves," our author would prefer to see carried out according to the comment of St. Francois de Sales: "I would give a hundred serpents for one dove."

If we have tact and kindliness, we will be prudent and conciliatory toward the people; we will "make ourselves sisters of charity to the souls of men, conforming ourselves to the light, weak, vain, and fickle, to say nothing of the suspicious and malevolent with whom we have to deal." We will "never command or scold."

The preacher's aim should be to secure a hearing To attain that we must first excite interest. To excite an interest, tact and kindliness should be in constant requisition. These will justify the gratification of the audience by compliment and commendation, and the rousing of their flagging attention by a "lively speech or sally," which "may be made a useful medium for communicating some wholesome truths."

Our author makes a fine and forcible point of what he aptly calls, "The accent of conviction." This is essential to a preacher's success in addressing the people. This is the evidence of his loving them, and the truth he would have them love. It is the sacred fire, or what Mirabeau calls the divinity of eloquence. "If you do not possess the accent of conviction, the world will either suspect you of hypocrisy or brand you by admiring how well you ply the trade and how cleverly you play your game."

"Action" is next insisted upon by which is meant "not mere gesture; neither is it motion nor sound." "It is the manifestation of the thoughts and sentiments through the bodily organs. It is the soul which, unable to reveal itself, makes its material exterior the medium of communicating its conceptions of truth and love to the souls of others."

"The principle of action should be the heart. It may be in the voice, gesture, hand, in the demeanor generally or even in silence."

In order to be impressive it should be: first, true and natural; secondly, concentrated; thirdly, edifying. Shouting is not necessary to vocal nor motion to bodily action. "One may be eloquent without gesticulation, and the well educated attend less to sound than to articulation."

The distinguishing sign of intelligence is not vowel power (which we have in common with brutes,) but is consonant power.

"The vowel is the letter that kills; the consonant is the spirit which vivifies."

"The preacher should make his appearance with simplicity and modesty. He must not be engrossed with self—with his handkerchief, his surplice, or his hair."

"In the pulpit the man should disappear, and the apostle alone be seen."

"What we are most deficient in is articulation which isolates, engraves, and chisels a thought; which fills the ear with harmony and the soul with truth; which gives the orator an extraordinary power of animation, by bringing into play the whole nervous system. . . . It appears to be frequently imagined that it requires as much effort to discharge waves of air as to hurl a heavy club into space; but it is not so in the heart. What is needed is that the air should be compressed and triturated, and reduced into expressive and harmonious sounds. It is from misapprehension on this score that so many preachers fume, and tire themselves and others, and that some appear like men who disgorge words which they have swallowed by mistake. A little practice would prevent them from falling into these and similar aberrations."—The Pulpit.

EVER WITH YOU.

These are among the many words spoken by our dear Savior while with his disciples, and spoken after he had risen from the dead, while talking with his disciples, just before he ascended to his Father. They were not merely for the comfort and encouragement of those who followed him, but for all who should follow, or walk in his footsteps till he should return to earth, to receive his children to himself.

No matter what may be the circumstances or prospects of his followers in a worldly point of view, he is with them, making their hopes of future happiness good, even glorious. No matter how humble our situation in life, he will exalt us in due time. No matter how poor we may be in regard to worldly goods, he gives us riches beyond what this world can afford. No matter what position he may call us to fill in his great church, he does not leave us alone there.

It is by his presence and aid that his faithful ones go out into his great vineyard and labor. Look at the child of God when called to lie on a sick bed. Jesus is with him, to comfort even there; and will go with him even through the "valley and shadow of death."

It matters not what trials or afflictions we may be called to pass through, if we are his he is still with us. Nothing but a departure from him will drive him from us. He never leaves or forsakes us, but how often we leave him, and go contrary to his commands, thus going away from his protecting care.

A great many people think they can get along very well without Christ in this world; that it is useless to follow him; they had rather follow the inclinations of their own sinful hearts. But the time will come when they will see they have made a sad mistake, one that can never be rectified.

Everybody, no matter how rich or poor, needs friends; but there is no friend they need so much as the Savior, for he can be a friend when all else must fail. Seek this friend who will never leave or forsake. Cling to him. Hold on by faith. Trust in him. Follow him, and then when he comes he will receive you to himself, and you will reign with him forever.

May we be ready for his coming and kingdom, to enter in through the gates of the city, and dwell with him forever.

LIVING TO ONE'S SELF.—The cure of a little village near Bellinzona, to whom a traveler expressed wonder that the peasants allowed the Ticino to flood their fields, replied that they would not join to build an effectual embankment high up the valley, because everybody said "that would help his neighbors as much as himself." So every proprietor built a bit of low embankment about his own field; and the Ticino, as soon as it had a mind, swept away and swallowed all up together.

PHYSIOLOGICAL LETTERS ON SLEEP.—NO. 2.

In my last number I gave a definition of sleep, and stated that in it were included certain prime factors or elements. The first of these essential elements is periodicity. This statement is shown to be true by common experience. You feel the desire and the necessity for sleep as regularly as the night comes around.

2. Absence of volition. The will is that faculty which regulates the mental operations and determines human conduct. The will is the first faculty of the mind that goes to sleep. This statement will, I think, commend itself to the experience of my readers. Volition, too, is that faculty of the mind which continues asleep the longest; which remains dormant during all the sleeping stages. During the waking hours this faculty exercises a general supervision and control over all the other mental faculties—during sleep it lets go its hold, and hence thought and imagination run riot. You are conscious that in going to sleep the first step has been taken when the will has been compelled by fatigue to forsake the helm. You are conscious that you are a free agent only in your waking hours, and hence are not responsible for anything which you might do during sleep. Sleep is a beneficent monarch, who will allow only the innocent within the precincts of his court.

3. Sleep is a state in which there is complete torpor of the special senses. You cease to hold communination with the world around you by means of the eyes, the ears, and the other senses. The sight ceases to receive impressions first, the taste next, and then the smelling; hearing is next in order, and last of all sleeps the sense of touch. (a) How readily does a powerful impression made on any one of these senses, when dormant, awaken that sense, and through it awaken the other senses, and arouse the entire brain! There is a sudden flash of light before the eyes of the sleeping man; instantly he jumps from his bed—the whole brain is in action! How quickly you are aroused from your slumber at the sound of a pistol, or by the prick of a pin! The sleeping senses still act as sentinels. But if you try to arouse an apoplectic patient from his coma by shouting to him, or inflicting bodily harm, you fail. The one is natural sleep, the other is morbid insensibility.

4. Loss of consciousness is another essential element of sleep. You rest unconscious of what you are, where you are, or what is going on around you. Mental philosophers have disputed this; but what absurdities have they not perpetrated? Verily, a system of philosophy which asserts that the mind is always conscious and always active, must have some higher foundations on which to rest than common sense and experience. (b)

5. A fifth element of sleep is muscular rest. The voluntary muscles rest because the brain rests. Muscular repose is essential to normal sleep, though sleep is not, I believe, essential to muscular repose. Yet the muscular tissue is generally restored during sleep, nature having made the quantum of brain rest the measure of the muscular rest required. There are certain muscles that are not under the control of the brain, and these never sleep. Among these we may enumerate the heart and diaphragm.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

We believe that in a normal condition the only proper food for man is fruits, grains, and vegetables, simply cooked, and we are sure that these would perfectly satisfy the appetite and gratify the taste. But so morbid are our conditions, and so far are we removed from the normal standard, that this can only be the light toward which, at present, we are struggling. We have fed upon exciting, stimulating substances, which make the vital machinery run too fast. Yet, as the engine under high pressure of steam is in danger of being injured if too suddenly stopped, so our systems, if these stimulating articles be removed at once, suffer more or less, proportioned to the strength and degree of stimulant. As our mental and moral powers by wrong relations learn to recognize falsely, calling evil good, and good, evil, putting darkness for light, and light for darkness, so the vital instincts become perverted. They fail, at first, to recognize plain, nutritious food as the best. The stomach will even refuse to act upon it in digestion. It is like a stranger which the system has no acquaintance with, or a friend wearing a new suit of clothes, with his whole appearance, countenance, and manners, changed; at first he is not recognizable. Let him dress as formerly, and we greet him at once. Just so, if we prepare food as usual, the instincts will at once receive it. But should our friend make his changes gradually, we would not lose at any time our recognition of him. So our stomachs will continue to recognize and receive our food, if it be changed slowly. These changes are all-important to us, and with a little care they may be made in perfect safety, and without loss of vigor. At the same time we shall find ourselves becoming more useful and happy, as we continue to approach the normal standard.—Reformer.

KEROSENE AND ITS DANGERS.

It is very easy for nervous people to make themselves unnecessarily uncomfortable. There are so many possibilities of peril in this world that it is hardly worth while, however, to let anything but positive probabilities interfere with one's equanimity and appetite. But the naked truth is that the loss of life and property from kerosene accidents every week is fearful, and that nine-tenths of the oil burned in our homes is perilously unsafe. All oil will, at some temperature, give off a vapor that forms when mixed with air, an explosive compound when ignited. Kerosene that will not evaporate below a temperatnre of 110° Fahrenheit is safe. Most that is sold will form this vapor at a lower temperature, and such is ever unsafe. It is easy for those who have a thermometer to test their oil. Heat some water to 110° Place in it a cup warmed to the same temperature. Pour into the cup a little oil and apply a lighted match over it. If the vapor ignites take back the oil to the dealer, and prosecute him for the violation of the law that forbids the sale of illuminating oils that will evaporate below 110°. We don't suppose you will do this last, but you ought to. The law is hourly violated and lives imperiled because unprincipled or careless dealers can adulterate properly distilled oil with benzine or naptha, or sell half distilled oil, at a larger profit than good oil will give them: and this is the explanation of three-fourths of the accidents from lamp explosions. A lamp containing good oil may explode when upset, if some of the oil should run out, become ignited and suddenly heat the oil inside the lamp to a very high temperature. But this is only one of the possibilities before spoken of. Instead of constantly dreading it, give the same amount of thought to caution and care in the use of lamps and there will really be no danger.

Explosions from the volatile oil usually occur when the oil is low, and, most frequently, after a lamp has been standing unlighted and partly full of oil. The vapor has then had an opportunity to condense, the air has worked in and the train is all laid for an explosion when the lamp is lighted. A well filled lamp rarely explodes. So the carrying about of a lighted lamp that is nearly empty of oil but full of vapor provokes an explosion, by agitating the vapor and bringing it to the flame.

It remains to be said that the "patent non-explosive oils," so called, are not to be trusted, unless their ingredients are known. Because they have not exploded in experimental trials it is not wise to take the risks of their explosion when you are not experimenting. Good kerosene is good enough, a splendid light, very cheap, and very safe if decent care is taken with it.—Advance.

PEACE.

"Peace I leave you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." "I will come again and receive you unto myself."

Blessed words, how sweet and cheering
To each beloved disciple's heart,
When they had heard the mournful tidings,
He would soon from them depart.

These were the words, "My peace I give you,
Not such as the world doth give;
Be not troubled, although I leave you,
I will come and you receive."

All through the lapse of fleeting ages,
Ever since those words were spoken,
To every faithful child of heaven
Never was that promise broken.

Whate'er might be their lot or station,
In lowly cot or palace fair;
On Afric's sands or ocean islet,
This promised peace was with them there.

All through the bloody persecution,
At thought of which the heart grows faint,
Tortured by foes, by friends forsaken,
This peace had every faithful saint.

Now while through last day perils passing,
And crimes of darkness fast increase,
And siren voices, soft, alluring,
Whisper that pleasure bringeth perce;

The christian knows the source of pleasure,
Knoweth the fount of lasting peace,
And with his eye upon his treasure,
Presses where joys will never cease.

And often from heaven's pearly portals,
There comes to his enraptured soul
A foretaste of the peace immortal
He'll gain when reached the final goal.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.—No. 2.

1 PETER 1: 2-9:—"Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be made partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

IX. The Apostle here enumerates the graces that are to adorn the christian's life; and his language applies to those who are in the church of God. In the tenth and eleventh verses, he addresses the people of God as follows: "If ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be administered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Now, if one must be in the church in order to have the christian graces, and if one must have these graces in order to obtain an entrance into the kingdom, it certainly follows that the church is not the kingdom.

X. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and God's holy prophets of old, have long since been gathered to their fathers. They are not now living in the church. They sleep in the silent dust, awaiting the resurrection of the just, to be gathered home.

Luke 3: 28;—"There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." If Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets are not now in the church, and they are to be in the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

XI. In Matt. 25: 31-34, our Savior teaches that the saints will receive the kingdom at the judgment. Mark the language. When the Son of man comes in his glory, with his holy angels, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. All nations are to be gathered before him; and he is to separate them as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats, placing the good upon his right hand, and the bad upon his left. "THEN shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

If the saints are in the kingdom now, the judgment is in the past. But the judgment is yet future; and, hence, the kingdom is future also, while the saints are in the church now. Therefore, the church in not the kingdom.

XII. That the church had an organized existence in the days of the apostles, no one who believes the Bible can for a moment doubt. In Acts 2: 47, we read that "the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." We can not add to a thing unless the thing itself exists. But here we are informed that the Lord did add to the church; hence the church existed in the days of the apostles.

Paul represents the kingdom as coming when Christ comes to judge the living and the dead. "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the Word."—2 Tim. 4: 1.

If, therefore, the church existed in the days of the apostles, and the kingdom is to come when Christ comes to judge the quick and the dead, the church is not the kingdom.

XIII. The kingdom of God can never be divided. It is to stand for ever. It shall never be destroyed. Hence division can not exist; for "a house divided against itself can not stand."

But the church has been divided. Look at the different "isms" of the day, and you have ample proof of this. To-day different factions bite and devour each other. Each tries to put the other down. Yet each of these churches claims to be the kingdom of God. How, in view of these facts, and in view of the Savior's declaration, "If a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom can not stand" (Mark 3: 24), can the professed church claim to be the kingdom of God?

If, therefore, the kingdom of God can not be divided,—and it never can be, for it shall never be destroyed (Dan. 2: 44),—and the church has been divided, the church is not the kingdom.

XIV. "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5. This language refers to the resurrection. Our Lord declares that "that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." John 3: 6. Paul says, "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body"; and he also says, "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."—1 Cor. 15: 44.

When the sleeping saints are raised from the dead, and the righteous living are changed, they will have their spiritual bodies, which will be like Christ's glorious body. Phil. 3: 21; 1 John 3: 2. After rising from the dead, Jesus came and went, when he chose, unperceived, like the wind. See Luke 24: 31; and John 20. The saints will be able to do the same; for "the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit" able to come and go, unperceived, like the wind.

From the foregoing, it will be easily seen that the birth of the Spirit in John 3: 5 refers to the resurrection. "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."

It is proper here to remark that the Greek word eiserkomai, here translated "enter," according to Greenfield, sometimes signifies "to take possession of"; and that this is the probable meaning of the word here; for when the saints are born of the Spirit, they will enter into the kingdom, and take possession of it; for "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High."—Dan. 7: 27. In the twenty-second verse, we have this language: "The Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom."

If, as has been shown, the saints are in the church now, and one must be born of the Spirit in order to enter or take possession of the kingdom, the church is not the kingdom.

XV. In Matt. 16: 19, we have the following words of our Lord to Peter: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Keys are to open and close doors. The word, however, is here used figuratively. Peter receives authority to bind and to loose; and it may be said that he opened the door of the kingdom by making known the terms of admission. And what are they?

To the believing penitent Peter says, "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2: 38, 39. To the saint he says, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity..... Wherefore, the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be administered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."—2 Pet. 1: 5-11.

If the keys of the kingdom were given to Peter, and he teaches that the believing penitent is to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and that he is then to add to his faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity (and certainly he gets into the church before he does all this), in order to enter into the kingdom, then the church is not the kingdom.

Having shown that the church is not the kingdom, I now propose to examine a few passages which our opponents claim to teach that the church is the kingdom.

Col. 1: 13;—Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." As it stands in our version, this passage seems to teach that the saints are now in the kingdom; but a correct translation shows that it is in harmony with the position I have advanced.

The Greek word methisteemi, here rendered "translated," signifies "to move from one place to another, remove, transfer; to cause to pass from one mode of thinking to another, cause to change sides."—Greenfield. In the Emphatic Diaglott New Testament it is rendered thus:—"Who delivered us from the dominion of darkness, and changed us for the kingdom of the Son of his love." This translation removes all difficulty. Upon this, as upon other subjects, the Bible is not yea and nay, but yea and amen.

Heb. 2: 28, is quoted to prove that the church is the kingdom. Let us examine it in connection with the context. We commence at the 25th verse: "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven; whose voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things that can not be shaken may remain. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which can not be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear."

In analyzing this passage, the following points appear:

1. God's voice once shook the earth.

2. God has promised to shake once more not the earth only, but also heaven.

3. The declaration, "Yet once more," signifies the removal of the things shaken, that the things unshaken may remain.

4. When this shaking and removal take place, the saints are to receive a kingdom which can not be moved.

Instead of proving that the church is the kingdom, this passage shows conclusively, when examined in connection with the context, that the saints are to receive the kingdom in the future, when God shakes heaven and earth.

It now remains for us to examine Rev. 1: 9, which reads as follows: "I, John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ."

There is a figure of speech, called "synecdoche," by which a part of a thing is put for the whole, or the whole for a part; as, "This roof shall be my protection." Here roof, a part of the house, is used to represent the whole house. In this example, we have a good illustration of the figure.

An organized kingdom can not exist without its elements; for each element is a part of the kingdom itself. The church is an element, a part—the kings and priests—of the kingdom of God. John was in the church—one of the elements—and in this sense alone was he in the kingdom. If we try to prove that the church is the organized kingdom of God by this passage, we make it contradict other portions of the Bible; but when we apply the figure of synecdoche, all is plain.

Wakefield translates Rev. 1: 9 thus: "I, John, your brother, and sharer with you in enduring the affliction of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, was in the island called Patmos, on account of the word of God, and the testimony of Jesus Christ."

THE INVIGORATION OF SCRIPTURE.

The Scriptures teach us to exercise love and benevolence; to have sympathy and compassion; relieving the miseries of others, and thus giving essential happiness to ourselves, causing us to rejoice with those who do rejoice, and weep with those who weep. But however essential these divine graces may be, how few among the many do we see who exercise them. As a general thing, the greater part of mankind care but little about what a wise Providence has provided for their best good for their present and future happiness.

What a solemn hour is the one in which we are living. It seems like the beginning of the days that the prophet John spoke of in Rev. 16: 12-14;—"And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs, come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." Now let us look at the words of Paul in 2nd Thess. 2: 7-10, and see if they do not compare with the proceedings of the present day: "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth, will let until he be taken out of the way; and then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders; and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved."

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, at this trying and critical hour, I feel to exhort you to look well to yourselves, and see that you are not drawn off from the truth of the inspired revelation of Christ, by the delusion of Satan and his coadjutors, as it is carried on at the present day. The adversary of our souls has spread his net both far and wide upon the earth, in order to ensnare the followers of Christ. This has been his satanic aim ever since the gospel of Christ was first preached. And, as he knows his time is short, he is at this day seemingly putting forth a double energy to destroy the saints. "Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his"; therefore "let every one that nameth the name of Christ, depart from iniquity." 2 Tim. 2: 19.

Dear reader, will you again take notice of the words of Paul, delivered to Timothy: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good; traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts; ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth."—2 Tim. 1-7. I tell you, my friends, beware of such, lest they should lead you from the teachings of Christ. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," but the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Dear reader, thus far have I spoken of the merits of Christ and his gospel, and what is to take place in the latter days. I believe according to prophecy and the signs of the times, those days spoken of by the prophets have already come. Let us look which way we may, we see but few engaged in promoting the gospel of Christ; but we see many infidels, who are trying to overthrow it. I say unto you again, beware of them, for they are "blind leaders of the blind," and their presumption leadeth down to the gates of hell.

THE UNPROFITABLE SERVANT.

In a napkin smooth and white,
Hidden from all mortal sight,
My one talent lies to-night.

Mine to hoard, or mine to use,
Mine to keep, or mine to lose;
May I not do what I choose?

Ah! the gift was only lent,
With the Giver's known intent,
That it should be wisely spent.

And I know he will demand
Every farthing at my hand,
When I in his presence stand.

What will be my grief and shame,
When I hear my humble name,
And cannot repay his claim!

One poor talent—nothing more!
All the years that have gone o'er,
Have not added to the store.

Some will double what they hold,
Others add to it ten-fold,
And pay back the shining gold.

Would that I had toiled like them!
All my sloth I now condemn;
Guilty fears my soul o'erwhelm.

Lord, O teach me what to do!
Make me faithful, make me true,
And the sacred trust renew.

Help me, ere too late it be,
Something yet to do for thee,
Thou who hast done all for me.

OUR TIMES.

Joel 3: 9;—"Prepare war, wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near." "The harvest is ripe; .... wickedness is great." "The day of the Lord is near." "And upon the earth distress of nations." "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." 2 Tim. 3: 1, 4, 5;—"In the last days perilous times shall come.... Lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; ... having a form of godliness. "Iniquity shall abound."—Christ in Matt. 24: 12. It would be very difficult to find in the history of the past any approach to the fulfillment of the above prophecies, as is being fulfilled to the very letter at the present time, all authorities being witnesses, as the following items will show, without the possibility of a disproof. Herald Supplement of Feb. 15th, Paris correspondent, says:—

"The Government law gives the Government [of France] power to keep in arms 400,000 regulars, 800,000 guards, as reserves (besides the militia), being an army of 1,300,000 men... Marshal Neil [Minister of War] has promised that by the first of April, 1868, all the troops shall be armed with the [dreadful and terrible] chassepot rifles, with about one hundred millions of cartridges, which will place the French army in a state of preparation as it has never before seen..... No one has ever yet undertaken to fathom the secrets of his [Napoleon's] meditations, and it is on this account that in all his undertakings, Mexico left out of the question, his plans well matured, his aims have rarely failed to accomplish his ends." Speaking of the people of France he says: "Were the angel Gabriel himself to descend from heaven and be seated on the throne of the Tuilleries, Paris would consider its special duty to be to oppose whatever form of government he might wish to establish.... When such elements are considered, one may well admire the power and genius that is able, single-handed, to cope and govern it as he [Napoleon] has done during the last nineteen years."

Herald (Boston), Feb. 21st, has the following amusements: "Warren Street Chapel Festival. Dancing nine and a half to one, and two and a half to five and a half. Fancy dances from eleven to four o'clock." The following notice is in the Portland Press of Feb. 12th:—"New Jerusalem church on Feb. 17th will present the beautiful pantomime of Red Riding Hood. Scene 7th. Wolf enters cottage, and personates Granny, new costumes, and scenes," etc.

It seems a little strange for professing christians to get up such scenes and pleasures to benefit the church. There is generally death in the pot when they resort to such measures. It once, by Herod's orders, caused the death or beheading of John the Baptist, and if indulged in will kill every vital principle of christianity.

The New York Herald says: "The year of our Lord, 1868, has been ushered in quite gloriously, defalcatorily speaking; for the public have been already treated with the details of seven first-class robberies, besides defalcations in three banks, and another defaulter has just gone with from one to three hundred thousand dollars belonging to the firm.

At a recent meeting of the Medical Association, Dr. Oaks stated that, "according to the best estimate he could make, there were four hundred murders produced by abortion in the county of Androscoggin [Maine] annually." What must the aggregate of Maine be, if one county has four hundred murders?

The Boston Herald of Feb. 12th may well call it "an appalling statement." The New 1868, in an article headed, "Recent Physical York Tribune of Feb. 19th, in a long editorial, —"The Conspiracy against Marriage," says: "The illegitimate births outnumber the legitimate; the figures are too terrible to put down.... The present age ought to excel past ages in virtue; if it does not, its immorality is of deeper dye."

A proviso has just been introduced in the marriage laws of Califoinia, permitting all parties living together as man and wife to get married without the necessity of procuring a license. Thousands in that State are now cohabiting as man and wife, who are not legally married.

The above shows public morals to be in a very lax state, and by the dailies I find that the immoral state of military academies is being introduced in Congress. Yet in the face of all this, some tell us that the conversion of the world is the next event to come, the Scriptures to the contrary notwithstanding. The Press of Feb. 27th, in an editorial,—"Historical Times,"—says: "Every morning the world wakes up, questioning whether something startling may not have taken place during the night, and prepared to hear almost anything." Says Harper's Mag. for February, Commotions": "For three or four months past there have been signs of violent physical agitations, both of a geological and meteorological character...... Tornadoes at home and earthquakes in the great Gulf, early storms and horrible railroad accidents, ushered in the holidays this season." On "Distress," etc., says the Union Advocate of Feb. 26th: "The beginning is seen, but the end, which must inevitably be terrible, is not far off." The Cincinnati Gazette on the state of things says: "The state of things is appalling. Distress, want and misery are stalking abroad. What it will come to in the dead of winter, God only knows. Every kind of business is prostrated."

The New Orleans correspondent of Boston Journal concludes his views as follows:—"These are sad times, and the only consolation we can have is that they cannot be any worse." Says the Advocate, "This is a sorrowful picture, and which we may suppose is in no wise exaggerated.... We are apparently on the eve of a revolution, that may prove more bloody than the late civil war."

Thus the distress of nations, and "the combat thickens." Say the papers on the present situation of things in the world, "What the end may be, God only knows." One thing is certain, he who doeth the will of God, who is girded with the whole armor of the gospel, will abide and stand in that day when the jewels of God are made up. May we live worthily, waiting for the Lord from heaven, to change our mortal bodies to immortality, ever being with the Lord.

JOHN TAYLOR.

New Sharon, Me.

MINISTERIAL DIGNITY.

The connection of the above terms is evidently quite significant; and if appropriateness in application is desirable, that point is surely gained in its present association.

The term minister, is derived or borrowed from the Latin ministro—properly a chief servant; one who serves at the altar. Mr. Webster says, "One who performs sacerdotal duties; the pastor of a church, duly authorized or licensed to preach the gospel, and administer the sacraments."

Christ himself was termed a minister of the sanctuary. As it is with the sacred or ecclesiastical minister we now have to do, to that office your attention is more especially called.

As in civil affairs, he is one under authority. Bearing the important messages of salvation, he is engaged in the most sublime work in which mortal man was ever employed; and occupies the most elevated, honorable and holy position ever possessed by man. The great apostle of the Gentiles entertained such noble conceptions of the ministers that he terms them "ambassadors for Christ." If such is the exalted position of the minister of the gospel, certainly there can be nothing wrong if we claim that he ought to carry with him, everywhere, his authority, his humility, his dignity, and his devotion.

But to maintain this properly, there are several considerations to take into the account. A minister's moral conceptions ought to be finely cultivated. He must realize the fact, that dignity is true honor. That it is "A high sense of propriety, truth and justice;" with an abhorrence of mean and sinful actions, or of low, lustful habits. In his position or calling, there is no time for trifling; no time for jesting or foolish talking; no time for idleness; and no time for the filthy, low, debasing, and God-dishonoring practice of chewing and smoking tobacco! The little book says, "never be triflingly employed." Trifling begets actions that have neither seriousness, weight, wisdom, nor dignity. Well may one remark, most seriously,

"With such poor trifles playing,
Moments make the year, and trifles life."

It is also written of Grotius, that he remarked while dying, "I have lost a life in busy trifling." What an admonition to men of God and ministers of the gospel! Then comes the thundering injunction of the Bible, "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise—redeeming the time, because the days are evil."

The second term in our text is dignity. That, too, is borrowed from the Latin, dignitas—morally meaning, dignity of mind, dignity of character, dignity of deportment, and dignity of sentiment. They are all based upon moral rectitude, and are designed to exhibit the minister's moral rectitude.

The truly dignified minister not only avoids all trifling, but he equally detests idleness. He realizes the fact, that idleness is the parent of many vices.

It is easy to discover the effects that must follow a course of idleness. It is a want of dignity in the beginning, in the middle, and at the end. It is low, lower, and lowest. There are other baneful effects following in this train: not only the lowering of ministerial dignity, but the injury entailed upon others. The idle, undignified minister, is embarassed in various ways. He never has his lesson. He is illy prepared for any emergency. He is often too late at his appointment. He never has time for class-meeting. He has no time for pastoral visiting. He never visits, comforts, counsels, nor encourages the sick. It is the source of much neglect. His example is a bad one. He carries a miserable influence. He does great injury to the young convert. He renders himself despicable in the community. And Solomon says, "An idle soul shall suffer hunger." Such ministers never rise to any eminence. They are great complainers: wondering that they are not more fully and properly appreciated.

The dreadful influences of idleness might be traced much farther, and their undignified effects exhibited seemingly more fully. But enough.

That the contrast may appear more striking, let us look at the men, or a few of them, who have exhibited their dignity, filled their ministerial office with reverence, and exerted a world-wide influence for greatness and goodness.

Look at Luther, defying the thunders of the Vatican, and all the powers of the Pope; by patient continuance in well-doing, he stands, at this distant day, as one of the first stars in moral magnitude and sublime grandeur. His name is a familiar, household word.

Who does not almost envy the immense attainments, the personal acquirements, the real honor, the noble bearing, and the moral dignity, of the great and good Dr. Clarke! He commenced as a peasant in poverty—an Irish boy in rags, whose food was potatoes; but by industry, perseverance, and a fixed determination, he became connected with the crown, and he filled one of the highest seats in the literary and religious world. He honored his country, his calling, and his religion; and, at every point, he maintained his ministerial dignity. To the latest period of time his works will follow him, for great good.

The inimitable Wesley, is an example worthy of reference. Mr. McOliver, in referring to him, said, "When I think of the hundred volumes he has written; of his traveling five thousand miles annually; that he delivers thousands of discourses yearly; the thousand sick beds he visits; the two thousand letters he answers: in short, when I see him, as I have ever seen him since I knew him, how lavish he is of his strength, time, money and influence, for the relief of the poor, the support of the weak, the prosperity of the church, the conversion of the world, and the glory of God—I am ashamed of myself and all about me."

And the great apostle of the Gentiles gives us some of his experience in truly maintaining his ministerial dignity. He says, "I abuse not my power in the gospel.... Though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more." And again adds, "We are laborers together with God." Yea, more, he says, "We are ambassadors for Christ,"—Honor—Dignity—Glory.

The preceding limited list of dignified and moral worthies, is sufficient for present purposes.

It is plainly seen by all, that moral worth, correct principles, and persevering efforts, are necessary qualities, for the humble minister to maintain properly and fully his ministerial dignity.

God has very wisely connected labor and piety, wisdom and greatness, humility and honor, honesty and goodness, and dignity and devotion, together. And the person wishing to bear, share, and wear them all, will be compelled to put forth much effort; carry in his bosom an honest heart; seek much of the grace of God, and rid himself of every sin—even that which is as near as the right hand, or dear as the right eye. Do we, as ministers, realize the moral obligation of our office—its responsibilities, its duties, and its dignity? If we do, we realize the fact, as remarked by Massinger—

"True dignity is never gained by place,
And never lost, when honors are withdrawn."

—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

"ABOVE ALL THINGS PUT ON CHARITY."

If we are members of Christ's body, partaking of his Spirit, shall we not exhibit the fruits of that spirit, which are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, etc., so if a brother or sister be overtaken in a fault, we should restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering ourselves, lest we also be tempted, not having desire for vain glory, envying or provoking one another to anger; but rather to love and good works. The command is, "if ye have aught against your brother, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; and if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother; but if he will not hear thee, take with thee one or two more.... And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church." Paul says, "If any have caused grief, sufficient is this censure which was inflicted of many; so that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him and comfort him, lest perhaps such an one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow." "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves."

You that publish a brother's faults abroad, or seek to find accusations against him, is this having your conversation in heaven? When such an one meets with you in prayer or conference meeting, and you assume the character of the Pharisee in the temple, accusing, judging, and even threatening him, are we not led to inquire where is your charity, long-suffering, meekness, or brotherly love? When an offending member has confessed his fault, and sought the forgiveness of God and man, you that hold it up as an account still against him, have you forgiven as you hope to be forgiven? "If ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." "Be not deceived. God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall ye also reap."

I am convinced that one great reason why many of our churches at the present day are not in a more prosperous and healthy condition is, a lack of obedience to the commands of our great Teacher, whose wisdom cannot err, who exhorts us to charity and oneness as members of the same body. O that we may all seek diligently that wisdom that cometh from above, having the spirit of our blessed Savior, wherewith we may be able to walk worthy of the vocation whereunto we are called, taking heed lest we become a stumbling block to any, or dishonor to our Master's cause. In view of the shortness of time and the recompense of reward, let us be true to God, our fellow creatures, and ourselves.

For the World's Crisis.

SATAN CREPT IN, CREEPING IN.

Could Satan have crept in had they done their duty, kept up the fire of God's truth, gone on and on, rising higher and higher, shining brighter and brighter? Never. Never would sectarianism have crept in as it has, sect on sect, creed on creed, saying, "I am of Paul, I of Apollos, I of Cephas. It would have been Christ first, middle, last, always; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is in all, through all, above all, had they kept on the gospel armor, burnished brightly, fought the good fight, kept the faith, stormed the fort of Satan. Never would masonry, odd fellowship, and other secret abominations, have crept in as they have, shaking the foundations of gospel purity and salvation, marring the peace and welfare of Jerusalem, had they been true to their covenant vows, and kept the gospel fire burning. Never would these serpents of serpents, sugar-coated poisons in literature, have crept in as they have, biting like a serpent, stinging like an adder, poisoning the whole community, eating out the life of all that is pure, lovely, and of good report, had the teachers and ministers been wide awake, on the alert, the watch-tower, cried aloud, spared not, searched out these Achans in the camp, and burned them with fire.

It is while men sleep the enemy sows his tares. "How long will ye sleep, O sluggard?" Awake! awake! ye sleepers. "Can a man take fire in his bosom and his clothes not be burned?"

"Stand firm. Oh, 'tis a high command,
From which no christian man should turn;
If Satan presses hand to hand,
A holy fire within should burn.
'T will shield the champions of the Lord,
Contending for his purest word."

Again. Never would they have lost the holy fire pentecostal as they have, which once burned brightly, had they not yielded to the tempter, bowed to the popular voice, false conservatism, the doctrine of expediency and compromise. "Gone down into Egypt for help."

Money? O yes, money enough; no lack for means to build a popular institution, college, or theological seminary. The gold and the silver flow in by thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands. Follow the wake, lower the gospel standard, confer with flesh and blood, money enough to build and endow. But is not this gold and silver a curse instead of a blessing? Is it not already cankered? and the rust of them witnessing against you—eating your flesh as it were fire! Our churches, institutions of learning and piety, need not fear a more terrible curse than a sickly charity, a false expediency. Its tendency is to lower the value of fixed and definite doctrines, and thus to cast down the hedges of the Lord's vineyard, and give up her vines to the wild boar of the wood. Let this plague run through the camp, and our tents will soon be desolate; no destroyer can be more mighty; the darkest form of infidelity would not be half so deadly.

O friends, where are you? where the fine gold, the blessedness of which ye spake? "O foolish ... who hath bewitched you that ye should not obey the truth?" "Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh? Have ye suffered so many things in vain? if it be yet in vain." We stand in doubt of you, weep over your fall; our heart is sad. When you were little in your own sight, despised, persecuted, looked upon as "the offscouring of all things"; when sitting at the feet of Jesus, learning new lessons of meekness, humility and love, self-denial and cross bearings—what now? Glory? Yes, glory on glory, salvation on salvation! The very atmosphere for miles around you was impregnated with heaven. Salvation streamed. "Holiness to the Lord" was written on your foreheads, walls, door posts, and gates. But where now? O where? "O that you had hearkened to the Lord, and continued to walk in his ways." See Ps. 81: 8-16.

Popularity has killed you. Prosperity has killed you. You have revivals, multiply converts, but what are these? shining lights? To what are they converted? to Jesus Christ? Are these converts living, burning, blazing firebrands of holiness on the mountain top of full salvation? True Bible reformers? Who sees it, believes it, feels it? As the fountain, so the streams.—D. F. NEWTON, Author of "The Sword that Cuts," etc.

Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and asked you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by welve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion. *

TREMONT CAMPMEETING.

Tickets for this meeting, good July 25th to August 4th inclusive, may be obtained of GEO. T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover Street. Fare to go and return, $1.90. Cars leave the Old Colony Depot 7.50 A. M. and 4 P. M. *

MONTREAL.

We arrived in Montreal Wednesday evening, July 8th, and found a good home at Bro. Jones, 132 St. George street. On our way from Detroit to M., we passed through a fine farming district on the banks of the St. Lawrence. It is a good wheat country, and the grass looks well. As we approached Montreal, we found the land drying up for want of rain, and the grass dying in the pastures. In Michigan, the wheat was looking very finely, and about ripe enough for harvesting. We were delighted with the appearance of that state, and think those who live there must feel very contented, so far as the things of this world are concerned.

Our meeting in Montreal was a very pleasant one. We found the church there in a good condition, and pressing for the prize at the end of the christian race. The enemy has tried his best to destroy that church, but it is gaining strength in the Lord, and becoming better acquainted with Satan's devices, and the Lord's power to deliver from temptation. The Brn. and Srs. now see that their trials were really for their good, and served to bring them nearer to the Lord. By these they learned their own weakness, and the importance of leaning wholly upon the arm of Jesus for support. They have had but very little preaching for some months, but they have kept up their meetings. Our brethren in the States do not know what a heavy pressure is brought to bear upon the churches in Montreal and Quebec. It comes from the combined influence of the popular churches, which control political and financial matters as well as ecclesiastical. One need not go to Rome to learn the power of the church. A large proportion of the property is in the hands of the Catholic and Episcopal churches. They look with contempt upon whatever does not come through their channel. They are very bitter against us, and do all they can to stir up prejudice, and keep people from our meetings; but we learn that many in Montreal, also Quebec, who are yet members of other churches, are now satisfied the doctrine we have preached to them is the truth. We hope they may yet get courage to come out and confess it to the world, that the Lord may be glorified in them, and others be led to see the light, rejoice in it, and make due preparation to meet the Lord at his coming. Some members of other churches took a part with us and expressed much delight in the spirit of the meeting. They felt quite at home.

At its close, two young men came to us, and expressed a wish to talk with us on the subject of religion. They said they had been skeptical, but the spirit they had seen manifested in the meeting, and the talk they had heard, had deeply affected them, and they were anxious to hear and know more about these things. The spirit they had seen exhibited by many ministers and others professing religion, had led them to think that the whole thing was but a system of priestcraft; but what they had seen and heard that evening had changed their feelings. They walked with us some distance to Bro. Jones, and we there had a long talk about the plan of salvation. They manifested great interest, and said they were going home to search the Scriptures. We trust they will become the humble followers of Christ, and be saved in his kingdom.

Thursday afternoon, we attended the funeral of Sr. Price, who fell peacefully in the Lord, and is now sleeping in the beautiful Mt. Royal Cemetery, which very much resembles that of Mt. Auburn near Boston. What a shout there will be when the saints sing, "O grave where is thy victory?" Let the time speedily come.

QUEBEC.

Friday evening, July 10th, at 7 o'clock, we left Montreal for Quebec, and took passage down the St. Lawrence river, on board the large and beautiful steamer Quebec, the best boat on the river. The St. Lawrence is a noble river, and has some very pleasant scenery on its banks. We arrived at the walled city of Quebec about 6 o'clock in the morning, and received a hearty greeting from Bro. and Sr. Lawson, Bro. and Sr. Simpson, and others, who had come down to the wharf. We were soon at Bro. Lawson's pleasant home, where the saints always find a welcome. We were rejoiced to see Bro. and Sr. Simpson, whose labors have been much blest in Canada. He feeds the churches with good wholesome food, that gives them strength in the Lord. He was detained one day in Quebec to attend the funeral of Sr. Lee, who was buried the day before we arrived. Bro. and Sr. Simpson left for Montreal Saturday evening, on the steamer Quebec. We congratulate the church in M. that they are to become acquainted with them. We found they were very much pleased with their Canada visit. The church in Quebec has been very much comforted and strengthened by their sound instruction, especially in the prophetic Scriptures, which go to show that our Savior is soon coming. We found the church in a healthy condition; rooted and grounded in the truth. But very few churches can be found, in which so large a proportion are so well qualified to give a reason of their hope, as in the one in Quebec. They have no preacher; but there are some four of the brethren who take turns in occupying the desk, and who do it to the edification of those who attend. It is a living, growing church. The opposition which that church has to endure surpasses any with which we are acquainted. There are quite a large number in the city who are satisfied that we have the truth, but they have not yet had courage to come out and identify themselves with those who have given up all for Jesus and his word. They know what reproach they must bear from their former friends if they do, and they shrink back from the cross. Our enemies seem to think that no titles are too bad for us, and no reproach too heavy for those to bear who believe and advocate what we preach. Thank the Lord, there are some in Quebec who glory in the cross of Christ, and are willing to be reproached for his sake. We trust the number will yet be increased.

Sabbath morning, July 12th, we repaired to the St. Charles river for baptism, and enjoyed a precious season. By the kindness of Mr. King, who has a beautiful situation on the banks of the river, well removed from the public road, we were allowed to occupy his house and grounds for our accommodation. We felt that we were enjoying an exalted privilege, as we stood upon the banks of the river with our dear brethren and sisters, who had assembled for baptism, and to show their faith in the burial and resurrection of Christ. We realized the approval of our Lord as we went down into the water and came up again rejoicing. Nine were buried, and others are expected to improve the next opportunity. We have rarely enjoyed such a pleasant baptism. Every thing seemed to conspire to make it delightful. We returned filled with peace and joy in the Lord, "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ."

Our meetings were seasons of refreshing. It was grievous to part so soon from our dear friends in Quebec; but we never parted with a stronger assurance that we shall soon meet again in the everlasting kingdom.

ROADSIDE NOTES.

After closing our pleasant visit at Quebec, July 13th, we departed for Danville. It was said to be the warmest day they had ever experienced. For sometime it has been quite warm, the mercury frequently reaching from eighty-six to ninety-four degrees in the shade, but on the 13th instant it was one hundred and four degrees in the shade, and one hundred and thirty in the sun, at Danville. Several were sun-struck, and some of them died. The heat was terrible for laborers in the field. The land is dry, and a large amount of it has been burnt over on the line of the R. R. As we came along, we passed some raging fires. Unless they have rain soon, the farmers in the Province of Quebec will be in a sorrowful condition.

When we arrived at Danville, as usual, we found Bro. Porter waiting at the depot to give us a hearty welcome. His is one of our best homes in our pilgrim travels. While there, we enjoyed a most delightful visit with Dr. Hurd, and Dea. Goodhue, editors of the Danville Union, and followers of Jesus. They are men who love to associate with all christians. We had an excellent meeting at D. We found the church in a shining condition, waiting for the Son of man from heaven. Bro. Simpson's late labors produced happy results. We learned there were some who were waiting an opportunity for baptism.

After a most delightful visit at Bro. Porter's, and a season of prayer, we departed about midnight to take the cars again en route for Richmond, Island Pond, Portland and Boston. We arrived at Island Pond about 6 A. M., and left about 6.30, passing through a very wild and romantic section of the country among the Green Mountains, and on the banks of the Connecticut river. In all our travels, we have never seen scenery that equals that between Island Pond and Bryant's Pond. In the neighborhood of the noted Mt. Washington, which receives a great many visitors in the summer season, is a series of mountains, of very interesting appearance. Some are like immense sugar loaves, towering above their neighbors, like steeples; others of huge dimensions are surrounded by a family of mountain children, apparently climbing up their sides, and seeking protection; then Mt. Washington rising up as a watch-tower overlooking all, with its cloud-capped summit, affording a view rarely seen upon the earth. To add to the beauty of the scenery, the valleys are refreshed by winding rivers and pretty ponds, while babbling brooks come bounding down the hill sides to seek a resting spot with their friends on the plain below.

With much gratitude to our heavenly Father for his protecting care during the thousand of miles we have traveled, we reached home Tuesday evening, and all found well as usual. Praise the Lord.

DISCUSSION AT NEW RUTLAND.

On our arrival home, we found that our report of the Rutland discussion had not been received. We gave the letter containing it to a gentleman at the Detroit junction, who said he would put it into the mail; but it has not arrived. We now write it again.

We left Dunleith, Ill., at 5½ A. M., June 30th. and arrived at New Rutland, Ill., about 3 P. M., distance one hundred and seventy-eight miles. We received a hearty welcome from Bro. Frank Burr, Bro. Wm. McCulloch, and others who love the Lord. New Rutland is a part of the Grand Prairie, which is about one hundred miles long and eighty wide. It is said to be the largest in the world. It is almost as level as the ocean. This town was located by gentlemen from Rutland, Vt., and was named New Rutland. The soil is some three or four feet deep, and remarkably rich. In New England we should be glad to use it for manure. When that vast prairie was discovered it was covered with tall prairie grass, without a single tree for a shade. It remains still unfenced, excepting here and there a door-yard, or a pen for a cow. A large number of the cattle are kept in herds, with some one to watch them, while others are tied to stakes with long ropes. To supply the lack of wood, coal has been found in different places on the Vermillion and Illinois rivers, and other localities. They are now sinking a shaft for coal at New Rutland. It is sixteen feet long seven feet wide, and when we were there, they had got down two hundred and thirty-five feet, and expected to go about forty feet more before reaching the coal bed. We had the strange pleasure of being let down in a tub to the bottom of the shaft, where we found several men at work, who, in connection with the locality, gave us a lively idea of the fabled infernal regions, where it was said Jubiter forged thunder-bolts. The men were blasting through solid slate-stone rock. They had lamps stuck in their caps to light their way in that dark and gloomy region. These gave them a more hideous appearance. Water was trickling down the rocks, forming quite a pool at the bottom. This water was being continually drawn up with the other matter, by means of a steam engine, kept running day and night, excepting Sundays. Should they succeed in finding coal, it will add much value to the town. When they got down one hundred and forty-seven feet, they found the limb of a tree in a good state of preservation. Other things showed that the earth and soil above had been deposited at the time of the flood. It is thought there is not another place in the world where a farmer can accomplish so much with a given amount of labor as on this Grand Prairie. We were informed that one man has seven thousand acres of corn this year. In his entire farm were thirty thousand acres. They do not use the hoe in cultivating their corn. Their work is all done by horse power. The driver mounts his seat on the various machines and rides about the fields when planting, sowing, hoeing, mowing or reaping, and takes care of fifteen acres as easily as he could one with his own hands. It is a pleasure to see farmers do their work on those prairie fields. Their land is remarkable for standing dry weather. If they have a plenty of rain in the latter part of May, or the first of June, they fear nothing from drought till after harvest. Their prospects are bright for good crops this year. We saw herds-grass heads nearly ten inches long. It seems as though vegetation took pleasure in growing on those rich prairie lands.

Our discussion there was with Mr. Theo dore Brooks, a noted debater, of the Campbellite denomination. He formerly lived in Danbury, Ct. Our discussion began Tuesday evening, June 30th, and closed the following Friday evening. We had two sessions a day, Wednesday and Thursday, and three on Friday. The very best of order and attention were observed by the audience. We were delighted with the good behavior of the people. They are intelligent, and well stored with good common sense, which is very essential to complete the man. Great interest was manifested in the discussion. Some fifteen to twenty ministers were present from the different denominations, who listened with marked attention and candor. The truth never looked more blessed. Our friends are greatly rejoiced at the results of the discussion. Our opponent did as well as could be expected in the defence of the last-day fables, but it was a hopeless effort to make error stand up against the truth.

We spent the first four sessions in discussing the state of the dead, and the last four the punishment of the wicked. Before we left, we heard of several who came to the debate in sympathy with the views of our opponent, but who became satisfied that he [illegible] He admitted the Bible taught the destruction of the wicked, and that "the wages of sin is death, which means "extinction of life," and still claimed that the finally impenitent will live eternally. It was amusing to see the efforts made to get past a plain declaration of scripture. Ingenuity was taxed to its utmost limits, and then failed of success. It seemed a pity that such talent should be employed in defense of the doctrine taught our first parents by the arch deceiver. Our opponent was very earnest, and labored hard to prove that a dead man is alive; but the word of the Lord resisted all his attacks as successfully as would the rock Gibralter the attack of a host of popguns.

He was rather pointed in some of his remarks in relation to us and the doctrine we advocate. The following are some of his sayings:—

"Root hog or die." "Give him fits." "Peddling pills from Boston." "A quack." "Teacher of brutal philosophy." "A humbug." "Teaching Paganism." "Beastly philosophy." "Advocating Atheism." "Devil's theology." "Miserable doctrine." "Gross, swinish philosophy." "Diabolism fresh from the hell-pit." "Offspring of crime." "Blasphemy from the hell-pit." "Calaban from the hell-pit." "The last spawing of the bottomless pit." "Outrageous buccanier in the sea of crime and carnality." "All the decent are on my side." "Ungodly men who teach annihilation." "Born out of the centre of hell-pit." "Libertinism and leprosy of all foulness."

We were very frequently entertained with expressions like the foregoing; but we felt well inclined to endure such things for the truth's sake. It was a privilege to bear reproach for Jesus and his word. The Lord gave us a very sweet peace during the discussion. We shall remember with much pleasure our visit to New Rutland. We were delighted with the candor, intelligence, good order, and kind benevolence of the people. The cause of the Lord is advancing nobly in that place, through the efficient labors of Bro. Burr, the pastor, and the assistance of Bro. Bro. McCulloch and others. They have a neat chapel, and a living church.

We closed our debate about 10½ o'clock, Friday evening, July 3d, and took the cars in a few minutes afterwards for De Kalb, where we arrived about 8 o'clock the next morning, and received another hearty greeting from Bro. H. G. McCulloch, the pastor of the church. He is an earnest and faithful worker in the vineyard of the Lord, and his labors have been greatly blest, causing many to embrace Christ and the blessed hope. His efforts have resulted in the erection of a neat chapel, which was dedicated July 5th. On account of the number who wished to attend, a large tent was pitched by the side of the house, a window taken out by which we could stand and address the two congregations at once. It was a season of special interest to the friends of Jesus. Bro. Himes was with us in good cheer to assist in the exercises, also Bro. Spencer. We had three meetings on the fourth of July, which were seasons of refreshing to the children of the Lord. We were all delighted with our meeting to celebrate our independence from the slavery of sin. We could say it was good to be there. At noon, they spread a bountiful table under the big tent, which was truly a season of refreshment. While the people of the world were seeking their unsatisfying enjoyment in the amusements of the day, we had great peace in serving the Lord of hosts. We think there is no other way to spend the fourth that affords such sweet comfort and peace.

Sabbath morning, at 9 o'clock, we met for a love-feast, and had a very good one. It was a season of spiritual refreshing. At 10½ o'clock the dedication sermon was preached. The Spirit of the Lord was with us in all of our meetings, and the truth found a welcome in the honest hearts that listened. Things look very encouraging at De Kalb. The great western campmeeting is to be held there, commencing Aug. 30th, to hold over two Sabbaths. There is a rapidly growing interest in the west in the evidences of Christ's speedy coming, and the doctrine of immortality only through him at his return, when the dead shall rise. The field is all white for the harvest. More reapers are wanted. Again we say, Who will go?

GEMS.—We purpose to fill a column, or a part of one, with choice sayings, which we will call GEMS. If any of our readers meet with such, containing important truths, expressed in from one to a dozen lines, we should be much obliged to them if they would forward them for the column of GEMS.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—It will be seen from a note in another column, that Bro. and Sr. Ladd, of Springfield, Mass., had a very narrow escape from death. We unite with them in praising the Lord for their deliverance, and the healing power they have since experienced.

SPRINGFIELD N. A. CAMP-GROUND.

The brethren and sisters who desire to obtain lots in either the first or second circle on the new camp-ground, will please send in their names to the Chairman of the Building Committee, Bro. Hiram Munger, Chicopee Falls, Mass., by August 1st; after which the Committee will proceed to secure for the various applicants a lot, until the whole number shall be exhausted.

There are a plenty of good lots on either of the four streets of the camp-ground, and after August 15th, the first who may come will be served by the Committee, who will be on the ground to attend to matters. Those who may write the Committee, requesting an answer, will please enclose a stamp.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

For the World's Crisis.

SPRINGFIELD CAMP-GROUND.

As the committee in my absence assigned me the tedious task of locating the tents, I will repeat what has been published before, as I see by the letters received that the brethren do not understand, or have forgotten the arrangements. It is decided that the tents in the first circle are to be cloth, and not less than twenty feet long and fifteen feet wide; nor more than thirty long and twenty feet wide; this being the whole size of the lots in the first circle. All tents must be within those limits for the first circle. The second circle lots are thirty by fifty feet, so that you can put up any size you wish, or any kind of material. Some three or four small tents can be put on one lot in the second circle, or one large one to fill the whole lot 30 × 50.

Those wishing to board themselves, who will need a fire, will have to take a location on the second circle, or one of the four streets, as you all will see that a smoke on the first circle would be inconvenient. Some have written for a lot on the first circle without stating the size. Be careful and sign your name plainly. In some letters I cannot decipher the name. I am glad I am not Editor. Write short and plain, and send a stamp if you expect an answer, and we will do the best we can to do justice to all. There will be poles, boards, and other things for tents, on the ground; also arrangements for heating water for all on the back of the ground.

HIRAM MUNGER.

P. S. All that are coming with large tents similar to the Mass. Mission Tent, H. L. Hastings' or the R. I. Mission Tent, should send in the size of their tents immediately, as these tents must have the preference back of the first circle, as the spots are scarce for large tents, without cutting more trees than we want to spare, and more than the owner of the land would want to cut. All can see the request is a reasonable one. Small tents do not need to be represented by letter, as there is any quantity of ground back of the first circle. I, nor any other man, cannot keep track of the claims for small tents. The larger ones must have the preference, as all can see.

"PRAISE FOR DELIVERANCE."

BRO. GRANT:—On the 4th of July my wife and myself had a narrow escape from instant death. I escaped with a few bruises, but my companion was badly injured, and is still lying low from the hurt. We were riding in a carriage, when our horse took sudden fright at an uplifted umbrella, and jumping one side threw me headlong over the wheel, carrying the reins with me, and thus uncontrolled, dashed on with wife in the carriage. She was thrown with great violence upon the sidewalk, and partly against a tree. A severe wound was made in her forehead, baring the skull for three or four inches, and bruising the left eye. Her left arm was broken near the shoulder joint, and her left knee smashed into almost a shapeless mass, breaking all the ligaments that hold the joint together. When taken up she was supposed to be dying, and her wounds were so severe that none who saw her supposed she could survive them.

But what is too hard for our merciful High Priest? He has been very gracious to her and to me also, and to the church of God. Her work is not yet done, and until then (as all of God's servants are), "she is immortal."

As soon as I recovered from the shock, and found how badly wife was injured, I made her case known to some of the Lord's praying ones; and see the result. In four days her flesh wounds were entirely healed, showing only scars; and notwithstanding the extremely hot weather, her broken and bruised limbs have steadily and rapidly improved, so that we now feel sure she is out of any immediate danger.

In view of this wonderful deliverance, I wish to express praise and devout thanksgiving to Him who has promised to make all thy bed in thy sickness (Ps. 41 : 3); and who has faithfully fulfilled the promise in our case.

It is feared that when she is restored, she will not have the use of her limb, but that it will be stiffened in the joint. But I believe that this also comes within the limits of our Physician's skill. I desire the praying ones to remember her in this matter. It is certain that the "healing balm" has been applied thus far most successfully, to the surprise of our skillful surgeon, and all others; and I believe he will finish the work to his own glory. Already it is suggested, by "unbelievers," that "she was not so badly hurt as was supposed"; but the truth is that "she had the most skillful Physician in the world." Let Him have the praise.

ST. LOUIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—Since our campmeeting, I have been too much worn out with fatigue, after attending to other pressing duties, to think of writing until now. Our meeting commenced Tuesday evening, June 9th, and continued day and evening through the week and over the following Sabbath. The audience was not so large through the week as we had hoped; yet we commenced with a good number, which increased daily. And Sunday the tent was filled; many were outside. A good interest was manifested throughout the whole meeting. Bro. D. S. Clark improved the evening of each day, and twice on the Sabbath, in presenting us good truths, such as were meat in due season; and they were well received. Bro. S. S. Brewer also preached to us three or four times during the meeting, to good acceptance. Brn. Maybe, Macon, Decatur, and others, improved a part of the time in presenting good practical truths, which together with the united efforts of our brethren and sisters in prayer and conference meetings, made our meeting one of great interest and profit to all of us. Nearly two-thirds of the people were white. Notwithstanding all classes of society were represented at the meeting, yet I never saw better order at a campmeeting. There was no loud talking, no fighting, no profanity or drunkenness to disturb the harmony of the meeting.

The chief of the city police, Col. Fenn, who is a worthy member of a Presbyterian church here, sent us at the city's expense two day and two night police. The two night police had the care and watching of our tents all night. In addition to these, we had the occasional visits of some mounted police, who travel their beats on horseback. On Sunday, we were visited by some of the higher officials, and among them Mr. John O. Codden, who, until recently, has been a resident of Mansfield, Mass. He is the President of the Board of police commissioners here, who receive their appointment from the Governor of the State. Our city and county is governed by a Metropolitan Police, who are appointed and commissioned by the above named commissioners; instead of being appointed by the city. One of our day police was a Mr. William W. Fox, until recently a resident of Shelburne Falls, Mass.

It is but a few years since St. Louis and its surroundings were infested with the worst set of villains and cut-throats, of the border ruffian stamp, that ever disgraced America. And even now there is no Sunday law of any kind to prevent hunting, horse-racing, excursions of every kind, accompanied with bands of music, and all kinds of sport and amusements, which give to Sundays the appearance of a holiday. Yet for all this, I never knew of a city in the Eastern States where a more perfect freedom of speech was secured to all classes of professing christians than there is in St. Louis to-day. All religious assemblies of every denomination, whether in or out of doors, are protected in all their rights and privileges as christians. In fact, I do not believe there can be found east a more perfect and efficient police force than we have here. Times have greatly changed in this city within three years in reference to these things. And it is so in reference to our faith. The truths of the Bible we preach are received with much more favor than one year ago. And one of the great objects of our Tent-meeting was to bring before as many people as could be got together the glorious truths given to our age and generation. I hear of some preachers telling their people here that they have got new light in reference to the saints' going to heaven; that instead of going there at death, they must wait till Christ comes. Some are telling their people that the personal coming of Christ is very near.

Bro. Himes sends us fifteen copies a week of the Voice of the West. I take good care to make them talk to advantage. Our campmeeting has swept away a great amount of prejudice in this community; and it is extremely gratifying to us to witness so great a change in this matter. We are to hold a two-days grove meeting in Cahokie, seven miles from here, commencing Saturday, July 18th, and holding over the Sabbath following. There is a large body of industrious and worthy colored people in that vicinity, who want a church and school; being destitute of either until we commenced to labor among them. We have a church there, and they want to do all they can to sustain it. The church at Compton Hill, under the charge of Bro. Decatur, is prospering; also the church at Lowell, under the charge of Bro. Macon. Our meetings here at 5th and Riddle Sts. are interesting as usual. Our preaching brethren exchange and aid each other what we can. There appears to be perfect harmony between the Advent churches here.

I think I can truthfully say to all those who have so kindly aided God's mission work here and elsewhere, that if they could come and visit our churches and schools, and see what improvements have been made through the persevering efforts of the Lord's servants east and west,—some in fervent prayer with God, others in sending us aid and comfort, as well as those laboring in the field,—they would feel cheered with the progress made. The work is not ours; it is not yours; but the Lord's. We are but feeble servants in his hands. So we will leave all with him. The teachers of our schools, together with others of our churches in the mission here, have all co-operated together for the triumph of God's truth. We have four churches. The teachers, members and preachers of each church co-operate together harmoniously with the others for the same good. Our quarterly conference meets about the last of this month.

Should the Lord open the way, Bro. C. Dennis and myself expect to leave here for the East, Aug. 17th, to attend the Springfield campmeeting; and, if the Lord will, Alton Bay.

The receipts in donations from kind friends since my last acknowledgments are as follows:

From Sr. Luella Dockum, Bath, Me., $5. An order from L. D. Cunningham for $15.00 worth of "Adventism." I sent to Bro. Himes for fifteen copies only, and I am trying to make good use of them. I loan them to read instead of selling them or giving them away. In this way they will do more good. June 29th, from Bro. S. J. Bassford, Thomaston, Conn., through Bro. Geo. T. Adams, $7.25. July 2nd, I received a letter from Brn. D. Mathewson and C. H. Leverton, of Sandy Hill, N. Y., informing me of one barrel of clothing sent by the sisters of Sandy Hill church. I received also $9.25, $4.25 to pay freight on the barrel, and $5.00 from Bro. Alexander, of the same church. The barrel is not yet received, but will be, probably, in due time. I can only say in conclusion, we do feel grateful to the Lord, and to our dear friends who have so kindly remembered us in our mission work among those to whom Christ said, "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

We had hoped to see Bro. Grant, when he came so near us. I expect to be with and visit my father and mother at Oakdale, Mass., Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 22nd and 23d. I left father and mother, brother and sister, to work among God's poor and despised little ones. My only brother and sister I had East have both died since I came out last. We buried a little one just before coming here. We buried another last February. The struggle is almost over. I look for Jesus this seventh month, when the tyrant must be destroyed. The way is clear before us. Praise God for ever. Amen.

WORDS NEEDED.—No. 1.

We, as individuals, as congregations or churches, are, I doubt not, biblically truthful and right; and, generally speaking, there is at present prosperity among us as a people. Yet in many things we are greatly in fault. In coming together as a body to sustain meetings, and advance the cause of truth in any given locality, in order to prosper and be efficient in exerting a healthy influenee, there must be, in the first place, an individual responsibility. Every one of that body should feel that the progress of the cause depends, under God, upon them and their efforts. Again, there must be a mutual combination of interest, all putting forth an effort for the same object, viz., the salvation of all that can by any means be reached. Then all, whether few or many, are of one heart and one mind, having a heart for the work, and in the name of Jesus it prove a success. All are ready to do what they can, not leaving it to those who are always ready and at work; thus leaving one or two to look after and do all the work, if it is done at all. In this way many come to naught by dying a lingering death. "Yes, but I have not the means." So it must all be done by those having the means; thus you shoulder the cause on to the money or men that have it, and slip out of all responsibility. They become discouraged, the cause suffers, languishes, dies. This is not as it should be. All, all should have the same interest in the great work. If you have not the means that others have, have a heart in the common work; do what you can. The less your means, the more heart and devotion. Be awake to every effort to advance the work of God.

There are two ways to carry along a meeting; one is by getting together a good deal of money, then set the machine in motion, and it will run as long as the money lasts, and no longer. The next is by having Christianity, or pure undefiled religion, living in you, a fountain of life to the believing on Jesus as the Scriptures hath said. These living members of Christ's body combined by the Spirit of the Lord, loving and desirous of bearing burthens for Christ's cause with their brethren, with this class the cause will flourish, the body will be vigorous; harmony, love and sweet fellowship will prevail, and the means will not be wanting. O brethren, do not for a moment leave the responsibility, nor the work upon those that have the most of the means; but if you can do but little in this way, do it heartily, and for Christ's sake make it up in personal labor and faithful trust in the Lord of hosts, and all will, by the blessing of the great head of the church, advance the truth so it will run and be glorified. Be at your post of duty in meeting, specially when most needed; not show your interest by slipping away when you think it will go hard; then is your time to be there with shoulder to the wheel. If you leave at all, leave when your favorite preacher comes, then they can spare you. But enough for this time.

RODGERSVILLE, NEW YORK.

BRO. GRANT:—They have a good church at Rodgersville, a working church. Every one is at their post, and ready to work for the Lord. They sustain meetings whether they have preaching or not, just as every church should. They have their quarterly meetings, when all come around the table of the Lord, four times a year. I wish every church would adopt the same rule.

This church was raised up under the labors of Brn. Stevens and C. B. Turner.

M. R. MILES.

TAKING A SPIRITUAL INVENTORY.—Occasional retirement, self inquiry, meditation and secret communion with God are absolutely essential to spiritual health. The man who neglects them is in great danger of a fall. To be always preaching, teaching, speaking, and working public works is unquestionably a sign of zeal not according to knowledge. It often leads to untoward consequences. We must take time for sitting down and calmly looking within and examining how matters stand between our souls and Christ. The omission of this practice is the true account of many a backsliding which shocks the church and gives occasion to the world to blaspheme. Many could say, in the words of the Canticles 'They made me a keeper of the vineyards, but my own vineyard have I not kept.'—Rev. J. C. Ryle.

CONFORMITY WITH CHRIST.—The chief study of a christian, and the very thing that makes him to be a christian, is conformity with Christ. The sum of religion (says Pythagoras) is to be like him whom thou worshipest. And that truly is our only way; there is nothing but darkness and misery out of him: "but he that followeth me," says he, "shall not walk in darkness." And therefore it is set before us in the Gospel in so clear and lively colors that we may make this our whole endeavor to be like him.—Leighton.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. B. Wadsworth.

Bro. Grant:—As there is a detention of the cars, owing to the railroad hands striking for pay, I may probably have to lie over here a day or two, as I have written for tracts to meet me at this point; therefore I thought I would write you of my whereabouts, and how I am getting along in these eventful times. I have for the last ten or fifteen days traveled through a section of country, of which it is said that it was a common thing twelve months ago to find from eight to ten dead souls every day that were put to death by the assassin. In traveling through this valley of Mississippi, I sometimes would hear people halloo to me at a distance, accosting me in this manner: "Aint you afraid to travel through here on foot?" "No," I replied; "afraid of what?" "Why, de robbers. Two men were killed yesterday, right on de road where you are going." I often hear some frightful tales, and think to myself, Can they really be true. I hear so much, but can not see them. Sometimes I almost get into a state of perplexity, and should, I know, reverse my steps, if I was in the condition I was twelve months ago—in my sins, without a hope beyond the grave. I know, when I get loaded down with tracts, about fifty lbs. on my back, I somewhat resemble a Dutch peddler; and such characters as those who get their living by plunder may think, before examining their booty, that they have reached the goal of their glory; but after perusing the contents, who knows the conviction that may be brought about? God works in a mysterious way. I now see, where I once was blind. Knowing this to be the fact; knowing, too, that God has sent me on this mission for some good end, if I am faithful; why should I fear what man can do unto me, when I have God's word that "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them"?

The Bible is full of protection. Begone, wicked unbelief; why should I distrust him who has said, If we suffer, we shall also reign with him. "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Though we suffer, and that suffering be unto death, how comforting to know that the dead in Christ shall rise first. But really don't it seem hard, after you have traveled several hundred miles through wet and cold, and often hungry, to deliver a message, and to have the one to whom it is sent turn a deaf ear to it? Why it is enough to make us weep, when we know it is a message from God, and a message intended for a warning. I often imagine to myself, don't people think I am a fool. How does he know any thing about the end of time? No, I don't know that day nor hour, but I know one thing, I know that my feelings are different from what they once were, and I know that I have the spirit of Christ, for I love every body, and I am impressed with the belief that the time is near, even at the door; and I thank God that I can see and feel, and if people will not take heed, they cannot say they have never been warned.

I don't feel that I am called to preach, for that I cannot do; but what I am doing, I believe if I had not gone at it when I did, I now would be a miserable wreck. I don't believe there are any of God's children but what have a work to do; and if they don't do it, they are accountable; for the talent must be improved. I find it is better to obey God's commands, than to be chastised. Who had not rather do their Master's bidding, than to be swallowed by a whale to be vomited up? There are several prophecies by Southern Methodist ministers, predicting the speedy coming of Jesus. There is one Rev. J. Taylor, of Brownsville, Tenn., a very able minister, who says the signs of the times indicate the speedy coming of the Lord. All of his predictions heretofore have been fulfilled as he prophesied they would.

There are revivals all over the country. It seems to me as if people were receiving their last call; still there are some that will not understand. All kinds of meanness and depredation are going on; and, according to Scripture, will be until the end. As it was in the days of Noah and Lot, so shall the coming of the Son of man be. I find all classes of people, and various opinions. I find proud boasters, blasphemers, and covetous. Every man seems to be on the grab,—a general cheating throughout the land. When I am north it is, "How mean the Rebs are"; now it is, "How mean the Yanks are." So it seems that every body is on the clash in some way or other. And the poor black men seem to be, and always have been, a source of great contention, and are hated by all nations,—for what cause I can not see. The fruits of their labor have gone all over the world. They have drained mighty swamps, made many men rich, educated their families in the highest schools, dressed them in pomp and splendor, and caused them to ride in the finest style; still, after all, the colored man is looked upon as worse than a dog.

I can not tell how many hard names I have had pelted at me; still God is with me, and he has promised to lead me safely through the journey. I find where the people laugh and scoff at religion, they are very near conviction. It seems that some laugh to keep off bad feelings. I called on a family a few days ago, and while conversing with the lady of the house, I discovered that one of her daughters kept trying to smother a laugh; but before leaving, I turned to her two daughters and inquired of their hope in Jesus. Finally they said that they never prayed, but would like to be christians, which nearly all say. Before leaving, I asked if they would not join with me in a short season of prayer. On bidding them good bye, the one who had kept laughing was in tears.

I find all the way where I have been, that such cases are good subjects to work on. I find there is a great outcry for teachers. The colored people need help. They need somebody to talk with them, to advise them, to tell them what is right, and what is wrong. They don't know what to do. They need some one to teach them. But what kind of teachers are the best to come down here? Why, any that feel it to be duty to come. If God says come, you need not be afraid to come; but I have thought that colored teachers and white ladies get along better in these country towns than white men. A teacher was taken out the other day and whipped, and another one threatened; and now and then they burn a school-house or meeting-house. These ruffians visited a school-house not long ago, [illegible] They gave her orders to leave, and said, "If you don't leave, we will have to persecute you." She told them that she was sent there to teach the colored people, and that she would not leave till ordered by higher authority. "Who sent you here, madam?" said they. "God," said she. Thus she withstood them, and said she would die rather than to leave against her Master's will. O may God bless her. I glory in her decision. The christian has many trials in his journey to the promised land.

I must tell a story. I was feeling very badly one day, a short time after I had started on my pilgrimage. I had got down as far as the slough of despond, where temptations are plentiful. I was tempted not to speak to an old colored man. Says the old tempter, He don't know anything, and there is no use to tell him anything, for he will not understand. But, however, I made out to ask him if he could read? No, said he, but my little boy can. So while handing him a tract, I asked him if he loved Jesus. It seemed the word "Jesus" set him on fire all over, so that I had nothing to say for several minutes, but stood and listened. Said he, "Right out yonder, about two hundred yards, is where my master whip me till de blood run down and even through my clothes; and when he was through whipping me, I said, Glory to God. Master says, 'What is dat you say?' I say, Glory to God for this persecution. Master says, 'You must be a damn fool.' I went on plowing, and I was happy all day till about night, and the Comforter left me, and old Satan tempt me to take revenge on my master; but I remembered de old saying, Pray in season and out of season; so I did not feel much like praying, but I prayed anyhow, and I got all right again."

It seems that where I am tempted not to go, is right where the blessing lies. Some people have very extensive imaginations, and imagine they see great sights; such imaginations turn out about like the boy's bear. There was a boy attending school, who had no father, and being the only son, he felt it to be duty to return home every night. One day while at school the dogs got after a bear, and run him along the road where the boy traveled to go home. He did not generally get home till in the night. What to do he did not know. He was ashamed to let his associates know that he was afraid to go home alone; so he traded for a long-bladed knife, and as soon as school was dismissed, he made for home, thinking about the bear all the way. As he drew near the place where he thought the bear had crossed, his imagination grew larger and larger, till finally he saw the bear. There he stood. He could see his hairy mouth, and his short tail, and thought once that he would turn and run, but he had heard the old saying, that if he run the bear would run up behind him and squeeze him to death; so he plucked up courage, and said that he would go home in defiance of the bear. As soon as he made an effort to start, he looked and he saw no bear; and when he came to the place where he thought the bear was, behold, it was a stump! So I have seen a good many of the boy's bears, but always when I venture up, it turned out to be something not much worse than a stump; but I began to think the other day I saw a two-legged bear with a club in his hand. In making my calls, I make no exceptions. There was a colored family between the road and the white family. So I called in, and while I was sitting there, up popped a white man with a heavy club in hand, and wanted to know my business, and where I was going, and asked to know what kind of books were those I had? I told him, and my business through the country, and of the speedy coming of Jesus. Said he, "I have heard of that," and he left, and I kept talking to him as he walked off, but he was so struck he could not speak above a whisper. I was told afterwards that he came in there to use that stick. This is another of the boy's bears, but he did not hurt me; though for a little while I kept up a good deal of thinking, not knowing what might happen. But bless the Lord, why should I fear, when he has promised grace for every trial. When I am persecuted, I expect grace to bear it; so the deeper the trial, the greater the blessing.

The South is a great field, and there is room for thousands, but at this time it is hot, very hot; indeed, some nights, when I retire, my clothes are wet with perspiration; but, thank God, he gives me strength, now on my way to Mobile, and if the Lord is willing, I shall go on to Texas. I am thinking I shall have a good time now for a month or so, even if I fail to get my bread; for the roadside is black with berries. But if we are only faithful, we shall get purer fruit than this.

In conclusion, let me ask every reader and every christian to pray for me. I don't ask it as a mere lip service, but a prayer from the heart, for I need prayers. Your Bro. waiting for Jesus, when we can meet to part no more,

Mobile, Ala. J. B. Wadsworth.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I am once more at home in the Mission house, and I want you to know we have not got the sweet fresh air here that you have in the country. The weather here is dreadful warm, and dysentery and cholera morbus, occasioned by the great heat and drinking so much water, is quite bad, just now, among our people; but we are trying to do the best we can with what we have to do with. Any one who has medicine that is good for these complaints, will do us a great kindness if they will send us some, and the Lord will pay them, either now, or when they get into the kingdom. I got home yesterday morning from Boston, and found our missionaries suffering much from the heat, especially those from New Hampshire. But with it all they love to work for God, and you would not wonder if you could be here to the meetings.

Last night I was suffering with one of my headaches, by being out in the sun all day yesterday, but when the meeting opened, and they began to sing, I could not stay in bed. I thought I never heard such singing in my life. I had to get up and dress, and go down to meeting. Such praying! I don't wonder the Lord hears their prayers. They take hold, and there is no let go till they get their answer, and so they prayed for me. Poor things, how glad they were to see me, and as I sat and listened to their honest, whole-soul testimonies, it did my heart good, and I felt to thank God that I was ever called to work among a class of people that appreciate the truth. I thought, if in the kingdom of God I could see just a dozen of these dear children, and have them with me around the throne, what a satisfaction it will be to me. But when I think of hundreds that have been brought in during the last twenty-five years, in the different protracted meeting and camp-meetings that I have had, it melts my heart to tenderness, and I am humbly led to confess the Lord hath wrought great things. Praise his holy name. O I must get in that kingdom. There are too many blessed things there for me to miss it. Life or death; principalities or powers; things present or things to come; at the loss of all things, I must be there. Oh the anticipation of the kingdom never seemed so precious to me as it does to-day. I do pray that I may be faithful to my trust. The Lord bless all the dear ones. Yours looking for deliverance.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—Grace, mercy and peace be to you and yours; yes, and to all who love Jesus and look for his appearing, and love his kingdom. I want to just say to my brethren, who inquire for Bro. Spaulding, that I am yet alive, though my outward man is just decaying, and all the powers of my mind failing, and my memory broken; yet I don't forget God, nor Jesus Christ, nor the blessed kingdom, which is soon to be set up. Neither do I forget my brethren and sisters, with whom I have taken sweet counsel, and with whom I have walked to the house of God. I love them for the truth's sake, which they love; and I can never forget the kindness and hospitality with which I have been treated all over the country. May the good Lord bless them, is my prayer. I should be glad to see them, but am not able to go abroad. My work is done, and I wish I could say well done; but it looks small to me. I claim no merit for what I have done, or tried to do. No, if I am saved at all, it must be wholly through Christ's merits. I rejoice there is a way whereby I can be saved.

I love to dwell on the wonderful plan of redemption through Jesus and the resurrection. I do hope to have a part in that redemption, and in that glorious kingdom, where the wicked will cease from troubling, and where all tears will be wiped away; where there will be no infirmity of age, and where the inhabitants will not say I am sick. I believe in the great plan of the restitution of all things, as spoken of by God by his prophets; yes, a literal restitution, not only of man, but of the earth from which the curse will be removed; and it will become good and fertile as it was originally, with the lower order of creatures all in harmony.

To the brethren I would say, work while the day lasts. Time is short. What you do must be done soon. Keep your eyes open to the signs of the times; live your religion, let your light shine, love as brethren, be kind, be courteous, walk together in union and harmony; and may God bless you, lead you, guide you unto his glorious kingdom.

Your aged brother, B. Spaulding.

Obituaries.

Murray. Died in Worcester, Mass., July 8th, 1868, of consumption, Mary Etna, daughter of Augustus and Dorotha Murray, aged twenty-three years and ten months.

Etna had been sick for six months, but was not forgotten by kind friends in the church here. About eight weeks before her death, she gave her heart to Jesus, and died in the blessed hope of life and immortality through Christ, at his coming. She gave good evidence of her hope until the last, calling upon her brothers, sister, and parents, earnestly entreating them to meet her in the coming kingdom. The funeral services were attended at the house, by the writer, upon which occasion he read the Scriptures, and remarked upon them to a large and attentive audience, upon the nature of man since the fall, and the only prospect of life and immortality, as offered through Christ, beyond the reach of sin and death, in the world to come, the everlasting kingdom of God.

Samuel Ayres.

Price. Died in Montreal, P. Q., June 7th, 1868, Sr. Jane Price, wife of Bro. James Price, aged twenty-nine years, five months and one day.

She was an amiable woman, but did not give her heart to the Lord till during her last sickness. She died very peacefully in the Lord. She urged her unconverted friends to seek the Savior at once. We left her asleep in Jesus, in the beautiful Mt. Royal Cemetery, from which we believe she will soon awake to sing the song of the redeemed. The funeral was attended, July 9th, by the writer.

Miles Grant.

Lee. Died in Quebec, P. Q., July 8th, 1868, Sr. Amelia J. Lee, wife of Bro. Wm. Lee, and daughter of Bro. Wm. Wright, aged twenty years.

Though now in deep sorrow, yet her friends mourn in hope of having their sorrow soon turned to joy everlasting in the kingdom of God. The funeral was attended by Bro. A. Simpson, who showed that our only hope is in the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead.

Stewart. Died in West Stewartston, N. H., July 5th, 1868, of diphtheria, Laura L., daughter of Orville J. and Artemisa Stewart, aged seven months and five days.

Gone! gone! but not forever,
Though the cords of earth may sever,
Again shall they united be,
In glorious immortality.

Death! death! thou cruel monster,
Revel now, but soon thy sceptre
Shall be broken, thou no more
Shalt scatter woe the wide earth o'er.

Rest! rest! fond and loved one,
We will wait till Christ, God's own Son,
Shall his glorious rest begin,
Raise the sleepers, end all sin.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

London, July 19. On Thursday last Admiral Farragut received through the Prince of Wales, who was visiting the American fleet off Cowes, an invitation to visit the Queen. The next day the Admiral and principal officers of his fleet proceeded to Osborne House, where the Queen was then stopping, and were received in a most cordial manner by her Majesty, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh and members of the Royal Court.

The reports of the harvest from all parts of the United Kingdom show that the yield of wheat exceeds the annual average.

Carlsruhe, July 19. The American Minister has concluded his negotiations with the Grand Ducal Government for a treaty for the mutual rights of naturalized citizens, and a document has been signed by the high contracting parties on both sides. The treaty is identical with those previously negotiated by Mr. Bancroft.

London, July 19. A popular demonstration took place in this city to-day in favor of Parliamentary measures for the abolition of the Irish Church establishment. A procession, consisting of workingmen carrying banners and wearing green ribbons, proceeded to Hyde Park, where a mass meeting was organized.

After addresses from several speakers had been delivered, resolutions strongly protesting against the rejection by the House of Lords of the Irish Church Appointments Suspension bill were adopted. About two thousand persons were present at the meeting. Their proceedings were orderly, and there was no interference on the part of the police.

Southampton, July 19. The American squadron, under command of Admiral Farragut, sailed to-day from the Solent. The flagship Franklin, with Admiral Farragut on board, has gone to Gibralter, the steamer Ticonderoga to Havre, and the steamer Canandaigua to Cork.

Paris, July 7. In the Corps Legislatif to-day, Marshal Neil made an eloquent defence of the army and military power of the nation, and declared that in 1867 France would have been unable to cope with her neighbors, but now her power was such that none of them could compete with her.

Items.

☞ Fourteen hundred Mormon converts, mostly from England and Wales, have been landed at New York this week. Most of the men are farmers or farm laborers, of respectable appearance and considerable intelligence. It is expected that it will take them two months to reach Utah. Eight thousand more are expected to arrive during the summer.

☞ France has brought in a bill against England for six hundred millions of francs, which she claims is her due since 1815. It is proposed that France enforce this claim. It is evident with this little bill and our Alabama claims that John Bull will have his surplus funds disposed of before he is aware of it.

☞ In New York, last week, the returns of deaths show the awful record of eleven hundred and forty-two, which is an increase of five hundred and twenty-eight over the total deaths of the week previous. Over fifty per cent of these deaths were from sun stroke, and other causes incidental to the extreme heat.

☞ A funny story is circulating in Europe that the American Freemasons are making an overture of amity to the Pontifical Court, having offered to Pius IX., who has so vehemently denounced the order, the grand mastership of their organization. Such a return of good for evil has so astonished the Holy Father that he seems at a loss how to reply.

☞ The Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad undertakes to furnish destitute emigrants who arrive at Milwaukee with free transportation to the places which they may have chosen for their residence, when on the line of that road.

☞ The Maryland fruit crop is pronounced almost an entire failure. The peach crop will not be one-twentieth part as large as it was last year. The apple crop will also be very far short of the average. The small fruits, also, such as cherries, plums and damsons, are a failure.

Notices.

Volunteers Wanted!!

Wanted on the Springfield Camp-ground, eight or ten brethren who will give their labors towards fitting up the ground, and getting things in readiness for the meeting on the 24th of August. The committee have been to great expense in fitting up the buildings, etc., and are coming short of funds to complete the work. Therefore we call for help, and some who cannot give money, can give their time and labor, which is as good as money for the purpose. We want quite a number of men who love to work, on the ground by the tenth of Aug., to remain and work until the meeting. Send in your names to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., as soon as possible, that we may know in season how many we have. Provision will be made to board and sleep on the ground. In this way you can have your board through the meeting, and help us much in the week. Who will come?

Per order of Building Committee,
J. Hemenway.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting will commence Monday, July 27th, and continue over the following Sunday. Ample arrangements will be made to accommodate all with board and lodging (they bringing their bedding.) Bro. E. Bellows will be on the ground with his large new tent, which will seat nearly one thousand persons.

Now, brethren and sisters from abroad, and the regions round about, come to this gospel feast, for we are anticipating the blessing of the Lord with his pilgrims, as in years past. Bro. Geo. T. Adams will probably secure a reduction of fare on the Old Colony and Cape Cod railroad for those who come through Boston. For the committee,

Henry V. Davis.

Notice to the Churches.

As writing to the churches subjects a preaching brother to inconvenience, and sometimes causes delay in making appointments, and otherwise sometimes makes confusion, we have concluded to request such churches as desire our labors, to address us at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass., stating the time when our labors are desired; and any places desiring preaching, whether new fields or old ones, even though the encouragements may be few, if we can be notified, shall be supplied to the best of our ability. We shall keep our appointments published, so that by reference to the paper our engagements can be known, and our proximity to any particular place. We desire to visit places as the way opens, and have no choice except to have our appointments as convenient to each other as may be possible.

L. C. & M. McKinstry.

Notice.

Any church desiring the next Quarterly Conference with them, will please let it be known to the Secretary. It will be due in October. I would also say to those who pledged money to the Advent Mass. Conference for the support of quarterly conferences and protracted meetings in new and needy places, your money is wanted, and you will please send it to Bro. R. E. Ladd, the Treasurer, Springfield, Mass. Also, others who have the needful send in funds to introduce and enlighten the people on the coming and kingdom of our Lord. Three protracted meetings with good results have been held. Others are wanted. L. Boutell.

Notice.

The fourth annual meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at De Kalb, Ill., in connection with the General Campmeeting for 1868. The first formal meeting of the Association will convene on Wednesday, Sept. 2d, at 10 A. M., at which time the usual reports will be presented. Members who wish to vote by proxy may do so by notifying the Secretary, stating the name of the person chosen as proxy. But no person can act as a proxy who is not a member of the Association.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will next be pitched in Saccarappa, July 23d, to continue as long as thought best. J. A. Libby.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting on the old ground in Springwater, Aug. 14th, 15th, and 16th. Services at the school-house Friday evening, at half past seven o'clock, and in the grove on Saturday, at one P. M., and on Sunday at nine A. M. Come one and all. For the brethren, C. F. Sweet.

Missouri Christian Conference.

The Missouri Advent Christian Conference will hold its third quarterly meeting at the Pilgrim Church, corner of 5th and Biddle streets, commencing Saturday, July 26th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. Per order of the Board, Hiram Beadle, Sec.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting in Jonesville, Wis., commencing August 20th, to hold several days.

Wm. Sheldon.

Special Notice.

Those brethren and sisters who gave their pledges for the Alton Bay Campmeeting, are requested to forward the same as soon as possible, as the committee are needing the money to prepare for the meeting. Please direct to Eld. C. Goodrich, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass. J. G. Smith.

Star of Hope Mission.

E. C. Woodruff, Southington, Ct., $1.00; Julia Ives, Chateaugay, N. Y.; $2; A. M. F., Charlestown, N. H., $5; J. B. Morgan, West Northfield, (rent) $1.25; Bro. Fumagilli, Boston, Mass., $1; George E. Rounds, North Scituate, R. I., 50 cts; Sr. Chandler, Lisbon, N. H., $1; A. Whiting, Worcester, (rent), $3; A box of clothing, no name; A barrel of clothing, book, etc., R. R. York, Yarmouth, Me., also $2 to pay freight; A box containing hats, herbs, books, etc., from Mrs. H. S. Woods, Fayville, Mass.; Bro. Buller, of Guilford, by the hand of C. H. Sweet, $7, for rent; E Saulpaugh, $1.50. M. E. Dow.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ Correspondents should know that we cannot discontinue or send their orders, unless they give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in plain letters.

TO BRO. P. W. HOUGH.—You will inquire for an excursion ticket for Boston; perhaps you can get one from Milwaukee to Boston. Do not think you can get one to Albany; but if you can, do so, and then get a campmeeting ticket from there to Springfield. If you intend to go to Alton Bay campmeeting, you will pass through Boston. If you cannot get an excursion ticket to Boston, then get a ticket to Albany, and there purchase a campmeeting ticket to Springfield.

☞ N. O. COATES, Bulwer, P. Q.—Your money ($5.00) is received. All right.

TRUTH AND ERROR CONTRASTED.

When men tell us that the righteous
  Do at "death" get their reward,
We believe the words of Jesus,
  Which are not as they record;
For we read that all the holy
  Shall "triumphantly arise"
When the "Savior comes in glory,
  Then to meet him in the skies."

Soon we'll have immortal beauty,
  When our glorious King shall come,
If we seek to do our duty
  And obey God's precious Son.
Our "reward" shall be a "kingdom"
  On this "earth" redeemed from sin;
There the saints shall all be welcome,
  And unite to praise their King.

People tell us that in dying
  Our "immortal spirit" flies
Far above all pain and sighing,
  To a "home beyond the skies";
"But," say they, "our bodies moulder
  Back to mother earth again";
And the "soul" is a beholder
  Of the deeds of living men.

But in death the Bible teaches
  That we "know not any thing";
Yet the parson often preaches,
  And the people often sing,
That the "soul" is "never dying,"
  And that "death" is our best "friend";
Thus confirm the tempter's lying,
  When he taught "man had no end."

Is it not the most consistent
  To believe our blessed Lord,
Rather than be so persistent
  In upholding Satan's word,
And in teaching all this folly,
  That the "real man" flies away,
And instead of dying wholly,
  Leaves a body to decay?

We are told by men of learning
  That the "spirit" is the "mind,"
And that God from the beginning
  Made "immortal" all mankind;
"Bodies," they are but a "prison,"
  With "immortal man" inside;
There it "dwells" a little season,
  Then "departs" when "man" has died!

When the Bible tells us plainly
  That the "sinning soul shall die,"
How can we so very strangely
  Dare the truth of God defy?
For when "man to earth returneth,"
  And his "breath" doth leave the clay,
Then his "thoughts," the Psalmist telleth,
  Surely "perish in that day."

Oft we see a contradiction
  Of the views upheld by those
Who are fond of idle fiction,
  And the gospel truths oppose.
Oh! that men would learn true wisdom,
  Such as cometh from above,
And rejoice that in the "kingdom"
  Soon we'll see the God of love.

Then, when every foe is vanquished,
  We will shout the "victory" won,
When the "enemy" is banished,
  And "redemption's" work is done;
Then is our "reward" before us—
  An "immortal life" of joy;
For "the Lord preserves the righteous,
  But the wicked will destroy."

Brimfield, Mass. Geo. E. Lee.

DEMON WORK.

The terrible time is fast coming on—seems almost here—when the devil, employing means unthought about by many of us, as within his power, will make his grandest effort against Almighty God. A part of the battle is to be fought in heaven; the other part on earth, where the Creator is to be assailed by the enemy's utmost strength, through his greatest creation, man. The book says, "By grace ye are saved, through faith." To make this one condition of salvation, faith in Christ, wanting, the devil intends to turn men's faith, if he can, away from Christ, and get it beguiled over to Antichrist, an awful embodiment of evil, yet to be manifested. The chief aim will be, not merely to deceive them, but, if it be possible, the very elect.

How do we know this? The infallible Bible says so. But, you say, the devil is a student of the Bible, searching the Scriptures perhaps as indefatigably as the many who call themselves christians. Therefore, he knows his certain failure here; he sees it, as we see it, plainly recorded. Will he then fight this desperate, hopeless battle? We gather that he will, not believing it to be so hopeless as we hold it. We, who are christians, by the Holy Spirit within us witnessing with our spirits that we are children of God," we know that our God is "able to save to the uttermost all who come to him by faith" in his Son, and that he is able to do, and will do, to the letter, all else his word sets forth as his work yet to be done. But the devil does not, as it seems to the writer, believe this. What we regard as Omniscience, he appears to regard as mere foresightedness on God's part, in divining the likely tactics of evil against heaven's supremacy. Of heaven's ultimate victory he seems sceptical. His action to-day indicates hope of his plans against heaven, through man, succeeding, in very spite of Bible prophecies to the contrary.

Let us look at the devil's elaborate preparations in our midst for "the coming struggle"—struggle, be it said, on his part only. Truly, "the signs of the times" are intensely significant, and surely they foretell the near approach of the last time of the latter days, which are to be marked by miracles, devil-enacted. After ages of scepticism on this subject of miracles, belief in them has again begun, and is rapidly spreading.

A friend of the writer went the other day to a performance of the Davenport Brothers, and assisted at that performance. He bound the men—was bound to them—and the three thus bound were placed in a cabinet, thoroughly examined, and ascertained to be merely a cupboard made of very thin wood, without secret places for the hiding of confederates. This cupboard stood high up upon tressles, was watched by a gentleman who stood behind it, and by the audience in front. My friend asked of the Davenports what was to be done? They asked through him, for the doors to be closed; this was being done, and, while being done, a naked hand and arm was thrust out at the cabinet door, the while, be it remembered, they were all three bound with strong long ropes—my friend's hands upon their shoulders, none beside them in the cabinet, and human confederacy impossible! When in darkness—the doors being closed upon them from the outside—my friend again asked what was to be done? One of the still bound brothers inquired, would he like some musical instrument to play? He chose the guitar; which forthwith perched upon his head, and performing a sort of dance there, commenced to play vigorously! This continued for some time, and then my friend asked for a similar manifestation from the tambourine; which immediately began tapping him lightly over the head and breast, jingling the while most lustily, eventually with the guitar settled down upon his knees! A large horn was thrown out, through an opening in the cabinet, upon the stage, and then the doors were opened from the outside, and the three, bound as at first, were seen by the audience.

After this, other marvels were done, and, to crown all, the instruments of music were dabbed over with phosphorus, and the lights (partially lowered hitherto) were turned out; then these luminous musical instruments suddenly bounded up into the air, whirled over the heads of the astonished audience, striking some of them, and my friend, at that time seated in the midst of the audience, caught one of them in his arms, and held it! So here was no optical delusion. And so on, marvels on marvels for two hours.

This some believed to be all clever trickery; but the many seemed to be possessed with the idea of a spirit manifestation. It seemed so impossible for human means to have produced these wonderful effects. This idea was impressed upon such by the Davenports declining to advance any theory as to how these things were done. They would not take the credit of doing them; they left it to the audience to form their own conclusions.

Mr. Home, however, goes further. He boldly taxes upon the spirit world all the manifestations with which he is connected; and so also do many others like him. Thus the public mind is being operated upon by men, numbers of whom profess having direct intercourse with spirits—not evil, of course!—in this and in that direction. People are becoming alarmed, timid, superstitious, wild believers in the supernatural. Not individual people, but masses. Before all other places we find America singled out for the operations of the spirit mediums, so called; and chiefly, one may suppose, on account of the impressionable character of its people. In America we hear of thousands, tens, hundreds of thousands, already professing faith in spirit manifestations; we also hear of magazines and newspapers there, and here in England, being identified with, and advocating, the spiritualistic belief.

Does not this look like artful preparation for those greater wonders which are shortly to be shown? The devil, profiting by the experience written in Matt. 11: 58, "And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief," appears now to be striving to reduce mankind cautiously, by little and little, to a state of bewilderment and blind credulity, prior to the inauguration of a series of wonders, which, were the age seeing them incredulous, might be held by most men as jugglery. What are these wonders?

"And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. And he doth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth, in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast; which had the wound by a sword, and did live. And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred threescore and six." Rev. 13: 11-18.

"And I saw three unclean spirits, like frogs, come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."

Here, then, is the final plot—so far as this dispensation is concerned—wide-spread and evidently in progress, to divert our faith from Christ to Antichrist, because of the astounding miracles he, when manifested, will work. The Davenports did their marvels in the dark; the darkness of credulity—the gloomy shadow of the Prince of darkness—is settling down upon the age, and when it shall have settled, then the Revelation wonders.

The great accusation, when the Accuser of the brethren shall appear against us, will be that our faith, while on earth, did not remain true to Christ our Savior. Oh! God, for Christ's sake, who also prayed it, we pray "not that thou shouldst take us out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep us from the evil. And thou wilt, for it is written: "The accuser of the brethren shall be cast down." Thou wilt keep thine elect ones true to their glorious faith to "the Lord their righteousness," even though "delivered up to be afflicted and killed, and hated by all nations for his name's sake." Oh! that the number of the elect may be speedily completed, that the kingdom may soon come, and the Lord's will be done on earth, as it is in heaven.

These, indeed, wear the appearance of the last times, for the predicted signs are startling with us. Men and brethren, be in haste, while yet there is time, to come over among the Lord's people! For it is written of these times, that "iniquity shall abound," and "the love of many shall wax cold; but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Fearful days are at hand, "but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." (Matt. 24: 22.) Thank God for that! and thank God, also, for the revelation to us that "immediately after the tribulation of those days, shall appear the sign of the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory," who shall be able to present his saints "faultless before the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy."

Alas, that so many are deceived! Alas, that men of mark among us believe in these so-called spirit manifestations (and they may be) of to-day, as of heaven! Alas, that they approach the subject, as we hear some of them do, reverently, superstitiously regarding it as holy ground! Looking at the divine predictions, and especially at those above quoted, is it not next to certain that these things are of Satan—the preparations, for the last great deceptions, so far as this age is concerned, of the great deceiver?—The Rainbow.

WORDS.—Words are little things, but they strike hard. We wield them so easily that we forget their hidden power. Fitly spoken, they fall like the sunshine, the dew, and drizzling rain; but when unfitly, like the frost, the hail, and the desolate tempest.

"CONFESSION AND APPEAL."

To the Council by whom Elder George Champlin was silenced from the ministry of Christ, to the waiting saints scattered abroad, and to all whom it may concern; Greeting.

We are happy to inform you that at a late session of our R. I. and E. Conn. Conference, Bro. Geo. Champlin personally appeared, and in the spirit of penitence and humility sought that some steps might be taken for his restoration to fellowship and to usefulness again. Seven preachers were chosen to consider his case, and its final disposal was left to them. These met at an appointed time, and the Lord was with them. Bro. Champlin appeared and made in substance the following Confession and Appeal:—

"My burden is greater than I can bear. Placed for three years under the condemnation and censure of a council chosen in part by myself, and in part by the church in Vernon, Vt., to investigate and decide upon certain charges preferred against me, and of late disfellowship for the same account by your Conference, of which I was until then a member, and with which I have enjoyed precious seasons in the past; silenced thus from the ministry of Christ, I can no longer hold my peace.

"I wish to confess, first of all, that I was justly condemned by the council at Vernon, they having ample evidence before them upon which to convict me; and I regret that I did not then make this confession, that I might have ere this regained my former standing, made some effort to rescue men from Satan's power who has so well nigh ruined me, and saved myself many days of darkness, bitterness and sorrow. But instead of doing this I resisted the decision of the council, and have allowed myself to feel and speak unkindly in reference to them all, which I do hereby recall, and for which I am sorry and do now ask forgiveness.

"And now, brethren, I throw myself upon you for mercy. I have been comparatively silent for three years, during which I have worked diligently with my hands, attending to my own business, and have endeavored to walk uprightly, only as I have felt and spoken unkindly towards my accusers.

"I ask you to forgive and pardon all my past offences, and to receive me again to your fellowship. I promise you by the grace of God that I will hereafter spare the cause of Christ further reproach from disorderly conduct on my part, but will with you endeavor to honor and glorify our Lord and Master Jesus Christ, and gain eternal rest in the soon coming kingdom."

Geo. Champlin, by his amanuensis.

In view of the above confession and appeal, when we considered the brokenness of spirit so often manifested of late by Bro. Champlin in reference to his fall; when we considered the long period of chastisement already endorsed, and his upright life during this time; when we considered the demand for his labors from those who know him best; and considered the temptations to which one isolated as he has been must be exposed, and the fresh exposure to temptation which must inevitably follow the rejection of his plea for pardon; we could not before God deny his request, but did heartily and unanimously forgive him, and gave him the right hand of fellowship amid much weeping, and the rich blessing of God rested upon every heart, and we went our several ways in peace.

Brethren scattered abroad, this same appeal is made to you; and I am requested to place it before you in the Crisis, that you all may as freely forgive as we have done, and give to Bro. C. that encouragement which a crushed spirit, trying to rise, so much needs.

Respectfully and affectionately submitted, in behalf of the R. I. and E. Ct. Conference.

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

THE PATH OF DUTY.

IN THE PATH OF DUTY IS SAFETY.

Wherever duty calls us,
  'Tis always safe to go;
Unseen an angel guards us,
  And disarms every foe.

In the path of duty is perfect security and safety. It is a straight and narrow path, in which none need miss their way, for it is illuminated by light from heaven, and the footprints of the Son of God are indelibly stamped on its surface. It is the path which unites this present mortal and fleeting life with an immortal and unchanging one in the everlasting kingdom of God. Its heaven-lit way is trod only by those whose affections have been taken from the changing and transient pleasures of the present, and centered around the unchanging and eternal. It is not a path which the natural heart, unrenewed by divine grace, and not irradiated by light from heaven, would choose in which to walk. We, by the natural vision, cannot see the glory which even in this life encircles the cross-bearing and self-denying traveler in the path of duty.

The natural heart is a stranger to the sweet peace which comes welling up from the depths of the heart of the child of God, diffusing itself through the frame, is mirrored in the countenance, and is a source of constant and permanent happiness. In the hour of sorrow and affliction, calmly the waves of peace roll on with more than wonted power, soothing the troubled heart, and disseminating a holy influence around. Neither can it comprehend the power of that love which the most malignant hatred and abusive usage cannot quench. It permeates every fibre of the frame, diffuses sunshine on all around; draws out the affections towards all, irrespective of caste or condition, awakens our sympathies, and makes the joys and sorrows of others as our own. Neither can the natural eye pierce through the dark vail which death throws between this and the future life; but by the eye of faith we look beyond the dark valley of death, and anticipate a joyful waking in the likeness of Jesus, and an immortal life of unalloyed bliss beyond the reach of sorrow and the contaminating touch of sin.

I do not wish to convey the idea, which is too often entertained, that the traveler in the path of duty meets, or should meet, with no trials, and encounters no difficulties. Hear the words of him who was made perfect through suffering, though not as we are to be; for he is the Son of God, pure and holy, unpolluted by sin. "Yet it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, but he shall receive a hundred fold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life." And again, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me, cannot be my disciple." We expect to meet with trials and temptations, but God is faithful, who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous runneth into it and is safe." Confidingly we lean on the arm of Him who is able to save, and fear no evil. We dread not the future, while we can claim the promises of God as ours. He has said, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." O how sweet these words sound in our ears. His grace has been sufficient in the past; it will be in the future. He has kept us in the past, and will in the future, if we trust him. With Paul, we can say, "The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." We see beyond the sorrow, pain, and toil of this present life, an immortal life for us, if faithful.

How often my mind reverts to the glories that cluster around it, and with the Psalmist I can say, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Yes, when my eyes behold the King in his beauty, and I am permitted to dwell in his presence, then will my happiness be complete. May our hopes be fully realized ere long, and we be gathered with all the redeemed on the evergreen shore. Your sister looking for Jesus.

Somers, Ct. Lulie J. Adams.

For the World's Crisis

A DIALOGUE.

B. Good evening, friend A.

A. Good evening, Miss B. It is a long time since we have met; do come in and be seated, and tell me how you are getting along; it is a long time since we have had a good talk together.

B. Yes, it is, but I cannot stay long this time. I only called in to see you on a little business. I came in to see if I could get you to join the Good Templars.

A. Me join the Good Templars! I cannot see any use in that, as I use no liquors of any kind, either for medicine or for any other purpose.

B. Well, your influence will be all the better, you know.

A. My influence! I thought if a person was a christian, that covered everything.

B. I know it does, but I think this society a good thing for the young folks.

A. No doubt you do, but I do not move with the crowd, neither do I believe in secret societies.

B. Pray, what is there wrong in this society, of which more than half its members are professors of religion, and ministers join too?

A. Much in every way, I think. First, they require you to take an oath. It is wrong to swear; then many of you break it; that is wrong. Then you cannot go to the prayer-meeting, because that night you must meet with the lodge; then once in so long a time you have oyster suppers, and dance and play cards, some of you until daylight.

B. Well, we only play for fun and amusement, as a great many of the church did before the Good Templars were formed; and I am sure I can see no harm in dancing.

A. I suppose not. Do you know I think the reason there are no revivals in the churches is because the members do not have time to attend to it?

B. Yes, I know it takes up a great deal of our time, but then you know it is for a good purpose.

A. Is it better than saving souls for the coming of Christ?

B. Well, one of your members, who is looking for the Lord, belongs to our lodge. He is the best in the exhibition you ever saw. he is so funny. He keeps us all laughing. He is to take a great part in our next exhibition, which is to be a grand affair. I do wish you would come, if you will not join us. I cannot see the need of being so particular about everything.

A. No, I cannot go to such places.

B. I must go; I have already stayed too long.

A. Call again when you are not in such a hurry, and we will talk more upon that subject.

B. Thank you, I will. Good night.

A. Good night. N. D. Babcock.

BENEVOLENCE.

Live to give. To give what? What you can. Give first unto God the supreme love, homage, and service of your hearts and lives. Your next gift should be to your neighbor love as to yourself. Love that "worketh no ill," but according to the apostle's injunction, doeth "good unto all men" as it hath opportunity.

"Do good, do good, there's ever a way,
  A way where there's ever a will;
Don't wait till to-morrow, but do it to-day,
  And to-day when the morrow comes still."

Though you may not have money to confer, benevolence relinquishes not her claim. With the apostle you can say, "silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." Surely that gift was to the lame man far more valuable than wealth. Although we impart no miraculous gift, we may confer one that is invaluable. Do you not remember the words of Solomon—"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." Can you not give a good name to another by refraining from its destruction? Would not a tongue-bridle be a good gift to that unruly member resulting in the desirable gift to more peace to yourself and others? Can you not give a "severe letting alone" to that reproach against your neighbor which has come to your ears, you having heard but one side of the story, and not having knowledge that it is true. Let us not forget that upon backbiting with the tongue and taking up a reproach against our neighbor rests the interdict of heaven.

"Who steals my purse steals trash, 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he who filches from me my good name, robs
Me of that which not enriches him, and makes Me poor indeed."

Loving favor, which surpasses silver and gold in value, bestows most precious gifts of mercy, kindness, patience, forbearance, consideration, and the tear of sympathy for the weeping, grief-tossed stricken one. Give a good example to the wayward, words of counsel and instruction to the ignorant and inexperienced, of encouragement to the disheartened, and of warning to the sinful. Give words fitly spoken to be treasured like pearls by those that hear.

"Speak gently to the erring; know
  They must have toiled in vain,
Perchance unkindness made them so;
  O win them back again.
Speak gently, 'tis a little thing
  Dropped in the heart's deep well;
The good, the joy which it may bring,
  Eternity shall tell."

There are gifts worthy of a truly benevolent heart. In acting upon this principle we have the beneficent Creator as our great exemplar. In the gift of our Savior is manifested superlative benevolence by both the Father and Son. Said Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The golden rule is a guage for the practice of benevolence. Do unto others as you would have others do unto you. This rule has a double action. As the echo returns faithfully the sound given, be it harsh or kind, so as you do unto others will they naturally do unto you. "Give and it shall be given unto you . . for with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6: 38. Thus said the Savior.

He who give himself and all that he has to Christ, receives in return Christ and all that he will have when he shall forever reign in earth made new. "Joint heirs with Christ" "to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." To him who loveth all the promise is "a hundred fold now in this present time . . . with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life." The words of the poet illustrate the reverse effect of a good gift—its rebound into our own bosoms. "The quality of mercy is not strained. It is twice blessed. It blesses him that gives and him that takes."

We commend the foregoing with an additional demand of those possessing money to bestow, that they impart as the Lord hath prospered them. Hear the words of the inspired apostle,—"Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good; that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." 1 Tim. 6: 17, 19.

Let us return to the bounteous dispenser of every good and "perfect gift" the praise due unto his holy name, and render the gratitude of our hearts in response to his "loving kindness and tender mercies" toward us, forgetting not "all his benefits." How do these gifts unto God cause happiness to spring up and sweetly gladden our own souls. Let us ask according to the gracious promise recorded in Phil. 4: 19,—"But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus," that receiving we may have to impart to others. May the constant supply of blessings we receive in this life be in the world to come crowned with enduring glory where the waves of bliss unceasing flow, to forever delight the ransomed saints, jewels of the eternal One.

Give words of cheer to the distressed,
  Light up their path so drear,
'T will comfort you and sweeten rest
  To dry another's tear.

To sweeten life for others
  Will surely bless your own;
God's love exceeds a mother's,
  Round all mankind 'tis thrown.

We should love one another,
  And do what good we can,
Like Christ, our Elder Brother,
  Unto our fellow man.

Then when this life is ended,
  Among the pure and blest,
In love together blended,
  With Jesus we shall rest.

LONG SERMONS.

Keep it before the people,—not the long sermons, but the disapproval of them; and if they are abated, there must be a public sentiment created in relation to this subject. And while we are upon it, we may as well include long prayers and exhortations, for they are about as injurious, and as great a hindrance to the prosperity of religion as long sermons.

According to the statistics of the Congregational denomination, there are seven hundred vacant pulpits in the New England States; and if we should visit the churches where these are located, we should undoubtedly find that the sermons and prayers and exhortations have been long and cold and dead; and there is nothing attractive to the young or old in these meetings, and the revival spirit has died out. To speak plain upon this subject, some of these churches have been preached and prayed out of existence, and they, perhaps, wonder why it is so.

Who ever heard of a church having a revival, or much spiritual prosperity, where these customs prevail. I heard of a preacher who wanted to have a revival, and, said he, "I am going to preach it up," or into existence; and he commenced and preached long and loud, and followed it up for weeks, but the revival did not commence; finally he became so hoarse that he could not preach any longer, and then the church took hold of the work, and a revival followed.

I know of a church, of which I was once a member, where the Lord began to pour out his Spirit, and there was considerable interest prevalent. "Now," said they, "we must have some help"; and they sent off and got some preacher, and he preached and preached until the church went to sleep again; and when he got through there was not so much interest in the cause as when he commenced, and not a single convert. The preacher did all the work, and the church sat and looked on. When will preachers and church members learn wisdom in this matter?

PRAYER IN THE NAME OF JESUS.

O, since I have read those mighty words, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he will give it you," the veil has withdrawn itself from before me. I stand before them in amazement, as before an open sanctuary, and scarcely know how to bear myself, for astonishment and rapture, at the abundance of magnificent and blessed thoughts I see contained therein. I behold, as it were, a throne of God erected upon this saying. Gleaming lightnings shoot forth therein on all sides, only to illume to my view the holy of holies in the temple of christianity. The most blessed articles of the New Testament stand there grouped around it in unveiled splendors, like sweet messengers of peace; and in its center appears the whole glory of the gospel, condensed into one wonder-teeming, majestically refulgent, burning point.

O how these mighty words chastise us! How disgraced do we stand before them! For if the prayer in the name of Jesus is the ship that is to carry us to the opposite shore, where all that is desirable is to be obtained, it is evident that there must be among us some lack of people who know how to sail with this bark. The condition in which we are proves it; otherwise things would have a different appearance in the midst of us. Heaven would not remain so little known and enjoyed. Spiritual barrenness would soon vanish. The church would flourish like the lily, and gift upon gift would be showered down upon us from on high. Our weakness judges and condemns us. We know not how to make use of the key which has been given to us; and what Jesus said to his disciples may also be applied to ourselves—"Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name."—Krummacher.

Too much Government.—It is best that children should not be too strongly governed. It is the same in families as with nations. Too much government defeats the object we wish to accomplish. It is the duty of parents to be what they desire their children to be. A mother's example should be her daughter's constant guide. It is unwise to observe too closely slight faults. How few there are that can bear rigid cross-examination. There is nothing a mother should so much covet and so much prize as the unreserved confidence of her daughter. But to gain and retain this confidence, we must live the life we profess. Nothing does a child more harm, nothing can impart to a mother greater grief, than the loss of this touching and tender relation which brings the daughter to the mother in confession of her error, or which would prevent her return, even upon a repetition of her fault, with the same hope of counsel and forgiveness which encouraged her first appeal. A child should never be made to suffer the agony of a mother's final condemnation. Reconciliation should never be impossible.—Mrs. N. P. Banks.

How to be able to give.—"A few days ago," says Dr. Schwartz, editor of the "Scattered Nation," and founder of a Christian Jewish Home, "I received a letter, and on the inside of the envelope, which contained six penny stamps, and nothing else, these words were written: Fasted a meal to give a meal. I know not who sent this touching gift, and it matters little whether I know it or not; it is known to Christ. The gift is appreciated by Him who saw the widow throw into the treasury the two mites, and called unto him his disciples, and said unto them, 'Verily I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than all they which have cast into the treasury, for all they did cast in of their abundance, but she of her want did cast in all she had, even all her living.'"

A STORY FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

THE LITTLE MISSIONARY.

I want to tell you a story about a little girl who was taken captive many hundred years ago—not by the Indians, as you sometimes read in history, although it was during a cruel war. I suppose most of you, children, go on, day after day, without remembering how really delightful it is to have a pleasant home, parents, and brothers, and sisters. Think of the dear mother who is first to greet your waking eyes in the morning, who thinks of you all day; gets your breakfast, and dinner, and supper; keeps your clothes in nicest order; attends to all your little wants and ills; tucks you in your tiny bed at night, and kisses down the sleepy lids, shutting the world out from her darling's sight. What if she were gone? Maybe some of you know a poor, motherless child among your playmates. How you all pity her!

This little girl must have had a very happy home. She lived in Asia, which seems a great way off—does n't it? She was a Jewish maiden, and this event happened long before our Savior had come. But all the children then were taught to worship God and to believe in him; and I think she must have had a good deal of faith, and not only that, but remembered what she was taught, many things about the holy prophets; Moses, who had led their nation through the sea; Joshua, at whose word the sun stood still and the moon stayed its course until the people of God vanquished their enemies; and Elijah, who had called down fire from heaven; of prophets still, in Israel, at whose bidding the dead were restored to life, the lepers healed, and the sick eased of their torments.

But a change came to this peaceful life. The Syrians, a great and powerful nation, made war upon the people of Israel and carried away many captives; among them this little girl. Father and mother had been slain, the bright, beautiful home destroyed, and she made a prisoner.

That was not all. The Syrians were idolaters; they had put up a senseless image in a costly temple, and made vain prayers to it. Do you suppose the little maid remembered her own God in this strange land?

The whole course of her life was changed. She must have been very sweet and winsome, for she was taken to a palace to wait upon a grand lady. But there was no fond mother to listen to her prayers or to give her a tender good-night kiss. When her work was done, she crept away to her room and wept over the past, still so dear to her. Yet all her duties were performed cheerfully. Her mistress was kind and pleasant; and generally, when any one is good to you, you try to do just what she wishes. The little maid did, at least. Her mistress must have found her trustworthy, or she would not have listened to her afterward. And I dare say she tried to persuade the maiden to worship her idols.

I believe this girl is the first missionary on record. The Jews, you know, were not told to go into the world and preach the gospel to every creature. But she held fast to her faith, and, when the right moment came, confessed it without wavering, and told others how all-powerful was the God she worshiped. They might have thrown her into prison, or sold her to some cruel master; but she did not think of this. Do you believe we would all have as much courage?

In this palace, where everything was so lovely, where the mistress was sweet and gracious, the master kind, the servants well treated, and abundance everywhere, you fancy they must all have been happy. But there was one black shadow—Naaman, the ruler, a great and honorable man, high in favor with the king, and admired for his courage, was a leper. He was afflicted with a terrible and incurable disease that covered his whole body, just as if some one should have the small-pox all the time. In the midst of his triumphs, how sad and miserable he must have been!

And Naaman's wife, loving her husband dearly, doubtless bewailed this sad fact with many tears. Among the Jews, to be a leper was to become an outcast at once. I suppose Naaman and his wife prayed to their idols and offered sacrifices, as was the custom with the heathen nations, but still he remained afflicted. When this little captive maid saw her mistress so distressed, she began to think what she could do for her. It is very natural to try to please people who have been kind to us. There were many acts by which she could show her gratitude, and she, doubtless, tried them all, and yet her mistress remained sad. When everything failed, she said:

"O my dear mistress! why do you weep and refuse to be comforted?"

"How can I be comforted when my husband is a leper?"

Then the little maid's courage and faith were put to the test. Maybe she wondered if any evil would befall her for the confession, whether her God would be laughed at and her belief treated with scorn; but that did not deter her. She spoke out so boldly and bravely, that I think we must all love her:

"Would God, my lord, were with the prophet that is in Samaria, for he would recover him of his leprosy!"

You see she didn't say, "perhaps he would," or that he might. She knew that her God was all-powerful, and that Elisha was his prophet. And although God had allowed her to fall into the hands of her enemies, still she trusted him, and wanted to bear testimony for him; and this is why I called her a missionary. In that strange land she proclaimed the power of God. She was doing her duty everywhere, you see.

If she had been an untruthful, careless child, no one would have paid any attention to her; but some one went in and told Naaman. That shows you the estimation in which she was held. And, what seems most wonderful, Naaman went to the prophet, taking her simple word, and was healed. From that time he began to worship the true God.

It might have ended very differently. If the little maid had been thrust in prison for her faith—for even children have been persecuted for their religion—or sent out of her mistress's sight with contempt, it would have been hard to bear; but she told the truth in the face of all these difficulties, and God blessed her. Probably she was never restored to her native land; but she knew God was watching over her everywhere, and she took this blessing to her master as her reward.

She did not feel afraid to bear witness for the truth. Sometimes, you know, when the truth seems hard to tell, little girls, and little boys, too, slip over it without exactly uttering a falsehood, but allowing one to be believed. And though at Sunday-school we all sing of Jesus, and confess our faith in him, how many do it elsewhere?

I suppose you all have an idea that, in order to be a missionary, one must go hundreds of miles away, and devote one's self entirely to the work. But this little girl performed her daily duties so scrupulously that her life spoke for her. Then her faith was so strong that those who listened believed.

Is there no truth you can tell for the Savior's sake?—no little act to playmates or friends that will bear witness for your love? We never do it when we are cross, or fretful, or disobliging. She might have said: "My master, Naaman, is a heathen; it does n't make any difference whether he is healed or not. If it was one of my own people, I would tell him of the prophet." And so you see she would have lost a noble opportunity of bearing witness. The Savior, you know, was ready to do good to everybody; and I think the captive maid had some of his spirit.

Perhaps you believe the good you can do is not worth attempting, because it will be so small. You cannot heal any one of disease, or convert him, but you can show a tender, loving spirit. You can pity the poor and afflicted; you can be kind to one another; and when the time comes, you can bear witness for Christ's sake.

I love to think of this little girl, with her true missionary spirit and her unwavering faith. How glad she must have felt, and how her mistress must have rejoiced! And though there is no further account of her, we know she still believed, and still did her duty in the path of life to which God had called her. And that is all he asks of us. Dear children, how many will try to do it?—A. M. Douglas.

VERDICT OF A JURY OF BOYS.

When Dr. Nathaniel Prentice taught a public school in Roxbury, he was very much a favorite; but his patience at times would get very much exhausted by the infractions of the school rules by the scholars. On one occasion, in rather a wrathy way, he threatened to punish with six blows of a heavy ferule the first boy detected in whispering, and appointed some as detectives. Shortly after one of the detectives shouted, "Master, John Zigler is whispering"

John was called up, and asked if it was a fact. John, by the way, was a favorite both with his teacher and schoolmates.

"Yes," answered John, "I was not aware what I was about. I was intent on working out a sum, and requested the boy who sat next to me to hand me an arithmetic that contained the rule which I wished to see."

The Doctor regretted his hasty threat, but told John he could not suffer him to whisper or escape the punishment; and continued: "I wish I could avoid it, but cannot without a forfeiture of my word. I will," he continued, "leave it to any three scholars you may choose, to say whether or not I omit the punishment."

John said he would agree to that, and immediately called out three of the boys. The doctor told them to return a verdict, which they soon did, after consultation, as follows:

"The master's word must be kept inviolate. John must receive the threatened six blows of the ferule; but it must be inflicted on voluntary proxies; and we the arbitrators will share the punishment by receiving each of us two of the blows."

John who had listened to the verdict, stepped up to the doctor, and with outstretched hand, exclaimed: "Master, here is my hand; they shan't be struck a blow! I will receive the punishment."

The Doctor, under pretence of wiping his face, shielded his eyes, and telling the boys to go to their seats, said he would think of it to his dying day; but the punishment was never inflicted.

WHEN DEATH'S PRISONERS SHALL BE FREE.

Wandering where the long grass waves,
Gazing on those silent graves,
Swelling like the billowy sea;
Thinking of that triumph hour,
When grim death shall lose his power,
And his prisoners shall be free.

When the blackness gathers o'er us,
And the way grows dim before us,
And the path we scarce can see;
Think we of the joys to greet us,
Of the loved ones yet to meet us,
When death's prisoners shall be free.

What though earth be old and dreary,
Though her path be worn and weary?
A new earth we soon shall see;
Filled with never ending pleasures,
There we'll meet with our lost treasures,
When death's prisoners shall be free.

When this weary life is ending,
And the Savior is descending,
When time shall no longer be;
'Mid the sounds and sights appalling,
We shall hear loved voices calling,
When death's prisoners shall be free.

Earthly perils gather round us,
But no terrors can confound us;
Well we know it all must be,
Ere the trumpet loudly thunders,
Vanguard of the day of wonders,
When death's prisoners shall be free.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.—No. 3.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS YET FUTURE.

I. Nebuchadnezzar once had a dream, by which he was greatly troubled, and in which he beheld standing before him a great image, whose brightness was excellent, and whose form was terrible. The image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay. He beheld until a stone, cut out without hands, smote the image upon his feet of iron and clay, and broke them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them; and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth. See Dan. 2: 31–35.

In this dream, according to Daniel's interpretation, the image and the stone represent FIVE UNIVERSAL KINGDOMS. The first section of the image, the head of gold, represents Babylon. "Thou [Nebuchadnezzar] art this head of gold." Dan. 2: 38. That Nebuchadnezzar's was a literal and universal kingdom, is evident from the following language: "The God of heaven hath given thee [Nebuchadnezzer] a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory; and wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all." Dan. 2: 37, 38. Babylon gained its supremacy, if I mistake not, B. C. 681.

The second section of the image, the breast and arms of silver, represents the kingdom of the Medians and Persians, which succeeded Babylon. Proof: "In that night was Belshazzar, the king of the Chaldeans, slain, and Darius, the Median, took the kingdom." Dan. 5: 30, 31.

With Belshazzar fell the Babylonian Empire, and Darius, the Median, became its ruler for a short space, when Cyrus succeeded him. Thus it is clear that Medo-Persia succeeded Babylon. But was Medo-Persia a universal kingdom? Let the Bible answer. Turn to Ezra 1: 1, 2;—"The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying, Thus saith Cyrus, king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth." Hence, it is plain that Medo-Persia was the second universal kingdom.

The third section of the image, the section of brass, represents Grecia, which arose upon the ruins of the Medo-Persian empire. Of this kingdom it was declared that it should "bear rule over all the earth."—Dan. 2: 39. This language shows that the kingdom of Grecia was to be universal; and the rapid conquests of the "brazen-coated Greeks," under the leadership of Alexander the Great, show how literally it has been fulfilled.

We now pass to the fourth section of the image, which represents Rome. This kingdom is represented under various phases. It reached its supremacy, or the iron state, about thirty years before Christ. From the iron state, it passes into that state represented by the toes of the great image. This Daniel explains as follows: "Whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided." Dan. 2: 41. According to Daniel's explanation, Rome must be divided; and it is a historical fact that Rome was divided into kingdoms corresponding to the ten toes of the great image, during the fifth century. Let this fact be remembered, as we shall soon have occasion to use it in our argument.

I now invite attention to the prophet's language in Dan. 2: 44;—"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces, and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." "In the days of these kings." What kings? These is a plural adjective, and limits a plural noun. Hence more than one king must exist when God sets up his kingdom. This fact for ever refutes the position that "the kingdom of God was formally set up on the day of Pentecost"; for, at that time, Rome was a universal kingdom, and but one universal king can reign at a time.

Again, the stone is to smite the image upon his FEET; and we have seen that Rome did not exist in the state represented by the feet and toes until the fifth century; and, as she could not be smitten until she reached that state, it is certain that the kingdom was not set up on the day of Pentecost. To-day, Rome exists in her divided state; but when the "stone" smites the image upon the feet of iron and clay, it is to break them in pieces. Yea, the kingdom of God is to "consume all these kingdoms," so they can exist no longer.

We have now traced the prophetic history of Rome down to her undivided state; and, in doing this, we have traveled down the stream of time into the fifth century to find the ten kingdoms represented by the ten toes of the great image. We have found that the kingdom of God is to "break to pieces and consume all these kingdoms"; and we have also found that Rome still exists in her divided state.

If, therefore, the kingdom of God is to break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and Rome still exists in her divided state, the kingdom of God is yet future.

II. In Dan. 7: 1–14, we have another chain of symbols representing the kingdoms of earth until they are overthrown by the kingdom of God. Daniel beholds four beasts coming up from the sea, diverse one from another. The first was like a lion, having eagles' wings. The second was like a bear, having in its mouth three ribs. The third was like a leopard, and it had upon its back four wings of a fowl; and it had four heads. The fourth beast was dreadful and terrible, and exceedingly strong; and it had great iron teeth. This beast devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with its feet. It was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns. Daniel considered the horns, and he beheld coming up among them another little horn, before whom three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots; and he beheld in this horn eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things. Daniel gazed upon this vision until the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit; until one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and received dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him.

From the vision, we turn to the explanation found in Dan. 7: 17–27. "These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever. Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast which was diverse from all the others; . . . and of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell, even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows. I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

Thus he said the fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall arise after them, and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand until a time, and times, and the dividing of time. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom, under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions [margin, rulers] shall serve and obey him."

From this interpretation, I gather the following conclusions:—

1. The four beasts represent four kingdoms.
2. The fourth beast represents the fourth kingdom, which is the Roman empire.
3. The ten horns represent the ten kingdoms that arise out of the Roman empire.
4. The horn that arises after the ten, being diverse from the first, represents Papal Rome, which is to "subdue three kings," and to "speak great words against the Most High."
5. The saints are to be given into the hands of this persecuting power, Papal Rome, for "a time and times and the dividing of time," which, in prophetic time, is 1260 years.
6. When the judgment sits, and they take away the dominion of Papal Rome to consume and destroy it unto the end, the kingdom is to be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.

According to history, this persecuting power began its bloody work of "wearing out the saints of the Most High," when the professed "successor of St. Peter" was legally constituted "head" of all the churches, and the "corrector of heretics," which took place A. D. 533. From 533, the 1260 years' supremacy of this "little horn" (Popery) brings us down to A. D. 1793, since which time the Pope has been losing his "dominion"; and he will continue to lose it "unto the end," when "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom." The kingdom of God is to consume the last vestige of Papal dominion. When the Lord comes, the power of the Pope will be at an end.

If, now, the kingdom of God is to consume the last vestige of Papal dominion, and a part of that dominion still exists, the kingdom is yet future.

For the World's Crisis.

WE MUST PRAY MORE.

One great cause of the declension of spirituality, among the professed people of God, is the neglect of prayer. The times in which we live are very perilous. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. The Savior well knew what would be the condition of things down here in these last moments of probation. He knew exactly what position the professed church would occupy,—that they would be "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God,"—that they would be "eating and drinking with the drunken," dreaming of "peace and safety," and saying in their hearts "My Lord delayeth his coming"; and hence he has been very careful to point out the dangers which his followers would be liable to fall into, and has forewarned and admonished them to be on their guard; to "watch and pray"; to have their "loins girded about" and their "lights burning," and they like men that "wait for their Lord."

The true church is not in darkness. Jesus knew also that notwithstanding the great mass of professors would be proud, haughty, carnal, and secure; the world unbelieving, careless, and desperately wicked; yet, there would be a few who would be watching, waiting . . his appearing; and, for their comfort and consolation, he has left these blessed, cheering, reviving, and encouraging words: "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh. And he spake to them a parable; Behold the fig-tree and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand; so likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

And now comes the caution and admonition; and what language could be more suitable and appropriate in view of our near proximity to that great day: "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares; for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

It is an undeniable fact that we are very near the coming of the Lord. Signs on every hand demonstrate it; and in view of this fact, ought not the professed people of God to pay more attention to the Savior's injunction, when he says, "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always," etc.? O how many there are who pretend even to be looking for the second coming of Christ, who, if that day should burst upon a guilty world now, would be taken by surprise, and be found utterly unprepared to meet it. O that men and women could see and be made to feel their danger; it seems to me that they would arise and trim their lamps, and be ready continually to meet the coming crisis. Why is it that so many are cold, lukewarm and indifferent concerning these great truths? Why is it that they are not aware of their own miserable condition? I contend that it is because they do not watch and pray. It strikes me with indescribable wonder that so little time should be employed, and so little energy expended, in prayer, even by those who are prompt to acknowledge its dignity as a privilege, and its efficacy as a means of obtaining good. It is very different now from what it was anciently. There are not many wrestling Jacobs now. We do not pray as he did. He wrestled until the breaking of the day. His prayer was wrestling, and it lasted all night. He would have the blessing. Do we put forth such power and exercise such faith in prayer as that? Is the repose of our nights interrupted by it? Is it because our wants are all supplied, that we are so feeble and brief in prayer? or, is it because God's bounty is exhausted? Are not we as poor and needy as creatures ever were? and is not God as rich and munificent as he ever was? His hand is not shortened, neither his ear heavy. Let us but think how small a portion of each successive day is spent in prayer. I wonder if any christian ever thought of it, without being so dissatisfied as to resolve that he would spend more time in prayer the next day. Just add together the minutes you daily occupy in supplication and the kindred exercises of devotion, scriptural reading, and meditation, and see to what it will amount. Will the sum total be one hour? What, less than an hour a day in devotion! not one twenty-fourth part of the time! And is this all which can be afforded? Can we find no more time than this to commune with God.

Let us see. How much time has business? Could not a little be saved from business for prayer? Are there not many who give an hour or two more to business every day than it absolutely requires? Then how much time has sleep for the refreshment of the body? I think considerable time might be redeemed from sleep and spent in prayer, with a great deal more profit to the whole man, than if it were given to repose. This is truly a sleepy age. A great many love to lie in bed, especially Sunday mornings, when they ought to be up reading their Bibles and praying. I think if they would rise early and repair to the throne of grace, their heads would be clearer, their bodies healthier, and their dispositions more kind and gentle. I have generally observed that when individuals lie in bed late in the morning, they are peevish, fretful, and disagreeable during most of the day. Some of God's ancient people used to arise in the night and pray, and sing praises. I do not think their health was impaired in consequence of it either. I do not believe the Psalmist suffered anything in the day for the hours of night he spent in communing with his own heart and with God. I do not believe that even "tired nature" had any reason to complain of that interruption of the repose due to her. I apprehend that David enjoyed as good health and was as vigorous through the day as we, although he rose at midnight to give thanks unto God, and "prevented the dawning of the morning" with his prayers. Such interruptions of sleep are no loss to the body.

I am sure, and I think no one can doubt, that much more time might be afforded for prayer than is actually given to it. Supposing we take none from business, and more from sleep; yet could not some be spared from the table, or from conversation, which is not always the most profitable? A great many spend more time in eating and drinking than is really necessary. This is a gluttonous age. People live in luxury, and fare sumptuously every day. Let us beware. "Take heed lest your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness."

Then a great deal of time is wasted in idle and foolish conversation, which might be spent in prayer to far greater advantage and profit. O how much vain disputing, and jesting, and joking is practised in these days. It is one of the greatest sins of the age. Many seem to forget that for "every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment"; and that Paul has said, "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice. And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Eph. 4: 29–32.

It seems to me to be useless for individuals to say that they cannot find time to pray more. They have only to look back on a day to see how much of it might have been spent in prayer and devotion, without interfering with anything which ought not to be interfered with. Seeing then that we can pray more, that time can be afforded for it, I am amazed that we do not pray more. If prayer was nothing but a duty, we ought to pray more. We do not pray enough to discharge the mere obligation of prayer. We are commanded to pray more than we do. Let us see: 1 Thess. 5: 17;—"Pray without ceasing." Eph. 6: 18;—"Praying with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." Luke 18: 1;—"And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray and not to faint." But prayer, while it is a duty, is rather to be viewed in the light of a privilege. What a favor that we poor, sinful mortals, may petition the eternal God, who made all things, and ask him for salvation and eternal life through Jesus Christ, with the confidence that we shall not ask in vain. He has promised to withhold "no good thing from them that walk uprightly." How strange it is that we no more value and exercise this privilege of prayer. It is astonishing that the sense of want, or the desire of happiness, does not carry us oftener to the throne of grace, and that we should ever require to be reminded of it by frequent exhortations. I wonder that we do not oftener go in unto the King, whose gracious sceptre is ever extended toward us. I wonder we have not more frequent and longer intercourse with our heavenly Father.

It is strange we do not pray more, when prayer is the easiest way of obtaining what we need. What is so easy as to ask for what we want? How could we receive blessings on cheaper terms? Surely it is easier than to labor, and less expensive than to buy. It may be hard for us to ask of man. To beg we may be ashamed; but no such feeling should keep us aloof from God. "He giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not." But prayer is not only the easiest way of obtaining good; it is the only way of obtaining the greatest of all good. There are some things we can get in this world by labor, or purchase, such as the subordinate necessaries of life; but the things we most need are given in answer to prayer. The "one thing needful" is a divine donation. We ask and receive it. God has promised to do great things for his people; to give them all needed grace here, and an eternal inheritance in the world to come; yet, for all these things we must ask, and we are taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come." O, ought we not to be encouraged to pray more? Do we seek a profitable employment? None is so profitable as prayer. No labor makes so large a return. If you have an unoccupied hour (and you have many, or might have, by redeeming the time), you cannot employ it in any way that shall tell so favorably on your interests, as by filling it up with petitions to God. Yet, when we have such an hour, how apt we are to spend it in unprofitable intercourse with our fellows, rather than in communion with God. How unwise we are. It is wonderful that we think so little of the preciousness of time, and talk so much, when "the talk of the lips tendeth only to penury"; and pray so little, when prayer "brings a quick return of blessings in variety." Is there anything attended by a purer pleasure than prayer? One who knew said, "It is good for me to draw near to God"; and again, "It is good to sing praises unto our God, for it is comely." All the exercises of devotion are as full of pleasure as they are abundant in profit. O how sweet it is to hold communion with God. What is so refreshing, when we are tired and weary with hard labor, and are perplexed and harassed with the trials of life?

But prayer is not only a means of getting good; it is such a means of doing good, that I wonder our benevolence does not lead us to pray more. We are commanded, "as we have opportunity," to do good to all men. Now prayer affords us the opportunity of being universal benefactors. Through God we can reach all men. If we have a friend in a distant country, that we cannot see nor hear from, we can take their case to God in prayer, and he can bless them wherever they are. We can help the perishing by presenting their case before God, and asking him to have pity and help them. Prayer moves the hand that made the world. If people would pray more and talk less, we should see a great deal more good done than we have ever seen; yet some, when they have difficulties and trials, take delight in telling it from one house to another; but they do not delight to take it to God in prayer.

We have much to pray for. The world lies in wickedness. Sinners are perishing around us. Can we not do good by praying for them?

One man told me that he knew of fifty persons who had become christians in answer to his prayers. O let us pray on, and not be discouraged. The church languishes. Few come to her solemn assemblies. Many have wandered away from the Lord, and are now groping in darkness. O let us pray that they may hear the Good Shepherd's voice, and return once more to the fold. Then we have relatives out of Christ—our father perhaps, or mother, or wife, or children. With such calls as these upon us, and so many urgent cases all around us, I wonder we do not pray more. What is done must be done quickly. Soon it will be too late for us to pray, and to beseech our friends to come to Christ. A voice like thunder from heaven will soon utter that thrilling declaration, "It is done"; and then he that is filthy will be filthy still, and he that is holy will be holy still.

O, then, if we would be found of our Judge in peace, without spot and blameless, and hear him say to us, "Well done"; let us give ourselves anew to the work, and labor more diligently, and pray more fervently than we ever have yet. If we pray more, I believe we shall do more,—more for God, more for others, more for ourselves. I believe when we pray most, we can accomplish most in little time. I am fully persuaded there is nothing lost by prayer. Let us endeavor to imitate those whose lives have been handed down to us through the ages past; those who did so much good in their day,—Paul, Peter, James, and John, who prayed without ceasing; also Fletcher, Wesley, Whitefield, Knox, Luther, and all those noble men who walked with God, and did so much good. Above all, let us follow Christ, the Captain of our salvation, who "was made perfect through sufferings." Christ used to go away to the mountain to pray to his Father, and he returned to the people full of faith and power. O let us follow his example. Let us pray more, and we shall sin less. Praying and sinning cannot go together. One will kill the other. May the Lord help us to pray more, that we may be dead indeed unto sin, and alive unto God, having our hearts' affections placed on things above, that "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear," we may "appear with him in glory."

J. W. Thomas.

THE GARMENT OF PRAISE.

Put it on: 1. Because it is right. Praise—the most fervent we can offer—is due the Infinite Benefactor. We have more blessings to be thankful for than evils to deplore. Count, and see if it is not so. Then pay what thou owest.

2. Beautiful is the garment of praise. The most exalted and lovely beings in the universe are thus arrayed—viz., all the angels and saints in glory. And praise is so comely for the upright in heart, that the best saints on earth count themselves in best array in a garment of praise.

3. Garments of praise wear well. The glorified in heaven have not worn out theirs in the thousands of years, or ages, they have been wearing them. And as God's mercies do not wear out, neither can the garment of praise among true saints.

4. The garment of praise encourages and leads to the putting on of every other kind of beautiful spiritual apparel. Devout praise to God elevates and animates all the affections—adds fresh beauty and loveliness to all the christian graces. The fervor of praise will give fervor to prayer, to zeal, to labor. The whole christian character rises in excellence with the growing fervor of praise to God.

5. Garments of praise give the saints the distinctive and marked character they are bound to have among men. The prayerless and the thankless can see, as they ought to see, this difference—are reproved by it; and great numbers have been thus themselves led to seek and know the value of prayer and praise.

6. Satan is baffled by your garment of praise. If he can effect it, you shall have the spirit of heaviness—be gloomy, morose, of sad and forbidding aspect; that thus you may cause religion to seem repulsive. Put on, therefore, and keep on, the shining garment of praise. You thus confound Satanic wiles, rightly represent true religion, and vindicate its honor as the best source of human happiness.

7. The garment of praise! put it on, for you are to be enrobed in such apparel forever. "And lo! a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations and kindred, and people and tongues, stood before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes and palms in their hands, and cried with a loud voice saying: 'Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb."—*Selected by S. PREACH THE TRUTH.

Fear ye not the face of clay,
Preach the truth;
It will spring up another day,
If you are faithful,
And the holy word obey.

What if scorning men oppose?
Preach the truth
To your friends, and to your foes;
If you are faithful,
These will yield as well as those.

With the message from the skies,
Preach the truth
To the foolish and the wise;
If you are faithful,
Vice will sink, and virtue rise.

If men hear, or men forbear,
Preach the truth;
Truth is never lost in air;
If you are faithful,
You a crown of life shall wear.

FEET WASHING.

That the rite of feet washing was observed in the days of the Savior's incarnation we learn from both sacred and profane history; but the evidence that proves this fact proves, with equal conclusiveness,

1. That it was not instituted by the Savior when, after instituting the Supper, he washed the feet of his disciples. That the rite preexisted is evident from Luke 7: 44, where he is reported to have reproved his host for not having extended to him this rite of hospitality—a rite which it was customary to extend to guests on similar occasions: "I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet." The same thing is proved by the language addressed by the Savior to his disciples after he had washed their feet: "If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet." John 13: 14.) There is no instance in the sacred record, or elsewhere, in which it is said one ought to do a thing that had not, on some previous occasion, been expressly commanded, or that one ought to observe a rite that had not been previously instituted, or a practice that had not previously existed. Religious rites are always instituted with an express command, as: "Go ye, therefore, teach all nations, baptizing them," etc. (Matt. 28: 19.) "Take eat. * * * * This do in remembrance of me." (1 Cor. 11: 24. The Savior, in reproving the ostentatious zeal displayed by the Pharisees in their observance of the ceremonial law, says of the tithing of mint, and anise, and cummin: "These ought ye to have done," etc. (Matt. 23: 23.) The language in this case is similar to that used by the Savior in reference to the washing of one another's feet. But if the language in the one case presupposes, as it evidently does, the pre-existence of the rite of tithing of mint, and anise, and cummin, so the language in the other case, being the same, or similar, must be construed as recognizing feet washing as a pre-existing rite. But if the latter was not instituted by the Savior—if previous to his advent it had been observed by the Jews—then is it a Jewish and not a Gospel institution. But I proceed to remark, further,

2. That there is no evidence furnished by either sacred or profane history to prove that feet-washing was ever observed in apostolic or ante-apostolic times as a religious rite. It was only observed as a rite of hospitality. As such it was highly commendable, and, indeed, necessary alike to the cleanliness and comfort of those in Eastern climes, who were shod only with sandals. A religious rite is one instituted to be observed in the worship of God. In the sacred Scriptures feet washing is never classed with religious rites. It is recorded of those who were converted on the day of Pentecost, they were "baptized," and "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine, and fellowship, and in breaking bread, and prayers." (Acts 3: 41, 42.) But never a word do we read about their observance of the rite of feet-washing. Paul, in his minute description of the Lord's Supper, does not make even the most distant allusion to this rite. Neither Matthew, Mark, nor Luke mention even the circumstance of the Savior's washing the feet of his disciples, though one of them [Luke,] who "had perfect understanding of all things," undertook to "set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us." His omission to refer to the rite of feet washing, after such declarations, affords strong presumptive evidence that the rite was not received as a religious one by the primitive disciples. It appears to me, tantamount to an impeachment of the historian's veracity, to affirm the contrary. There is but one other passage in the New Testament—in addition to the one in John—in which reference is made to feet washing. The Lord foreseeing that in process of time some would misconstrue the passage in the Gospel by John, and exalt feet washing into a religious rite, caused Paul (1 Tim. 5: 10) to class it among rites of hospitality: "If she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet," etc. The character of the rite is thus definitely fixed by divine inspiration; and they who add it to the religious rites instituted by the Savior are, therefore, left without excuse. There are more frequent references in the Scriptures to the anointing with oil than there are to feet washing. Indeed, in one passage we are expressly directed to "pray over him [the sick,] anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord." (Jas. 5: 14.) There is, therefore, fully as much Scriptural authority for adopting the Popish doctrine of holy unction as for adopting, as a religious ceremony, feet washing—that is to say, there is no authority for either.

3. Religious rites have ever been instituted to commemorate important events in the dispensation of God's providence and grace. Thus the Sabbath was instituted to commemorate the fact that, in six days God created the heavens and the earth, and all that therein are. The Passover commemorated the deliverance of the Jews out of Egypt—Pentecost, the giving of the law at Sinai—the Lord's Supper, the crucifixion of Christ—baptism, his burial and resurrection; belief in the resurrection being as essential to our salvation, as belief in his death on the cross. (See Rom. 6: 8, 9; 1 Cor. 15: 17, etc.) As to feet washing, no one has ever designated any particular event in the progress of our redemption that it was designed to commemorate.

The following are legitimate deductions from the facts to which reference has been made:

1. Feet washing is a rite of hospitality, and not a religious ceremony.

2. The proper place for its administration is within the domestic circle, and not in a public assembly.

3. The proper recipients of this rite are those whose feet have been defiled by their contact with earth, and not they whose feet have been previously cleansed by needful ablutions.

The following important lessons may be learned from what is recorded in connection with the Savior's washing the feet of his disciples:

1. One cannot serve God acceptably who neglects his duty to his fellowmen. It is required that "he who loveth God love his brother also," (John 4: 21; and love ever prompts us to promote the interests of those we love. By religiously observing the Lord's Supper, we evince our love of the Savior, and by washing one another's feet, when cleanliness and comfort require it, we show our fraternal regard for each other.

The Lord has linked, inseparably, our duty to God with our duty to our fellowmen. When the law was given at Sinai, our duty to God was recorded on one table of stone, and our duty to mankind on another. Each was required to be preserved with equal care, and to be taught to succeeding generations. When the Savior was asked which of the commandments was greatest, he replied by giving a summary of the commandments on each table: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matt. 22: 37–39.) And now, at his last interview with the twelve, he reminds them that he has, as ever heretofore, a merciful regard for the temporal as well as the spiritual interests of his disciples. If, therefore, they would secure his favor, they should evince their love for, and their fidelity to him, not only by commemorating his death and sufferings, but seeking to minister to each others' comfort and temporal welfare. The public celebration of the Supper would "show his death till he come," as well as evince their love to him; but their love would not be evinced by publicly washing each others' feet. It could only be evinced by acts of brotherly kindness, rendered from time to time, as their several necessities might require of them.

2. If we would be exalted, we must humble ourselves, not only at the feet of our Savior, but at the feet also of our brethren. There was need for this lesson to be taught, and taught repeatedly, and in a more impressive manner than it had been hitherto taught; for even the highly honored of the Lord—the chosen twelve—had contended with each other for the highest offices in the kingdom of Christ. It would appear from Luke 22: 24 that their contention for superiority was renewed, even at this, their last interview with their Lord and Savior. Alas,

"What strange rebellious wretches we,
And God as strangely kind.!"

3. In the performance of our duties to one another, we are to be like our Lord—"no respecter of persons." Our acts of kindness should be extended as readily and as cheerfully to the humble as to the exalted—to our inferiors, socially, as well as to our equals and superiors. The proud Pharisee, who was wont promptly to extend the rites of hospitality to the high and noble, scorned to extend one of them at least, to Jesus of Galilee, perhaps because he was the reputed son of a poor mechanic. The Savior had previously taught his disciples, verbally, that they should not conform to the world in such matters, and now teaches the same by his example. If he, their Lord and Master, washed their feet, they should not deem it beneath their dignity to wash each others' feet.

These are lessons which I conceive it was the design of the Savior to teach by washing the feet of his disciples. Happy the man who learns them and reduces them to practice. Unhappy he who mistakes them, and, instead of living them out in the daily intercourse of life, contents himself with occasionally assembling with his brethren and washing feet that need no cleansing—thereby neither promoting the comfort of the brethren nor reducing to practice the lessons taught by his Savior.

I will conclude this article by reminding the reader that positive institutions are invariably based upon positive commands, and never upon questionable inferences deduced from general instructions given; and that the curse that rests upon him who abstracts from the institutions of heaven, rests also upon him who adds thereto.—The Baptist.

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, July 29, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

THE CAMPMEETINGS.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting is appointed to commence Monday, Aug. 24th, but there will be a meeting held on the ground on Sunday, Aug. 23d, and arrangements will be made with various R. Roads for Tickets, good as soon as the 22d.

The Alton Bay Campmeeting commences Sunday, Aug. 30th. Full particulars in regard to the above meetings will be published in due time.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that tents can be hired in this city of James Martin & Son, No. 114 Commercial Street, nine and a half feet square, three and a half foot wall, with poles and all complete, for $4.00 for the time covering either of the above meetings. Also tents eleven and a half by twelve, four foot wall, for $6.00, and other sizes in proportion.

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

For the last four months there has been a remarkably quiet time in Europe. We have seen but very little news worth publishing. There have been some stirring rumors, but little or no action. Preparation for war still goes on upon a grand scale, and to all appearance the leading nations seem to be about ready for the conflict; but no one seems disposed to strike the first blow. All eyes are watching Napoleon to see what he intends to do; but he keeps his own counsel, and throws them all into perplexity. He talks one thing and does the opposite. At other times he says what he means. Like a frog, no one knows what will be his next move till he jumps. He is laying big plans, with a fair prospect of wonderful success.

Events have not come along as fast as we expected. To those who are longing to see Jesus, the closing panorama seems to unfold slowly; but we may expect to see the closing scene very soon. We have need of patience.

Let us do all the good we can before our Lord appears. If faithful, we may yet persuade some more to become christians. It is the earnest labor that accomplishes the work. If we can be instrumental in saving one (and who cannot,) it will pay for the labor of a life-time. Let us renew our efforts to save people, and we shall renew our own joys, and multiyly our peace.

A GOOD ADMISSION.

Although we are called infidels for believing as we do in relation to man in death, yet we feel very easy about the matter, because we feel sure that we are in harmony with the Bible; and that the Lord blesses us in proclaiming that man does not go to heaven when he dies, but is asleep in death, wholly unconscious, and will remain so till the resurrection of the dead at the second coming of Christ.

In Mr. Wesley's sermon on the rich man and Lazarus, he expresses himself as follows: "To say that souls go to heaven at death has no foundation in the oracles of God, neither did Christ go there at death."

We are told that the souls of believers go to Christ when they die. Christ is in heaven. Mr. Wesley truly says that souls do not "go to heaven at death." Then, according to Mr. Wesley, they do not go to Christ when they die. What shall we do when the Dr's disagree? Go to the Bible for information. That informs us that those who have died in Christ are asleep in death, and unconscious. Let us believe the Bible.

NAPOLEON ON THE LOOKOUT.

Probably there is no man, except the Pope, on the earth, so well posted in relation to what is going on in all parts of the world as Napoleon III; and it is probable that he is in advance of the Pope. The following is a sample of his cunning skill employed in securing his information:—

"The Italian Garrino says that Napoleon has spies at Washington, as well as in two other American cities and the European capitals, in the persons of 'ladies' of the demi-monde, whose fashionable establishments are maintained out of the Emperor's private purse."

LONG DISCOURSES.

We felt like rejoicing in the Lord when we read the following from Bro. Himes' journal in the Voice for July 21st. Now he is converted, we hope he will exhort others to repent. Bro. Himes will excuse this. We love to tell good news. Let him tell his own story, as follows:—

"It was so intensely warm that I spoke less than half an hour each time; but I brought out the truth with as much clearness and force as though I had spoken longer. I have erred in respect to long discourses in times past. I have crowded too much in one discourse, and failed to impress the truth as successfully as I might have done with a short, spirited, and clear exhibition of the truth. There may sometimes be good reasons for a long sermon; but this will seldom occur. The rule will be brevity. Pile in the truth, clear and strong, and when done sit down. Do not preach it over again, and tire the audience, and make them wish you to sit down, and resolve if they can get away they will never hear you again.

There are some preachers who preach the people away, and then complain of the want of hearers: others always have good audiences, because they always have something good to say, and they say it in the spirit of their Master, in a brief way, and send the people away longing for more. Long-winded preachers have no just reason to complain of small audiences. The wonder is that they have any. Why should people be required to do penance under the infliction of a long, tedious harangue, or a long, cold, logical discourse, that is altogether out of place, and interests no one so much as the speaker himself?

We have had some out to-day that seldom attend church; but said they, we like this style of preaching: short and to the point, and should like to attend on such preaching regularly."

WASHINGTON, D. C.

We learn that Bro. J. Bray, who was pastor of a Baptist church in Washington, D. C., but who has been rejected by a portion of the church for preaching the great truths of the Bible, that have been long buried beneath a pile of theological fables, is now earnestly at work, endeavoring to defend the word of the Lord, and to "feed the flock of God" in Washington.

Bro. H. S. Taylor has recently made a visit to Bro. Bray, and writes as follows:—

"BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say through the 'Crisis,' it has been my privilege, recently, to make a visit to Washington, where I met and became acquainted with Bro. Bray, who, through the blessing of the Lord, is doing a good work in that city. But, like all others who take a decided stand for truth, he has had to stem the tide of opposition and trial. Hitherto, however, the Lord has blessed and prospered his labors. He has quite a thriving interest at present, also a very interesting Sunday school of more than one hundred scholars, who are destitute of a good library, and need help in that way."

Bro. Taylor also sent us a letter from Bro. Bray, from which we make the following extract, hoping some of our readers may feel like giving a helping hand to aid Bro. Bray in keeping a shining light before the people in the Capital of the nation:

"With the close of 1867, we were necessitated to separate ourselves from a regular Orthodox Baptist church, in whose fellowship and communion we had lived and labored from two to three years. The Lord had been leading us into a more full and explicit declaration of the doctrine of the gospel which was not received by said church, as such, but was violently persecuted. Resigning our pastorate in November (1867), we commenced, on the Sabbath following the close of our labors there, to preach in another place, with very encouraging prospects. We also commenced to raise a Sabbath school. The Lord blessed us in all that we did. We now number over one hundred in our S. S., with a small library, and seventy-five copies of the 'Young Pilgrim.' Prayer meetings also were kept up at our private dwellings weekly. In April, we organized ourselves into a gospel church of eighteen members; since which time seven have been added to us by conversion and baptism; others also are feeling after the Lord. A silent but sure work of grace is progressing in our midst; but we find that a small house of worship (of some two hundred capacity) is become necessary to our prosperity. We meet in an upper room of the Odd Fellows' Hall, and pay at the rate of $200 a year for it, only having its use on Sabbath days.

We are all poor. May we not hope for aid and encouragement from abroad? Our appeal is only in the name of our Lord Jesus. We ask your liberal assistance, that together we may save souls from death, and prepare many for the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ and eternal life. Our utmost ability, as a church, is only $200 towards our fund for building the Lord a house in a district of this city, both of a large and growing population, where there is no place of public worship or Sabbath school, or any denomination at all; though the Roman Catholics are preparing at this date to build. Brethren, please come to our help. We only aim to raise $2500 for site, house and all. Your money given to this cause will bring you a blessed interest in the kingdom of God. Let us not ask in vain. The cause is not ours, but God's.

Your Bro. in the hope of the gospel of the speedy coming of our King. JOHN BRAY.

NOTES, QUERIES, & OBJECTIONS.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—I am still inquiring after truth, and think I am prepared to welcome it from any source. Having given you a little respite, allow me to resume my "notes, queries, and objections," for a few weeks to come. I promise to be very brief, and ask you to be as explicit as possible. I desire to consider the state of the dead; and will offer some Scripture objections to the views you entertain on that subject.

15. The Bible teaches that the soul might be in a state of conscious blessedness without the body. Paul says: "I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth;) such a one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, (whether in the body or out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth;) how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter." 2 Cor. 12: 2–4. How can you reconcile this passage with the doctrine that the soul has no conscious existence apart from the body?

A. A. PHELPS.

Rochester, N. Y., June 1868.

Dear Bro. Phelps: We are glad to have the renewed privilege of replying to your "queries" relative to the nature of man, and his condition in death. Since our last conversation, our own faith has grown stronger, if possible, in the belief that man has no immortality in this life. But to the question, relative to 2 Cor. 12: 2–4.

So far as that passage goes, we think it stands opposed to the idea that a soul actually left Paul while yet alive, and went away to visit paradise, which is not to be restored till Jesus comes back again. It will be observed there is not a word in the passage about the soul; hence it proves nothing pro or con about its separate existence after death. But it does say, "I knew a MAN in Christ," etc., "how that he was caught up,"—or "carried away," Wakefield; "suddenly conveyed," Thompson; "ravished into paradise," Wicklif; "rapt into paradise," Rheims,—"and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a MAN to utter; of such an one will I glory." It is a man, and not the soul of a man, who had this wonderful experience. If Paul meant that he had a soul that went off to paradise, while he remained in Asia, why did he not say so?

The first inquiry may be, Where is paradise? Is it in existence now? or is it yet to be prepared? Did Paul see it then in actual existence? or only in vision as it will be when the meek "shall inherit the earth"? The right answer must give light on the subject. Paradise will be in the new earth. Proof. In Rev. 2: 7, Jesus says, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." This passage proves that "the tree of life" is in paradise, but does not give us its location. If we can find where "the tree of life" is to be, we shall then know where paradise will be located. This matter is settled in the last two chapters of the Revelation. After describing the new heavens and earth, and the "great city" upon it, John is instructed to say: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life." Then there is paradise, because "the tree of life" is in its "midst." Now all is plain that paradise is to be upon the new earth, which is yet in the future; hence Paul was not actually taken into paradise, because it then had no existence.

We inquire secondly, what did Paul mean by his talk about paradise? We think the answer is easily given. He had a vision of the new earth and paradise, as did John upon the isle of Patmos. When in that vision, he could not tell whether he was carried away in person, as a man, bodily; or, whether he only saw it mentally, as John beheld the same things when in vision. Paul says it was a vision, and he speaks of himself when in that vision, as a third person, and says, "I knew a man in Christ about fourteen years ago, (whether in the body I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth) such an one caught up to the third heaven." And I knew such a man," etc. Ex-tos rendered out in 2 Cor. 12: 2, is properly rendered without in 1 Cor. 6: 18: "Every sin that a man doeth is without the body." Does it mean that he sins without any body, or that when the man sins he goes out of his body to do it? This would be as reasonable as to assume that Paul—the "man" that he "knew"—went to paradise literally without any body to see and hear, while his eyes and ears were left behind with the rest of the man.

Again it is said that death is caused by a separation of the soul from the body; but if Paul's soul went off and left him still alive, then, of course, the man can live without the soul, and the soul is not the man; but it was the man, and not the soul, that was carried away to see paradise.

In conclusion we would say that we cannot see that 2 Cor. 12: 2–4 affords the least proof "that the soul might be in a state of conscious blessedness without the body."

"SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED By the Testimony of the Bible and its Own Witnesses."

A Large 12 Mo., with Covers, by M. D. Wellcome.

This is a new and important pamphlet, prepared expressly to meet a want hitherto unsupplied. Among the many works written exposing the evils of SPIRITUALISM, none have been adapted for gratuitous distribution because of size and price. This work is given in a condensed form, and by having a very large edition published, can be furnished at a price to circulate extensively. Notwithstanding its brevity, it shows in a clear and concise manner the source of Spiritualism, its doctrines, corruptions, and unreliability, by the testimony of its own witnesses. Let it be scattered wherever Spiritualism is found.

Price 10 cents single copy; twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred copies. For sale at this office.

NEW TRACT.

FAITH ILLUSTRATED BY PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AND INCIDENTAL NARRATIONS. Contents: Personal Experience; The Lady who wanted the witness before she believed; An Incident; That is too simple; Extract from a Letter, copied from a Tract.

In neat covers, 28 pp. 8 cents postpaid; two copies for 10 cents. For sale at this office.

A NEW GERMAN TRACT.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Phila., has just issued another German tract, entitled—"Answer to the Charge of Heresy concerning the immortality of the soul, and the eternal torment of the wicked." The charge was made against Bro. H. Snyders, of Chicago, by the editor of a Cincinnati German Baptist paper. We preached in Bro. Snyders' meeting-house when in Chicago, and were delighted with his sweet, christian spirit. Would that there were more such heretics.

Those who wish for German tracts can get them of Bro. Reimer. Any who are interested in getting the truth before the Germans, would do well to send Bro. Reimer means to publish more. He is making noble sacrifices for his countrymen. He needs assistance. The German population is quite numerous in this country, especially in the western states. These great truths that are now shining forth from the word of the Lord are well adapted to reach their investigating minds, and break up their skepticism, and lead them to Christ. Who will aid in the work?

NAPOLEON'S PREPARATIONS.

Observing men in Europe are satisfied that Napoleon is preparing for some grand movement. They are perplexed to know what he is going to do first; but that he is about to take some important step there is little room to doubt. The latest news from Europe is expressed in the following language:—"There is a very general feeling in the social circles of France that Napoleon is preparing for some grand event."

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, on Wilbraham Camp-ground, Friday, August 23d, it was—Resolved, That $3000 be raised for the Tract Fund the ensuing year, to publish tracts for free distribution.

A. A. MISSION SOCIETY.

We would say to the friends of this mission—those who have responded to our calls from time to time, those who have not as yet paid in their subscription, and to all interested in the work of spreading the gospel of the kingdom, that we are all out of funds—not a dollar in the treasury; in fact, we have advanced money to keep the laborers in the field. Now, brethren and sisters, please lay this matter before the Lord, and see if he would not have you forward some of your means at once, that the good work may still go forward. GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

SPRINGFIELD N. A. CAMP-GROUND.

The brethren and sisters who desire to obtain lots in either the first or second circle on the new camp-ground, will please send in their names to the Chairman of the Building Committee, Bro. Hiram Munger, Chicopee Falls, Mass., by August 1st; after which the Committee will proceed to secure for the various applicants a lot, until the whole number shall be exhausted.

There are a plenty of good lots on either of the four streets of the camp-ground, and after August 15th, the first who may come will be served by the Committee, who will be on the ground to attend to matters. Those who may write the Committee, requesting an answer, will please enclose a stamp.

For the World's Crisis.

THE REASONS GIVEN.

As many are inquiring why I do not travel this season with the Maine Mission Tent, and also asking where it is working, and whether it can be had for meetings in various places, I take this means to inform all.

First. I declined traveling with the tent, hoping the committee would procure a more capable minister and manager, and one of more influence, who was better adapted to obtain the means to meet the expenses of the work, and to instruct the people.

Second. Because I wished our other ministers in Maine to gain an experience in the duties, cares and labors of managing and meeting the expenses of a tent enterprise.

Third. I had many other duties on my hands which needed my attention, and more calls to preach than I could supply.

The tent is in the care of Bro. James A. Libby, who is traveling with it as the way opens. His address is West Poland, Maine. All who want the tent should consult him. All who want to aid in this mission should do so at once. He needs the aid of those who love to carry the gospel of the kingdom to new fields. Pray for his success in the tent mission-work. I. C. WELLCOME.

WORDS NEEDED.—No. 2.

In my last, I hinted at some moral delinquencies deleterious to the life of the church, making room for more in this. "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase, so shall thy barns be filled with plenty." Inspiration is a sure guide. It is unsafe not to heed it. "Honor the Lord." This can mean no less than to love and please him with our substance, or what we have, or earn by the work of our hands. The first fruits and one tenth were obligatory originally to go into the treasury of the Lord. Now as we are dependent upon him for every blessing, both temporal and spiritual, when the needed blessings are bestowed, and that liberally, shall we withhold? or will the church come up to the gospel standard in sowing the good seed, remembering "that whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap"? Give as the Lord hath prospered you. If little, bestow little; if abundance, then bestow liberally, with your prayers. Let it go into the right channel, thus bearing one another's burdens, and the Lord will prosper you. If you withhold, it will tend to poverty.

If the men of this world were not wiser in their generation than the church are, they would beg in winter, or go to the poor house. And this will apply to congregations among us, where a few whole-hearted have to pay the bills, and get the blessings. And it is not because the others are so poor, but they lack the spirit of sacrifice and benevolence; so the cause languishes. The preacher comes, he hears the sad tale of their poverty, preaches the best he can, gets his pittance, and feels poor, heart-sick, discouraged. There is a fault, and it ought and must be remedied by those who expect to go into the kingdom. But there are times when it takes all that a man can get to live; everything is high. I am aware of that, and sometimes a great deal more, especially if the strictest economy is not heeded. Every disciple of Jesus should put his shoulder to the wheel, and his hand in his pocket, as long as the Lord supplies, and be ready to help all he possibly can in this last good work.

Among the people who labor, we find, unless a man's business, of whatever kind, brings him in from twelve to twenty dollars per week, he cannot sustain himself and family, even if small. But you send for a Bro. to come and preach the gospel one, two, or more Sundays; he comes, and does the best he can day and evening through the week, and because he does not believe in making merchandize of the gospel, and will not; you put into his hand from five to ten dollars per week, for food, clothing, and traveling expenses, and often when he gets home, he has not three dollars for his week's labor. The good man feels sad. What to do he hardly knows. His wife sighs, and perhaps has almost concluded that those who desire her husband's labors lack good religion, and if it was not for the Lord, they would all starve. But husband says, "woe is me if I preach not the gospel." So, amid all the discouragements, he pushes on in the strength of the Lord of hosts. The Lord pities him, and whispers, "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." In his extremity, he cries to the Lord. Bread comes from some unknown quarter. So he lives, the church becomes poverty-stricken, worldly, covetous, and the result will be eternal loss of the everlasting kingdom of God. Do as you would like to be done by. That sounds good and right, but you would not like to go and work for the preacher for five dollars per week.

Dear pilgrim Bro., be of good cheer. The Lord pities, and I pray our faith fail not. Our toil is almost over. The pay-day will come—yea, soon. Gird on the whole armor. Trust in the Lord. Do all you can to save men. Suffer on a little in the high-ways and hedges. You will receive glory, immortality, and life eternal at the end of the journey. Amen. L. BOUTELL.

MY VISIT TO THE WEST.

I left my home May 30th, and spent my time on Lord's day, the 31st, with the saints in Biddeford, Me. I preached in the Town Hall, it being at the time when the brethren were building an addition to their chapel, which seemed necessary, because their numbers were swelling so fast. This church is wonderfully blest with the Holy Spirit's power to convict sinners. The time I spent with them was refreshing. A number were baptized, and a number made a start for the kingdom of God. This church is trying to mind the things of the Spirit of God.

From thence I went to Portsmouth, N. H. I stopped with them two evenings, June 2nd and 3d. Found the church laboring for victory, with some courage. May the good Lord bless those old tried friends with salvation.

From thence to Lynn, Mass., and stopped with the struggling saints over one evening, the 4th. I had a very pleasant time speaking to them. We enjoyed a precious season on account of the presence of the Holy Spirit. There I met my old fellow laborer, Bro. A. Ross. God bless him. It was good to meet one who is ready to suffer with Christ.

From thence to Charlestown, Mass., to engage with my dearly beloved brethren Leavitt and Thurber in the meeting in the tent, pitched in Charlestown city. Took my leave of them on Saturday morning, June 6th, and spent a few moments with my old friends, Brn. Adams and Hastings, in Boston; got some of the best of "God bless yous" from them both; then bought my ticket for Wis., went to Worcester, Mass., to spend the Lord's day, June 7th. There I enjoyed another gracious season with the people of God, never to be forgotten. There I found some of the salt of the earth, of which Jesus spoke. I enjoyed a precious communion with the saints at the table of the Lord. Nearly one hundred partook of the Lord's Supper. I preached to them three times, and received gospel measure. The ox is not muzzled when he treadeth out the corn; neither is the servant of God when he preaches the truth. Bless God for good hearts. How God loves them.

Monday, I took my leave of them, leaving with them a holy kiss. With courage I started on my journey, and rode two days and three nights. I found good friends on the way, felt well when telling them my business out west—to preach the gospel of Christ. Arrived in Sparta, Wis., June 11th. My friends welcomed me with gladness. But a few hours had passed when two pilgrims came in to see me. We were comforted while we talked about the coming of Jesus so soon. In the providence of God, I had the privilege of preaching to a warm-hearted people in Sparta. June 21st, I preached in the town of Avalanche, thirty miles south of Sparta, and found the people ready to hear and receive the truth.

From thence I went to Burns, where we met a lovely company of saints, just come into the truth of the gospel. Met Bro. Miles Grant and Bro. P. Hough. The word of God was preached in its purity; souls were converted, some eight baptized; brotherly love was increased, and we parted with increasing resolution to live nearer to the Lord, and get all we can to be reconciled to God. I then returned to Avalanche to spend the 4th of July with the saints in a grove, preaching the word of life, and continued over Lord's day. I found the interest increasing. At the close of the service on the Lord's day, I baptized three happy souls, and the Lord added them unto the church. So I am at it, telling the story of the cross. More yet. My health is good. Love to the saints.

CARTHAGE AND WELD.

We spent July 4th with the brethren in Carthage, in company with Eld. E. M. Haggett. The weather was very hot, but the house was well filled with attentive hearers, and our meeting was very pleasant, and, we trust, a profitable one. Brethren and sisters came to meet with us from Weld, Byron, Mexico, Canton, Hartford, and Livermore, and we think we all enjoyed the day in the worship of God, and the examination of his word, far better than those who met to drink toasts and burn powder.

There is a small company of active, faithful believers in Carthage, who wait for the return of the Lord from heaven. They were brought to the faith under the labors of Elders Wheeler, Haggett, Jordan, and others, and their influence has been for the cause of truth in all the region round about. Lately, some of them have been somewhat stirred up by the claim that new light on the state of the wicked has dawned upon them. Several of them are quite occupied in studying the views taught them that the wicked will not rise, and that infants perish.

Bro. J. C. Wheeler having embraced the new light, so called, obtained the labors of Elders R. Wendell, S. Bragg, and H. Perkins, for a series of meetings, which was held there in June, with what results we did not learn, only by such signs as were manifested in the deep and all-absorbing interest expressed in the new views by two of the sisters. They asked me several strange questions, which I was quite ready to answer by reading direct replies out of the old family Bible. I hope they will find it duty to believe what the Scripture saith.

Sunday, after the 4th, we spent in Weld, preaching in their town house, to a good audience, which listened with great attention to the word. I think this an excellent field of labor, and wish it could be more fully improved. Many were anxious that we should come and preach Christ to them again. Time is short, and many are perishing. The doors are open wide for the proclamation of Jesus' soon coming. Let us do what we can to save men from perishing. I. C. WELLCOME.

DEERFIELD CAMPMEETING.

BRO. GRANT:—Last year (1867,) a few brethren living in Deerfield, N. H., together with myself, feeling an interest for the cause of Christ, and the welfare of souls in that vicinity, put forth an effort, to which was joined the labors of love of the brethren of the different churches in Deerfield, also of non-professors, and we had a meeting under the name of General Union Campmeeting. Brethren H. L. Hastings, B. P. Stevens, C. C. Ramsey, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, Geo. A. Brown, and others were there, and labored through the meeting; and we had one of the best meetings, which proved a complete success; removing the prejudice from the minds of the people, and has opened the eyes of many who have been blinded as to the truths of the Scriptures; and, what was best of all, many backsliders were reclaimed, and a large number converted, who have turned from their idols to serving the true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. Since that meeting the requests of all classes and denominations in that vicinity have been so frequent, that it was thought best to make a move for another meeting; and last May we gave notice, and called a meeting to ascertain the minds and learn the feelings of the community. At this meeting all of the different denominations were represented, beside many non-professors were there. It was voted unanimously to have another general union campmeeting on the same ground where we had it last year. A committee was chosen to go around with papers to raise funds, consisting of R. J. Sanborn, Levi B. Philbrick, James M. Bachelder, and Peter Moors.

It was next voted that the road be repaired, and the ground refitted by the voluntary labor of all classes and denominations uniting together; and a committee of five was chosen to take charge of the same, consisting of R. J. Sanborn, Levi B. Philbrick, Geo. P. Presscott, David S. Batchelder, and True W. Hill. Then a committee to take charge of the meeting (or a campmeeting committee) was chosen, consisting of Enoch Morrill, John M. Quimby, James M. Bachelder, Asa P. Moulton, and Albert Quimby. It was next voted that a general invitation be extended to all the evangelical denominations, and ministers, and especial invitation to the various ministers and churches in that immediate vicinity. I think that at this anticipated meeting there will be opened a field of labor for all honest, earnest laborers for Jesus. Let such keep this meeting before their mind, and, if they can feel it duty from the Lord, come and labor for the salvation of the perishing. The meeting will commence Wednesday, Sept. 9th, and hold until the following Wednesday. For particulars, see the notice of the meeting. ENOCH MORRILL.

R. I. AND EAST. CONN. CONFERENCE REPORT.

This conference assembled, according to notice, in Westerly, R. I., July 1st, at 2 P. M. The time of the first meeting was spent in prayer and social remarks. In the evening, preaching by Eld. A. Morse, from Matt. 24: 13.

July 2nd, 9 A. M. An excellent season of social worship. At 2 P. M., listened to a discourse from Eld. P. C. Rodman, text James 2: 24. In the evening, Eld. T. M. Preble preached a very instructive sermon from Mark 4: 24.

July 3d, 9 A. M., met for business. The President, Eld. A. Durfee, in the chair. Bro. Carpenter being absent, C. H. Sweet was chosen Secretary pro tem. An interesting letter was read from Bro. H. F. Carpenter. Treasurer's report read and accepted. Listened to the reports of churches.

East Gloucester reported by letter. Are thriving in the Lord. One converted since the last conference. Expect several to join soon. Have a good Sunday School. C. B. Keach, Clerk.

Danielsonville. We have had a revival interest in our midst for several weeks. Some have requested prayers. I have not seen the church here standing so well for years. We maintain prayer-meetings every evening when there is no preaching. Bro. H. F. Carpenter, pastor.

Lafayette. Reported by Bro. H. Arnold. Some alive. Have three prayer-meetings a week. Preaching twice a month by Brn. Wood and Pierce. Have a Sabbath School,—good attendance.

River Point, by A. Durfee. Had a protracted meeting last winter; two converted, and three backsliders reclaimed. The religious interest better than for several years.

We then listened to reports of preachers, which were very cheering, showing an increase of converts, and an open door for the gospel of the coming kingdom.

Voted, That churches wishing to unite with this conference have an opportunity to do so. The Westerly church presented a request and was received.

Upon motion of J. J. Northrup, Bro. Rufus Pierce became a member of the conference. Adjourned to meet with the church at Lafayette, R. I., the first Wednesday in next October. At 2 P. M., preaching by Eld. E. R. Wood, from 1 Cor. 2: 9, 10. The power of truth was sensibly felt by the speaker, the congregation sharing in the same blessing. In the evening, a sermon by Eld. Geo. Champlin, from Luke 22: 29.

This report shows a very small representation of our churches. May we not hope that all of the churches will send either delegates or letters to our next meeting?

Preachers present: A. Durfee, J. J. Northrup, A. Morse, J. C. Collins, E. R. Wood, P. C. Rodman, Geo. Champlin, John Champlin, Peter Noka, Rufus Pierce, T. M. Preble, J. T. Dixon, C. H. Sweet, and Sister Crumb.

C. H. SWEET, Clerk pro tem.

P. S.—At a meeting of the Freedmen's Mission, Brn. E. Bellows and H. F. Carpenter were appointed a committee to disburse the funds in the treasury. C. H. S.

VISIT TO NEW YORK.

I was called on the twelfth of June to New York city. I went via Stonington. As I was leaving the steamer, I came in contact with Bro. Hastings. He asked me if I was going to Sister Smith's Mission? As it was early in the morning, I decided to call on Sister Smith before visiting my patient. On arriving there, I was informed there was a quarterly meeting at Hackensack, and that Sr. Smith and others were going. As some twenty were to be baptized, I decided to go too. After visiting my patient, I stepped into the cars, and was not long in reaching the mission. I met with Bro. and Sr. Boynton for the first time. Sr. B. has been laboring there, but her health has so far declined, in consequence of scanty means and hard labor, that she has been obliged to leave. I was perfectly astonished to look about and witness the great work Sr. Smith has effected. She had raised up a church from a people not at all prepossessing in the original, and had taught them their Master's will. They are now rejoicing in prospect of the coming kingdom.

The next morning after my arrival, I attended a love-feast, and was particularly interested in their manner of breaking bread, and also the baptism and communion, which were very impressive and profitable. I was not at all surprised that we had to lodge in campmeeting style, as there were many who attended the meetings. After the close of the meetings, I returned to Sister Smith's at New York city, attended a class-meeting conducted by a colored sister, who seemed imbued with the Spirit, and managed very understandingly. Next came the time for retiring. I was surprised to find we had to lodge in campmeeting style. On inquiry, I learned it was nothing new, and that they had been obliged for some time to spread their beds at night, and take them and pile them up in the morning. I hope the brethren and sisters will have mercy on Sr. Smith, and consider she is mortal, and that it takes means to feed and strength to labor for so great a multitude as crowd themselves upon her generosity. It is true, all do not go empty handed, but there are quite too many who do go there so. May the Lord give us all wisdom to act, and direct us in the right way, that we may be prepared for the coming kingdom. C. C. CROSSMAN, M. D.

FOURTH OF JULY MEETING.

On the Fourth of July a number of the followers of Jesus assembled at Wallingford, Ct., to worship the Lord under some lovely shade trees, on Bro. E. G. Dudley's place. Sr. M. L. Durand preached a most timely and edifying discourse from Acts 4: 23,—"And being let go, they went to their own company." The Spirit of our Lord was present to assist the preacher and hearers. We all thanked God that, while multitudes were spending the day in noisy demonstration, we had found our own company among those who serve the true and living God, and wait for his Son from heaven. And our hearts did burn within us, while we talked together of our blessed hope. When the "little while" is passed away, our dear Lord will appear and "let go" all the redeemed company from every nation from a state of suffering mortality, to enjoy eternal life with him in the new earth, together with the saints of all ages. And none of our "company" will ever shed a parting tear. It was a time of refreshing, and we rejoiced that the God of Abraham was our God, and could declare that we were free in Christ, for whom the Son makes free is "free indeed."

But the time of parting came, and we could but hope that Jesus might manifest himself to each isolated saint at home, as he had to us, that they might realize that the day of redemption is near. Your Sister watching,

Bristol, Ct. A. HOUGH.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Bendixon.

DEAR BRO. IN THE LORD:—As my dear Father has been pleased to preserve me across the ocean, so I have arrived in safety with my dear family, I will not delay writing to you, to inform you a little about my journey. We can praise the Lord for fine weather, fair wind, good health, and every good thing, which our heavenly Father always gives his children. We would have had a very pleasant passage, if it had not been for some Irish Roman Catholics, who disturbed our peace both day and night. When I came home, I found my family all well, and it was a happy hour for us all. How we embraced one another after so long absence.

When I arrived at Hull, I was very tired, and I went to find some brethren, but as a stranger it was very hard. But mark the providence of God. One night, I went out with my landlord down to the railroad station to meet a brother from New York; and as we stood there, we felt like going down the street a little. As we went down, we came to a corner where a man had just begun to speak, and some people had gathered around him; and I felt my heart begin to beat within. He was very earnest in exhorting the people to prepare for "the Lord's speedy coming." I noticed that he was a little confused when I stood and listened to him; but as soon as he was through I went over to him, and we had a hearty shaking of hands together. We then sung a hymn, and all the people enclosed me around, and I can tell you, brethren, the Lord came with great power. It was a solemn meeting on the corner of a street. I brought before them the prophecies of the Lord's speedy coming and how we must be found, if we will be counted worthy to go into his kingdom. I trust in the Lord that it will be a blessing for them all. After the people were dismissed, we went together, and he told me how he had been fighting that day with the enemy. The devil would not let him go, and had almost gained the victory over him, but as he came down the wharf, he had to go under a shade among some cotton bales, in prayer to the Lord, and then he conquered the enemy, through the blood of the Lamb; and so he came, and we met, and the Lord blessed us all. Glory be to his dear and holy name.

The next morning, at six o'clock, he and another brother came to me, and we went out together and talked over the signs of the times, and the sleep of the dead, in which they rejoiced very much, after I had explained the doctrine for them. In the evening I met with some brethren, and we had a very profitable and blessed meeting. After an affectionate "farewell until Jesus comes," I went on board the steamer. Wonderful is the providence of the Lord.

Next week I shall start for Bergen. Pray very much for me, that the Lord will keep me at the foot of the cross. I send you all, my dear brethren, my affectionate love. My dear wife sends you all sisterly love in the Lord, likewise my dear children. Lord bless you all, my dearest in the Lord. O. BENDIXON.

BRO. GRANT:—The cause in Rochester is moving on through this intense heat with its usual interest. Yesterday we had about one thousand hearers, who manifested a profound interest throughout the service. Several ministers were in attendance in the evening. One minister who became interested in our views ten years ago, but was dissuaded by friends, and pushed forward in his studies and ministry, said to me, "I am in the dark; no light shines in my pathway; in fact, I am backslidden from God." Tears flowed freely while I invited him to confess publicly, and go with us.—"But those eleven long years that have run to waste!" Leave them, Bro., and come to Christ, and go now to work in his vineyard. May the Lord help him. O how many there are to-day that have been turned aside from duty by opposition and persuasion, who, like this man, are walking in darkness, and yet trying to preach!

One case we cite in point. When we were laboring in E. Concord, N. H., a young man from the Institution, who had just commenced preaching, said, after listening to a lecture from the chart, "Could you not do more good to preach faith and salvation, than to preach on prophecies?"

What do you call faith and salvation? Then came the "scholastic bubbles," till the subject was all befogged. Why don't you talk so we can understand you? Faith is to believe God, is it not?

"Yes."

Well, then, when the word of God says, "The meek shall inherit the earth," you wish me to preach it, and tell men to get salvation by believing?

"Why, yes."

You wish me to preach that "the dead know not anything," and that "all the wicked will God destroy," and tell men to believe it, and be saved by believing?

"If I believed that doctrine, I would pack my books and make the best of this world."

What do you serve God for?

"For fear of that burning hell."

That is but slavish service; it never was acceptable to God, and never will be. To this he said,

"I have taken my Bible in my hand, and have been into the woods, and upon my knees I have prayed till my jaws were palsied, and yet I have not seen one ray of light in christian experience for two years."

O God, pity the ministers that are walking in darkness. To what is christianity drifting? To-day a Roman Bishop is received by christian Protestantism with parade and martial pomp with its mysterious regalia and "scarlet" banners. O time! O manners! when will he come, the sovereign King, the righteous Judge, the mighty One? Come, come, our God, "even so, come." H. PRATT.

Rochester, N. Y., July 20th, 1868.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I arrived here the 18th of June, in time to fill my appointment. As there were one or two persons here in authority that were determined that we should not have the Court House to preach in, I had come to the conclusion that I should have to preach in the open air, under the beautiful live oak trees. Some of our warm friends, who belong to the Common Council, were absent at Tallahassee to attend the State Legislature; but they arrived on Saturday night, just in time to cast their vote in favor of letting me have the Court House to hold meetings in every Sabbath, if I wished; and evenings when not occupied by the Council. I preach here every other Sunday, and at Jacksonville every other one, when we do not have campmeetings to last over Sunday.

We are to have a campmeeting, to commence Friday, the 24th of July, at Olustee, ten miles east of Lake City. From appearances, we expect a large concourse of people, for such a thinly settled country. Last week, I held a three days' meeting seven or eight miles north of here, from Wednesday until Saturday, and the whole people that came appeared to be convicted; and many express their belief in the doctrine, and are very anxious to have a church organized, and have preaching. This field of labor is all ready for the harvest. I preached in the open air, under orange trees, in a grove, in the night, lit up by a pitch-pine fire; and in the day-time in another neighborhood, in a school-house. The people left their work and listened very attentively; and as there were no educated ministers there, the people, one and all, appeared to receive the message as the truth. Two ministers, of the Missionary Baptist, attended, and believed. One said to me he wanted to join the covenant, and knew others that wished to. They are preparing to preach the truth. Thank the Lord for what my eyes see, and my ears hear.

One man said to me, after one of the meetings, that he had said many hard things about me and this message; but was persuaded to come and hear; and after he came and took his seat, and saw the chart hung up, not knowing what it meant, he said to himself that it was a perfect imposition on the people; that I was a northern Yankee, coming down here to fool the people, and that I ought to be run out of the country; but when he listened to the exposition of the image in the 2nd of Daniel, he began to see what he never saw before; and concluded before I closed the meeting that I was just the man they needed, and ought to have had years before. The changes come on the people as sudden as that. Five hundred Advent preachers ought to be in this southern field now, proclaiming the coming of the Lord; but it is very hard work, and if I was not wonderfully blessed of the Lord, I could not stand my labor. Yours in hope, P. A. SMITH.

Lake City, Fla., July 13th, 1868.

From Sr. A. B. Pilcher.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in like precious faith:—It has been quite a long time since I communicated to you through our much-loved paper, the Crisis, which I prize next to my Bible. Bless the Lord, brethren and sisters, I still enjoy the Christian's hope. I am glad that it is declared by many, that the coming of Christ is just at the door, for when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. My hope is based on the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead. You remember our Savior said to Martha at a certain time, "I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Without these blessed promises, dear pilgrims, what would our hope be?

I am glad that truth is spreading so fast, and taking deep root in the hearts of so many. May light and truth still run and be glorified, and hundreds yet be saved.

When I am looking over the paper, and see that God has some faithful servants in the field, who are wearing their lives out for the Redeemer's cause, my prayer is, Lord, send forth more laborers into the vineyard, for truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

O that the Lord would direct some of his watchmen this way, that the people might be awakened, and take warning before it is too late; for truly we are in the last days, and what we do must be done quickly. Situated as we are here, without a minister, and so scattered that we cannot as much as have a prayer-meeting, we feel lonely, and long to hear some of those heart-cheering gospel sermons, that God's ministers are delivering to the household of faith in other places. Dear pilgrims, and especially those who are on beds of affliction, be patient, and trust in God a little longer. Deliverance is almost here. The time for God's people to mourn, weep, sigh, and suffer, is almost over. Yes, deliverance will soon come, and all tears shall be wiped from our eyes, and the last enemy be destroyed, which is death.

If any of God's servants should be directed this way, they can find a pilgrim's home at P. J. Pilcher's. ANNA B. PILCHER.

BRO. P. W. HOUGH, Baraboo, Wis., July 10th, writes:—"I preached in Delton last Sunday at two o'clock, and in the evening. There was a heavenly influence in the meeting. It was easy to preach. Two started for the kingdom. I should like to have remained longer at Delton, but according to appointment, I came to Fairfield, and have held three meetings. They have been, so far, very heavenly, and well attended. Some of the unsaved ones are almost persuaded to be christians. The campmeeting has done much in this place to remove prejudice, and show the public the basis and working principle of our faith. The church and ministry here have a great work to do to gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost. May they be wise and united to save the perishing around them. Amen.

Bro. Grant, in no place that I have attended has a campmeeting done more good than the one you attended in Burns Valley. It has cheered the hearts of hundreds, almost paralyzed the scoffer's tongue, and lifted the standard of truth so that some bewildered ones could see it. I preached in the white schoolhouse the evening of July 2nd. The house was full, and the interest good. Four confessed Christ, all heads of families."

"THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION."

This book is worthy to be classed among the richest and most instructive works of modern religious literature. A copy should forthwith be put into the hands of every person who is inclined to believe in the eternal torture and non-resurrection of the wicked, or the observance of the seventh day of the week as a Sabbath. Should any believer in either of the above-named theories chance to read this, I would advise them to procure a copy at once, and studiously examine it.

Obituaries.

CHAPMAN. Died at Week's Mills, Me., June 20th, 1868, of heart disease, Bro. Frank, second son of Bro. Albert and Sr. Mahala Chapman, aged sixteen years and twenty-seven days.

He never made a public profession of religion, but a few weeks before his death he gave consoling evidence of having been made a "partaker of the divine nature" by "repentance toward God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." He expressed great pleasure in the thought that the coming of Jesus is near. He calmly bade all good bye, exhorting brothers and sisters to prepare to meet him in "the better land." Elder S. K. Partridge preached a consoling discourse at his funeral, from 1 Pet. 1: 24, 25. T. G. BURPEE.

VEAZEY. Died in Newhampton, N. H., July 19th, 1868, of cancer, Sr. Emily F. Veazey, daughter of Bro. Simeon and Polly Veazey, aged forty-eight years, three months, and seven days.

She became a believer in 1842. She leaves a father and mother, three brothers, and two sisters to mourn her loss. The hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him, cheered her heart, although her sickness was severe. Sleep on, Sister Emily, we hope to greet thee where the inhabitants will never say I am sick. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer. JOHN H. EVANS.

MARSTON. Fell asleep in Meredith, June 30th, 1868, of consumption, Bro. Joseph D. Marston, aged twenty-eight years, three months.

Bro. Joseph fell asleep in Jesus with the blest assurance of participating in the first resurrection. His sufferings were great, but he bore them with patience, feeling it the will of God. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Ps. 46: 1. N. GLIDDEN.

NEAL. Died in West Gardiner, Me., June 7th, 1868, of consumption, Bro. Joseph Neal, aged thirty-three years.

Bro. Neal was a true-hearted christian, and beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and two children, besides other relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. May the Spirit of God ever sustain the afflicted ones. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Job 14: 14. A. H. WALKER.

ROOT. Died in Barkhamsted Hollow, Conn., July 21st, 1868, Daniel E. Root.

His disease was consumption. He fell asleep in Jesus, expecting to come up in the morning. Words of comfort were spoken to the bereaved friends by the writer, from Job 14: 14. SAMUEL M. TAYRO.

BROWN. Died in Fairfield, July 6th, 1868, Sr. Caroline Brown, wife of Barzilla Brown.

Sister B. was a woman of excellent and amiable character, and a lover of the truth. She was cut down in a day, being about her household duty the very day of her death. The Presbyterian Society kindly tendered their house for the funeral occasion. Words of consolation were spoken by the writer. J. L. BASSETT.

SHIPPEE. Died in Crompton, R. I., July 15th, Gracestelle Etheline, daughter of H. H. and Julia Shippee, aged one year and nine days.

We tried to comfort the bereaved ones by pointing to the resurrection morn, when their darling will wake to sleep no more. GEO. A. COLE.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

MACAO, China, June 12, via London, July 24.

Important news has reached here from Japan via Shanghae. The Mikado has proclaimed a new edict against the native Christians. The civil war continues. The party of Shagoon was gaining strength. It is reported that Stats Bashi had raised an army of 20,000 men, and, assisted by a fleet of seven vessels of war, was seriously menacing the city of Yeddo. The natives in and around Osaka were throwing every obstacle in the way of foreigners to prevent them from buying land there according to treaty stipulations.

LONDON, July 27. Political disturbances, it is reported, have broken out again in Bulgaria. A dispatch from Constantinople states that the Turkish Government has ordered troops to that quarter to restore tranquility.

DOMESTIC.

Great Flood at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, July 24. The river commenced rising a few minutes before one o'clock and rose at the rate of two inches per minute, and has continued to rise up to this hour, 2.45 P. M. Calvert street is flooded to Lexington street, within a few feet of monument square; North street, its entire length, to the depth of from four to eight feet, and Holliday street to Fayette street, Ford's Theatre being surrounded by water, which is passing down Holliday and Baltimore streets. Gay, Frederick and Harrison streets are entirely submerged.

The water at Jones' Fall is several feet above the bridges, and it is not yet known whether they have been swept away. On many of the wharves on South Pratt street, from the falls to Frederick street, the water is several feet deep. A city passenger car was swept from the track on Gay street down Harrison with a number of passengers. The wildest rumors prevail in regard to the number drowned, some estimating the number at seven, and others say that all were saved but one, Mr. Ward, a printer, who was drowned. It is impossible now to get the facts. A number of dray horses and some drivers are reported drowned. There is no communication between the eastern and western parts of the city. The flood is sweeping everything before it.

There is no communication south by telegraph, all the lines being down. No such flood has ever been known here.

11 P. M. The flood to-day subsided as suddenly as it arose. Shortly after 4 o'clock the water was carried off within the banks of Jones's Falls.

At this hour the damage cannot be approximately estimated, but none of the estimates place it below $3,000,000. Hundreds of stores were submerged, and many hogsheads of molasses on the wharves and sugar in warehouses were entirely destroyed. A number of buildings and stores were undermined and damaged. Deumead's foundry and Bentley's iron works were partially swept away. The gas works supplying the eastern part of the city were submerged, and that section is without gas to-night. Some water mains are reported carried away.

The loss of life in the city has not been ascertained, but it is believed that but few have been drowned. Mr. Ward, who was reported as drowned, was saved, and is well.

Col. Webster, Collector of the Port, rescued a man from drowning by rushing in four feet of water as the man was being borne away in the torrent, completely exhausted.

The trains to Washington are missing.

The damage to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company is comparatively small.

On the Northern Central Railroad the damage is reported to be greater, and the trains will not run for several days.

A telegram this afternoon from Ellicot City (formerly Ellicot's Mills) reports the Granite Mills carried away and 60 lives lost. Dr. Owens' entire family, except himself, were drowned.

THE MOST MAGNIFICENT TABLE IN THE WORLD. The Evenement Illustre of Paris gives the following details of the silver table ordered for the Sultan. The price will be nearer 4,000,000 francs than 3,000,000 francs, as originally stated. The designs are composed from the ideas and advice of M. Agop, sent by the Sultan to Paris for that purpose, and are splendid. The middle or centre piece represents a Moorish palace two feet six inches high; there are two end pieces, representing fountains, two triumphal arches, and two end pieces, representing fountains, two triumphal arches, and two end pieces for flowers, all to be executed in the Alhambra style in massive silver. The length of the table will be about one hundred and forty-eight feet by about sixteen feet broad. Besides the actual cost of the table, a sum of 2,000,000 francs is destined for the purchase of linen, glass-ware, accompanying furniture, etc. Such a magnificent tout ensemble has probably never before been manufactured.

NO LONGER LOOKING FOR A MESSIAH.—At the Convention of Hebrew Covenanters in New York on Thursday, an oration was delivered by Mr. Greenbaum, who declared that the purpose of the Order was to elevate the Hebrew race, make them good citizens, and so add their quota to a Godlike humanity. The return of the Jews and the advent of Messiah, he declared, are no longer the tests of Judaism. The faith and principles of the denomination are comprised in the words: "Hear, oh Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, soul, strength, and thy neighbor as thyself;" and "Do unto others as you would have others do to you." This declaration was received with general approval.

SAND FLIES IN CHICAGO.—Immense numbers of sand flies suddenly appeared in Chicago on Monday evening. Many saloons were compelled to close in order to prevent their ingress. Wherever a light was placed the flies gathered around it in millions, and covered the glass in the windows so as to render it almost an impossibility to see the gas jet. The street lamps were besieged, and in many instances the streets were as dark as if no gas were employed. The sidewalks were covered, and many were crushed to death beneath the feet of pedestrians. But still they increased, and about half-past ten o'clock they covered everything. They then commenced to disappear, and at two o'clock next morning scarcely one was to be seen. They make an annual visit to the city.

Items.

☞ The agriculturists in Europe are complaining bitterly of the drouth which prevails there. No rain has fallen in England for seven weeks, the ground is parched and the springs are becoming dry. On the Continent the drouth is more terrible. All Spain is a parched desert and there and in the south of France not more than one-third of the usual crop of cereals is expected.

☞ Letters from Rome speak in the most positive manner of the discontent and dissensions in the ranks of the motley Papal Army. There are constant quarrels and fights between the different nationalities composing it. In a recent affray at the Macao Barracks three men are said to have been killed and a dozen wounded.

☞ Queen Victoria will visit Switzerland soon after the prorogation of Parliament. Her Majesty will travel incognito, and will pass through Paris.

☞ The Sultan of Turkey has just ordered to be manufactured in Paris a silver table, the price of which will not be less than six hundred thousand dollars in gold.

☞ The Catholics are laboring among the freedmen in Baltimore; in their schools and churches white and black sit together; priests openly declare the doctrine that "God makes no distinction, and the church cannot."

☞ To get rid of mosquitoes, take of gum camphor a piece almost one-third the size of an egg, evaporate it by placing it in a tin vessel and holding it over a lamp or candle, taking care it does not ignite. The smoke will soon fill the room and expel the mosquitoes.

☞ The Journal de Bruxelles thinks the present danger to the Vatican lies, not in a Garibaldian raid, but in a republican movement throughout the whole of Italy. The Papal States will thus be the second object of attack; monarchical institutions the first.

☞ On the 19th a storm at the village of Tobaccostick, in Dorchester county, Maryland, blew down several barns, made wholesale overthrow of trees and scattered wheat stacks as though they were but chaff.

☞ The Italian government has determined to arm its iron-clad fleet with Armstrong guns.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Notices.

Volunteers Wanted!!

Wanted on the Springfield Camp-ground, eight or ten brethren who will give their labors towards fitting up the ground, and getting things in readiness for the meeting on the 24th of August. The committee have been to great expense in fitting up the buildings, etc., and are coming short of funds to complete the work. Therefore we call for help, and some who cannot give money, can give their time and labor, which is as good as money for the purpose. We want quite a number of men who love to work, on the ground by the tenth of Aug., to remain and work until the meeting. Send in your names to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., as soon as possible, that we may know in season how many we have. Provision will be made to board and sleep on the ground. In this way you can have your board through the meeting, and help us much in the week. Who will come?

Per order of Building Committee,
J. HEMENWAY.

General Union Campmeeting.

There will be a general union campmeeting held in the Sap Grove, belonging to Col. R. J. Sanborn, known in that vicinity as the Deerfield Camp-Ground, near the line between Candia and Deerfield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 9th, to hold eight days. We hope brethren and sisters, who love Jesus and his appearing, and are desirous of laboring for Christ, will come to this meeting. We think this will be a good field for labor. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Candia Depot, N. H. Teams for passengers and baggage will connect with the train. It is expected the fare on the R. R. will be reduced to half price. Particulars hereafter. Let those who can, bring tents. For those who cannot, tents will be furnished.

An invitation is extended to the various ministers and churches in the vicinity to come and unite with us, and labor for the salvation of the perishing. The campmeeting committee consists of Enoch Morril, John M. Quimby, James N. Bachelder, Asa P. Moulton, and Albert Quimby. Board will be furnished on the ground at reasonable prices. Preaching brethren will be cared for. H. L. Hastings, John Couch, S. W. Thurber, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word.

ENOCH MORRILL, for the Committee.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a grove meeting near Carr's Corner, Dexter, Me., commencing August 14th, at half-past ten o'clock, and to continue over the following Sabbath. Brn. I. K. Lombard, A. Damman, and S. Ames, are expected to preach the word. Bro. H. Seavey is requested to be there, if possible. Call on Bro. H. Brown. Come, brethren, and sisters, to this meeting, one and all, and work for the Lord with all your might. Be sure and leave your hobby horses at home, for the time has fully come for us to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

O. G. TRUNDY.

New York State Mission Tent.

Meetings will be held in this tent, at Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y., commencing Wednesday evening July 29th. Brethren and sisters are cordially invited to come and labor with us.

J. WENDELL.

To my Brethren and Friends.

Having removed from Yarmouth to Portland, I shall be pleased to have you call on me, at the store of Bro. S. B. Gowell, 149 Middle Street.

R. R. YORK.

Notice.

Any church desiring the next Quarterly Conference with them, will please let it be known to the Secretary. It will be due in October. I would also say to those who pledged money to the Advent Mass. Conference for the support of quarterly conferences and protracted meetings in new and needy places, your money is wanted, and you will please send it to Bro. R. E. Ladd, the Treasurer, Springfield, Mass. Also, others who have the needful send in funds to introduce and enlighten the people on the coming and kingdom of our Lord. Three protracted meetings with good results have been held. Others are wanted. L. BOUTELL.

Notice.

The fourth annual meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at De Kalb, Ill., in connection with the General Campmeeting for 1868. The first formal meeting of the Association will convene on Wednesday, Sept. 2d, at 10 A. M., at which time the usual reports will be presented. Members who wish to vote by proxy may do so by notifying the Secretary, stating the name of the person chosen as proxy. But no person can act as a proxy who is not a member of the Association.

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting on the old ground in Springwater, Aug. 14th, 15th, and 16th. Services at the school-house Friday evening, at half past seven o'clock, and in the grove on Saturday, at one P. M., and on Sunday at nine A. M. Come one and all. For the brethren, C. F. SWEET.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting in Jonesville, Wis., commencing August 20th, to hold several days.

WM. SHELDON.

BABYLON'S DOOM.—Salmu 2.

By the waters of Babel we sat down and wept,
And lingered in sorrow the life that was left;
While foes stood around us, of every degree,
To mock at our sad lot in vile revelry.

The harps that on Judah's May morning were strung,
Now from the willow trees listlessly hung,
And the wild zephyr dirge chimed a lasting adieu
To the homes of our childhood, to the hearts that were true.

As eunuchs are served in Semiramis' hall,
And saw Jacob's pride bow to Bacchus' lewd call;
But wiser than Belus we stooped not to gloom,
For we read the handwriting of Babylon's doom.

Bel has the golden head, Jake has the heart,
Time will discover the true lover's part;
The head is the outlet, and heart is the source,
But for feelings to move us we could not discourse.

Then open the floodgates of the Ottoman Porte,
Let Balaam the Euphratean channel divert;
Belshazzar was drinking to Cyrus' brave men,
When they bearded the lion surprised in his den.

The maids of Madonna will bitterly rue,
While the breast tab'ring doves do there melancholy coo,
Belshazzar, Darius, Napoleon and Sand,
Adult'ry's carousals in wedlock will band.

Then, Sultan, receive the great Roman Protector,
For the Sultan's is Satan's own Pagan reflector,
And forth from thy stall, beast, for here is the carcass,
Down let the eagles come ere the beast mark us.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES IN CANADA.

BRO. GRANT:—There are a great many readers who want to know about little things as well as great ones, or there would be no demand for a child's paper. I first visited the little church at Vernon, Vt. This church has been reduced by trials, mostly from preachers, yet they hold on to God's truth, which is the only way to live. Next to North Springfield. Found Bro. Salmon Cook and the little church doing well. They have watched the dividing elements and shunned them. Also the Castleton church has been blessed with the straight forward course of Bro. S. G. Matthewson and wife, and is a light in that vicinity. The Rutland church has had opposing winds from the first start, but it is hoped it will continue to improve under the labors of Bro. Stetson. He informed me the meeting at Champlain was discontinued, and to make connection, I must go to Rouses Point, which was in a storm on the lake. I arrived late at night and put up at a hotel.

When I arrived at Montreal, I was welcomed to Bro. John Ward's home for three days, which was made pleasant. Here, for the first time, I saw a long black gown on a Catholic priest. The people greatly respected them as they passed them, but I looked on them as children of the devil. Montreal abounds in these hypocrites. I don't wonder the harlot and her children are being hated by the nations. It will stir up a new element of indignation to witness the ignorance and superstition that are so manifest in Catholic communities. But I was surprised in two things; i. e., in the land, and the manners of the people in church. The land, for the two hundred miles I traveled east from Rouses Point, was level as in Illinois, and well fenced, and generally cultivated, but not as it is here in the states. Improvements are behind, and there is not as much enterprise and taste in farming implements and their houses. Almost any kind or shaped house answers their purposes. They are very similar to those in Illinois, on the prairie, yet a plenty of lumber to build with. Their ambition is low. They only cultivate just land enough to raise what they want to eat; so said the conductor on the railroad. But the manners in the church at Montreal are admirable. They all kneel in prayer time, saint and sinner. If strangers come in, they are spoken to and respected more than they are in the states. They are not ashamed to be seen in the field. It is no uncommon thing to see the women in hay and harvest-fields, and come home in their carts or wagons singing. I suppose Naomi was a lady in the harvest-field, as well as in the parlor, and healthier for out-door work in the sun. The influence of the sun upon both sexes is very good. One half of the Yankee women sicken for want of plain living and out-door exercise; so say the Canadians. I believe the parlor and piano, and sweetmeats and cakes are destroying the vigor and health of our young women. But these are little things, and I will stop.

This note is being written in Melbourne, at Bro. Gilman's, who came here in 1808, while it was all woods, and their neighbors were much more scarce than bears and wolves, which paid them unwelcome visits often. His history of fifty years past was very interesting to me. His position is a fixed one, especially in the great truth of these times. He stands like a rock.

There is a rumor in Canada that the Yankees are willing the Fenians should invade Canada, and we are looked upon as spies by some, but our brethren feel about fighting as we do in the states. Killing one another does not belong to a flock of sheep. Fancy a sheep with a rifle on his back going to hunt wolves. Yet it is just as consistent with the nature of sheep to hunt wolves, as for a christian to hunt and kill men.

Danville. Here is a good church, under the prudent labors of Bro. Porter, who acts as their Elder and shepherd. He tells me that some have visited his place of late, and denounced him as a foolish virgin, having the devil in him, because he did not embrace their views. The church is doing well. We had a good, candid hearing, and a solemn conviction settled down upon the people that the Lord must be very near. The crops look well, and the people are more enterprising than in many places in Canada.

Windsor, twenty-five miles west, the land is more hilly. Here again I was squinted at as a spy for the Fenians, and a few came out to meeting the first evening. Being lonesome, I went a fishing, and caught a pickerel weighing ten and a half pounds. This caused the people to talk with me, and ask questions; and the next day I was requested to show them how to fish and to rig their hook and lines. This led them to come to meeting the last evening. I felt it was too late to bait a hook or draw a seine, but threw a harpoon, and left for Hatley.

It is amusing to visit and talk with the first settlers, and hear them tell of their adventures with wild beasts, and their hardships in getting a living. They had to go one hundred miles to market, down the St. Francis river, and tug up their supper in boats over the falls. In those days they could catch any quantity of salmon, weighing from ten to fifteen pounds. There are plenty of them yet, but there is a law forbidding the catching of them. General intelligence, among the mass, is wanted, while superstition and ignorance reign; yet God has his witnesses here for these last days, and we don't expect any better times till the Lord comes.

In Compton, Hatley, and Barnston, there seems to be better ground, and the buildings convenient, and the people more enterprising. As we get nearer the State line, the people are more willing to come out to meeting, yet they are afraid of being imposed upon by people from the states. No wonder. A burnt child dreads the fire.

It may be interesting to some to learn how the prices vary from the states. It is now June 26th. Butter is 15 cts., eggs 10, milk 2 cts. per quart; hay averages $10 per ton; building lumber $6 per thousand; good cows $40; other things in proportion.

Next to Barnston, to a tent meeting. The brethren got a large tent to hold our meeting in, that would hold from six to eight hundred. They had been scattered in feeling by hobby preaching and imprudent and foolish conduct of some preachers who come from the states. It was hard work to get a start, but in three days God gave us the victory, and eight arose for prayers. The meeting increased, and Sunday many had to be outside of the tent, but all were anxious to hear, and no rowdyism appeared. Some muttered about the preaching, but stuck by and seemed to feel better for staying. There was such a variety of views, no wonder some found fault. Gabriel could not suit some. But the meeting closed up well. Some came fifty-miles in wagons, others thirty, and many from ten to fifteen. It was said to be the largest gathering ever in that region. I went home with some of the brethren to Canaan Corner, in Vt., about thirty miles, and came over some of the most dismal part of Canada I ever saw.

While reading Bro. Grant's description of his pleasant ride on the Mississippi, and seeing the fine farms which caused him to cry for joy, I had just finished my journey through the 'fifteen-mile Canada woods,' so called. Thought I, Miles, if you had had the trip I have just had, you would have cried, from a different stand-point, "Let thy kingdom come." On entering this dismal road, the little half-covered and lighted log houses, with a little patch of uneven land, with five hundred stumps to the acre, three feet high, and half as many trees that the fire had not burnt growing among them, caused me to ask my guide how the people lived in such places? "On pea soup," was the reply, "with a little pork in it." After traveling a few miles further, we came to a French tavern, where we had agreed to stop and eat our lunch, which we brought with us, having rode five hours. Six of us stopped, fed the horses, and ourselves. This being St. Peter's day, the people, being all Catholics, had gone to an old school-house to say mass. We stopped, but they were chanting in French. We were not interested, and drove on. On seeing a dog in the dismal place, we tried to scrape acquaintance with him, but he was French too, and paid no attention to us. I had previously tried to drive a French horse, and told him to go along as usual, and he stood still. The person in the wagon told me it was a French horse; I must say bushdaw quick, and the horse would go. I spoke it quick and heavy, and soon found myself going over back of the wagon seat. I think the horse sprang six feet the first jump. This ended my trying to learn French. On going a mile further into the woods, we saw a little shanty, marked E. Jendron, Merchant. Probably the building and goods were not worth one hundred dollars, so my guide said. This novelty was equal to Bro. Grant's, only from an opposite stand-point. Still further into the woods, we found the worst road I ever traveled. In going over some of the steep pitches, the sensation was similar to going over the upper dead-point of a revolving swing, when we begin to descend. This kind of a road continued some eight miles, and our slow rate of travel afforded the musquitoes an opportunity to make an attack that we could not repel. It took nearly all the grace I had to get through "the Canada fifteen-mile woods." But God was good; he did not suffer us to be tempted above what we were able to bear.

After getting through, we soon came to a small building marked Custom House. This was a sign we were near the line. We soon saw the iron post, i. e., the line between Canada and the United States. There was a house on the line. The partition in the centre was exactly on the line. The man with me said they had rum in a hogshead, one head was in Canada and the other in the states, and filled it from the states' end, and drew it from the other end, in another house, in Canada; thus avoiding both laws, and paying duties on either side, as the liquor passed the line itself. Soon we came to Canaan, Vt., and was glad to see the old Connecticut River near its head. It heads eighteen miles east of here, in N. H., from the Ct. lake. Our trip in Canada has been a novel one. But we found some of the most devoted christians we ever got acquainted with, and willing to sacrifice for the blessed hope. Some of them have come out of the Catholic church; and when they get the truth, they make the best of christians. After crossing the line into Vermont and New Hampshire, it was retirement indeed. At one place, I went to the end of the road and put up. Not a bell, or whistle, or wagon was heard. This is the third generation brought up on this farm. Two have passed off without going thirty miles from where they were born, excepting the men went once to training forty-five miles. In these northern towns, their music is the flax wheel singing treble, the wool wheel tenor, the quill wheel bass; the old ladies keep good time with the looms.

Now six weeks have passed, and I must return into the bustle of cities and villages, and learn about the news of the day, its perplexity and troubles, to which I have been a stranger for weeks, not having seen but one daily paper for six weeks. Ignorance is rest sometimes, but we must expect to witness more troublesome times before the great day of rest. HIRAM MUNGER.

CHEERFULNESS AT HOME.—Among parents, calmness, patience, cheerful good-nature, are of vital importance. Many a child goes astray, not because there is a want of prayer or virtue at home, but simply because home lacks sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as flowers sunbeams. Children look little beyond the present moment. If a thing pleases, they are apt to seek it; if it displeases, they are prone to avoid it. If home is the place where faces are sour, and words harsh, and fault-finding is ever in the ascendant, they will spend as many hours as possible elsewhere. Let every father and mother, then, try to be happy. Let them look happy. Let them talk to their children, especially the little ones, in such a way as to make them happy. Solomon's rod is a great institution, but there are cases, not a few, where a smile or a pleasant word will serve a better purpose.—Ladies' Repository.

For the World's Crisis.

FALSE ACCUSATIONS.

One of the first and most prominent desires that spring up in the true christian's heart is, that he may induce others to come to Christ. In proportion to his calling as a workman, so will be the greatness of his desires. He calls to his aid more or less of divine and human wisdom to aid him in forming, and also like his Master, in executing plans for this work. Meanwhile the Holy Spirit is pressing down upon him a burden for particular individuals; and enabling him to carry them in the arms of faith to the mercy-seat, and to bind them with the threefold cord of prayer, precept, and example. Then, with the prayer of faith, he grasps the sword of the Spirit; with his precept he wields it; and with his example (holy life) he strikes home to the heart, and the "old man with his deeds" is slain, and the "new man in Christ Jesus" rises to life, and goes on his way rejoicing.

We have intimated that prayer, precept and example harmonize, and in all ordinary cases are to be employed together in winning souls to Christ. Prayer and precept are necessary in their own particular spheres of usefulness; but they could neither of them supply the deficiency created by the want of a holy example; for this holy example has its own sphere of usefulness; and on it the world depend for our sincerity when we proclaim the glories of, and the necessities for, a vital, christian religion. For this cause, we are admonished to "walk worthy of our vocation;" to "let our light shine;" to "adorn the gospel we profess."

Now our chief enemy thoroughly understands this matter; and, therefore, it is a favorite method with him, and one that exhibits his diabolical character in its true light, to invent false accusations against those who serve God; and whisper them to the minds of tattlers, talebearers and slanderers; and they, having a relish for their peculiar and malignant work, soon commence operations. Since the day when he insinuated in Eden that our Creator had spoken falsely, Satan has had much experience in setting tongues on fire, and he has conferred the poison, which as a serpent he then used, to human tongues; for, says the apostle, "the poison of asps is under their tongues." This malignant disease had spread so extensively in the days of Christ, that he pronounces a woe upon those who were always spoken well of, proving that it was impossible to follow him closely without drawing upon ourselves the enmity and consequently the false accusations of him who would devour us, and prevent our usefulness. That this is a mortal disease, and must continue to afflict this poor sin-cursed earth is evident, as the apostle notices it as one of the signs of the decay of mother earth. Thanks be to God, that when the earth is raised from her death in the lake of fire, that Satan is not raised, and the earth is, and will remain pure!

Perhaps there are no christians who do not at various times, either by weakness, thoughtlessness, ignorance, or even willfulness, either to a greater or less extent, violate the law of a holy example; and this gives a foundation on which the enemy can build a superstructure. O, my brethren and sisters, if an accusation be floating around that concerns us, let us, in our place of devotion, diligently consider this matter; examine the innermost recesses of our nature, and ascertain what weaknesses, what besetting sins are ours; and if we find any guilt in this particular matter, let us prostrate ourselves before God, and cry earnestly for the cleansing blood of Jesus to be once more applied; and also implore for grace to guide us in the right way, and strengthen us in our weakness. Then let us go forth to the world humbled and consecrated, and live our repentance, that God who has shown us ourselves may never need to repeat the lesson. But if the accusations of evil are entirely false, as they often are, my suffering brothers and sisters, and our hearts are aching with that anguish which only the innocent and sensitive victims of slander can know, then let us consider Christ's suffering and endurance in this respect. He was called a "blasphemer," a "sabbath breaker," "a wine-bibber and glutton," "a companion of publicans and sinners," and even Beelzebub or Prince of devils; and he was also accused of disloyalty to the government, and of many other offences; but it is too heart-sickening to notice more of them, while we remember that he, of whom these accusations were spoken, was "the chiefest among ten thousand," and the one "altogether lovely," "who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." If such an one was falsely accused, and tried, condemned, and crucified, through false accusations and false witnesses, and whose dying agony was not sacred from the attacks of revilers, what may not those expect who are prominent for usefulness in the christian church? What may not any devoted christian expect? Hark! Jesus prays: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Can we pray for those who despitefully use us? Can we deny ourselves, take up our daily cross and follow Jesus, despising the shame? Can we endure as seeing him who is invisible? Can we follow him through evil report? Can we count it all joy when we fall into such temptation? Can we rejoice in view of the great reward, when they shall say all manner of evil against us, falsely, for Christ's sake? Oh, yes, we can endure that which is so antagonistical to our nature, because, having his Spirit within us, we become through it partakers of the divine nature, and with him baptized into the baptism of suffering, and the joys of salvation and of anticipation come from above in a river of peace to the troubled heart. Again, we lift up our heads and rejoice, that we are counted worthy to suffer with him with whom we hope to reign.

Being comforted within, we are now in a frame of mind to receive outward comfort. We find our true friends are warmer friends than ever before. Their love has been quickened, and their sympathy leads them to pray that the trial may be overruled, and prove to be not only a spiritual blessing, revealing to us heights and depths of the love of God; but that it may also prove a temporal blessing, and introduce us to the kindly notice of the honorable and just, who despise the insinuations of the slanderers, and who understand human nature well enough to look for honorable, sincere, and conspicuous piety when they hear these rantings. Witness Christ before Pilate; Paul before Agrippa. God is as able to-day to say to stories as he is to circumstances, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther;" and the work he designs to accomplish through any child of his cannot be frustrated by all the arts of Satan and his host, who can only bruise his heel. Let us stand up manfully on the Rock of Ages, and fear not to face even our accusers; and God shall cause the wrath of man to praise him, and give us our enemies as seals to our labors, and stars in the crown of our rejoicing. These broken remarks are not written because I am individually suffering from accusations, but others are. My spirit has been stirred within me to utter a few words of sympathy to all of God's children thus afflicted.

Plymouth, Mass. H. S. PAINE.

CHRISTIAN TENDERNESS.

"And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Earth, though a lovely place,
Teems with dark care;
Clasping each other comes
Death and despair:
Sorrows on every side
Frowning we find;
Sad hearts and sympathy—
Let us be kind.

Love, like the sun, can gild
All things below,
E'en tinge with golden light
Trouble and woe.
Few in this world of change
Ever find much;
Some souls ne'er felt its warmth—
God pity such!

Hopeless and heart-broken,
Living 'mid gloom,
Many are toiling on
Down to the tomb;
Others are wandering,
Morally blind:
Would we do good on earth?
Let us be kind!

What over wealth and fame
Soars far above?
What is more sweet on earth?
Friendship and love!
Who are more beautiful?
Who most refined?
Those who can pass through life
Truthful and kind!

God alone knows what pain
Some hearts endure;
How they need sympathy,
Tender and pure.
We oft in thoughtlessness
Grief round them wind;
Oh! when we can, to all
Let us be kind.

Gems.

There is but one pursuit in life, which it is in the power of all to follow, and of all to attain. It is subject to no disappointments, since he that perseveres, makes every difficulty an advancement, and every contest a victory; and this is the pursuit of virtue. Sincerely to aspire after virtue, is to gain her; and zealously to labor after her wages, is to receive them. Those that seek her early, will find her before it is late; her reward also is with her, and she will come quickly. For the breast of a good man, is a little heaven commencing on earth; where the Deity sits enthroned with unrivalled influence, every safety from danger, resource from sterility, and subjugated passion, 'like the wind and storm, fulfilling his word.'

With respect to the authority of great names it should be remembered, that he alone deserves to have any weight or influence with posterity, who has shown himself superior to the particular and predominant error of his own times;—who, like the peak of Teneriffe, has hailed the intellectual sun, before its beams have reached the horizon of common minds; who, standing like Socrates, on the apex of wisdom, has removed from his eyes all film of earthly dross, and has foreseen a purer law, a nobler system, a brighter order of things; in short a promised land! which, like Moses on the top of Pisgah, he is permitted to survey and anticipate for others, without being himself allowed either to enter, or to enjoy.

It is almost as difficult to make a man unlearn his errors, as his knowledge. Malinformation is more hopeless than non-information; for error is always more busy than ignorance. Ignorance is a blank sheet, on which we may write; but error is a scribbled one, from which we must first erase. Ignorance is contented to stand still with her back to the truth; but error is more presumptuous, and proceeds in the same direction. Ignorance has no light, but error follows a false one. The consequence is, that error, when she retraces her footsteps, has farther to go, before she can arrive at the truth, than ignorance.

Of all the passions, jealousy is that which exacts the hardest service, and pays the bitterest wages. Its service is—to watch the success of our enemy; its wages—to be sure of it.

None are so fond of secrets as those who do not mean to keep them; such persons covet secrets as a spendthrift covets money, for the purpose of circulation.

Christ never designed his church to be a bushel for the hiding of the lights, but a candlestick from which each light is to send forth its rays.

The child of God will soon know the full import of all the precious promises; the wicked will soon know what is meant by the terrible threatenings of God.

Posts of honor do not confer true glory. It is the manner in which we fill eminent stations that dignifies us, not the stations.

He that thinks he hath no need of Christ, hath too high thoughts of himself; he that thinks Christ cannot help him, hath too low thoughts of Christ.

Were we as eloquent as angels, we should please some men, some women, and some children, much more by listening, than by talking.

Men will wrangle for religion; write for it; fight for it; die for it; anything but—live for it.

A word of kindness is seldom spoke in vain. It is a seed which, even when dropped by chance, springs up a flower.

Grief knits two hearts in closer bonds than happiness ever can; and common sufferings are far stronger links than common joys.

For the World's Crisis.

CHARITY.

A certain man said "charity is love in motion," and the definition I accept. We hear of late much said of charity,—"be charitable, be charitable," without any precise understanding in what respect, or to what extent the grace shall be exercised. He who reproves sin publicly or privately is denounced as uncharitable. You must say nothing that may offend the ear. The minister must cease reproving or lose his reputation. He may discourse eloquently on the educational interests of the church, or speak much of missionary efforts, or the numerical strength of the church, or even speak of the saintly piety of the characters mentioned in holy writ, as deserving of praise; or of the fathers of the church, who have cut out in their day a choice people of exemplary godliness; or even denounce sin in those not immediately under their care, or deal out curses against gross sin, of which fashionable people are seemingly not guilty. But let him cry out against pride and vanity in the church, as exhibited in dress and extravagance, or preach against rented pews, and the custom of renting out God's house to the highest bidder, or the ungodly choirs, composed of people of doubtful character, or against bigotry and sectarian spirit; not merely hint at them, but cry aloud and spare not; show the people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins, and he will soon feel the wrath of the ungodly and godless pretenders of a glorious Savior, charging him with uncharitableness; and if he escapes without having his moral character defamed, he does well. It is fear of persecution, and a dread of starvation, which close the lips of many preachers of the present day. They do not want to be considered uncharitable, and therefore part of the price is kept back. Yes, a full consecration is never made, and God's love is gone out, if they had any.

O this false charity. A poor imitation of the genuine. It feeds men on husks, instead of gospel bread. It gives you a stone, but not bread; a serpent, and not fish; a Judas, but no Jesus; words, but no power; an uncertain sound, who shall prepare for battle. Is the sound of an advance or retreat? of an alarm or peace? It only creates confusion in God's host, and blunts the edge of the sword, that it may not cut much; but if one of God's little giants does some execution, these false teachers of a false charity heal the "hurt of the daughter of my people slightly."

Bless God, there is a genuine charity, which does not "suffer sin" upon thy neighbor. This is true, a copy of heaven's code, before which devils tremble, and hypocrites shrink. It loves the sinner more than his sin; it will tear away the idol; it will unmask his danger, and open avenues to his heart, and send hope,—God's shafts with the healing oil dripping from the point. Nothing can be substituted for this. Would we reach men, God must first take hold of us, and bring us in actual contact with "love's resistless power," or the first letter we shall never know.

How often do we see pastors encourage penitents to believe before the ground is broken up, and instead of preaching true repentance unto life, they comfort them, while standing in the waters of death. A false sense of propriety, a sickly sentimental charity, an unwarrantable modesty, has shut many a soul from the "holy unction," or the "blood of sprinkling." The priests in olden times were sprinkled with the blood of the sacrifice, but we may all now be priests to God; so let the blood be showered on the congregation of the Lord. If the charity that the prophets, Christ, and the apostles had, was true charity, this of to-day cannot be.

That charity which cries "Father, forgive them," and shakes the power of darkness, and weeps over Jerusalem's woes, will stand the judgment fires, and burn brightest in the thickest gloom.

Who does not see the church plunging into sin? Is not the ambition to excel sapping the vine of God's planting? Are not many inventions designed to bring in contact the world and church, to make the young enter her borders? I heard a young christian say they "designed amusements in the church to draw the young to the house of worship." Would not such have been formerly denounced? This false charity goes to any extent. Why try to do what the Son of God declared impossible?

You hear much of church union, but it would be a religious union of a Papal order and political power. You are unceremoniously condemned, unless you wish and talk union. Real christian union needs no conference resolutions. The Holy Ghost will write that on the heart, and preach it abroad. Without a Holy Ghost union, the forces would be powerless for good. But this charity for union is merely to cover the design, and he who can play the game best, will add strength to his party. "Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good to edification."—Paul.

ECONOMY.

"Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost."—Jesus.—JOHN 6: 12.

Economy is taught no less in revelation than in nature, where things incapacitated for one service are transferable to another. This lesson is enforced by the occasion and circumstances connected with the utterance of this language by our Savior. With but five barley loaves and two small fishes, he had miraculously fed the multitude, and could, if necessary, do it again; still he would not have that wasted which remained, and accordingly gave this direction to his disciples. There is a sad deficiency at the present time in the practise of this virtue. Means are needlessly and oftimes injuriously expended, which otherwise might have been applied to the relief of the needy. For, as Jesus said, "Ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good." What think you, dear christian? Would it not please the Lord, if that which is worse than wasted to procure tea, coffee, tobacco, and other articles injurious to the physical system, for the gratification of a perverted appetite, was appropriated to disseminate the light of the gospel to those who sit in darkness? To convey comfort and instruction, for example, to the poor freedmen of the South? If vanity was denied, lavish expenditure for costly apparel forbidden by the Scripture, does not your conscience answer in the affirmative?

A sad waste of health and time is also practised. Lives which might have been prolonged for years, had the laws of nature been obeyed, have, by intemperance and impropriety in eating, drinking, working, and by careless inattention and disobedience to their Creator's established laws of their being, been sacrificed prematurely, or by sickness and disease greatly robbed of their efficiency. Thus time, which, usefully employed, might have contributed to the glory of God and the good of mankind, is lost. Much time is also lost, wasted by those in health, from the want of a lively appreciation of its value. Said one, "Time is money." This is not all. But if it were, its waste is forbidden virtually by the words of Jesus. If it may be put for that which its right use confers, it is also knowledge and instruction. How would the improvement of fragments of time assist our acquisition of knowledge; increase our stores of information.

Punctuality is an auxiliary to the economy of time; order and expedition also. The biography of John Wesley shows him to have been eminently an economist of time. On one occasion, his horse was not brought promptly to the door. He has laid aside his pen and was obliged to wait. When the man brought it, he remarked to him, "You have caused me to lose ten minutes forever." He practised punctuality, order, and for more than sixty years early rising, at four A. M., and was enabled to perform a great amount of labor; preaching, writing, and having the direction of a large "connection," which authority was legally transferred "to a conference of a hundred traveling preachers, who should collectively act for the whole body." St. Paul must also have been eminent in this respect, who wrought, preached, wrote, and had upon him the care of all the churches. "Take care of the minutes, and the hours will take care of themselves." Lost time can never be recovered. Improve the present should be our motto.

The past we never can recall,
The present is possessed by all;
Our history each day we write,
Then let's do well with all our might.
Faithfully walk in duty's way,
Thus fill with care a page each day;
That with regret we may not look,
When memory traces life's true book.

It has been said that "without frugality none can be rich; and with it very few would be poor." It is an auxiliary of benevolence. What an impetus might be given to many benevolent causes, designed to benefit those less favored than ourselves, if these words of our blessed Savior were heeded, and also other words: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Who is there, but would improve the opportunity, if such they possessed, of administering to Christ himself? Is it not a blessing that the good we impart to Christ's brethren here, he regards as though done to him? The best economy would be to give yourself, time, ability, in short, all that you have to God, to be at his disposal and direction. Thus would the greatest efficiency be realized. Then you could say—

"I'm the Lord's. My time, my all,
I've surrendered at his call;
Feeling safest in his care,
Trusting all my interest there.

"Direct, control, suggest this day
All I design, or do, or say;
That all my powers with all their might,
In thy sole glory may unite."

By the help of God, may we so discharge our duties and improve our privileges, that when the Master comes, he may address us with the glad approval, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." PHYSIOLOGICAL LETTERS ON SLEEP.—NO. 3.

"Sleep that knits up the ravelled sleeve of care;
"The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath;
"Balm of hurt minds, chief nourisher in life's feast."
Shakspeare.

Having spoken of the nature of sleep, I have next to treat of the necessity of sleep. Certain restorative changes are essential after every effort of brain and nerve and muscle; and sleep is the most important condition by which those changes are effected. Yet, however much the body in general may require rest, it is the state of the brain which makes sleep imperatively necessary, for sleep is essentially a cerebral phenomenon, and without it the natural sustentation, vigor, and activity of the brain cannot long be maintained.

The brain is distinguished by possessing the following attributes, properties or functions:

1. It is the organic centre of sensation, without which, sight, hearing, tactile sensibility, pain, etc., could not exist; for, disconnect the optic, auditory and other nerves of special senses, and common sensibility from the brain, and the subject neither sees, hears, smells, tastes nor feels. By means of these senses all knowledge is primarily acquired. The exercise of these faculties presupposes an active state of the cerebral matter (i. e. the cellular substance of which the brain is composed.)

2. It is the great motor centre to the system. Sever a nerve of motion from its connection with the brain, and paralysis ensues.

3. It is the seat of the emotions, passions, desires, and wills; and the exercise of these faculties also presupposes an active state of the cerebral matter.

4. Consciousness, thought—all intellectual operations—are also products of an active state of the brain.

It is believed that different parts of the brain—different groups of cells—are assigned for the evolutions of these different kinds of force—for the exercise of these several functions—that, in fact, the Phrenological doctrine, in its essence, is true. (a)

As for Consciousness, what is it but the consentaneous operation of the cerebral organs, whose simultaneous action gives us the knowledge of ourselves and our external relations? Metaphysicians say that all our faculties and all our knowledge are included in Consciousness. It is equally true that they are all lodged in the recesses of the brain, and Consciousness is the offspring of a brain sanguified and vitalized. (b)

Mankind have in all ages been deluded by the notion of a duality in man's nature, as if the mental and physical principles were something distinct from, outside of, and in every essential particular, independent of the base, bodily organization. Unfortunately, however, science does not favor these views, and all the researches of the candid naturalist, aided by all the light which anatomy, physiology and chemistry can afford, throw him back upon the Scripture statement of man's origin—"God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (being). Wishing it to be understood that I regard the mental faculties as endowments of the nervous system, just as much as sight, hearing and general sensation are endowments of the nervous system.

I would call attention of the reader to the doctrine of the correlation of the physical and vital forces, so clearly enunciated by Grove, Faraday and Carpenter. It would seem apparent, from recent investigations, that the several forces which animate and move our organism are not essentially different from those whose effects we witness in the material world around us (c). Light, heat, electricity, chemical force, nerve force and mind force, are most intimately correllated. How does this theory shed light on the subject which we are considering? The brain continually receives fresh supplies of oxygen, phosphorised fats and albumen from arterial blood. The oxygen combines with the elements of the brain cells, and forms a variety of more stable products from the unstable contents of the cells. In consequence of this chemical change a certain amount of force—chemical force—is liberated, which, by virtue of being evolved through the cells of a living organism, becomes a vital force. This force manifests itself in different ways, in accordance with the nature of the "material substratum" (i. e. part of the brain,) in which it is produced. According to this view, the brain would resemble a great workshop, in whose hundred or more compartments different kinds of machinery exist and different kinds of mechanical operations are going on—all supplied with motive power from one great engine below, though that force is utilized in so many different ways. The analogy is far from perfect—the brain-force is supplied at the expense of the brain-machinery. It is so with respect to all vital force—the cells that produce it perish in the act of its production. This being the case, it is apparent that for the preservation of the vital organism, seasons of repair must follow seasons of waste and dissolution, so that the two may be exactly balanced.

The brain during the waking state is hyper-oxygenated; hence cell disintegration is constant, and is in excess of cell nutrition and cell regeneration. (d) The result is that the cerebral faculties are in an active condition: thoughts, feelings, desires, sensations, imaginations rapidly succeed each other as the brain responds to impressions made upon it. During sleep the brain is hypo-oxygenated, and nutrition and repair are in excess of waste, and consciousness, volition, etc., cease.

The principle deduced from all this is that the brain not only needs plenty of oxygen to furnish the indispensible condition of those chemico vital cell changes, and plenty of good blood, but (what is no less necessary,) plenty of sleep, that the means may be supplied and the time given to repair the waste which the mental work of the day has produced.

(a) Those who, while they may admit the leading principles of Phrenology, are disposed to believe in cranial protuberances as an index of character, would do well to consult a very remarkable chapter in Sir William Hamilton's Metaphysics, p. 648.

(b) Psychologists have greatly erred in denying the intimate relation that exists between mind and brain. They make a great hobby of Consciousness, and base everything on that, but the dependence of Consciousness on brain-states is most intimate and absolute. Witness the effect of various stimuli on the brain in heightening or abolishing Consciousness (alcohol, opium, nightshade, etc.) The patient, too, who is suffering from the phrenzy of fever, will rave about things which were supposed to be forgotten long ago. [illegible] There are latent powers in the mind, treasures of thought and knowledge and experience, down too deep [illegible]

(c) Carpenter's Physiology, p. 541.

(d) I wish it were in my power to make this difficult subject more intelligible to the general reader. It is unfortunately the fact that nobody knows much about it. Science is every year doing something toward unravelling the mysteries of our being, but we may never know all.

CANCERS.

DAMP IN HOUSES.

From various causes there are often accumulations of dampness in houses, and especially in sleeping apartments, which prove very deleterious to health. I recollect one season, in a certain locality, that the month of July was very wet, and dampness so accumulated in closets that many found clothing mildewed, and even articles hanging in large and pretty-well ventilated rooms were thus affected. The result was, that this community, a few weeks later, was visited by a terrible dysentery, which carried many, especially children, to the grave.

When clothing or carpets, or any fabrics, are allowed to remain damp for any considerable time, the emanations from them poison the air, and this poison is taken into the system, and accumulates there till it results in some epidemic or epidemic disease, and every year carries its thousands to the grave.

Now, for this liability to disease there is a remedy; and that is, to cause every article in which moisture is liable to accumulate, to be thoroughly dried. Let clothing be often exposed to the heat of the sun, and if this is not practicable on account of long-continued rains, let it be hung by the fire until thoroughly dried. This should be done often. A damp carpet, especially in a sleeping-room, is very unhealthy. Straw under the carpets of bed rooms is a cause of much disease. Damp cellars, or damp earth under the floor of back rooms, or any accumulations of dampness in or about any part of a dwelling, are contrary to the laws of hygiene, and are destructive to health.—Health Reformer.

DIARRHEA.—Diarrhea is often cured by maintaining perfect quietude on a bed, and eating acid fruits or berries in their natural state while ripe, raw, and fresh. If the acid fruit fails, eat nothing for a few days but common rice, parched brown, like coffee, then prepare in the usual way.

AGAIN.

Once more above our heads they meet,
These clouds of wrath;
Again we walk with naked feet
A fiery path.

Again the ruthless tyrant's sway
Each heart appals;
Deeper upon our darkened way
The shadow falls.

Yet through the gloom a single ray
Drives back despair,
While in the grave's dark night we lay
Our treasures fair.

A ray that eighteen hundred years
Ago was shed
Abroad, to dry the bitter tears
That crown our dead;

It tells us that God holds the key
Of each low grave;
And that the time draws nigh when he
Will come to save;

It tells us that those little forms
Shall surely rise,
To dwell in lands unknown to storms,
Or clouded skies.

How can we mourn like those who doubt
What Paul hath said?
Flinging hope's starry banner out,
Above our dead.

Without this faith how cold and dim
This world would be;
Now we exultant point to Him,
Who brings death's key.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.—No. 4.

III. Matt. 13: 24–30;—"The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field; but while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way; but when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest, and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather ye the wheat into my barn."

From the thirty-sixth to the forty-third verses inclusive of the chapter, we have the following explanation of this parable:

"Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house; and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field. He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

In our Lord's exposition of this parable the following points appear:

1. Two kinds of seed are sown,—the good and the bad; the children of the kingdom, and the children of the wicked one.

2. They are both sown in one field,—the kosmos; and grow together until the harvest.

3. The harvest is the end of the world. The Greek word, here translated world, is aioon, which signifies age. Hence the harvest is the end of the age.

4. The children of the wicked one are to be gathered out of the kingdom by the angels.

5. The kingdom does not appear until the gathering time arrives, which is yet future.

If, now, the kingdom does not appear this side the gathering time, and the gathering time has not yet arrived, the kingdom is yet future.

IV. Matt. 25: 31–34;—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats. And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on his left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

We have here the following points:

1. The Son of man is to come in his glory, and all the holy angels, the reapers, are to come with him.

2. He is then to sit upon the throne of his glory, and the nations are to be gathered before him, and to be separated.

3. The saints are then to inherit the kingdom. All this is yet future.

If, therefore, the kingdom does not come until the Lord comes with his holy angels, and he has not yet thus come, the kingdom is yet future.

V. Luke 19: 11–15;—"He [Jesus] added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said, therefore, a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come. . . . And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him."

In this quotation we notice the following points:

1. The disciples thought that the kingdom would immediately appear.

2. This parable was used to correct that impression; for it was spoken "because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear."

The parable alludes, I think, to a custom in use at the time it was uttered. When one aspired to royal honors, he went up to Rome to receive permission of rulership from the Roman Emperor. Having received authority, he then returned to his territory, and established his kingdom. It would seem, therefore, that our Lord represents the establishment of his own kingdom, in regard to time, by this custom. The Savior, who is represented by the nobleman, is now in the far country, which is heaven, whither he ascended when he left the earth, his territory; and when he returns, he will establish his kingdom.

If, therefore, the kingdom does not come until the Nobleman returns, and the Nobleman is still in the far country, the kingdom is yet in the future.

VI. In the 21st chapter of Luke, we have a record of the signs that are to precede our Savior's second advent. We quote from the twenty-fourth to the thirty-first verses:

"And they [the Jews] shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh. And he spake to them a parable: Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

In analyzing this passage, we discover the following points:

1. The signs here given are to precede the Savior's second coming.

2. After the signs are seen, the Son of man is to come in a cloud with power and great glory.

3. When the signs begin to appear, redemption draws nigh.

4. Inasmuch as we know by the shooting forth of the leaves of the trees that summer is nigh, so, likewise, by the appearance of the signs that foretell the second coming of the Son of man, we are to know that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Hence the day of redemption and the kingdom of God come when Christ comes. One of the signs (the shaking of the powers of heaven) is yet future.

If, therefore, the kingdom of God is said to be nigh at hand," when the signs that foretell the second advent are seen, and one of the signs (the shaking of the powers of heaven) is yet to appear, the kingdom of God is yet future.

VII. I now invite your attention to Paul's language as recorded in 2 Tim. 4: 1;—"I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word." Paul here teaches that the kingdom appears when Christ appears to judge the living and the dead. This must be apparent to every unbiassed mind; for the judgment takes place at Christ's appearing, and it takes place at the kingdom; and, hence, as the living and the dead are to be judged at Christ's appearing, the kingdom must appear when Christ appears, in order for the judgment to take place at his kingdom.

If, now, the kingdom appears when Christ appears to judge the quick and the dead, and Christ has not yet appeared to judge the quick and the dead, the kingdom is yet future.

VIII. Rev. 11: 16–19;—"And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever. And the four and twenty elders which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces and worshiped God, saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come, because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned. And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth."

Upon this passage, I remark:

1. When the kingdom comes, the nations will be found in a state of anger.

2. With the kingdom comes God's wrath against the living wicked.

3. With the kingdom comes the time when God will reward his servants the prophets, and the saints, and all them that fear his name, small and great. And with the reward the Savior will come himself. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be."—Rev. 22: 12. Christ is yet to come, and hence the time of reward is yet to come.

If, therefore, the time of reward comes with the kingdom of God, and the time of reward is yet to come, the kingdom is yet future.

I believe I have now shown conclusively that the kingdom of God is yet future; and here I rest the argument. Other arguments, equally as strong, and as conclusive, as those already produced, could be brought forward to prove the futurity of the kingdom; but I do not think it necessary. Enough has been written to convince you, if you are to be convinced by argument. True, it is all against the popular theory of the day; but why should we care for a popular theory, when we know that it is without the sanction of the word of God? Let us embrace the truth wherever we find it, even if the whole world should turn against us. This is the only safe course that we can pursue. Remember that popularity is a poor guide, so far as truth is concerned.

The Savior, during his ministry, uttered many truths that were far from being popular. The same may be said of the Apostles. But did Christ or the Apostles shrink from the truth because it was unpopular? Never. Neither should we. On the contrary we should imitate the example they have set before us, and let the world and ungodly church members scoff away. We should seek the approval of God rather than the approval of men. Child of God, continue to seek for truth, and when you find it, live up to it. Sinner, pause! Come to Christ and live. Become a saint, and share the glories of the coming kingdom.

PAUL'S DESIRE TO DEPART.

Bro. Grant:—The more extensive my acquaintance becomes with the sacred volume, the more convinced am I that the truths, to the advocacy of which your paper is devoted, are precisely those proclaimed by the apostles of our Lord, in the infant days of the Christian dispensation, when Jesus and the resurrection formed the ever fresh and inspiring theme of the Galilean fishermen, ere yet tradition and cunningly devised fable had shrouded in a pall of deepest darkness "the faith once delivered to the saints." But your paper comes under the eye of hundreds who believe in man's natural immortality, and that he enters at death upon his reward or punishment before either resurrection or judgment; and those friends insist that we, who believe in man's complete mortality, and his entire dependence upon Jesus and the resurrection for immortal life, should harmonize with that view Paul's "desire to depart and to be with Christ." Let us examine the passage.

1st. Did Paul, by this expression, countenance the idea that christians go to Christ at death? If so, how comes it that in this same letter to the Philippians he mentions the recovery of his brother and companion in labor, and fellow-soldier,—Epaphroditus,—from the very brink of death, as mercy vouchsafed by God to Epaphroditus? for the record reads (Phil. 2: 27), "For indeed he was sick nigh unto death; but God had mercy on him." Now if Epaphroditus, the moment he died, would have been with Christ in heaven, would Paul have written that the sending back again of his brother from the very gate of heaven, to battle on for years, perhaps, with all the ills of his self-denying and cross-bearing life, was a greater mercy than to admit him immediately to the joys of heaven? Would long life, if that view be correct, be a blessing? Would the solemn words addressed by our Lord to his disciples, in view of his death,—"As I said unto the Jews, so now say I unto you, Whither I go ye cannot come,"—would those words, we ask, have been true, if the disciples did go, at their death, whither he had gone? These are suggestive questions, and our friends must meet them fairly before we admit that death is the gate to glory.

But to the passage under consideration. What does it mean? That all may judge for themselves, I give the original Greek text, with a verbatim translation, beginning at the 21st verse. Phil. 1: 21–23. Emoi gar to zeen Christos kai to apothanein kerdos. Ei de to zeen en sarki touto moi karpos ergow, kai ti haireesomai ou gnorizo. Sunechomai gar ek ton duo teen epithumian echon eis to analusai kai sun Christo einai, pollo gar mallon kreisson. To me for the life Christ, and the to die gain. If but the life in flesh, this to me fruit of labor; and what I shall prefer I cannot tell. I am pressed for out of the two the ardent desire having for the returning and with Christ to be very for much better. Does our common English translation present the idea that the apostle intended to convey to the Philippian believers in the foregoing passage? We think not; and how the word analuo has been translated depart here, I cannot tell; for though depart is given in the lexicon as one of its meanings, I can find no instance in the Christian Scriptures where it has clearly the idea of a going away, unless it be in this passage which we are considering. When Paul wanted to express the idea of going away, as in 2 Cor. 12: 8, where, in reference to the thorn in the flesh, he says, "I besought the Lord thrice that it might depart from me," the phrase he use, is hina apostee ap emou, that it might depart from me. He expresses depart by aposte, a totally different word to the one he uses in Philippians, furnishing strong presumptive evidence that the idea of departing was not at all in his mind when he penned this passage to his brethren at Philippi. Had King James' translators rendered analuo "return" in this passage, as they have done in Luke 12: 36,—"And ye yourselves like unto men who wait for their Lord when he shall return from the wedding" (pote analusei ek toon gamoon,—when he shall return to the wedding), then the passage would be literally rendered into English as follows: "For to me Christ is life, and to die gain; and if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of labor to me; and what I shall prefer I cannot tell; for I am pressed out of both, having the ardent longing for the returning of Christ, and to be with him, for that is immensely better." The grammatical construction of the Greek text positively forbids the phrase lis to analusai to be translated by to depart; if our friends insist that depart was Paul's idea, then it must be rendered, not to depart, but for the departing,—eis to analusa is the phrase, eis for, to the, analusai departing; and the apostle could never have expressed his own departing in that form; but if he meant the returning of Christ, then the phrase is the most grammatically correct that could have been used to express that idea.

The popular view presents Paul in a doubt as to whether he would choose to live on, or die and go to heaven; although his letter to the Corinthians gives little countenance to the idea that he had any desire to die (2 Cor. 1: 8, 9), "For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble, which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength; insomuch that we despaired even of life. But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God who raiseth the dead. Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us." Is this the language of the man who desired to die? Why, then, does he speak of despairing of life? of having his trust in God who raiseth the dead? not in God who would take him in conscious glory to heaven, when he got freed from his prison-house, the body, but in God who raiseth the dead; who delivered him from so great a death, not from life full of trouble as it was, but from death. And now the question forces itself upon us, Could Paul employ, when writing to his brethren at Corinth, such earnest language of gratitude to God for delivering him from death, and tell his brethren at Philippi that he had an earnest desire to die? Nay, verily. Paul was never guilty of inconsistency and contradiction so palpable and glaring, as our orthodox friends would make him, by interpreting a single passage in one of his letters in direct opposition to his uniform teaching in his other letters, and in direct opposition, too, to the oft-repeated and plainly expressed sentiments of that very letter itself.

But our friends ask us how, from this standpoint, can Paul's expression, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain," be rationally explained? how, if death be an enemy, could it be gain to the apostle to be put under the power of that enemy and held there until the hour comes when "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth"? To this we answer that though death is always spoken of in the Scriptures as an enemy, and life as a blessing, still, life may in some exceptional cases be made so miserable, by privation and persecution, by affliction and suffering, as to render its burden almost intolerable, and an escape from its troubles into the unconsciousness of death, in the hope of a glorious resurrection, almost desirable. A glimpse at 2 Cor. 11, will convince all that Paul had his full share of life's bitterness,—immeasurably more than any are called upon to bear now.

But are our friends quite sure that the gain here mentioned was personal gain to Paul, rather than to Christ? It seems to me plain from the statement in the 20th verse that gain to himself is not thought of by the apostle. "But that with all boldness, as always, so now also, Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death." If Paul lives, he labors on in his Master's vineyard, building up his church, and preaching to perishing sinners the glorious news of life and immortality through Christ; and if he dies a martyr's death, and seals his testimony with his blood, the cause of his adorable Master is still magnified, and gain brought to the Redeemer through the fidelity of his servant. The apostle was so completely absorbed in his Master's work, that he had no will of his own in the matter, but was entirely prepared for any circumstance that his Master's cause required, whether life or death; but he longed for another circumstance (the word epithumian, rendered desire, means ardent longing, burning desire), immensely preferable to either life or death; and that was the returning of Christ, and to be with him.

And now we may be permitted to put a question or two to our orthodox friends. If Paul teaches in the first chapter of this epistle that at his death he would go to be in conscious happiness with Christ in heaven,—then what meaning can be attached to his language in the same epistle, 3: 10, 11, where, speaking of Christ, he says, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." What does this intense, earnest desire to attain to the resurrection of the dead mean?—if the apostle would never die, but would merely put off the prison-house, the body, and go to live in conscious happiness and glory in heaven? If the corruptible body, in which he suffered, and from which he was delivered at that event in his life that we foolishly call death, should never be raised from the dead, what loss would Paul suffer? Obviously, none at all, but the most positive advantage; for if he has been capable of living and enjoying heaven's glories for thousands of years before the resurrection takes place, he would of course live on forever without a resurrection, and falsify his own language to the Corinthians;—"Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," if there be no resurrection of the dead. What objection, then, can be made to the reading of this letter to the Philippians, as one harmonious whole? and seeing in the earnest and intense desire to attain unto the resurrection of the dead, expressed in the third chapter, the most happy harmony and agreement with the ardent longing for the returning of Christ, recorded in the first,—even that Jesus who himself said, "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

The apostle was too well acquainted with our Lord's declaration to his disciples, "Whither I go ye cannot come," to teach that they could go there until the fulfillment of that endearing promise made by the Man of sorrows to his weeping disciples, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also"; and consequently the apostle points, in all his letters to the churches, to that grand event, the coming again, as the glorious centre around which all their hopes and confidence and faith must cluster: "That ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ"; "That I may rejoice in the day of Christ." "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." This is Paul's language to the Philippians. To the Colossians he says, "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." To the Corinthians he says, "Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." To Titus, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." To Timothy in a similar strain. To the Thessalonians, he dwells on the coming, and dries up the tears of affection that flow for sleeping relatives, by presenting the scriptural hope of life from the dead when Jesus comes, rather than the popular idea of attaining to eternal life and heaven without a resurrection; and surely, if the apostle believed that the relatives of those Thessalonian mourners were then in conscious happiness in heaven, it was most cruel not to comfort them by imparting that knowledge; and the circumstance that he does not impart it, is very strong evidence that he did not believe it.

There is harmony, then, we think, in all the apostle's teachings; and be it ours while recognizing that harmony, and defending it in our own feeble way, to manifest that spirit of meek forbearance and gentleness to our brethren who differ from us that so eminently characterized our Master; and never for a moment deceive ourselves with the idea that christian truth can be successfully defended in an antichristian and uncharitable spirit. We sometimes forget that the weapons of the christian warfare "are not carnal"; and Satan, if he cannot lull us into perfect indifference to the truth, may, nevertheless, partially gain his end by prompting us to defend it in his spirit. We require, then, to sit daily at Jesus' feet, and learn of him who was meek and lowly, and seek to have his spirit imparted to us, by which our natures shall be transformed and assimilated to his own; and then, when he comes, he shall take us to himself, and so "we shall ever be with the Lord." Yours in this blessed hope, Thos. Davidson.

WORDS NEEDED.—No. 3.

I have a few things to say touching the self-denial, sacrifice, and reproach of Christ's disciples. Nothing is more self-evident than the fact that no man can be Christ's unless he follows Christ's words, example, and practice. If closely followed, they will bring a separation by making him unlike the world, and those that love it. We shall then make all the sacrifices and self-denial demanded, and it will be our greatest pleasure to do so. But will all have the same sacrifice and self-denial to make? It is even so; and in various ways we shall feel the force of the command, "deny thyself" and take the cross. The preacher will continually find his a path of self-denial; his wife will find it, if faithful; yea, every true disciple will of necessity share largely in the valuable ingredient. We are called upon, when we proclaim our loyalty to the Lord Jesus, to lay all upon the altar,—worldly possessions, good name, honor from men, ease, pleasure, and comfort, unless it comes in following Jesus. The more we do for Christ, in the cause, the greater the blessing. Some think the preacher makes but little sacrifice; he has blessings abundant, and all goes easy with him. I am free to confess that we make very little sacrifice; but when compared with those with whom we labor, who makes the greatest? The man of God that earns his fifteen dollars per week, and gives one or two dollars to help the cause in preaching the gospel, or spreading the truth, you think very liberal. But you entirely forget that the preacher gives all that he gets, less than that weekly, if his time is worth as much as yours. This I say for the simple reason, that we are to bear burdens with the brethren, and there is in the gospel an equality according to what a man hath; and we, as believers in Christ and his soon coming, should give the world a demonstration of this doctrine, and if right, we should lose all the self-denial it would bring upon us. But self-denial and reproach need hardly be named. If we were more dead to the world and alive to God, and made more sacrifice with corresponding effort, we should have to bear more reproach, and it would be much better for us spiritually. Our tendencies are all downward to the world; and unless we make a mighty effort by faith, we shall glide down stream and be carried off in the current.

The great danger besetting us is the love of the world, of reputation, and a good name. Thus our spiritual life is gone; our interest in the truth gone; and love for Jesus gone; yea, our identity gone, and all those in this condition are satisfied to have it so. Thus the love of many has grown cold; hence our affinity to this miserable, worldly, silver-slipper religion, going down to ruin!

The Lord calls upon us to separate ourselves from all ungodliness and worldly lusts; to live "soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." The Lord is coming. The signs declare it. The word of God is reliable. Soon the judgment will sit, the books will be opened, and we shall all be there to receive for deeds done in the body, "whether it be good or bad." I would say in the language of inspiration, "Come out from among them," and I add, stay out; yes, forever out of all this worldly policy, truth dishonoring system. It leads to death.

Now I call on preachers and people, looking for soon coming redemption, to turn over a new leaf, by grace, through faith, and once more to the world show that our faith is a living reality. Then others would be induced to run to the fountain where life could be made sure. Then love, yea, brotherly love unfeigned; good fellowship, sweet harmony and persevering effort for the good of all, would be the result. More anon.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE BRN. SCATTERED ABROAD, GREETING.

Dear Brothers and Sisters, I greet you to-day,
From a heart o'erflowing with love;
May our dear Father bless you, I earnestly pray,
With wisdom that comes from above.

Have on the whole armor of God, my dear friends,
That ye may be able to stand;
Take the bright shield of faith, that Christ's soldier defends,
From the darts of the enemy's hand.

Take the sword of the Spirit, the true word of God,
Unfurl the bright banner of truth,
For the enemy's host rolls in like a flood,
To lead away captive our youth.

Men are lovers of pleasure, not lovers of God,
Of many their love shall wax cold;
Unholy, unthankful, despisers of good,
Of these the apostles foretold.

O, quench not the Spirit, dear friends, nor despise
The word of sure prophecy true;
Events which are passing each day 'fore your eyes,
Are but as bright omens to you;

Of the glory that cometh, will soon be revealed
In the advent of Jesus our King;
For soon in their foreheads his saints shall be sealed,
And loud their hosannas shall ring.

To him who hath purchased their crowns with his blood,
All glory and honor they'll bring,
And dwelling as kings and priests unto God,
His praises unceasing shall sing.

BURDENS.

Bro. Grant:—While attending a colored meeting not long since, I got a very important idea from one of the brethren respecting prayer. He was lamenting his barrenness of soul, and contrasting his present state of feeling with former years; "And," said he, "when I go to God in prayer, I want to carry a load." We of course understand what he meant; for we think there are few professors who have not at some time prayed merely for form's sake, without much of a burden or spirit of prayer. But such prayers are not of much benefit to any one. We know the horse is a noble animal, but he never appears so grand as when he is harnessed up, and drawing a load. He is then in his legitimate sphere of usefulness. And so a Christian appears the most Christ-like when he is burdened with a desire for the salvation of souls.

There are many professors who are like the horse in his pasture, gamboling and prancing about without a load. They are in the church, and love to feed in the Lord's pasture; but are seldom seen with a load, or making any effort for the salvation of others. The real, earnest harvesters in the Lord's vineyard are comparatively few, compared with the great mass of professing christians who are often in the way of those who are trying to get souls converted and prepared for the kingdom.

The reason why so few are burdened with a desire for the salvation of others is, they do not desire it. They seem to be content with praying for themselves. When we hear prayers in a church all confined to "us," we conclude the stream of benevolence runs very shallow.

Another thought respecting burdens is, if we labor for the salvation of others, we shall have a spirit to pray for them; and this is according to Scripture,—faith and works, neither of which, separately, will be effective.

Another thought upon this subject is, that if we want to enjoy much of the joys of salvation, the scriptural and only way to obtain it is to go to work in the Lord's vineyard, and try and get souls converted and prepared for the coming and kingdom of Christ. Lord, burden the church with a spirit of labor for souls. D. N. Smith.

THE GREEK ARTICLE.

The Latin language has no article; so that Christus may mean Christ, or the Christ; and domus, a house, or the house. Had the Scriptures been originally written in that language, he who should translate them into English would have been compelled to use or omit the article, simply in accordance with his own general knowledge and judgment. The Hebrew and Greek languages, in which the Scriptures were first written, both have the article; and in most cases it is safe to imitate them in regard to its use in English, where the genius of our language will permit. Our common English Version does not always pursue this course, or maintain consistency with itself, in this particular.

For example: Matt. 1: 20 reads: "Behold, the angel of the Lord," with the definite article, pointing out some particular "angel," instead of "an angel," as the Greek and the Revised New Testament express it. V. 23: "A virgin;" instead of "the virgin." The prophecy, both in the Hebrew of the Old Testament and the Greek of the New, has the article: and thus points to one particular person, who should enjoy the distinguished and much coveted honor of giving birth to the promised Savior. In ch. 2: 13, "the angel;" instead of "an angel." And in v. 19, correctly, "an angel." In all these passages, the Revised Testament follows the Greek.

In Matt. 5: 15, Mark 4: 21, and Luke 11: 33, the Common Version has, "under a bushel," "on a bushel," "on a candlestick;" in every instance without the definite article. The Greek and the Revised New Testament in all these instances have the article; and refer to "the bushel" and "the lamp-stand," as common and well-known utensils "in the house."

The term "Jordan" occurs in the New Testament fifteen times; always without the article in the Common version, and always with it in the Greek and the Revised Testament, as we say, when speaking of rivers, the Hudson, the Mississippi, etc.

The term "John the Baptist" also occurs fifteen times; and always with the article, in the Greek and the Revised New Testament. In thirteen of these instances, the Common version gives it correctly; and in the other two (Matt. 14: 8, and Luke 7: 20,) "John Baptist" as if "Baptist" was a mere surname; instead of "the Baptist," that is, the Immerser.

The expression "the Christ" is employed fifty-two times as an official term in the original Greek and the revised New Testament. In eighteen of these instances the Common version gives it correctly, with the article; in one, John 1: 25, "that Christ," like Beza's Latin Christus ille; and in the remaining thirty-three, as a proper name, "Christ," without the article. This is a matter of importance in the understanding of the New Testameet Scriptures; as the following examples from the thirty-three, as they read in the Revised Testament will show: Matt. 2: 4: King Herod did not wish to find some one infant that might bear the name of "Christ," but that particular one who was to be the promised Messiah, "the Christ. Luke 4: 41: "Because they knew that he was the Christ; the promised Savior of men. John 7: 31: "When the Christ comes, will he work more signs than these?" V. 41: 42: "Does the Christ then come out of Galilee? Did not the Scripture say, that the Christ comes of the seed of David?" etc. Matt. 24 5: "In my name, saying: I am the Christ." V. 23: "Lo, here is the Christ." Ch. 22: 42: "What think ye concerning the Christ?" Mark 15: 32: "Let the Christ, the King of Israel, come down now from the cross." How bitter was this taunt! Luke 23: 35: "Save himself, if he is the Christ." V. 39: "If thou art the Christ, save thyself and us." Ch. 24: 46: "Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer."

In these passages, and the forty others I might quote, "the Christ" is an official title, meaning the anointed of the Lord, promised in the Old Testament, to come as the Deliverer and King of God's people. Please compare with the above readings those found in the Common Version.

Luke 18: 13, in the Common Version, "a sinner: Revised New Testament, "the sinner," like the Greek text. Here is a personal application of truth, on the part of the convicted publican, and a personal confession of guilt. "God be merciful to me, the sinner," who needs thy "mercy;" the transgressor, who must obtain pardon, or perish in his sins as he deserves! C. W. Waterhouse.

For the World's Crisis.

"EARTHLY, SENSUAL, DEVILISH."

The longest life is truly short enough, and if the heavenly is not obtained, the shortest time, indeed, is long enough. It were enough for most of us had we our birth and death at once, for we sum up our years in gathering dust, and sighs and tears, anxieties and many fears, suffering and sin, a crushing load. Alas! we "put bitter for sweet," a thousand follies sought; no mind, no heart, praising "the right, and yet the wrong pursue." Counting humility as good, but pride as better still, though our sworn enemy (there are many professors counting this way); thus recklessly we go, ignoring objects of eternal weight; deeming as worthy all their contraries. Thus it is with fancy's worshipers, the ministers at folly's court, the servitors of hell. We make of life one continuous dream, the sleepers finally awaking to the dread reality of despair and the second death. We turn, indeed, our being to a curse. But if in Christ we trust, living to him instead of self, then the sinful strife, begun in tears and ending with a sigh, becomes the life divine. Faith, in increase becomes "the stairs whereby our knowledge climbs to its Creator." Few are walking right, hence the many fall. "Ever learning," but never coming "to the knowledge of the truth." It is not their heart's desire; knowing not themselves, much less the Lord, whose will they make the minor; their own the major point.

Alas! the "sweet for bitter" put, while yet the book of books, with heavenly art, shows virtue never foul, vice never fair; of both examples give to follow those, but these with care to shun. It teaches that pride was never made for man; "virtue alone is happiness below." He who lives to God, most truly lives unto himself. How full the book, declaring that unless we are heaven-born, we have no abiding life; no immortality.

"Precious Bible, book divine," well beloved, to it believers cleave, those who are looking for Jesus most of all; beholding life alone in Christ. Through him we are blest, through grace and faith; beholding first the cross, and then the crown. It is labor and suffering here, and there "his rest" be "glorious." Seeing, by faith, the kingdom as at hand. The King descending soon, will take his waiting bride. O, let us, brethren, be endowed with grace to minister to sinners all around. Thus let us, brethren, not slothful be ("the time is short"), but still by tongue, by pen, example, tracts, at home, abroad, everywhere, be sowing seed for the great harvest time, now so very near. C. Greene.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 5, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

We are drawing near the time of our great national gathering at Springfield. We expect to see the largest meeting of those who are looking for the second coming of Christ, that ever assembled. Let us all pray that it may also be the best; that we may all be one according to the prayer of our dear Savior.

SOUTH READING.

In South Reading, ten miles from Boston, is a church looking for the coming kingdom. We spent the Sabbath, July 19th, with them, and had a profitable meeting. They have a pleasant hall, near the depot, over the bank. We found an ear to hear. One rose for prayers. The truth is spreading in that pleasant village.

We can hardly find a town, village, or school district now, where there are not some who are looking for the coming of the Son of man, and others who are becoming interested, and are anxious to hear on the subject. There is now great encouragement to labor in the vineyard of the Lord. Our working time must soon close. Let our last hours be well spent.

WORCESTER.

We spent Sabbath, July 26th, with the church at Worcester, and found it in a healthy condition. Many in the city who in former years stood aloof from our meetings, and sneered at our views of the Bible, are now becoming deeply interested, and are anxious to hear. They crowded the commodious place of worship, and gave the best attention to the evidences which show that our Savior is about to make his second advent to this world. On this point there is no room for doubt, when the reasons of our hope are candidly examined. The Brn. and Srs. in W. are strong in faith, and anxiously waiting for the day of the Lord.

THIS GENERATION.

Many have stumbled at Matt 24: 34, and applied it to the Jews living in the days of the Savior. We think this is a very great mistake. After the Savior had spent some time in answering the question of the disciples: "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" giving them a long chain of events, embracing the period of martyrdom during the Papal persecutions; he brings them down to the signs that were to be seen in the heavens and then upon the earth, showing as clearly that his coming is near, as the leaves of spring show that summer is approacning, and then says: "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." What generation? Evidently the one that should see the signs. What signs? The ones for which the disciples asked, which would show when Jesus was about to appear the second time. These signs could be of no use to any but those living in the last generation. Had they been seen a thousand years since, they would have been forgotten, and of no force now.

We think that by "this generation" the Savior meant the one that should see the signs of his coming. The signs to which he referred have been seen in the present generation; therefore, it is reasonable to conclude that we are now living in the last generation that will live before the personal advent of our Lord. If we follow the common version, we can see no chance for any other conclusion.

In the Prophetic Times, edited by Dr. Seiss, we find the following rendering of the passage: "Verily, I say unto you that this generation shall not pass away till these things begin to be." If this rendering could be sustained, the passage would then show that the generation living at the time the Savior was upon earth, would not pass away before the chain of events he had mentioned would begin to be accomplished; and when we see them "all," then we might "know that he is near, even at the doors." In the noted chain of events, which must take place before Christ can come the "second time," we are now just at the last in the series; consequently, we "know that it [his coming] is near, even at the doors." The only safe position now is to be watching and waiting for the appearing of our great King. Whatever view may be taken of the "generation" mentioned in Matt. 24: 34, it is certain that we have now come to a period when the last things in the last days are now fulfilling before our eyes.

Are we ready for the appearing of the Son of man? Are we keeping ourselves unspotted from the world? Have we that Spirit that leads us to love our enemies? Are we free from all hatred and variance? Are we patient, long-suffering, gentle, meek and kind to all? Do we avoid all evil speaking and backbiting? Are we holy in all manner of conversation? free from evil surmisings, and evil imaginations? Let us remember, it is only "the pure in heart" that have the promise.

WAR CLOUDS IN EUROPE.

There is no doubt but that a terrible war storm is gathering in Europe, which must spread into Asia before its close. So it looks now, and the evidence thickens every week. Merchants and bankers, who are very observing men, are preparing for great events among the nations. They expect their commencement before the close of the present year. The world is watching the steps of Napoleon with almost breathless interest. It is evident that "the wonderful man" is about to do some great and new thing. The closing scenes of "the time of the end" must be at hand.

The Boston Herald of July 29th says:—

"Private letters from a well informed source in Paris speak of an approaching war between France and Germany as inevitable, to commence before the year is out. Some event of great importance, precipitating the result, it is hinted, will occur as soon as Count Bismark returns to Berlin. These views, it is said, are very widely entertained in commercial and financial circles, and merchants and bankers alike are shaping things accordingly."

TREMONT CAMPMEETING.—The Tremont campmeeting was excellent. More about it next week.

HELP FOR CAMP-GROUND.—We would say to those interested, we are now supplied with help to fit up the camp-ground.

QUERIES.

BRO. GRANT:—May I ask you for some light, through the Crisis, on the two following verses; viz., Job 14: 22,—"But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn"; and 1 Kings 17: 21,—"And he stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord, my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again."

JOHN F. RATHGEBER.

We do not see any difficulty in Job 14: 22. The pronoun him either stands for the man or the soul. Suppose we should reason as do our opponents, and say the soul is not the man, because it is "within him"; consequently must be distinct from the man or the him. Then we would reply, The flesh is not the man, because it is "upon him"; therefore the flesh is one thing, and the man—the him—another. The coat upon a man—the him—is not the man—the him—who is within the coat. Now let us put this and that together. 1. The soul is not the man—the him—because it is "within him." That which is within an apple is not the apple itself. 2. The flesh is not the man—the him—because it is "upon him." That which is upon the apple is not the apple itself. We have something upon the apple, and something within the apple; but what is the apple? Why, the truth is, that which is upon and within the apple are but parts of the whole apple.

We might take the stand-point of our opponents, and reason further, and say, the him is not the physical organism, because the flesh, which is the physical part, is "upon him." Then we would meet the objector and say, the him is not the soul, for his soul is "within him." Then we would ask our opponent to tell us who is that him, who is neither the soul nor the body? which has the flesh upon him, and the soul within him? Does the Bible give us any information concerning such as him? We think it comes very near that him, whom the poet represents as going "beyond the bounds of time and space," when he dies.

But what does Job mean in 14: 22? Why simply that he has pain and sorrow. The word nephesh, rendered soul, is frequently translated desire, representing a state of feeling. By "his soul within him," we understand Job to mean, that he had sorrowful feelings within him. He had mourning desires towards the sons who had died.

When a pronoun in the possessive case is used to denote the man, that same pronoun may be used to denote every part of the man; but neither of those parts is the man, or something that will exist as a conscious being distinct from the man, when he is dead. For instance, we may speak of a man's head, his spirit, his eyes, his ears, his heart, his soul, his feet, his lungs, etc., till we have named every part of the man. Would it be correct to say that the man is distinct from all these, because he is the possessor of all these parts? Nay, verily. These are only parts of the man, as the wheels are parts of the watch. We should not say that either of the wheels is the watch, and will keep time by itself, but the watch possesses all the parts, and the parts combined form the watch. So in man; neither of the parts is the man, but the combination is what constitutes him a rational and accountable being; and when dead he stops acting and thinking.

THE CHILD'S SOUL.

Relative to "the soul of the child," but a few words are necessary to show the obvious meaning of the passage in 1 Kings 17: 21. This is the only place in the Bible where anything is said about the return of the soul. The word nephesh here rendered soul is translated life one hundred and twenty times in the Bible. In the account of the child's death we read, "His sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left him. 1 Kings 17: 17. When "the breath of life" left the child, he died. Elijah took the child "and laid him upon his own bed," and prayed unto the Lord that his soul, or life, might "come into him again." And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul [the life] of the child came into him again, and he revived. And Elijah took the child and brought him down out of the chamber [not out of heaven] into the house, and delivered him unto his mother; and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth."

The Septuagint is in harmony with what we have said. It reads as follows:—"And when he had breathed on the child three times, and called on the name of the Lord, he said, O Lord, my God, I beseech thee let this child's LIFE be restored to him. And so it came to pass, and the child cried."

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES, QUERIES, & OBJECTIONS.

16. Examine Philippians 1: 21-24. "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labor; yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and to be with Christ; which is far better. Nevertheless, to abide in the flesh is more needful for you." Notice (1) "To die is gain." How could death be gain, if it only reduced him to a state of unconsciousness? (2) "To depart" was to "be with Christ." How could he be with Christ in such a sense as to make it "far better," without being in a state of conscious bliss? (3) The apostle assumed that it was possible to abide out of the flesh, or what force would there be in the expression—"abide in the flesh"? Would not a plain reader take this passage to teach a conscious existence immediately after death? If on any principle of honest exposition this text can be made to bear a different meaning, please let the light shine.

A. A. PHELPS.

Rochester, N. Y., June, 1868.

For an answer to the foregoing, we would refer our Bro. to an article in another column from Bro. Davidson, of Quebec.

DEVILISM.

The heading of this article we believe is the proper name for Spiritualism. We have not a doubt but the whole system of Spiritualism is of Satanic origin, and is his last grand effort to overthrow christianity and ruin men and women forever. Let every follower of Jesus stand up boldly against it and as clear from its influence as they would from the bite of a rattlesnake. We think but very few are aware of the evils of this system.

We have just received the following from a friend of our early days:—

"BRO. GRANT:—I would write you to tell of the trouble into which I have fallen from having listened to that most vile of all heresy, Spiritualism. How greatly I wish it were in my power to speak to a dying world words which might enlighten them, and cause them to see into what an abyss of error one falls the moment he gives heed to the voice which teaches that the spirits of the dead return to earth, and are conversant with us. 'Doctrines of devils' should be legibly inscribed upon every article which falls from the pen of a writer of this belief, which can only be sustained by a total denial of the truth.

To speak of myself, I have to lament that I have ever given a moment of time to that which I now consider the vilest of errors I have ever known. To relate to you my experience in this letter, would be impossible. It has indeed been a sorrowful one. For more than one year, a voice has almost constantly talked to me, styling itself Jehovah. The devil incarnate could not talk more vile. If any are giving their attention to this doctrine of devils, would that they may be induced from my experience to beware, lest they fall into like anguish of spirit. Should this fall into the hands of any who may wish to know more of my experience, I shall be truly willing to correspond with them, trusting it may be the means, in the hands of our heavenly Father, of casting light upon the path of some wayfaret as to the fallacy of Spiritualism. Truly yours, J. T. PEES.

Hanover, N. J."

LET THEM SPEAK.

Here is another letter from an old friend and preacher of the gospel, who writes a bit of his experience with the demons. We are glad some have the courage to expose the demons in the terrible work they are doing at the present time. Worse things are at hand. Let us all be armed with the whole armor of God, that we may be able to withstand all the wiles of the devil and his angels.

"BRO. GRANT:—I have long felt impressed to write a word or two to you, but I hardly knew why. It may, perhaps, appear at some time or other. Well, first of all I want to say, that you have long had my most hearty sympathy in your "good fight of faith" against modern Demonism. I know well what this mighty warfare means. I know that those who engage in it successfully must have more than mortal courage, energy, and wisdom. I feel that the servants of Christ are to do some greater fighting in this final struggle than they have ever yet done; and that they need to become very intimate with Christ, and receive from him that wisdom and power which inhere in him alone, of all the sons of men and God.

From the first of the mysterious workings of the demons, I took the ground that they were such: and have steadily believed it ever since. I took strong ground against them; exposed their fraud in various ways, both in their circles and in more public places. They tried for a long time to secure my co-operation in their work, declaring that I would be a first rate medium; and that they would, through me, reveal important matters to the world; thus flattering my vanity. They also placed small sums of money in my pockets in some mysterious way, and took money from me as mysteriously, when there was no visible person near me; and I was told that I should be well supplied with means if I would serve their cause. Finding that I would not enlist for the best bounty they could offer, they set about to destroy both my influence and my life. They have sought avenues through which they might enter, possess, and direct me to acts of self-destruction. I have felt their presence, as a horrible power of evil, from which I could only escape by divine aid. And the Lord has helped me to close up, at least some of the avenues through which they gained advantage over me; and I only wait the Master's bidding to renew publicly my special warfare against them. They, knowing this fact, have for two years or more been trying to head me off; and in two ways: first, by shutting up the hearts of the people against me; and second, by making frequent attempts upon my life.

If I tell you that I have at several times been conscious of a struggle going on near me, between the demons, and my kind, good angel, you will perhaps think me mad; but I can tell you in truth, that I have been thus conscious; nor am I mad. Nor yet am I intoxicated; for I have steadily practiced and advocated total abstinence from intoxicating beverages for between two or three years past.

Perhaps you wish to know if I have fears for the final issue in my case? No. For I knew that in the struggle between right and wrong, the right must of necessity triumph. Having taken my stand in the golden pillared temple of truth, I can see that it is self sustaining, and all will triumph who remain in it. While on the other hand, I can see that error is self-destroying, and cannot sustain its votaries.

Now a word about the 'Crisis.' I consider it an excellent family paper; I know of no better. I do not endorse all that is taught in the paper (nor any other one that I have seen,) but I like it. God bless your efforts with great success, is the prayer of thy friend, PHILOM."

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

Now in press—by the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The type-work was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market.

"SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED By the Testimony of the Bible and its Own Witnesses."

A Large 12 Mo., with Covers, by M. D. Wellcome.

This is a new and important pamphlet, prepared expressly to meet a want hitherto unsupplied. Among the many works written exposing the evils of SPIRITUALISM, none have been adapted for gratuitous distribution because of size and price. This work is given in a condensed form, and by having a very large edition published, can be furnished at a price to circulate extensively. Notwithstanding its brevity, it shows in a clear and concise manner the source of Spiritualism, its doctrines, corruptions, and unreliability, by the testimony of its own witnesses. Let it be scattered wherever Spiritualism is found.

Price 10 cents single copy; twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred copies. For sale at this office.

NEW TRACT.

FAITH ILLUSTRATED BY PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AND INCIDENTAL NARRATIONS. Contents: Personal Experience; The Lady who wanted the witness before she believed; An Incident; That is too simple; Extract from a Letter, copied from a Tract.

In neat covers, 28 pp. 8 cents postpaid; two copies for 10 cents. For sale at this office.

THE MILLENNIUM.

This is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. It is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second coming of Christ. For sale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage. Ten copies for $1.00; fifty copies, $4.00.

IMPORTANT TRUTHS.

We have received a little book for children, entitled "Important Truths." It is a book that every child should read. It is by Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D., and published by E. P. Woodward and Co., 32 Faneuil Hall Square, Boston. Price 20 cts.. $1.50 per dozen. For sale at the Crisis office.

Every child, who is old enough to go to Sabbath school, should have one of these books. It takes hold of one of the ruling sins of the age, which is leading nearly all the youth of our land to mental, physical and moral ruin. It is truly "A book for every child."

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

We are looking forward with pleasant anticipations to the time when we shall meet with dear friends, brethren and sisters, in the tented grove. We have been having blessed good meetings here in Webster of late, and one of our number has been called to preach, and has obeyed the call. He has but lately embraced our views, but he is strong in the Lord and sound in the faith, and has the entire confidence of all who know him. It is our earnest prayer that the blessing of God may ever rest upon him, and that he may see great good result from his labors. And let all the people say amen. We expect that Webster will be represented at the campmeeting. If the Lord will, and the way opens, we hope to be there. Pray for us and the little band here.

A. A. MISSION SOCIETY.

We would say to the friends of this mission—those who have responded to our calls from time to time, those who have not as yet paid in their subscription, and to all interested in the work of spreading the gospel of the kingdom, that we are all out of funds—not a dollar in the treasury; in fact, we have advanced money to keep the laborers in the field. Now, brethren and sisters, please lay this matter before the Lord, and see if he would not have you forward some of your means at once, that the good work may still go forward. GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer.

TENTING IN MAINE.

We have, as yet, kept quite still concerning our mission work beneath the tent in Maine; nor do we now design to give a report of what we have done; that alone will the great day declare. A great many, like the Athenians, have been led to say, "May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is? for thou bringest certain strange things to our ears; we would know, therefore, what these things mean?" So we have preached Jesus and the resurrection, the judgment near, and the restitution, as best we could; have scattered tracts, and left place after place praying the Lord might bless each effort; and we believe he will.

But my object in writing is to call the attention of brethren to the fact, that tent meetings can not be supported without means. We have hotel, and many other bills to pay, beside the tent-master's wages, which altogether amounts to quite a sum for every meeting. Now if we were going continually among believers, we might be well supported; but our object, so far, has been to seek new fields of labor; and I have found that begging too much in such places has a bad effect, especially after telling men we preach a free gospel, as did Jesus. To be sure, we give people a chance to give what they may please, reminding them of our expenses; but a man's heart must be converted in these days before his pocket will be effected much.

So having sought places where there seemed to be, as H—— once said, the most Devil and the least money, our contributions have come in quite sparingly, and we are falling sadly in the rear. Now, brethren and sisters of means in Maine, are you ready to help in this tent campaign? I think many of you will respond Yes! and will send, or hand immediately liberal contributions to R. R. York, Treasurer of the Mission cause, Portland, Me., or to the writer, at West Poland, Me. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Under the tent, Saccarappa, Me.,

THE SICK HEALED.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad: Beloved, be it known unto you, that I, Frank F. Taylor, of Roxbury, Mass., was nearly three years ago taken sick with pain in my right side, since which time I have been a great sufferer, and have been attended at various times by several physicians, but a cure never effected; my internal pain being relieved only for a little while. In January, 1867, I was obliged to give up work, called in a physician who, after treating me for two weeks, gave me up as a dead man, beyond the hope of cure. In the course of a few days, Bro. S. Hale, of the Crisis office, called on me, and prevailed on myself and wife to call to my aid Dr. Charles H. Johnson (then of Boston, now of Chelsea), a most faithful and praiseworthy physician, and an humble child of the living God. I was at once placed under his care and treatment. I humbly asked the Lord to give him wisdom to guide and direct him, which in the good providence of God was blessed so far to my recovery, that in a few months I was again able to resume my labor, being almost entirely relieved of my pain. I soon found my strength was not sufficient to labor steadily, but did what I could, feeling anxious that I should not be a burden upon my friends, who were so kind to me during my sickness.

After a few months, my strength began to fail me, and the pain in my side to increase, until Tuesday, June 23d, while at my work, I fell to the ground in an insensible condition, and was carried home. Two physicians were called, and finally the third one, Dr. C. H. Johnson. When he came, he said, "Why did you not send for me long ago? I fear it is too late now." The three physicians examined my right side, and all agreed, after a little time of consultation, that there were three tumors forming, so deep-seated, and the symptoms of such a nature, that the disease was considered of a malignant form, liable at any moment to cause death. My suffering increased daily.

At the suggestion of brethren Hale and Ford, and Sr. Dennett, I called for the Elders of the church to come and unitedly offer to God the prayer of faith, anointing me with oil in the name of the Lord. James 5: 14-50. Sabbath, June 28th, between the hours of one and two, Elds. J. G. Smith and J. G. Hook, with brethren S. Hale, Dr. Johnson, Ford, and Clifford, met according to my request, at my house, and like Jacob of old they wrestled with God in prayer until they prevailed. Truly the power of God was manifested in my behalf. O that I could express to you my feelings, and the change I underwent during the moments of one half hour. It was somewhat like a galvanic battery in its effects upon my entire frame. The tumor disappeared, and the pain was all gone. I rose from my bed. God had healed me. I was not deceived. Blessed be the name of the Lord, he did hear and answer prayer. It seemed to me, as I rose from my bed and stepped upon the floor, and began to dress myself, as though a thousand voices were in the room shouting, Glory to God in the highest, while I began to praise God for his goodness and mercy towards me. Two days afterwards, I was out among my friends who had watched over me and cared for me, free from all soreness and tenderness. They were surprised at the great and wonderful change wrought in me. A day or two after I went to the Crisis office. "Ah," said Bro. Hale, "God has healed you in very deed and truth."

I declare unto you this one thing,—that whereas I was sick nigh unto death, I am now a well man. Praise the living God. There are many good brethren and sisters who were very skeptical in regard to my case, and are waiting to see me have a relapse; but thank the Lord they have been disappointed. Glory to God. By God's help I'll be faithful unto the end. O that there were more who would exercise saving faith in behalf of the sick among us, that God's name might be glorified.

Beloved in the Lord, "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church"; and as James, the apostle of our Lord Jesus Christ, has given direction James 5: 14-16), so act in the fear of God. O let us have more faith and confidence in God. Time is short. Soon the great day will be ushered in by the parting heavens revealing the Son of God, with the power and great glory of the Father, and of the angels. He comes, he comes, to give reward to his faithful ones. Then, O, then, shall be sung redemption's song of Moses and the Lamb,—the song of victory over death and the grave. None shall say any more, I am sick. There shall be no more pain, no sorrow there. The former things shall have passed away. O glory to God. Amen. Yours waiting for eternal life,

"A FRIEND IN NEED IS A FRIEND INDEED."

Our amiable and excellent Bro. and Sister Ongley have been sorely afflicted, and are in need. Eld. Wm. Ongley had a stroke of palsy, and has suffered severely and long. Sister Mary S. Ongley, his dear wife and partner in labor, has had the typhoid fever three months; and, as I learn by letter, they are in need. The "good stewards" of God's good things, who send them help, will find the blessing of promise resting on them. Please send along as the Lord has prospered you. No further word of commendation is needful, in behalf of these suffering members of the body of Christ. Their faith and patience and labor and love have already commended them. Our contribution has been sent along already. Others can send direct to them; or, I presume, to the "Crisis office," or Voice of the West, to be forwarded to Wm. and Mary S. Ongley, Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Penn. J. B. COOK.

MODEST APPAREL.

To my dear sisters, who read the Crisis:—My thoughts, dear sisters, I cannot express to you personally. Scattered as we are, it is with but few that we can personally communicate. It was one of the inspired commands, that we be "willing to communicate." Often, with heartfelt pleasure, have I written to dear personal friends far away, and with pleasure received the kind favor in return; and as our christian brethren are so kind as to invite our letters in our dear paper, I accept, with grateful emotions, the privilege to address so many kindred in our faith and hope, and I pray that the spirit of truth and understanding may choose the words I write, and direct their use to his glory, and the happiness of every receiver.

Dear sisters, permit me to speak gently and familiarly, as to sisters in spirit, and children of a common Father, even our Father in heaven. There is one subject on which my thoughts have long and deeply rested; a subject of common interest to all, and on our understanding of which depends, in a very great degree, our whole being as regards happiness, health, cheerfulness, and true loveliness. It is the matter of "simplicity in our personal apparel"; or, in the faultless language of the apostle to us Gentiles, "modest apparel," which is the only one becoming a woman.

Ten years in a city have taught my once proud mind lessons that I would not believe until I learned by experience. And now, to my sisters who, like myself, are occupied in shop, or school-room, or factory, or kitchen, please let me tell you a few words of my own life-story, and I feel assured they will awaken responses in many other hearts too. May I not plead with you now, to-day, to cease to follow the "phantom Fashion," and whisper counsels that will help to lead us in the way of life?

My earliest recollections in regard to dress are those of fondness for fine and rich adorning. My mother called me a proud child, and I liked to be thought proud too. Fancy builded many a fine castle for my future; but the embarrassed circumstances of my parents forbade the gratification of my ambitious tastes. At an early age I left my country home, and sought employment in the nearest neighboring city. There my love for beautiful things was gratified in vision, but not in possession. Like multitudes of others, I began to seek my share in the general show. I toiled hard, regardless of fatigue, inexperienced, and urged on by the example of professing christians too.

In the spring-time of 1857, my dear Savior was revealed to my faith and affections as my Savior, as the Savior of all who believe. In this glorious newness of life I was very happy. Joy unspeakable filled my heart, and the hope that my Lord would prevail over the serpent sin, that he would by his power, his grace, rescue my soul from the dominion of sin, was to me, indeed, a new existence; and I sung,

"Life from the dead is in thy word,
'Tis immortality."

Yes, hope, faith and love awakened all the powers of soul, and with my voice I gladly spoke forth the praises of him who had "loved us and gave himself for us." Happy day that chose me for Jesus' disciple; me a proud, but unhappy girl, to love him as Mary did when she in rapture cried, "Rabboni,"—Master.

Well, very soon I wanted to obey his command to be baptized, and on the last Sabbath of May, 1857, I was baptized in the church where I attended. It was one of the rich, fashionable churches, whose spires gleam amid the trees of the capital of my native State. Young, sincere, and strong in hope, I resolved to take up every cross, and to keep Jesus ever in view. I neglected no meetings, I was perhaps in danger almost of resemblance to the Pharisees of old, so careful was I of every "appearance of evil," that I could discern, to guard my life and words and thoughts; and yet how deceived was I in one of the most practical and vital habits of life. It was in dress. My own natural tastes, the constant pressure of custom around, the absence of faithful counsel, made me blind to real happiness. I toiled wearily on, unsuspectingly. I exhausted the strength our kind Creator gave me to bless others and be truly happy myself, just to obey fashion's imperious, deceitful demands. I have been awakened from the dangerous dream, and the phantom I have found false,—false to woman, false to man, an enemy to our very life.

In Revelations we behold the devouring Dragon, who stood ready to devour the man-child as soon as he was born. O how true a portraiture of bloody war. Our hearts bleed in anguish to recall the memories of dear ones, whose forms now moulder beneath southern sods. The Dragon opened wide his mouth; he had no pity. Weep, mothers, wives, little ones, for fathers, husbands slain. We weep over brothers slain; but do we realize that brothers and husbands are weeping, too, over the graves of the fondly loved? Sisters, do we realize how many early graves are filled, how many hearth-stones are desolate, for causes which we understand? Just so sure as war drinks up man's warm life-blood; just as truly do the tyrannical demandings of fashion drink up the best life-blood of thousands of their companions and sisters, and we heed it not.

Here and there, in city and country, is a woman who lives to bless her dear ones at home; who loves nature's simplicity, better than fashion's life-destroying artificials.

Dear sisters, I entreat you for the sake of those you love, for the happiness of him whose pleasure is your welfare, for your dear little children, if God has given you them, beware of the tyrant fashion. O how much happier, and kinder, and healthier, and lovelier, should we be as women; how much easier the burdens of life, how much more should we enjoy the smiles of our Creator and Redeemer, if we will consider these things now. A volume might be written, and the half not said. Dear sisters, farewell to-day. Another day, I hope to write a letter more worthy of perusal. "Unto him who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb, be glory"; and unto us all be peace, peace. Your sister in hope,

Warner, N. H. ELLEN EVERETT.

For the World's Crisis.

A DISCLAIMER.

BRO. GRANT:—A letter from Bro. I. C. Wellcome, in the last Crisis, seems to me to imply that I hold "that infants will perish." Allow me to say that I neither believe nor teach that sentiment, and that I have no personal knowledge that it is entertained by any among whom I labored in my recent visit to Carthage, Me. Yours affectionately,

RUFUS WENDELL.

Correspondence.

From Sr. H. H. Cleghorn.

BRO. GRANT:—It encourages me on in the heavenly way to hear through your excellent paper from so many of like precious faith. I love Jesus, and love his appearing, and love all that bears the image of my blessed Savior. I rejoice to hear that our beloved Bro. Smith's health is so much improved since he went to Florida, and that he is enabled, by the help of the Lord, to proclaim the last and most solemn message to a perishing world. I pray that the blessing of God may rest upon him, and that many may hear and believe, that they may be saved when Jesus comes.

The death of our dear Bro. Turner has filled many a heart with grief. The loss of him is irreparable. To me he was one of the dearest of earth. The thought that I cannot see him any more in this life, seems more than I can bear. Were it not for the hope of soon meeting him where parting will be eternally unknown, I could not be comforted. I often think of what he once said, that he had enlisted to blow the gospel trumpet, and that he should do it with all his might until Jesus came, or he should fall asleep with the armor on. Never shall I forget, while memory lasts, the many sermons I have heard him preach; his prayers, his cheering exhortations, and the beautiful hymns that he used to sing. I heard him preach his last sermon, at the close of which quite a number started for the kingdom, and others desired the prayers of the people of God. In prayer, he then commended those penitent sinners to the care and protection of his heavenly Father. He said he was about to leave them, perhaps never to meet this side of the judgment. May the words then spoken sink deep in the hearts of those who heard them. How precious they are to me, and also his last words—"Jesus loves me." Yes, Jesus loved him, and although he now sleeps in death, Jesus loves him still, and he is numbered with his fold. As Sister Turner has said, he is sealed for the first resurrection; and by the assisting grace of God I shall meet and greet my beloved brother Turner in the paradise of God, and hear his sweet voice again.

There our hearts will not be bleeding
'Neath the strokes of sorrow's rod;
There love's bands will not be sundered
In the paradise of God.

There I shall join with him, and all the blood-washed throng, in singing the song of the redeemed. Glory to God, the long dark night of weeping is almost past, and the bright morning of eternal glory will soon dawn.

Dear brothers and sisters, I exhort you to be faithful, and run with patience the race that is set before you, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; and I pray that you may be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Love to all who are looking for Jesus.

HANNAH H. CLEGHORN.

From Bro. J. B. Wadsworth.

BRO. GRANT:—I arrived here yesterday evening quite well, but very sore and tired. I have traveled over three thousand miles since I left Rochester, and I have not had but little rest since I left, and I thought that I would stop here until warm weather is over, for it is very hot here. Some days I am immersed with perspiration, but thank God I never had better health. I scarcely have a pain, except in my feet from walking. I have only lost two toe nails since I left, but I have two bright looking ones in their places. So I rather think I have little the best of Satan, but must admit that he is a very cunning deceiver. But what can he do? He cannot stand prayer. He may cuff us about, and scare us; and I sometimes think that we need a little scraping over, for we get rusty, and dilatory; but by patient continuance in well doing, we shall finally outride the storm, and obtain honor and glory, and immortality, eternal life.

I have much to say, but will defer it this time, as I am in an unfit condition to write. When I get rested, in a few days, I will tell you much about my travels.

I thank God that I have ever learned to lisp the words of St. Paul, "In all things, I am instructed, both to be full and to be hungry; both to abound and to suffer need;" and I try, "in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content," and desire to do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. I earnestly desire the prayers of all the followers of Jesus, that I may ever be a willing instrument in God's hand in saving souls.

O I can see where I ought to have been in this work ten years ago, and here I have just begun. O pray that I may never turn back. Is Jesus coming? Yes. Oh let us not become impatient, for soon, if we are faithful, we will reap all the golden fruits of our patience. Yours in hope,

J. B. WADSWORTH.

From Bro. Geo. A. Streeter.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned home from my tours in the northwestern part of Massachusetts, southern part of Vermont, and Hoosick, N. Y. I found the brethren in a lukewarm state, but a few are holding on to the faith in every place. O for consistent Bible men, such as will have a part in bright glory. As for me, the battle goes well. I do love to preach a free and full salvation to poor dying men.

I visited Williamstown, and held one meeting in Prof. Hopkins' chapel. There was a good attendance. Our views are new to most of them, but there is an ear to hear, and hearts to understand. I have partly promised to hold a series of meetings there in the fall, if the Lord will. The new fields are the places now, and, by the help of the Lord, I am ready to go.

I wish to say to the brethren and sisters, if any of you, having in your place a school-house, or a kitchen, and can keep me and the horse, would like to have me come and hold some meetings, please write me at once. Are you poor? then that is just the place to go; for the poor shall have the gospel preached to them. Dear brethren and sisters, follow those things that make for peace. Avoid contentions about the law and other matters that are not profitable; but study to do your own business, serve God for yourselves, and the Lord will keep you. Soon the battle will be over. Prove faithful unto the end. Your Bro. in the highways, G. A. STREETER.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. P. B. MANNING, Rochester, N. H., July 25th, writes:—"I am in great suffering at this time, but I am trying to do the will of my Father in heaven. I am destitute of a home in this world, but I have got a good Father, and my whole soul is trusting in him. Blessed be his holy name. O how I love him and all of his dear saints. I am now in Rochester, N. H., at Brother Smith's. He is one of God's dear saints. Brethren in Christ, God only knows the sufferings that I have to endure in this world. Well, I am glad that Jesus is coming so soon, to receive his dear saints home to himself. Dear brethren, I ask you to pray that God will raise me up, so that I can earn my living with my poor hands. My dear brethren have been very good to me, but I do not know how I shall get along now. God is good to all of his dear saints.

I believe that Jesus will come this year. How many of the professed people of the good Lord are ready to meet him should he come?

Since I left the 9th day of June, I have been very sick sixteen days, but God has been good to me. I have good friends in every place I have been. Dear brethren, I feel very sad to see so many drawing back to this wicked world again. O God, do have mercy on the people.

Dear brethren, we are truly in the last days. Don't forget me in your prayers, that God will give me strength equal to my day."

SR. FIDELIA CLARK, So. Dansville, N. Y., writes:—"I have often felt moved upon, as I believe by the Spirit of my Master, to send a few lines to the many dear readers of the Crisis with whom I have met in the different places of worship for two years past. Nearly all that time I have read the Crisis every week, and should feel sad indeed to be deprived of its weekly visits. It has often cheered me in hours of lonely sadness, caused by my own waywardness and shortcomings in duty, and lack of living, active faith, that will show itself in our daily walk before the world. O I want more of that faith, and a deeper work of grace in my heart, that I may serve and honor my Lord and Master here, and secure a home in his kingdom, and also help lead others thither. I see clearly there is no safety to the christian, except in a constant, watchful, prayerful dependence on God, to keep us from the wiles of the adversary, who goeth about, not only as a roaring lion, but also in a more artful way as an angel of light, to decoy, if possible, the most watchful and conscientious.

There are several thoughts that have pressed with weight upon my mind; one is a want of consistency in some who profess to be looking for the coming of Jesus. There seems to be an undue conformity to the world in dress, habits, employments, etc. The Bible plainly teaches us that we must come out from the world and be separate. O brethren and sisters, one and all, let us see to it that we are guided and governed by the unadulterated word of God, and let us not make too many plans for the future years, while many of us claim to believe that Jesus will come this year. O that he might come this year, or at least find us all ready and waiting, when he comes, to meet him with joy."

BRO. WM. COOK, Eudora, Kansas, writes: "A few of us, who sojourn in a strange land, as pilgrims and strangers in the earth, among enemies who are saying all manner of evil against us, are trying to live so that what they say against us, shall be falsely said. We feel bold to talk to our enemies as well as friends. We have very good meetings, although we can hardly ever get a public house for our meetings. There is a great work to be done out here in Kansas, and the laborers are few, but the Lord is with us in our feeble efforts to spread the truth.

I must tell you of the power of God that was manifested in our meeting last Sunday. A young man rose to ask prayers, but his tongue could not move. He tried to move, but could not. Some went to arrest him, but there he was, riveted, and did not move or speak for some minutes. One of the brethren asked for some one to pray for the man. At that moment his tongue was losed, and he moved and rejoiced, and said he was as light as the air. I never saw the power of God displayed in such a powerful manner before.

We ask our brethren in the east to remember us, and if any wish to aid us in our work, they can do so by sending us some tracts, and they will be carefully and prayerfully distributed."

RENNIE. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Binghamton, N. Y., June 28th, 1868, Chas. Rennie, aged thirty-four years and six months.

He embraced the blessed hope about ten years since, while living in my family, and two or three years after united with the Congregational church in this city; but on every occasion, earnestly contended for the faith once delivered to the saints. He was truly an example of patience, cheerfulness and resignation, through all his sufferings. He was very willing to be at rest, believing he would sleep but a very little while. Funeral services by his pastor, Rev. Edward Taylor. A. H. RENNIE.

HAMBLIN. Died in Clinton, Me., July 13th, Harvey W., youngest son of Jesse and Mehitable Hamblin, aged seventeen years and nine months.

For many years Bro. and Sr. Hamblin have believed in the immediate coming of Christ, and have lived their religion, and done much good in the world. Now they are in deep sorrow. They have lost him whom they looked upon for support in their old age; but they expect that soon their sorrow will be turned into joy everlasting in the coming kingdom. May the Lord bless his parents and friends, and bring them up with him when the last trump shall sound.

WALDRON. Died in Clinton, Me., July 19th, Lyllian E., only child of James and Frances Waldron, aged three months and thirteen days.

This is a severe stroke to its fond parents. It seemed very hard to give her up. May God bless them in this hour of affliction. Services by Bro. Winslow, of the Methodists. N. W. RANDALL.

BROWN. Died in Clinton, Me., July 14th, 1868, Nenia, daughter of Clement and Marian Brown, aged two years.

"Sleep, little Nenia, sweetly sleep
Down in the silent earth;
Thy little form is laid away
Till Christ shall call it forth."

Words of comfort by Bro. Winslow, from these words: "It is well with the child."

Cable Dispatches.

LONDON, Aug. 3. The Cable of 1866 ceased to work at 12.35 this afternoon. Tests show that the fault is on the Newfoundland side. The Cable has probably been damaged by an iceberg.

(Signed) CYRUS W. FIELD.

PARIS, Aug. 3. An Imperial decree has been issued authorizing the issue of a new loan.

VIENNA, Aug. 3. Dispatches from Bucharest report that a fight has taken place near Buctschuk, between the Turkish troops, and a body of insurgents, in which the latter were defeated and dispersed.

It was rumored that a Turkish gunboat had been fired on from the shore, in the neighborhood of Galatiz.

ROME, Aug. 3. It is reported that in the consistory, which will be held by the Pope next month, Monsignori Merode, Chig, Talbot, Bondi, Farsar and Sagretti will be appointed Cardinals.

Items.

☞ Revivals of religion have been progressing in the negro Baptist churches of Richmond Va., for several weeks past. Every Sunday large numbers are baptized, either in the river or in their churches.

☞ The famine in Algiers is still terrible, and murders are frequent, men being killed by those whom hunger has made cannibals. The price of revolvers had doubled. The Archbishop of Algiers has arrived in France, to demand succor for the native population, whose sufferings by famine are intense, and who are rapidly diminishing.

☞ A St. Petersburg special states that private advices have been received there from Central Asia, announcing that a peace arrangement had been concluded between the Czar's General, in behalf of his Majesty, and the Emir of Bokhara.

☞ A party of fifty-five Canadian volunteers for the Papal army have just passed through Paris on their way to Marseilles, to embark for Civita Vecchia. They have with them a negro newly converted to Catholicism, and who for that reason has been disinherited by his family. He is going to Rome to complete his theological studies and prepare for the priesthood.

☞ A Paris journal says that there is a strong party in Mexico who are desirous that the Empress Carlotta should come back to that country and accept the throne.

☞ The loss of life by the great flood at Baltimore will, it is estimated, reach 100 souls.

☞ The Indians are said to be desolating the Texan frontier, murdering the inhabitants and driving off the stock. Two families have been murdered.

☞ In Canada the wheat generally promises to be over an average crop, and most of it is ready for reaping. Hay is turning out better than was expected, and is of excellent quality and well saved. Barley will not be up to the average, and oats and peas are nowhere, both being burnt up by the heat.

☞ This year's wheat crop in Missouri is the largest ever gathered in that State.

FAMINE IN MOROCCO.—A famine in Morocco is producing the most disastrous effect among the Mussulman population. The harvest has been a total failure, and for such grain as can be imported enormous prices are demanded. The situation is described as worse than that of Algeria. Numbers of persons are constantly dying of hunger. The roads are covered every morning with the dying and the dead. The rich are powerless to save these poor creatures; and the number of those who have perished, either of hunger or the epidemic, is estimated at one-fourth of the entire population.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, beautifully located, about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Monday, August 24th, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, Aug. 30th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third. Tickets from Boston and way stations to Springfield, also from Albany and way stations for Springfield, can be obtained at the various ticket offices on the road; and be sure and call for CAMPMEETING TICKETS, which, in order to be good for return passage, must be endorsed or countersigned by GEO. T. ADAMS, on the camp-ground. Tickets good Aug. 20th to Sept. 1st. Fare is reduced on the Ct. R. R. Road from Brattleboro and way stations one half. In our next, we will give more full directions as to how tickets may be obtained on this road.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to GEO. T. ADAMS, on the camp-ground.

It is expected that the fare will be reduced on several other Roads, but we have not as yet obtained full particulars, so as to publish this week.

Any arrangement made with other Roads or Boats, will be noticed at another time.

Fare to Camp-Ground.

I have to-day seen the Superintendent of the Rutland and Burlington R. R. about carrying over that road for fare one way to the Campmeeting at Springfield. He has agreed to it if fifty will take the cars at the different stations anywhere on the road. I therefore wish all who are going to the meeting over the Rutland and Burlington road, to inform me as soon as convenient, so that I can secure their passage for fare one way. Say at what station you take the train. THOS. H. CHENEY.

Rutland, Vt., July 25th, 1868.

Notice to the Female M. A.

Our annual meeting is at hand. We do not wish to devote any time to business unnecessarily during the campmeeting. Therefore any wishing to confer with me relative to matters that require consideration before we come together, will do so immediately. It is expected that our N. Y. state mission tent will be on the ground, and will be as commodious as any, for our gatherings. I may not reach Springfield until Tuesday, but if the Lord prospers me, I purpose to see you all once more.

A General Ministeral Conference in the Great West.

We desire the attention of the Advent Christian Ministers of the various Western States on a matter of no little importance. If we are not proclaiming cunningly devised fables in announcing the immediate coming of the Messiah to reign on earth, we need to engage more vigorously and harmoniously in the great proclamation.

That we may consult together, and devise means conducive to this end, we take the responsibility to appoint and call a General Conference of Ministers, to meet at DeKalb, Ill., in connection with the camp meeting to be held there, the first week in September.

As there is not time for the various conferences to select delegates (which should have been done, if this call had been made at an earlier date,) we invite all Advent Christian ministers in good standing in the various conferences to come. We invite you to come from Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Virginia, Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee, New York, and Ontario. Let every church help their minister to come. Provide him with the necessary means. It will do him good, and you too. Our action gives character to the body. Let us act for God and for our coming King, and act while we may.

WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

The fourth annual meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at De Kalb, Ill., in connection with the General Campmeeting for 1868. The first formal meeting of the Association will convene on Wednesday, Sept. 2d, at 10 A. M., at which time the usual reports will be presented. Members who wish to vote by proxy may do so by notifying the Secretary, stating the name of the person chosen as proxy. But no person can act as a proxy who is not a member of the Association.

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

A New Hymn Book.

A new and enlarged edition of "SOCIAL HYMNS, original and selected, by H. L. Hastings," is now ready. It contains nearly three hundred hymns, many of which are among the choicest in the language; also more than FIFTY original hymns, and numerous others not found in ordinary books. It contains also a classified index of the hymns relating to different subjects. The tone of the book is earnest, and it is peculiarly adapted for special occasions, such as camp, grove, tent, and revival meetings, as well as for domestic, social, and public worship. Price in cloth extra, 40c.; $4.00 per dozen; 30c. single, $3.00 per doz., $20 per hundred; in paper, 20c. single, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per one hundred.

For sale at the Crisis office, also by Bro. Hastings, at 19 Lindall Street, Boston.

A New Hymn Book.

TO BE OUT IN SEASON FOR THE CAMPMEETINGS.

Having felt for some years the need of a hymn book not too costly, nor too cumbersome, and yet embracing all the hymns in general use among us, affording a good variety of hymns on christian experience, as well as the coming of Christ, and kindred topics, all classed according to subjects, and bound in convenient size for carrying in the pocket, I have in the last year, prepared a book designed to meet this want, which is being published by Bro. Hastings, and will be ready for the Springfield campmeeting. It will be known as "Spiritual Melodies," will contain 387 hymns, and be sold in limber covers, like Bro. Hastings' Social Hymns, for 35 cents, and bound in stiff covers for 45 cts.

Having made no arrangements for the sale of the book, I cannot at present inform brethren where the book may be obtained, further than that it will be sold at Springfield and Alton Bay campmeetings, and at any time by Bro. Hastings, 19 Lindall Street, Boston. L. K. LOMBARD.

General Union Campmeeting.

There will be a general union campmeeting held in the Sea Grove, belonging to Col. R. J. Sanborn, known in that vicinity as the Deerfield Camp-Ground, near the line between Candia and Deerfield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 9th, to hold eight days. We hope brethren and sisters, who love Jesus and his appearing, and are desirous of laboring for Christ, will come to this meeting. We think this will be a good field for labor. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Candia Depot, N. H. Teams for passengers and baggage will connect with the train. It is expected the fare on the R. R. will be reduced to half price. Particulars hereafter. Let those who can, bring tents. For those who cannot, tents will be furnished.

An invitation is extended to the various ministers and churches in the vicinity to come and unite with us, and labor for the salvation of the perishing. The campmeeting committee consists of Enoch Morril, John M. Quimby, James N. Bachelder, Asa P. Moulton, and Albert Quimby. Board will be furnished on the ground at reasonable prices. Preaching brethren will be cared for. H. L. Hastings, John Couch, S. W. Thurber, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word.

ENOCH MORRILL, for the Committee.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a grove meeting near Carr's Corner, Dexter, Me., commencing August 14th, at half-past ten o'clock, and to continue over the following Sabbath. Brn. L. K. Lombard, A. Damman, and S. Ames, are expected to preach the word. Bro. H. Seavey is requested to be there, if possible. Call on Bro. H. Brown. Come, brethren, and sisters, to this meeting, one and all, and work for the Lord with all your might. Be sure and leave your hobby horses at home, for the time has fully come for us to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

O. G. TRUNDY.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting on the old ground in Springwater, Aug. 14th, 15th, and 16th. Services at the school-house Friday evening, at half past seven o'clock, and in the grove on Saturday, at one P. M., and on Sunday at nine A. M. Come one and all. For the brethren, C. F. SWEET.
